Mr. Johnson is the pleasantest kind of man to interview. He is not only responsive to every question, but he grabs every idea and runs with it. He talks in a rather loud voice, as if he thinks better that way, pacing back and forth and looking always as eager as an interested boy.

"I think the first step toward overcoming a feeling of inferiority and low status is," he said, "to instill confidence in yourself through finding something in your background in which you can feel pride. I am publishing a Negro history series because I learned that Negro history is not

"What I think I am doing is showing the readers that we have all strata in our society as in the general society. We're showing Negroes that some of us are able to make it. One of our most widely read sections is called 'Speaking of People,' and it deals with employment, really—new jobs that people have found for themselves."

Mr. Johnson's office is in the superbly decorated Madison Avenue executive style, with quiet-toned carpet and fabrics, richly upholstered furniture, inviting book shelves, a spate of foliage plants, and plenty of space for pacing up and down, which he likes to do as he talks.
per cent now.

The World of Achievement

"If you examine my magazine you'll find not so much a world of glamor any more as a world of achievement," he world of glamor but we have gradually become more in-continued. "What happened was, we started out with the terested in people's achievements."

I asked him what proportion of the Negro population was represented in the glamor-achievement world of Ebony, and he answered:

"Oh, I would think it's perhaps 10 per cent. I know years ago Dr. W. T. DuBois used to talk about the 'talented tenth,' and I think that even if he said that many years ago it still holds true. I mean by that, about 10 per cent of the Negro people are those who are able to enjoy many of these advantages we're speaking about. I think the proportion is increasing as time goes by, but I would hold it to about 10 per cent now."

"That glamor world is not my world," he said, in answer to my question. "I think my world is a more realistic one. But it's true, we try to find the glamor side in our magazine even though not all the people we glamorize believe that this is all their world either.

"We are like the movies—just as they tend to embellish and adorn the normal, I think we do the same. This is not to misstate the truth but simply expresses the search for something that will capture the imagination. And this is not the whole world of the people who like to read about it, either."

Mr. Johnson's magazine reflects dramatically a change in the Negro people's image of color. And this was a development that Mr. Johnson talked about vividly—the disappearance of prestige distinctions in the lighter skin colors of Negroes.

"The color problem is no longer with us any more," he said. "I think what happened was, first, that black-skinned Negroes began gaining better opportunities for education and to gain achievement on their own, and then the rise of the newly developing nations in Africa, where black has come to mean something important, also helped to erase these skin-color distinctions.

"All those color distinctions began generations ago during slavery days when the slave owner kept certain slaves for his personal pleasure, and from these were born children of lighter skin who got more privileges than the field hands."

He picked up an issue of Ebony and leafed through for me, to show how in the color advertisements there were more of the darker-skinned models, both male and female, depicted in the ads than lighter-skinned.

"Negro people are no longer ashamed of their naturalness," Mr. Johnson said. "You will see many Negro girls who are no longer straightening their hair, and I think in general black skin has acquired a new meaning. It's not necessary any longer for Negroes of lighter skin to stay together on that basis. We used to have thousands of Negroes 'pass' over from Negro to white, but we no longer have that happening now."

100 Negro Millionaires

Back in a January issue of this year Mr. Johnson ran a feature with photographs and sketches of 100 Negro millionaires in the country. They included persons in a great variety of fields and it was a presentation which had tremendous impact on the Negro people, for even these 100 are by no means all the American Negro millionaires.

The publisher did not include himself, although he might well have done so on the basis of a financial rating.

"Dr. Martin Luther King jr. can talk abstractly about goals for Negroes," Mr. Johnson said, only half seriously, "but here they could see it.

"I have been blessed to have been able to achieve some of the benefits of capitalism, and I am in favor of capitalism. People often say to me, yes, you're in favor of it because in a minor way you are a capitalist.

"Then I say, no, I felt the same way when I was on relief here in Chicago, because I felt that if other people had it, there was always a chance that I might have it.

"One of my editors told me a story going around in one of the Negro colleges in Atlanta. He said that a student went to the dean and said, you know there are a lot of cliques around this college, and they won't let some of us in and I am very unhappy about it.

"The dean said, okay, I'll tell you how to stop this—but the boy interrupted him. He said, no, dean, I want you to tell me how I can get into one.

"Well, in effect that's the way people feel. I don't think they begrudge the world they see, they simply want it themselves. And this desire just spurs them on."

Going back to his own days of poverty, Mr. Johnson told me that his mother brought him to Chicago during the Century of Progress Exposition in 1933, ostensibly to see the exposition but actually, as he came to suspect later, to see if she could gain a toe-hold in Chicago and help him get some further education. He had finished the eighth grade in the country school in Arkansas, he said, and to keep him out of trouble his mother made him go through the eighth grade a second time. But she had ambitions for getting him to college.

His stepfather, a sawmill helper, remained in Arkansas while his mother got established in a servant's job in Chicago. She lost that job and they went on relief for a time.

Today his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Williams, rides around in a big chauffeur-driven limousine of her own, engaging in certain civic works in which she is interested and seeing to it that Mr. Johnson gets to church on Sunday.

While he was in high school in Chicago he got himself a clerical job in one of the biggest Negro-operated businesses in the North, the Supreme Life Insurance Company of America. He came to the notice of the president, the late Harry H. Pace, who urged young Mr. Johnson to go to college and work part-time.

He got into employee relations in the company, editing its house organ, and attended the University of Chicago and later Northwestern University. Meantime he rose rapidly in the company, and he met his wife, Eunice, mem-

"There is something in the air that requires diversification of effort toward any accomplishment, and in the Negro field we need all of these people, even at the risk of appearing—well, whatever you want to call it. I think the Black Muslims are making a contribution to racial equality by simply challenging in a different kind of way. Obviously no thinking person who truly believes in democracy—and I believe in it—would follow a policy of hate, although the Muslims deny this policy. But the point I am making is, as James Baldwin points out, we have got to get white people to listen before we can convince them.

"I believe that the Muslims in their approach, despite the fact I don't approve of them are helping to get people to listen. If they get people to listen to us, then they make some kind of contribution.

"And if we must be critical of the Muslims then we must also realize that we, meaning the white population, are responsible for the conditions which created the Muslims in the first place. And the best way to get rid of them is not to criticize them but to improve the conditions of the black man, and make a mockery out of what they say by bringing about a real conversion to democratic practices.

"They are not going anywhere. They are going to keep preaching their philosophy as long as what they say is true, and as long as what they say is true it's going to grow."

The First Step—Confidence

Mr. Johnson is the pleasantest kind of man to interview. He is not only responsive to every question, but he grabs every idea and runs with it. He talks in a rather loud voice, as if he thinks better that way, pacing back and forth and looking always as eager as an interested boy.

"I think the first step toward overcoming a feeling of inferiority and low status is," he said, "to instill confidence in yourself through finding something in your background in which you can feel pride. I am publishing a Negro history series because I learned that Negro history is not taught in most schools, and Negroes are not aware of the conspicuous gallantry and bravery they displayed in the Civil War.

"Our people have done many things of which they can be proud, and I think that we Negroes must first believe that we deserve equality before we can sell the idea to any one else."

He pointed to his big, important looking desk chair sitting behind his executive type desk, saying:

"I recall the first time we got this office. I came down the night before and sat in my chair so as to get used to it. I wanted to have a relaxed feeling"—he laughed uproariously at the thought—"when people came to see me on that first day. I just wasn't used to it, and I wanted to get used to it ahead of time.

"I think Negro people have to get used to equality themselves, personally, first, then once we're used to it and believe we really and truly deserve it, then we'll get it."

Mr. Johnson's Advice

He is deeply concerned about the lack of opportunity for bright Negro youths to acquire the necessary training in business that would enable them to gain promotions promptly. He said that if he had not happened to be put into a job in the insurance company he worked for, where he had an opportunity to learn the evaluation and decision-making processes from top executives, he never would have succeeded in business himself.

"This is the great void in Negro business life. What Negroes lack is an insight into how business operates, and experience and knowledge in how to deal with day to day problems. If I had not been able to sit in watching decisions being made and ask the men why they were doing things the way they did, I would never have learned how to do it. This must become a responsibility of leadership, to offer this kind of training opportunity to young Negro men."

This is his advice to young people:

"The United States Information Service did a movie on our company and they asked me the secret of my success. I said that if I have a secret it is that you set small goals and try to achieve them. Then after you achieve the first goal, you set another one within range of attainment and you try for that. You can't possibly see to the end all at once. The important thing is that you are making progress.

"I think the way people feel about my magazine is that perhaps they never will achieve as much as some of the people we depict, but this inspires them to do a little bit better than they are doing. And this is all I think any of us can hope for. As I go around the world, I find nobody has things quite the way he wants them."

TEN NEGROES

THIS IS THE LAST ARTICLE of the 10-part series, "Ten Negroes," by the Herald Tribune's national correspondent Robert S. Bird, on Negroes' views of white America.

By Robert S. Bird

A Negro President of the United States within, say, a quarter of a century?

You are not likely to hear this arresting idea dropped casually into a conversation unless you are talking with a person who is young enough to feel unshackled by the past and bold enough to see a different vision of the future.

In short, a bold Negro youth. One well enough organized in mind and personality to have thought the notion through. A lad such as Vernon S. Gill.

In my dozens of interviews with Negroes in several parts of the country, not one of them ever broached to me the idea of a Negro President of the United States. But when I mentioned to several Negro men of affairs that young Mr. Gill has proposed the possiblity to me they did a double take, as if the thought had never occurred to them.

Then a couple of them were willing to consider the idea seriously, and to analyze it a bit.

Mr. Gill is a senior at Howard University, the country's biggest predominantly Negro university, in Washington, D. C., and is president of the student council in the college of liberal arts.

He is not only an exceptional scholar but a thoroughly healthy youngster, able to talk seriously or laugh uproariously to suit the occasion. And when you mention romance he whoops in most unscholarly fashion, for he says that's for him—and he's unemcumbered at the moment.

I had arranged to talk at length with several bright students on the Howard campus on this particular day, and Mr. Gill showed up ahead of time. So we began the interview, which I had warned him would be somewhat searching of his thoughts.

He started off on a high, didactic plane, not so much answering my questions as delivering a classroom lecture on The Negro Problem with big, glossy words and everything but chalk, blackboard and pointer.

I heard him out for a while, deadpan, and soon he realized he was talking to a dead receiver. Then he apologized for "spouting off words," and we got down to what Vernon S. Gill really thinks.

We had covered quite a lot of ground when I got around to asking him what he saw for the future, and what inspired him to go ahead. He had already told me he wanted to study law and become a constitutional lawyer, and to engage in politics. All this was of interest because many, many Negro youths in Washington, ones who have come from deplorably poor homes and have been unable to take hold in school, are ending up as school drop-outs in a state of dangerous despair. This lad had none of that whatever—quite the opposite.

"I intend to go to law school in September, and then to go into the Army for a number of years—into military law, I hope—and after coming out of the Army to engage in politics and law," he explained.

"Now I think what inspires me at present is this—I believe that a person who does a job well, who seems at ease and cool while doing it, is an inspiring person. For example, the Kennedy brothers inspire me. And I believe in the utlimate worth of the individual and his abilities to use his whole potential—which I don't feel I have been doing."

A Secret Thought?

Mr. Gill was getting down now to, well, perhaps a secret thought.

"I don't expect that everything I envision will work out well, but I think there is a possibility from my own circumstances, and from my own abilities, to succeed even in national politics, for example," he said.

He looked at me with a level gaze and continued:

"Anyone who wants to be President, or wants to be in Congress, regardless of race, creed or color, is looked on with some suspicion as being sort of way up the clouds somewhere. But I do think this is a possibility."

He stopped to let the purport of this sink in. I was flabbergasted but I didn't blink an eye. You don't rule out, I inquired, the possibility of being President of the United States?

"President or Vice-President, no, I wouldln't exclude that. Seriously, I wouldn't. As ridiculous as it sounds, everybody wants their son to be President. I wouldn't discount that as a possibility for me. And I have said that to people. Some of them have thought I was sensible about it, and some have thought I was just being the son of a father whose ambition was to have his son become President."

So here was a young, bright, forward-looking, healthy Negro lad dreaming what used to be the American dream for any boy who thought himself lucky to be born in the United States of America. And not just dreaming it but thinking it out rationally. You don't hear white boys talking like this very often in these times.

I asked him what worries or fears might be lurking in the back of his mind about the future?

"The only fears I have are those of happenstance," he said, using one of those chromium-plated words on me. "Things might not go exactly as I envision them. Nothing will go exactly as you envision it, that's certain. But I want to get into a comfortable, rising groove in life and to be able to meet the situations as they come, and then move on to the next situation.

"I think any young person has a certain amount of fear about the instability of the future. But any particular fears, such as being run over by a car or that I might get defeated in a great election, or might have financial problems—those things don't disturb me."

sent a cross-section of Negro youth, but a rather special group who undoubtedly will be heard from in the future.

For the next couple of hours all of us together canvassed a variety of questions dealing with the race situation. Such aspects as James Baldwin's anguished writings, President Kennedy's handling of race problems, the Black Muslims, intermarriage, the mood of Howard University students, and the like.

The others who participated were Miss Jean C. Wheeler, of Detroit, a liberal arts junior, majoring in chemistry with a full A average; Irvin Reid, of Charleston, S. C., a senior majoring in psychology, and A. Guy Draper, of Beverly Hills, Calif., a pre-law junior.

To hear these youngsters tell about the campus mood, this big university, with the bulk of its 7,000 students Negroes and with about 1,000 foreign students, is not especially caught up in the same turbulence of Negro student activity that is going on in the Negro colleges in the Deep South. Most of the Howard students were not—these four agreed—in a frame of mind to go out demonstrating. The majority are immersed in the university life but not in overt racial activity.

On President Kennedy

But these students follow developments in the news closely, and they had opinions on all subjects. Concerning President Kennedy, Mr. Reid gave the view that "over all, I don't see so much of a handling of the race problems by him as we were led to believe there would be during the campaign."

"I will have to agree with that," Mr. Draper said. "I think his recent actions have been nothing but political moves.

"It seems to me that what he said during the campaign, and many of the planks in the Democratic platform implied, that this race thing would be something that the Administration would get in and deal with. He has just backed away completely."

Mr. Gill disagreed. He said that while the President has backed away on occasion, he thought some of his stands were "more forthright than many Presidents." Miss Wheeler's opinion was that the President had come up against the hard realities and "he may yet demonstrate forcefulness."

After considerable argument on the matter, Mr. Reid summed it up with this observation:

"What we do agree on is this—considering that conditions are propitious and taking into account the efforts of [illegible] militant nature of the movement comes about. They look on the white man as the enemy. Here they have a group of susceptible Negroes who now find themselves together. They have someone to lean on now, and the white man is the enemy."

"I often wonder," interjected Miss Wheeler, "whether this is a destructive force or even whether it is a self-destructive force. I don't have enough information about it to make a decision, but it seems to me that there's a growinng dichotomy between Negro people—and the movement is not dying down.

"The dichotomy is between the Muslims and the Negroes who consider themselves intellectuals. They don't want to be bothered with this because they think it sounds so irrational. But these people, the intellectuals who reject the Muslims, will not say that any motion is good, any activity which makes a difference is better than sitting around praying or waiting for legal action to be effected.

"I don't know whether Elijah and Malcolm X have so much power over the people that they can get them to do things which would be to the disadvantage of the whole group. But they do get gleams in the eye, and a lot of these people have been in prison. And they are the kind of people who feel that if you hurt me, I'll hurt you."

Mr. Draper likened them to the Communists in many ways.

"They are strong people," Miss Wheeler said. "They don't play, they don't play. And they hate white people."

Intermarriage

I asked about the feeling on the campus about intermarriage with white persons. Mr. Draper took the ball on this.

"There's a feeling on the part of some people in the lower income group to want to succeed in life with a Cadillac and a white wife or white husband," he said. "But I think the great majority of the Negroes, especially the middle class ones and the highest class, feel in the back of their minds, first, on what grounds would you pick a person to marry—is it financial? Is it just because the person is white? What lies behind it?

"But I think once the cause that leads to the decision is determined as being all right, the intermarriage is accepted. Even if the reason for the marriage is only symbolic, it's accepted.

"I think that for the [illegible] answering my questions as delivering a classroom lecture on The Negro Problem with big, glossy words and everything but chalk, blackboard and pointer.

Caucasian and Negroid

I asked him if he bumps up against discriminatory situations in daily life which upset him or throw him off balance.

"There are occasions," he said. "It makes me think of what James Baldwin once said, that among the white population the suicide rate is high, and that once the Negro becomes free of discrimination and things caused by people around him—once he knows that he's not succeeding because of his own personal inadequacies rather than because of other people or discrimination—then the Negro suicide rate will go up, too.

"So when I find myself in one of these situations—and they don't happen often, particularly to me—my first reaction is to try to assay first if it was because of circumstances that the predicament occurred or whether my own inadequacy caused it or contributed to it.

"I think the Negro has a special problem in trying to assay how much of his own inabilities are involved in a situation. There is less of a problem of fault-finding with the Caucasian than with the Negro. Maybe we are cheating ourselves in this."

I asked him if he usually refers to whites as Caucasians.

"Sometimes, yes," he explained. "I think most people regardless of color use 'white' most of the time but personally I sometimes refer to the Caucasian race, and I refer to myself as Negroid. Often when I fill out a form I put down Negroid because that's the true racial designation. I wasn't saying Caucasian just because I'm talking with you. It's normal with me. It's the proper thing to do."

Now the other students were turning up to join us around our interviewing table in a small building on the Howard campus. None of them was exactly typical of the Howard student body. These were all on the exceptional side, intellectually and culturally, and they do not represent a cross-section of Negro youth, but a rather special group who undoubtedly will be heard from in the future.

"What we do agree on is this—considering that conditions are propitious and taking into account the efforts of the civil rights movement, he has not kept up with what could have been expected of him, knowing his dynamic personality."

The Black Muslims

It was Miss Wheeler, an extremely bright talker, who began the discussion on the Black Muslims. She said:

"A good friend of mine who is a philosophy major has taken me to the mosque with him and I found their Black Muslim arguments to be very forceful. They really hit me. They use information that you can't deny.

"One of the things they say is that the white man has systematically destroyed the Negro, and they give examples, and good examples, too. For me, it's a matter you have of reconciling the uncomfortable feeling you have about the Black Muslims. It's my belief that they're worthwhile because they have given a great number of Negroes something to do with their time, something that makes them feel substantial and important.

"There's a fellow selling newspapers on the corner near me, and he says at regular intervals it makes him feel good to go to the mosque and see the ladies with their white robes and all so clean and proud of themselves, and the men saluting one another.

"I imagine the most impressive thing about it is that it has given substantiality to a group of people who formerly were shiftless and unimpressive."

"She's hit on the key thing," Mr. Draper said. "They take a group of people who have no meaning in their lives, who have had very hard lives, who come from the depths of dejection, and the Black Muslims give them something to live for. The Muslims give new meaning to these people and their lives.

"And then the next thing they do is they project their image of the white man. He is the enemy. So this is how the militant nature of the movement comes about. They look on the white man as the enemy. Here they have a group of susceptible Negroes who now find themselves together. They have someone to lean on now, and the white man is the enemy."

"There's a feeling on the part of some people in the lower income group to want to succeed in life with a Cadillac and a white wife or white husband," he said. "But I think the great majority of the Negroes, especially the middle class ones and the highest class, feel in the back of their minds, first, on what grounds would you pick a person to marry—is it financial? Is it just because the person is white? What lies behind it?

"But I think once the cause that leads to the decision is determined as being all right, the intermarriage is accepted. Even if the reason for the marriage is only symbolic, it's accepted.

"I think that for the Negro college person, he or she is looking for a particular type of person to marry. And we've reached the point where we have strong convictions on that, and race doesn't matter. What matters is their general personality, and interests. The average American college student is looking for an individual, strong-willed and strong-minded, and when he finds that individual he makes the decision. If the person is a member of another race, he may think twice, and then go ahead."

Some time after my discussions with these students, and Mr. Gill's surprising confession of an ambition to try for the very summit in American politics, I was in Chicago. And I harked back to this occasion.

While interviewing John H. Johnson, publisher of Ebony, a leading magazine for Negroes, I told him about Mr. Gill's plan to enter politics and perhaps become President of the United States. The publisher listened attentively. After all, he had risen from relief status to millionaire before he was 45. He did a quick mental computation.

"That would be 25 years from now," he said. "I think he will not be President, but I think he could be Vice-President of the United States. Yet I would want him to think he could be President. By shooting for the goal of President he may become one day Vice-President. We always have to set our goals a little higher than we are likely to achieve.

"I would not want to discourage this young man. I think being specific, confining it to to a period of 20 to 25 years, we could quite confidently assume that a Negro could be Vice-President of the United States."

A Judge's Thoughts

In the same city I asked Judge James B. Parsons, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois, what he thought of Mr. Gill's views. He is a man who studied law and went into politics and rolled up a vote of 1,127,000 in Cook County when he ran for Judge of Superior Court and won a few years ago.

"His thinking reflects a projection which is a responsible one," Judge Parsons said thoughtfully, "in that it recognizes change as it is going on. This is exceedingly difficult for persons who are not part of the change or those who are resistant to it.

"It's difficult to realize today that infants who are being born now may have the opportunity to live for upward of 150 years, or that children born to our children 25 years from now may live to 200 years of age.

"Change is a factor which we resist, and yet it is the most potent, most volatile factor in the entire American scene. Everything must be seen in the light of change and in the speed with which change is taking place."

This sense of change, mounting in speed and power, is felt all through the Negro world today. Its volatile potency may be working for a fine Negro boy who wants to be President of the United States, as it is for all his people.

TEN NEGROES:

"It never occurred to me until I was deep in the interviewing of Negroes for the series that a preconception was hampering my understanding, for there is in truth only one kind of American."

By Robert S. Bird
National Correspondent

Negroes say that it has always been hard for them to communicate their thoughts and feelings to white Americans, and that the fault has been mostly on the white side.

Not only has the white population been generally inattentive to Negro efforts to be heard and understood, they say, but even when the whites have tried to listen they have been impeded by an unreal image of the Negro.

The Negroes say it has been this image which the white people have heard speaking rather than the real Negro. And they contend that this artificial, ideological notion of the Negro, whatever its variations, has been deeply embedded in white American culture since slavery days. And that essentially it is a slavery image of the Negro.

All of this was impressed on me by Negroes during my earliest interviews for the series of articles on Negro thinking and feeling which I wrote under the title, "Ten Negroes," for publication in the Herald Tribune in ten installments between April 30 and May 10.

In the deep and enlightening experience I underwent during months of interviewing dozens of Negroes in many fields and in different parts of the country I became fully convinced of the truth of this Negro viewpoint, though not necessarily of all their other viewpoints, which are very diverse indeed.

A THREAT of boycott and segregationist retaliation yesterday took some of the gloss from the shaky peace engineered in Birmingham between business men and Negro leaders. There may be trouble ahead. For a report from the scene, read Charles Portis' story, on page 14.

Though I had spent much time in the last eight years on assignments involving desegregation conflicts, and had watched with sympathy the Negro struggle for civil rights and equality in riot-torn places in the Deep South and here in New York City, I learned that my own "hearing" of the Negro was being obstructed.

Take one seemingly simple but subtle point—their status as American citizens.

I had never doubted that the Negroes were in theory full American citizens in every respect and legally entitled to all their civil rights. I knew full well that they were being systematically impeded by white groups and institutions in attaining these rights, and privately I deplored that.

But I felt more or less unthinkingly that they were a separate group of Americans, one which was in a slow, sure process of winning full acceptance and participation.

It never occurred to me until I was deep in the interviewing of Negroes for the series that a preconception was hampering my understanding, for there is in truth only one kind of American. That is a full American, entitled to all rights, privileges and equal enjoyment of opportunities, and all the rest, without having to earn these and without having to prove himself.

Unless, perhaps, he is a convicted criminal.

Then the sense of outrage which the Negroes feel today dawned on me. The outrage of being required, seemingly forever, to earn their way to full enjoyment of their rights as Americans.

Now this becomes a hard point to develop clearly in words here. It's like talking about one's humility. The humility vanishes when you explain it and the words end up seeming merely pompous. Still, in this case the effort seems worth the risk.

I came to look on Negroes for the first time as just plain Americans like myself and like everybody else whose forebears came to these shores from some foreign land. They now seemed to be no different except as we all are different as individuals. The illumination which had dawned on me neutralized in my mind in a radical way the preconceptions and loaded overtones which looking on the Negro color had formerly cued off in my mind.

Like a young schoolboy who half believes an overheard cliche that all blondes are dizzy and unreliable but grows up to find that is pure nonsense, I came to see that Negroes are all kinds of Americans. Poor Americans and rich ones. Boring and fascinating Americans. Sloppy and fastidious Americans. Mean and courteous Americans—just like the rest of "us."

Further insights came to me when the articles began to appear in the newspaper and an avalanche of mail descended on me. Much of it was praise from Negroes and whites, but that is irrelevent here. More to the point is the fact that much criticism of the series came from Negroes.

Some told me with great annoyance that they knew all about the things "my" Negroes had revealed but the articles had said nothing whatever about what they, the letter writers felt.

Black nationalists condemned my choosing certain moderate viewpoints to be aired, and some moderates said I had overloaded the series with the extremist Black Muslim philosophy. A couple of important Negroes objected personally to having been left out.

I began to see—indeed, feel—what numbers of Negroes had tried to tell me during the interviewing, that there are many Negro viewpoints and a great deal of conflict among the Negroes themselves over their diverse viewpoints.

An Angry Woman

All this criticism proved one thing to me, that the series had communicated something at least—for these Negro critics were certainly communicating to this white man in their angry letters.

One of the bitterest, angriest and most contemptuous letters—and one of the most literate—came from a woman. I telephoned her and asked her permission to use it with her name. In the nicest way, she agreed.

I believe her letter makes a good point, and one missing from the series, and that it is a fine example of a Negro person communicating fully to the white side. So I reproduce it in full here:

"We wouldn't THINK of using dogs against Negroes up North!"

brief about herself that I could use with her letter. She said that she is 25, was born in the South but lived later in Ohio, became a nurse and worked as one in New York, and now is employed by a pharmaceutical company.

For the sake of the interest—and criticism—shown in the mail response over how I put the series together starting from cold, here is the rundown:

The assignment was to do ten articles on the race decided that I ought to try to make my interviews really deep, extending over, say, three hours or so. And to record them on tape.

I fell far short of the 100 interviews but most of those I did do went pretty close into three hours and some much longer.

My choice of those selected for the individual articles was wholly arbitrary. Many Negroes who are important on the American scene I never approached, and never intended to—and for reasons having nothing whatever to do with my estimate of their worth, influence or anything reflecting on them.

They have their job to do and I have mine and I didn't think they fitted into the ten-article format as well as certain others, including a couple of altogether unknown persons.

I decided that the leaders of the two opposite extreme movements most spectacularly active on the American scene ought to be represented. But I didn't think the series needed other highly influential organization leaders. I mean people like Roy Wilkins, executive director of the NAACP, Whitney Young jr., head of the Urban League, Jim Farmer, of CORE; A. Philip Randolph, the Negro labor statesman, and many others equally active in Negro affairs. Or even Rep. Adam Clayton Powell.

In this retrospective examination of the series I think reference ought to be made, however, to the fact that the popular reception among the Negro masses of the Black Muslim denunciation of white oppression on the one side and the successes of the non-violence demonstrations in the South on the other side have tended to make an old-line civil-rights organization such as the NAACP "harder" and more extreme in its public statements.

A Hardening

The NAACP some months ago got in a hassle with white "liberals" in the labor movement, accusing the white liberals of job discrimination. On top of this, Rep. Powell, who has gone extremist in the anti-white direction with a vengeance, jumped on the Negro NAACP leadership, calling matory" but that they have no understanding whatever that these are news articles about problems which are daily occurrences with Negroes.

"We must portray what the Negroes feel, and in so doing we may be accused of exciting or inflaming the people, our readers," he said.

"I don't think the average white person has had the contact with Negroes that we must have in this country sooner or later," he added. "The question is one of communication, if we are really going to solve the problem. White people know nothing about it, and they really can't feel it. It's difficult to try to explain to them what we feel and what the Negro would like for them to understand.

"I know a number of executives who rarely come in contact with any Negro except their chauffeur or maid, and they more or less put all Negroes in the same category.

"I can go to some affair," he continued, "as John Sengstacke, the publisher of The Defender, and that's one thing. But walking in as a Negro, that's something else again. I'm treated differently, then. And this is the thing we're trying to correct.

"Wherever we go we want to go on the basis that we are qualified to meet the standards rather than on the basis of being a Negro or white. This is the difference we are trying to get over to the white people. That plus the fact that there are differences in people, and you can't put everybody in one classification just because they are colored."

At the very outset of my researches I went to Clarence B. Jones, general counsel of the Gandhi Society, a legal aid organization headed by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King jr., for orientation. He was immensely communicative in the best sense of the word, and it was he who discussed the white man's image of the Negro with me for the first time.

"It comes as a surprise, the intensity of James Baldwin's writings," he said, "because the white population has not known the Negro—has not known him in any way except in the way he has wanted to know the Negro.

"I would assume that if you have created an entire structure of how another individual is supposed to react and supposed to be, and you operate within the framework of that, it comes as a great shock to find that the image you have created is only an illusion, and does not correspond in any way with the actual factors."

"Whites have wanted to understand the Negro as someone who was content, so long as you treated him occasionally in a nice way and so long as you set aside a place for him so he would be a good and faithful person, and a good friend," he continued.

"The white man has simply heard himself for many

Miss Melba Tolliver, who wrote the letter.

"Dear Mr. Bird:

"What happened? Did you find the lake of Negro opinion too chilly for the nice long swim you intended? You certainly dived in with all your might with the lead-off article on the Black Muslims. Then, as your series on the 'Ten Negroes' progressed, it seemed as if you decided to get out of that cold river of controversy as rapidly as you had dived in.

"What happened? Weren't you able to find any interviewees who could or would give you the real reasons for the bitterness, disenchantment, and despair of the Negro in America? Were you unable, in all your travel and investigation, to find just one Negro who could or would tell you what it's like to be an American Negro?

"I cannot believe that you could not find one Negro who could tell you what it's like to walk down the street in a predominately white community with all of the stares and whispering. I cannot believe that you could not find one Negro who could tell you of all the little things that happen to him every day of his life on his way to work or school. All of the small things that are a prelude to his work or school day. The things that he accepts, but not quite. The multitude of his 'small' things that sink into his unconscious self, but display themselves in his early morning scowl and his pre-coffee grumpiness. The 'minor' things that cause his white co-workers to wonder why Miss or Mr. Negro is so 'darned evil.'

"Mr. Bird, I would rather believe in the things stated in the United States Constitution, the Bill of Rights and the Supreme Court Decision of 1954 than believe that you could not find just one American Negro who could shed some real light on what it's like to be a Negro in the United States.

"For the past week I, and others like me, have been waiting patiently to see one white person, through a series of profiles on ten Negroes, enlighten other members of his race on the reasons why the Negro feels and acts the way he does. I, and others like me, have been sorely disappointed. Negroes have not been disappointed in the same way as whites have been. We have not been expecting you to tell us things that we did not know, for we are intimately knowledgeable about the things you wrote and did not write, as well as the most minute goings-on in the lives of most white people. Not, in the case of the latter, because we want to but because we have had no other choice.

An Accusation

"Yet, in all this time no one has wanted or tried to know anything about us. No one cares when they run those beautiful shampoo commercials that we have kinky hair, most of it black with no hopes of finding out 'whether blondes have more fun.' No one cares if our hands never become 'soft and white' no matter how many jars and bottles of 'Brand X' we use.

"I won't waste the time, Mr. Bird, to go on with this little story because the things I have just written about are only 1/100,000,000,000 of the many things that go into the making of a bitter, disenchanted, and despairing Negro.

"The invisible man that no one knows or cares about. The invisible man that the white world wishes would completely disappear and solve the 'American Dilemma."

"But we're not going anywhere, you know. We're here to stay. That's why I, and so many others, are disappointed, Mr. Bird. Because you had the opportunity to shed some light on America's 'dark problem' and you failed, you failed miserably.

"As we say 'uptown,' Mr. Bird, why didn't you 'come on down front and tell it like it really is?'

"Cordially, (Signed) MELBA TOLLIVER."

"P. S. Miss Calloway wasn't too much help either when she said 'she forgot she was a Negro.' The majority of us are not seeking to forget, but rather a little remembrance on the part of white Americans!"

I asked Miss Tolliver if she would tell me something

My choice of those selected for the individual articles was wholly arbitrary. Many Negroes who are important on the American scene I never approached, and never intended to—and for reasons having nothing whatever to do with my estimate of their worth, influence or anything reflecting on them.

The NAACP some months ago got in a hassle with white "liberals" in the labor movement, accusing the white liberals of job discrimination. On top of this, Rep. Powell, who has gone extremist in the anti-white direction with a vengeance, jumped on the Negro NAACP leadership, calling for ouster of the whites in leadership positions.

None of that seemed of interest to the series, especially since these persons have well aired their views in the news reports, and there is every indication they will be continuing to do so in the future.

In the case of the NAACP, this is not meant to diminish in any way the lustrous achievements of that organization over the years, achievements which are continuing at an accelerated pace into the present, in advancing Negro rights.

Federal Judge James B. Parsons, of the United District Court of Northern Illinois, told me in Chicago that the massive accumulation of NAACP briefs over the years had helped to build up much of the civil-rights laws of this nation.

Judge Parsons is one example of many Negroes whom I did approach for interviews, and who patiently gave me of their valuable time and who were not, in the end, profiled in the series. This was not for any lack whatever in the thoughts and feelings they communicated to me, but because of reasons of "fit" in the series, factors which lay altogether outside the content of their interviews.

Judge Parsons is one of those Negroes who believes that much progress is being made in race relations.

"There is no question," he told me, "that the Mississippi of this year is ten years in advance, so to speak, of the Mississippi of a year ago."

At another point he said: "I think that Negro novelist James Baldwin's point of view is very good. I think his view is that it's exceedingly difficult for you to become acquainted with what's really going on in this Negro-America relationship. One of the reasons it's difficult for you—thinking of you in terms of the 'White Man,' if there is a 'White Man'—is that it is a matter of tradition for the whites to think in terms of 'The Negro.' And there is no 'The Negro.' There are many 'Negroes.'

"You can't learn to communicate with Negroes academically. You can't sit around a desk and read books and learn how to do it. You have to get out and do it. And Negroes can't learn to communicate with white people across racial barriers. They have to get across the barriers and start living and working and thinking together and their communication becomes common.

Another man who leveled with me in a genuine effort to communicate was John H. Sengstacke, publisher of the Chicago Daily Defender and affiliated Negro newspapers, and one of the more active Negro figures in Chicago.

Answering accusations which are often made against situation, each focalized around a particular Negro person who would speak his views in his own words. I decided that for each of the ten persons profiled in the series I ought to talk to ten others—a hundred altogether. I also the Negro press for being overly sensational, he said that white people "see headlines that they think are inflam-

Contrary to the popular impression of a professional journalist, Robert S. Bird is a slow man coming to grips with the typewriter. After spending 35 of his 57 years in this business, he has almost as many awards as grey hairs and he likes to worry out all the aspects of every problem before he sits down to write.

He's the kind of man in unrimmed glasses and neatly pressed suit who sometimes seems to melt into the scenery and not be there at all, but he can take his middling height and weight and Amesbury, Mass., accent and plant himself in front of a situation and not budge for all the officials in a bureaucracy.

Because he often carries a tape-recorder with him, he has been mistaken for an FBI official. He is not.

He is a reporter who started as a boy and kept going through crime reports, fire stories, political crises and international incidents to become one of the top men in his profession today. "Whites have wanted to understand the Negro as someone who was content, so long as you treated him occasionally in a nice way and so long as you set aside a place for him so he would be a good and faithful person, and a good friend," he continued.

"The white man has simply heard himself for many years—his own self talking. He has not let the Negro speak."

There was Dr. William Stuart Nelson, vice-president of Howard University, who traced for me, among many other aspects of race, the development in American culture from the slavery days of the image of inferiority which permeates white thought about the Negro this very day.

And there were many other Negro figures in different walks of life who patiently explained their inner thoughts to me on many aspects of the racial subject.

The conclusions I drew from all these interviews were clear enough to me at the end.

First and foremost, the Negroes want their rights without any further stalling. They are in no position yet to force a quick resolution of the struggle for their rights, but they no longer will accept the "rightness" of the gradualist approach.

An Attitude

And they want more than their rights, they want equality and freedom. These goals are not easy to spell out in precise definitions, but the people who have bespoken in their thoughts have tried to explain in their various ways what they mean.

If they, or Negroes in general, have failed to communicate what they mean by freedom and equality in America today this does not matter. They still want these enjoyments. Perhaps one way for a white to understand what they mean is to match in his own mind every freedom and opportunity for equality which he enjoys with the same for any Negro who is similarly endowed with intelligence, ability and other traits.

All this leads me to another conviction, that the push by the Negroes of America for these objectives is harder than it ever was, it will get even harder in the future, and the more the Negro gains in this intensifying struggle the more he will demand. And there will be no end to it until "equality" is achieved. Then skin color will carry no ideological meaning whatever.

The drive for advancement will become increasingly spectacular, for the conviction is abroad in the Negro world that white America needs to be shocked and shamed before the world into giving the Negro his rights.

There is, moreover, a buoyant new spirit rippling through much of the Negro world—pride of the black man. This comes in part from the spectacular emergence of the African people into nationhood and the presence in the world councils of the United Nations of their leaders and diplomats. Proud, highly educated, and black as black can be. Black men of kingly self-confidence, standing up straight, tall and level-eyed to the white man.

And partly this pride in race comes also from the yeasty ferment of the Black Muslim philosophy which pervades the entire Negro world. Though it is not converting Negroes in mass numbers yet, it is making them feel mighty proud of their Negro-hood, so to speak.

Along with this, pride of race goes out from the Black Muslim preachers who are holding the attention of masses of Negroes, a denunciation of the white man which is balm to Negro self-esteem.

An Escape Valve

The bulk of Negroes in the great cities of the country are especially happy to see the white man kicked around rhetorically. It is for these Negro people a wonderful escape valve for their long-smouldering resentments. It accounts for the popularity of Malcolm X, the Black Muslim spellbinder who is afraid of nobody and loves to engage in a chilling kind of brinksmanship in his speeches. And for the new extremist fling of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell.

Most of the Negroes I interviewed believe that there is a possibility—though by no means a probability—of outbreaks of violence among the urban masses in the future. They seem to feel that this will depend upon economic conditions and the degree of frustration which Negroes will be allowed to encounter through discrimination affecting the fundamentals of their life. Fundamentals such as food and shelter, education for their children, hope for the future.

Unemployment is the great danger, and tokenism in employment the big evil of today, most of them say.

Among the Negro leaders and men of affairs, and among large numbers of the non-despairing people, there is a feeling also of an approaching fullness of time for them, a sense of destiny, a feeling that the oppressive restraints are somehow about to give. Hopefully, a feeling that this will come about through a new awareness and show of good will by white America. But otherwise through a breaking of the restraints themselves.

MEMORANDUM

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Re: A Report on the Civil Rights Advisory Board Meeting
Jackson, Mississippi-Wednesday, April 17, 1963
Field Trips to Mississippi and Alabama

I arrived in Jackson, Mississippi, and went directly to the Federal building for the Civil Rights Advisory Committee hearing that was scheduled to begin at 1:30 p. m. The hearing started at 2 o'clock with an introductory statement being made by the presiding Chairman, Mrs. Scutt, in which she pointed out that the hearing had been set in an effort to obtain information that the Advisory Committee wanted to supply to the Civil Rights Commission. She also indicated in her remarks that Mr. Bernhardt had come down from Washington for the hearing because of the special interest of the Commission in Mississippi events.

Twelve witnesses testified to specific acts in which they were involved concerning violation of their constitutional rights. Atty. Netlie, the staff attorney for the Commission, also made a preliminary report at this hearing, the contents of which will be spelled out later in this report.

The first witness to appear before the six members of the Advisory Committee was Mrs. Pigee, who testified to an incident in which a bomb was thrown into a church during the course of one of the mass meetings in Clarksdale, and about intimidation of Iowa students visiting in Mississippi. She was followed by Dr. Aaron Henry, who corroborated some of the remarks that had been made by Mrs. Pigee relative to the intimidation of the four students from Iowa. The joint testimony of Mrs. Pigee and Dr. Henry pointed quite specifically to the fact that the local police had solicitated and paid Negro men to physically attack the students. The main emphasis of Dr. Henry's testimony centered around the fire bomb that was tossed into his home during the time that Congressman Diggs was visiting Clarksdale. Dr. Henry was pointed in denying the suggestion in the local press that the persons that bombed his home on that occasion did not know that Congressman Diggs was present. He indicated that the coming of Congressman Diggs had been announced by the press the day before. A fact that was brought out in Dr. Henry's testimony that has not appeared too prominently in the press, was that there were in fact, four bombs, and not just one. Dr. Henry was insistent upon the Advisory Committee understanding the falsity of the press statement that the bomb was harmless, that his home had suffered damages above $1000. He also indicated that there was a very apparent interest on the part of the local officials to play down the incident, pointing out that in less than one-half hour after the assailants were arrested, Congressman Diggs was wired of the arrest in California.

Dr. Henry was followed by Mr. Charles Black of Clarksdale, who testified to the fact that he was personally offered $10 by Mr. Collins, the police chief, to attack the students and also that he had been offered money before in order to persuade him to attack the property of Dr. Henry.

Mr. Black was followed by Robert Moses, who entered testimony as to four shootings with major emphasis on the shooting of James Travis on February 28th. The hearing recessed for five minutes, and was reconvened by the chairman with the reading of a statement of the Advisory Committee that was also released to the press.

During the recess period, I spoke with Mr. Bernhardt, and indicated to him that I had come out to Mississippi as a representative of the Voter Education Project, and that while I did not plan to testify, that I would be delighted to be of any service that I could as one that makes frequent trips into Mississippi, and as one that was present in the car during the Travis shooting. He expressed his appreciation and indicated that if time permitted, I might be called to fill in or corroborate some of the things that Moses had testified to.

After the reading of the statement for the Advisory Committee, Mr. Wallace Davis testified. Mr. Davis is an employee of the City of Jackson as a meter-cap lifter. Mr. Davis testified to an incident in which he and three other persons had been brutally whipped by the sheriff in the registration office on or about February 1st, 1963, in Jackson, Miss.

Mr. Davis was followed by Rev. Tucker, who testified to the much-reported incident in which he was leading a group of citizens from the courthouse when dogs were set upon them.

Rev. Tucker was followed by Rev. Cenney of Ruleville, who testified to the fact that his landlord-employer refused to pay him for field services that he and his family had rendered because he had dared to participate in registration activities.

The Rev. Cenney was followed in testimony by Miss Fannie Lou Haymen of Boliver County, who testified to the fact that on August 31st, she had led a group of citizens from Ruleville to the county seat to register, and that the bus on which they were riding had been turned around, and they had been harrassed by local authorities. She also testified to the fact that the city had engaged in various efforts to force her to remove her name from the registration book, and that she had been forced off of the land where she worked, and had to seek refuge at some three or four different places.

Miss Irene Johnson followed Miss Haymen, and testified that she had been under constant harrassment because of her registration activities by city officials, including such things as having her water cut off, and having her husband arrested.

Mrs. Johnson was followed by Mr. Bennett of Ruleville, who testified that his home had been shot into, and that the police seemed to have had considerable knowledge of the shooting, and that the knowledge seemed to point to the fact that this attack was based on his interest in voter registration.

Mr. Bennett was followed by Mr. Joe McDonald, a citizen of 73 years in Ruleville, who related incidents of intimidation on the part of the registration board, and the refusal of the city officials to register him for city elections.

By this time the evening had grown late. It was about 5:30. Mrs. Scutt called on Mr. Netlie, the staff attorney, to report to the Advisory Committee on his findings relative to the Jackson Airport. In this connection, Mr. Netlie indicated that an examination of the blueprints, as well as an examination of the physical facilities themselves revealed that the Jackson, Mississippi Jet Airport now under construction, does in fact contain duplicate eating and rest room facilities.

A complete typewritten transcript of this hearing has been arranged for, along with a tape recording. It was felt that a tape recording would be desirable in order to obtain insight into the militancy and the timidity with which this testimony was given. This transcript will be supplied to us by Meta Nicholson, court reporter, 836 North Jefferson, Jackson 2, Mississippi.

On the evening of April 17th, I visited in the home of Dr. John Salter, a professor at Tougaloo College. We talked in detail about the Jackson, Mississippi, boycott and the registration drive. Mr. Salter related to me his conclusion that the boycott of downtown merchants was proving to be more than 60% effective, and gaining momentum with each day. He also suggested that the boycott was serving well to initiate student interest in voter registration. On the same afternoon, a group of some fourteen students had been out in the Jackson community canvassing for voter registration.

The project is very young, and one cannot tell at this point what to expect. I am in contact with Dr. Salter, however, and expect to visit him again soon and obtain more information regarding this registration project.

On April 18th, at 10:45, I arrived in Hattisburg, Mississippi, and spent the early part of the day walking around, getting what I considered to be necessary feelings about the community. Hattisburg impresses me as being a city in which a successful registration drive could be conducted. There was not, in my way of thinking, the apparent division between the Negro and white community, nor did there appear to be the usual amount of hostility between the races.

At 2 o'clock Thursday, I made an effort to contact Mrs. Gray, but was unable to see her because she was on a trip to the city of Nashville, Tennessee, on church business. I contacted Miss Woods, the lady that reserves an office in her business for an anticipated registration drive, though there does not appear to be an active drive at the present time. Miss Woods spoke very highly of Mrs. Gray's efforts and abilities in the voter registration field. I look forward to visiting Mrs. Gray on my next trip to Mississippi. I left with Mrs. Gray's daughter, my card, and asked her to please communicate with me as soon as she is back in Hattisburg.

I arrived in Mobile, Alabama, ~~Friday~~ Thursday, April ~~20~~ 18th at 10 p. m., and made contact with some former students of mine. I talked with them socially about the city of Mobile, and of what they knew about registration activities in that community. My conclusion was that they had little knowledge, if any, of present activities. I am not sure, however, that these persons would be a good barometer for measuring the effectiveness of registration activities, as I only talked with four persons.

At 10 o'clock FRIDAY morning, April 19th, I made an effort to see Dr. Goode and learn that he was out of town for the weekend. His office was able to supply me with the address of Mr. Thomas, the editor of the Beacon, the local newspaper. Mr. Thomas is associated with the Mobile County Coordinating Committee for Registration and Voting. We spent several hours talking about the history of registration efforts in this community, and while Mr. Thomas is personally associated within the Coordinating Committee, I had the feeling that he was relating to me a farily objective picture of the history of these efforts. The most problematic part of that history seems to stem from a personality conflict between Mr. Leflore and Rev. LOWRY, who is no longer living in the city of Mobile. It was Mr. Thomas' feeling that a coordinated drive can possibly be conducted now including a good cross-section of the Mobile leadership. I proposed to Mr. Thomas that it might be desirable for persons out of Mobile, namely the VEP, to call on the leadership to sit down and map out a drive, rather than for some local organization to do it. It was our joint feeling that there was sufficient organizational jealously and competition to render any drive ineffective if any local organization assumed the responsibility of projecting the program. Mr. Thomas called in Mr. Montgomery, a citizen of long standing interest in voter registration, and presented this proposal to him which was very warmly received as being desirable. Mr. Montgomery and Mr. Thomas joined in preparing a list of what they considered to be the fifteen most influential citizens, supplying me with the names and addresses. We terminated our conference with the understanding that letters would be sent out from the VEP office, and that they would receive copies of these letters, too, so that it would not be felt that they were the promoters of this program.

RE: Field Trip to Macon, Georgia

I arrived in Macon, Georgia, Thursday, May 9th, at 10 a. m., and went to the office of the Bibb County Voter Registration Committee. There I met with Mr. William Randall, the Executive Secretary of the project, and Atty. Jackson, who is acting as the project director, for a period of about three hours.

In the office, there were twelve other individuals who are working in the project. It was interesting to observe that these individuals all appeared to be above the age of 30, and some seemed to be as old as 55 or 60. It was equally interesting to learn that all of these individuals were volunteer workers. I looked at the list of volunteer sheets, and was able to determine that the committee now has an active list of 131 individuals who work in the project without pay.

I asked Mr. Randall to explain the nature of the committee's approach to get people registered. He explained that the Bibb County Committee is making use of five basic approaches, which are:

1. Courthouse workers
2. Block teachers
3. Citizenship classes
4. Canvassing after a study of registration rolls and city directory.
5. Church meetings.

Because all of these methods are fairly standard except the use of church meetings, we shall only discuss this exception.

Church Meetings:

I am informed by Mr. Randall that he and his committee came to recognize that one of the problems of working with ministers was that civic leaders, as a rule, try to take ministers out of the role that they are comfortable in, and fit them into a role that they (civic leaders) think the ministers should play. In this regard, Mr. Randall indicated that their approach is different. They ask the ministers to preach a sermon on religion and citizenship - this he is often willing to do.

Mr. Randall said that in many cases, very little is said. But, that he always follows the minister with a brief speech which he concludes with a request for volunteers to help canvass the immediate community the following week. These meetings have paid off well. I suggested to Mr. Randall that they might investigate the mobile unit plan of registering to see if they can use it.

The Bibb County Committee has registered about 1500 people since March 28th, and the committee expects to register 10,000 by the last of September.

Asked about their problems, I was told that there is at present, only two problematic areas:

1. They are not yest reaching the pool room group.
2. We are not able to reduce our records to separate organizations so that they can be used effectively.

The attached news clipping indicates something of the success of the Macon voter registration campaign.

The Macon

Maxwell Wins In County Race

MACON NEWS — MAY 2, 1963

Bert Maxwell Jr., was elected a Bibb County commissioner in a special election Wednesday with 8,827 votes to 4,921 for his single opponent, Earl Zibberman Jr.

Maxwell is expected to take office at the next regular meeting of the board of commissioners at 4:30 p.m. next Tuesday, filling a vacancy created by the death March 13 of Commissioner Lawrence J. Brown.

Judge Walter C. Stevens, Bibb ordinary who conducted the election, mailed the certified returns to Secretary of State Ben W. Fortson Jr., shortly after the count was completed Wednesday night, requesting that a commission for the new official be issued if possible before next Tuesday.

Only 13,748 of the county's 45,598 eligible voters went to the polls in the special election. That was just 69 more than 30 per cent of those registered. But the turnout of eligible Negro voters, who went 93.55 per cent for Maxwell and gave him most of his 3,906-vote margin over Zimmerman, was about 44 per cent. It was the white registered voters, only about 26 per cent of whom voted, who pulled down the overall figure.

RE: Field Trips to Savannah, Georgia, Orangeburg, South Carolina, and Augusta, Georgia.

SAVANNAH, GEORGIA:

I arrived in Savannah May 9th at 5:45 p. m., and went to the headquarters of the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters. There, Mr. Hosea Williams, project director, took me through his files in order to explain the nature of his operations. There were ten sets of files that were very orderly prepared, each of which represented a phase of the Crusade's work. One detailed the courthouse activities reflecting the work of some 30 individuals, and another file detailed the PTA and school activities, showing the name of the organization, the president, and days of meetings. Another file detailed the adult citizenship school which outlined the course of instructions as well as the number of classes being conducted. Others were files devoted to ministers, youth, and businessmen, each containing information that would be necessary to work effectively with these segments of the population in a registration drive. There was a file devoted to organizations in the community, another, volunteer workers, and another, transportation. One could not help but get the feeling that he was looking in on an organization of some real political sophistication.

Particularly well kept was the file that contained the list of all of the registered as well as non-registered citizens in Chatham County. As I talked with Mr. Williams, I was able to determine that the First Congressional District of Georgia is well on the way to establishing a sound political organization. There is voter registration activity in every county in the district. In Tatnall County, Mr. Randall is assisted by a Mr. D. J. Norwood, who has obtained from the registrar the privilege of taking registration cards out of the registration office, and into the community and fill them out. (A copy is attached.) Mr. Norwood indicated that in many instances, he registered quite a number of people after church. A real effort is being made to keep this fact out of the news because it is felt that only the registrar's ill health and possible lack of interest has caused him to extend this privilege and with publicity, it might be withdrawn.

On the evening of the 9th, I went with Mr. Williams to Bryan County where we met with a group of about 50 real grass-root farmers. The meeting began about 10 p. m. After the singing of some freedom songs, Mr. Williams delivered a 45 minute address. It was very interesting to observe the skill with which he communicated with the people.

The speech could only be lacking to that of a backwoods minister as he charged his audience some several times that "God was going to hold them accountable for not doing something to make the world better for the children that were running around in the church." He held his audience spellbound as he told them they were "going to Hell if they did not stand up and be counted", concluding with the idea that "I have been down here to talk with you three or four times - the next time I come, we are going to set up a permanent committee and go to work in voter registration."

After the speech, Mr. Williams presented me and Miss Fannie Neal. Each of us made brief remarks, the essence of which was "You the people of Bryan County are not alone in your struggle, and if you will go ahead, people all over the country will rally to your side." A detailed analysis of the First Congressional District's program is not given here for the reason that just two days before my arrival, Mr. Williams had presented an exhaustive report of the Southeastern Georgia program. That report is now in our files, a copy of which is also attached here.

ORANGEBURG, SOUTH CAROLINA:

On May 10th, I arrived in Orangeburg, South Carolina, about 11 a. m. I met with Dr. Thomas of the South Carolina State College. Dr. Thomas is the chairman of a statewide organization known as the Centennial Committee for Voter Registration. At the organization of this particular Centenial Committee, it was stated that the objective would be to conduct registration campaigns all over the state. The Centennial Committee is coordinated in its structure, and supposedly includes most of the local organizations and such affiliates as the NAACP, SCLC, and SNCC. Dr. Thomas indicated to me that he has been successful in establishing committees in Sumter, Clareton, Charleston, Bamberg, Orangeburg, Lexington, and Richmond counties. It was his contention that these counties are ready to go to work, and need only a minimum amount of financial assistance. He indicated with reference to finances, that as of this date, he had only received $100, and it came from the NAACP for work in Orangeburg. As he talked, I got the feeling that he might be becoming just a bit discouraged by the lack of financial support, occupying a chairmanship where it is assumed that financial assistance exists. I asked about numbers registered, and he indicated that there had been some registration in all of the counties, but that he could only be certain of two. He indicated that some 265 had been registered since April 1st to May 9th. He also indicated that some 1500 people had been registered in Charleston County since the organization had a statewide committee. Dr. Thomas pointed to Orangeburg as being a community of great possibilities and promise, in view of the fact that the registrar's office could process as many as 3000 people per day. He extended to me an invitation to attend a statewide meeting (NAACP) in Manning, South Carolina, on May 18th.

I was not able to see Mr. Robinson, the SNCC representative, in Orangeburg. I was told that he had not been in the city for more than a week.

AUGUSTA, GEORGIA:

I arrived in Augusta, Georgia, May 10, 1963, at 5:30 p. m. There I spent about three hours talking with Rev. Postell, Rev. Hamilton, and Father Morris. I talked with these gentlemen concerning the three-week short-term program supported by VEP, and conducted between April 20th and May 4, 1963.

This program was designed mainly to take advantage of the use of mobile units. Rev. Postell said that the public was informed of the unit being in their community by the distribution of hand bills, and that to a limited degree, canvassers were used. He did not feel that the units had been used in a discriminiatory way, but felt that any shortcomings that the program had was in the main problems of an internal nature.

During the operation of the program, about 85 new voters were added to the rolls. It was the joint feeling of the three men with whom I talked that the drive could have been much more successful if the two organizations (Citizens Registration Council and the Citizens Voters League, Inc.) had cooperated together. It was their feelings that the CVL had not, in fact, given any support to the program.

Rev. Postell is still very much involved in the last drive and is still being embarrassed by the fact that there are debts that are still unpaid from the campaign of February 11 to April 1st. When I asked Rev. Postell about these debts, he indicated that there is a sum of $954 still unpaid, and that he has been unable to get the Finance Committee to meet to try to work out a plan for getting the money to pay.

As I talked with the people in Augusta, I got the feeling that this city is in bad shape so far as future work is concerned mainly because these men are not willing to look for shortcomings in what they have done in the past, and try to improve on previous campaigns. The three of them seemed to have lost complete confidence in the people. I feel that I heard much too much of what the people are not doing, or won't do.

SOUTHEASTERN GEORGIA CRUSADE FOR VOTERS

416 West Park Avenue
Savannah, Georgia

TO: Attorney Wiley A. Branton, Project Director, Southern Regional Council, Voter Education Project, Room 2061, 5 Forsyth Street, N. W., Atlanta 3, Georgia

FROM: Hosea L. Williams, President, Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters, First U. S. Congressional District, 416 West Park Avenue, Savannah, Georgia

SUBJECT: A Report on the VEP Activities of the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters.

The First U. S. Congressional District of Georgia's present Voter Education Program began, December 15, 1962 under the auspices of the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters and financed by the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council.

The main objective was to organize effective, active Voter-Education organizations in as many counties as possible, in the First U. S. Congressional District. At the beginning of this program, it was found that only two counties (Chatham & Liberty) had active organized structures. As of April 1, 1963 the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters are claiming seven organized counties (Chatham, Liberty, Tatnall, Wheeler, Emanual, McIntosh and Burke) as efforts financed by the V. E. P. of the Southern Regional Council.

On December 5, 1962, a Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters memorandum entitled "Operating Registration Drives in your County under the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council" were mailed to all contacts (150) in the First U. S. Congressional District *See Attachment #1. At a District meeting, Saturday, December 15, 1963, representatives from fourteen counties (out of 17) were informed of the $4,000.00 grant to the SGCV for the purpose of conducting a Voter Education Project for a four month period. A letter from Attorney Wiley Branton, Project Director of the Southern Regional, Voter Education Project, explaining the terms of the grant was read and explained to the group. All terms expressed in Atty. Branton's letter were accepted. The only controversal stipulations in the letter that caused lengthy discussion were, the limitation of the grant to nine counties and Atty. Branton expressed an opinion that not less than $3,000.00 should be spent in Chatham County. After a lengthly explanation by the district leaders, both terms were accepted by an overwhelming majority.

It was made very clear to each county, the requirements for a county to participate in the grant. (1) There must be a county-wide organized structure (non-partisan) with officers elected in an open county-wide public meeting. It was explained that the objectives of such organizations should be as follows: to get every eligible citizen registered to vote; get all registered voters to vote in every election; to interview all candidates; keep daily records on all public issues, public officials and make records available to the general public; to operate Adult Citizenship Schools for those who want to become first-class citizens; coordinate the political abilities of all individuals and organizations and reframe from partisan politics.

(2) EACH COUNTY MUST SUBMIT TO THE HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE OF THE SOUTHEASTERN GEORGIA CRUSADE FOR VOTERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION: TOTAL POPULATION, NON-WHITE POPULATION, WHITE POPULATION, NUMBER NON-WHITES REGISTERED, NUMBER WHITES REGISTERED, NUMBER NON-WHITES OVER 17½ YEARS OF AGE AND NUMBER OF WHITES OVER 17½ YEARS OF AGE, NUMBER OF NON-WHITES ILLITERATE OVER 17½ YEARS OF AGE AND NUMBER OF WHITES ILLITERATE OVER 17½ YEARS OF AGE; NAME OF COUNTY ORGANIZATION; NAME, ADDRESS, PHONE NUMBER AND POSITION OF ALL ELECTED OFFICERS AND A RESUME OF PROPOSED VOTER-EDUCATION PROJECT *SEE ATTACHMENT #2. AT THIS POINT, IT WAS VERY EASY FOR ANYONE TO SEE THE MAIN PROBLEM OF VOTER-REGISTRATION IN COUNTIES OF THE FIRST U. S. CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT OF GEORGIA O R G A N I Z A T I O N. MOST COUNTIES TRIED TO JUSTIFY THEIR ORGANIZATION, BUT IN ALL CASES EXCEPT TWO (CHATHAM AND LIBERTY), THE COUNTY ORGANIZATION WAS ONLY THEORETICAL, ON PAPER, OR A ONE-MAN SITUATION. FROM REPORTS OF CHATHAM AND LIBERTY COUNTIES, VOTER--EDUCATION WAS NEEDED AS MUCH OR GREATER THAN VOTER-REGISTRATION. REPORTS FROM ALL COUNTIES, EXCEPT CHATHAM, REVEALED A GREAT NEED FOR VOTER-EDUCATION BY BEING UNABLE TO GIVE VERY LITTLE OR NO STATISTICS. EACH COUNTY WAS INSTRUCTED TO RETURN HOME AND BEGIN ORGANIZING OR COMPLETE ALREADY ESTABLISHED STRUCTURES. THE MEETING WAS CLOSED WITH SEVERAL VOTER-EDUCATION SONGS.

CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS: DECEMBER, 1962, 11,200 NEGROES WERE REGISTERED TO VOTE. MARCH, 1963, 14,000 NEGROES WERE REGISTERED TO VOTE. THE V.E.P. OF CHATHAM COUNTY ACTIVATED AND ACCELERATED THE ALREADY ESTABLISHED STRUCTURES (BUSINESSES, ORGANIZATIONS, SCHOOLS AND P. T. A.'S, CHURCHES AREA AND BLOCKWORKERS, AND THE YOUTH COMMITTEES). A SURVEY OF ALL NEGRO BUSINESSES HAD BEEN MADE. A REGISTER WAS MADE WHICH CONTAINED THE NAME, ADDRESS AND PHONE NUMBER OF THE OWNER AND MANAGER; SERVICE OFFERED; AND THE NUMBER OF EMPLOYEES OF EVERY NEGRO BUSINESS IN CHATHAM COUNTY. NO USE WAS MADE OF THIS DATA UNTIL THE VEP BEGAN. SEVERAL PERSONS HAD BEEN ASSIGNED TO THIS PROJECT BUT TIME, TRANSPORTATION, TELEPHONE AND OTHER REASONS ALWAYS PREVENTED THEM FROM SURVEYING THE BUSINESSES AND GET THE UN-REGISTERED, REGISTERED. UNDER THE VEP, A WORKER WAS ASSIGNED TO THIS PHASE OF PROGRAM. HE OBTAINED ASSISTANCES, RE-WORKED THE REGISTER, SURVEYED ONE-THIRD OF THE BUSINESS *SEE ATTACHMENT #3 AND WAS ABLE TO GET 204 PERSONS REGISTERED.

IN 1961, A SURVEY OF ALL NEGRO ORGANIZATIONS WAS MADE. A REGISTER CONTAINING THE NAME, ADDRESS, PHONE NUMBER OF THE PRESIDENT OR CHAIRMAN, AND SECRETARY; TYPED F ORGANIZATION, NUMBER OF MEMBERS, NUMBER OF MEETINGS PER MONTH, MEETING DATES, MEETING PLACE AND TIME OF MEETING. THE ASSIGNMENT OF THE COMMITTEE BEFORE THE VEP SUFFERED THE SAME ILL FATE AS THE PREVIOUS ASSIGNMENT OF THE BUSINESS COMMITTEE. UNDER THE VEP, A WORKER RE-WORKED AT LEAST ½ OF THE REGISTERED (DUE TO NEW ORGANIZATIONS, CHANGES IN OFFICERS, ETC.), COMPLETELY SURVEYED 50 ORGANIZATIONS *SEE ATTACHMENT #4 AND REGISTERED 275 PERSONS.

IN 1961, A SURVEY OF ALL NEGRO CHURCHES AND MINISTERS WAS MADE. A REGISTER WAS MADE CONTAINING NAME, DENOMINATION, LOCATION OF ALL CHURCHES AND THE NAME, ADDRESS PHONE, DENOMINATION AND CHURCH OF ALL MINISTERS. THIS WAS ALMOST A USELESS FILE UNTIL THE VEP. A LEADING MINISTER LED THIS PHASE OF OUR PROGRAM. UNDER THE VEP HE WAS ABLE TO GET MANY OF THE CHURCHES TO SET UP ACTIVE SOCIAL ACTION COMMITTEES *SEE ATTACHMENT #5. THE POLITICAL ACTION PROGRAM OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS IS HIGHLY RECOGNIZED BY THE MINISTERS OF THIS COUNTY, DUE TO THE GOOD-WILL DEVELOPED UNDER THE VEP. THIS COMMITTEE WILL SURVEY ALL CHURCHES AND ATTEMPT TO GET EVERY UN-REGISTERED MEMBER OF ALL CHURCHES, REGISTERED.

THE EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAS ALREAD HAD A SCHOOL AND P.T.A. COMMITTEE. THIS COMMITTEE WAS SUPPOSED TO GET ALL STUDENTS OVER 17½ YEARS OF AGE REGISTERED AND ALL MEMBERS ON THE P.T.A.'S OF CHATHAM COUNTY.

DUE TO THE LACK OF FINANCE, THIS COMMITTEE HAD ONLY SECURED INFORMATION ABOUT P.T.A. OFFICERS. UNDER THE VEP, THE SCHOOL AND P.T.A. COMMITTEE WAS ABLE TO ENTERTAIN AND ORGANIZE THE P.T.A. PRESIDENTS, BEGAN SURVEYING AND REGISTERING *SEE ATTACHMENT #6 P.T.A. MEMBERS AND REGISTERED AT LEAST 500 STUDENTS FROM THROUGHOUT THE SCHOOLS.

THE YOUTH COMMITTEE WAS FORMED UNDER THE VEP. REALIZING THE POWER, INTELLIGENCE AND INFLUENCE OF THE YOUTH, THE CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAD TRIED TO DEVELOP AN EFFECTIVE YOUTH PROGRAM FOR SOME TIME. UTILIZING THE YOUTH IN "GET OUT THE VOTE" CAMPAIGNS HAS ALWAYS ALLOWED ORGANIZING THE YOUTH COMMITTEE TO SOME EXTENT. BUT AFTER A FEW WEEKS, THE ENTIRE YOUTH PROGRAM WOULD DWINDLE TO A STATE OF INEFFECTIVENESS. UNDER THE VEP, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAS THE LARGEST AND MOST EFFECTIVE YOUTH GROUP IN CHATHAM COUNTY *SEE ATTACHMENT #7. THEY ARE INTEGRATED INTO THE ENTIRE PROGRAM AND NOT ONLY GETTING VERY MUCH NEEDED EXPERIENCE BUT MAKING A VERY WORTHWHILE CONTRIBUTION TO THE OVERALL PROGRAM . ONE OF THE MAJOR CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE YOUTH COMMITTEE IS THAT THEY HAVE BEEN ABLE TO PENETRATE TO SOME DEGREE THE PUBLIC EDUCATION PROGRAM. THEY ARE SHOWING CITIZENSHIP MOVIES AND SOLICITING WORKERS IN ALL THE HIGH SCHOOLS AND P.T.A.'S. UNDER THE VEP, A WORKER IS MAINTAINED FULL TIME AT THE COURTHOSSE. SHE TAKES THE NAME, ADDRESS AND PHONE NUMBER OF EVERY NEGRO ENTERING THE COURTHOUSE. SHE ACCERTAINS WHETHER OR NOT THEY ARE REGISTERED. EACH CITIZEN FOUND TO BE UN-REGISTERED, IS COACHED AND ENCOURAGED TO REGISTER *SEE ATTACHMENT #8. IF REGISTRANTS ARE REFUSED DUE TO ANY REASON, THE WORKER FINDS THE REASON AND REPORTS ALL POINTS OF VIEW TO HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE FOR CONSIDERATION. THE AREA AND BLOCKWORKERS ARE ABLE TO GIVE CONSOLATION TO PROSPECTIVE REGISTRANTS BY TELLING THEM "DON'T BE AFRAID, A NEGRO WOMAN IS STANDING IN THE COURTHOUSE TO HELP YOU". ANOTHER VERY GOOD PURPOSE THE COURTHOUSE WORKER SERVES IS THAT SHE IS ON THE SCENE AND CAN KEEP THE HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE INFORMED AS TO THE ATTITUDE OF THE PERSONNEL IN THE REGISTRATION OFFICE. MANY TIMES, THE ATTITUDES OF THE REGISTRATION CLERKS ARE THE EFFORTS USED TO INTIMIDATE AND HARASS REGISTRANTS. AT TIMES, THESE ATTITUDES ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR UP TO A 50% TURN-DOWN. WHEN THE COURTHOUSE WORKER REPORTS ON HER RECORD THAT THERE WAS A HIGH PERCENT OF TURN-DOWNS DUE TO THE ATTITUDE OF REGISTRATION CLERKS, AN OPEN INVESTIGATION, COUPLED WITH POLITICAL PRESSURE, ALWAYS SEEMS TO TEMPORARILY RELEAVE THE SITUATION.

THE TELEPHONE COMMITTEE WAS ACTIVATED UNDER THE VEP. TELEPHONES WERE RENTED FROM A LOCAL COLLECTION AND PROMOTION SERVICE. THE TELEPHONE COMMITTEE RECALLED ALL PERSONS WHO HAD PROMISED TO GO DOWN AND REGISTER ON A CERTAIN DATE. THIS COMMITTEE ALSO MADE ALL CONTACTS FOR THE ORGANIZATION AND BUSINESS COMMITTEES.

THE AREA AND BLOCKWORKERS' COMMITTEE WAS THE MOST EFFECTIVE AND PRODUCTIVE. THE COUNTY WAS DIVIDED INTO 32 AREAS. WORKERS WERE OBTAINED TO THE EXTENT OF THE GRANT (LIMITED). IT IS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE AREA WORKERS TO SURVEY *SEE ATTACHMENT #9 ASSIGNED AREAS AND ATTEMPT TO GET ALL PROSPECTIVE REGISTRANTS REGISTERED. THE AREA WORKER IS RESPONSIBILE FOR BLOCKWORKERS IN THEIR AREA. THE HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE FURNISHED TRANSPORTATION TO AREA WORKERS FOR ANY PART OF THE VEP. THE CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS FILES (REGISTERED AND NON-REGISTERED) TOTALS ABOUT 20,000 NAMES, ADDRESSES AS THE RESULT OF THE AREA AND BLOCKWORKERS COMMITTEE. THE VALUE OF THIS COMMITTEE HAS LONG BEEN REALIZED BUT THE LACK OF OPERATIONAL CAPITAL HAS CAUSED THE COMMITTEE TO CONTINUE INACTIVE UNTIL THE VEP GRANT WAS MADE.

THE HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE HAS BEEN ONE OF THE CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS MAJOR VEP ROAD BLOCKS. GENERAL SUPERVISION, TRANSPOSING OF DATA, FILING AND CATALOGING DATA, TRANSPORTATION, OFFICE SUPPLIES, OFFICE EQUIPMENT AND OFFICE SPACE.. THE MAGNITUDE OF THE PROGRAM FAR SURPASSES THE CAPACITY OF THE HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE. IT IS

STUDENTS HAVE CARRIED ON MANY OF THE HEADQUARTER'S FUNCTIONS BUT THEY HAVE TO BE CLOSELY SUPERVISED. IN THE FUTURE, IT IS A MUST TO EXPAND THE HEADQUARTER'S PERSONNEL, FACILITIES AND EQUIPMENT.

UNDER THE VEP IN CHATHAM COUNTY, MANY ADVANCES HAVE BEEN MADE. THIS IS THE FIRST TIME THE WHITE COMMUNITY OPENLY EXPRESSED REAL CONCERN OVER NEGRO REGISTRATION. TWO WHITE GROUPS GOT SO CONCERNED, THEY ACTUALLY TRIED TO CARRY ON REGISTRATION DRIVES, BUT THEIR ATTEMPTS WERE UNSUCCESSFUL. THE REGISTRATION OFFICE FIRST EXPRESSED CONCERN OVER SO MANY NEGROES SHOWING UP AT THE REGISTRATION OFFICE AT THE SAME HOUR. THEY WENT SO FAR AS PLACING ALL NEGROES IN ONE LINE AND KEEPING ONE OPEN FOR WHITES. A MEETING WAS GRANTED TO DISCUSS THIS MATTER. THE REGISTRARS CLAIM THEY DID THIS BECAUSE ALL THESE REGISTRANTS WERE THE RESULTS OF THE SAME EFFORT (CRUSADE FOR VOTERS). THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS COMPLAINED THAT THIS WAS A DENIEL OF EQUAL RIGHTS. BY PLACING ALL NEGROES IN THE SAME LINE, MANY HAD TO WAIT FOR HOURS TO REGISTER WHEN A WHITE PERSON COULD USE THE OTHER LINE AND WALK RIGHT UP TO THE OTHER WINDOW AND REGISTER WITHIN A FEW MINUTES. AFTER A LENGTHLY DISCUSSION, THE REGISTRARS AGREED TO LET, FIRST COME, FIRST SERVE.

NEXT WE NOTICED THE REGISTRATION CLERKS WERE REQUIRING MUCH MORE OF THE NEGRO REGISTRANTS THAN THE WHITES. NEGROES WERE REQUIRED TO READ CARDS CONTAINING 3,4, 5 AND SOMETIMES 6 LINES, WHILE WHITES WERE GIVEN CARDS WITH 1 AND 2 LINES. SOMETIMES NEGROES WERE REQUIRED TO READ 2 OR 3 CARDS WHILE WHITES WERE NEVER ASKED TO READ OVER 1 CARD. FROM 20 TO 40% OF THE NEGROES WERE BEING REJECTED AND REQUIRED TO PASS GEORGIA'S "UN-PASSABLE" ILLITERATE TEST FOR MISPRONOUNCING ONE WORD OR STUMBLING OVER WORDS LIKE MILITIA, INSURRECTION, PROSECUTIONS, DISPARAGE, ETC. AT THE SAME TIME, VERY FEW, IF ANY, WHITES WERE BEING TURNED DOWN. A MEETING WAS REQUESTED WITH CITY COUNCIL, ANOTHER WITH THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND STILL ANOTHER WITH THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS. THE MAYOR OF SAVANNAH MET WITH THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AND SAID HE WOULD USE HIS CONTACTS AND INFLUENCE TO CORRECT THE UNJUSTICES, BUT HE COULD NOT DO ANYTHING OFFICIALLY. HE ALSO ASSISTED THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS IN GETTING A MEETING WITH THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS MET WITH THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AND INVITED THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS. THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS SAID THERE WAS NOTHING OFFICIAL THEY COULD DO, BUT BECAUSE THE REGISTRATION OFFICE WAS HOUSED IN COUNTY PROPERTY, THEY HAD A GREAT DEAL OF CONCERN AND WOULD USE THEIR INFLUENCE TO ASSIST THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS. THEY REPEATEDLY STATED IN THE PRESENCE OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS, "WE HOPE THIS MATTER CAN BE CLEARED UP". AT ONE POINT THE CHAIRMAN OF THE REGISTRARS SPOKE UP VERY HEATEDLY AND SAID "I'LL TELL ALL OF YOU NOW, OUR JOB IS TO SEE TO IT THAT EACH REGISTRANT IS TESTED CORRECTLY. THIS IS WHAT WE HAVE ALWAYS DONE AND WHAT WE WILL CONTINUE TO DO". THE COUNTY ATTORNEY SPOKE UP AND SAID "WE ARE STILL VITALLY INTERESTED IN HOW THE MEETING BETWEEN THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AND CHATHAM COUNTY BOARD OF REGISTRARS TURN OUT."

THE FOLLOWING DAY, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS RECEIVED AN INVITATION TO MEET WITH THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS. KNOWING THE BACKGROUND OF THE BOARD, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS EXTENDED AN INVITATION TO MR. JACK MINNIS, RESEARCH DIRECTOR OF THE VEP. MR. MINNIS ACCEPTED THE INVITATION. PRESENT AT THIS MEETING WERE THE THREE REGISTRARS, CHIEF REGISTRATION CLERK, TOP EMPLOYEE IN THE REGISTRATION OFFICE, MR. JACK MINNIS OF THE VEP HEADQUARTERS, MRS. ETHEL LEE (A NEGRO WOMAN WHO HAD PREVIOUSLY WORKED IN AND AROUND THE COURTHOUSE, TRYING TO GET NEGROES REGISTERED TO VOTE), MR. SAM WILLIAMS (NEGRO BUSINESSMAN), MR. W. W. LAW (PRESIDENT OF THE NAACP), REV. P. A. PATTERSON (REPRESENTING THE INTER-DENOMINATIONAL MINISTERIAL ALLIANCE AND HOSEA L. WILLIAMS, PRESIDENT OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS.

ATTORNEY CHARLIE DEBELE, CHIEF REGISTRAR, OPENED THE MEETING (IN HIS PRIVATE OFFICE) BY GETTING EVERY ONE TO INTRODUCE THEMSELVES. THEY WERE VERY CONCERNED ABOUT MR. MINNIS' PRESENCE. THEY FELT SURE HE WAS FROM THE JUSTICE DEPARTMENT. THEY ASKED HIM, "ARE YOU A LAWYER?" THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS MADE A REQUEST TO THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS FOR THEM TO USE THEIR AUTHORITY TO STOP THE REGISTRATION CLERKS FROM TURNING NEGROES DOWN UNJUSTLY. WE EXPLAINED THAT THE CLERKS WOULD DENY A NEGRO THE OPPORTUNITY TO REGISTER IF HE OR SHE MIS-PRONOUNCED ONE WORD. WE TOLD THEM THAT THE CLERKS REFUSED TO ALLOW NEGROES TO TAKE THE LITERATE TEST, ONCE THEY WERE TURNED DOWN. THIS WAS IN VIOLATION OF THE GEORGIA LAW. THE CLERKS HAD A HABIT OF TELLING NEGROES, "YOU CAN'T READ AND WRITE WELL ENOUGH, SO YOU WILL HAVE TO PASS THE ILLITERATE TEST BEFORE YOU CAN REGISTER". WE EXPLAINED THE ATTITUDE OF THE CLERKS TOWARD NEGROES, OVER AGAINST THE CLERKS ATTITUDE TOWARD WHITES. WHEN A NEGRO WALKED UP TO THE WINDOW, THE CLERK'S HAD A HABIT OF BEING VERY, VERY HOSTILE, SNAPPY AND SHORT. AS STATED BEFORE, THE CLERK WOULD GIVE THE NEGROES CARDS TO READ CONTAINING 10 TO 30 WORDS. IN MANY CASES, IF THE NEGRO READ THE CARD WELL, THE CLERK WOULD REACH BACK AND GET A CARD WITH HARDER WORDS. SOMETIMES THE CLERK WOULD REQUIRED THE NEGRO REGISTRANT TO READ AS MANY AS THREE CARDS BEFORE THEY WOULD FINALLY TURN THEM DOWN. WE WENT ON TO EXPLAIN HOW THE ATTITUDE OF THE CLERKS WOULD CONFUSE AND UPSET NEGRO REGISTRANTS, UNTIL THEY COULD NOT READILY REMEMBER THEIR BIRTH DATES OR MOTHER'S MAIDEN NAME. THIS WAS ANOTHER BIG REASON FOR THE CLERKS TO REJECT MANY NEGROES. NATURALLY THE REGISTRARS EXPRESSED IN DETAIL THEIR DIS-BELIEF OF ALL ACCUSATIONS. THE REGISTRAR'S WENT ON TO PROVE WHAT NICE, CHRISTIAN, AMERICAN, DEMOCRATIC CLERKS THEY HAD. THEY WENT SO FAR AS SAYING, WE JUST DON'T BELIEVE OUR CLERKS WOULD TREAT NEGROES ANY DIFFERENT FROM THEIR OWN COLOR.

HAVING DEALT WITH THE REGISTRARS BEFORE, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ARE SURE THE PRESENCE OF A STRANGE WHITE MAN (MR. MINNIS) WAS THE CAUSE THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS EVEN HEARD OUR COMPLETE COMPLAINT. THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD WAS ALSO AWARE THAT THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WERE CONCERNED ABOUT THE OUTCOME OF THE MEETING. THE CHIEF CLERK DENIED ALL THE CHARGES. AT ONE POINT SHE TOLD THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS "WHAT YOU NEED IS ANOTHER CLERK" IN A VERY HOT AND LOUD TONE OF VOICE AND GOT UP AND HURRIED OUT OF THE MEETING ROOM. BEFORE THIS DRAMATIC ACT, THE CHIEF CLERK EXPLAINED HOW THE CLERKS BENT OVER BACKWARDS TO PASS NEGROES.

SHE EXPLAINED HOW NEGROES TAKE SO LONG TO REGISTER. HOW THEY HOLD UP THE LINE AND PET THEM. AT THIS POINT, THE CHIEF REGISTRAR SAID, "I KNOW YOU ARE TELLING THE TRUTH BECAUSE I HAVE DONE THE SAME THING UPON MY VISITS TO THE REGISTRATION OFFICE". HE WENT ON TO EXPLAIN AN EXAMPLE. "I HAD AN OLD COLORED WOMAN ABOUT 65 OR 70. SHE WAS JUST NERVOUS. I TOLD HER, COME ON NOW GIRL, TAKE YOUR TIME AND DON'T BE SCARED." WHAT THE CHIEF REGISTRAR FAILED TO UNDERSTAND (AS MR. MINNIS EXPLAINED), CALLING A WOMAN 65 OR 70 YEARS OLD GIRL WAS AN EXEMPLIFICATION OF THE CHIEF REGISTRAR'S RESPECT FOR NEGROES. ANOTHER OF THE REGISTRARS, DR. WILLIAM WEICHSELBAUM, WAS MOST CRITICAL OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS' COMPLAINTS. HE DISPLAYED A VERY HIGH TEMPER. AT ONE POINT, HE BITTERLY CALLED THE PRESIDENT OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS A LIE. IN A PREVIOUS MEETING WITH THE OFFICIALS OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS, DR. WEICHSELBAUM SAID HE WANTED TO SEE ALL INTELLIGENT CITIZENS REGISTERED, BUT HE WAS NOT GOING TO HELP ALL THESE NEGROE S GET REGISTERED JUST SO THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS COULD LEAD THEM BY THE NOSE ON ELECTION DAY. IN THIS PREVIOUS MEETING WITH THECRUSADE FOR VOTERS, DR. WEICHSELBAUM SAID "I WANT YOU TO BRING TO MY OFFICE A NEGRO WHO HAS BEEN TURNED DOWN BY THE REGISTRATION CLERKS FOR NOT BEING ABLE TO READ AND WRITE, BUT YOU SAY CAN READ AND WRITE AND SHOULD NOT HAVE BEEN TURNED DOWN." THIS WAS DONE. THE DOCTOR HEARD THE PERSON READ. THE REGISTRANT READ 4 OR 5 PARAGRAPHS OF A NEWSPAPER. FINALLY THE REGISTRANT MISPRONOUNCED ONE WORD, THAT A COLLEGE GRADUATE MIGHT HAVE MISPRONOUNCED. DR. WEICHSELBAUM, JUMPED UP AND MADE A MOUNTAIN OUT OF A MOLE HILL. HE COOLED DOWN AFTER HE HAD BEEN INFORMED THAT "WINSTON CHURCHILL MIGHT MISPRONOUNCE ONE WORD". AT THIS PARTICULAR MEETING, DR. WEICHSELBAUM PROMISED HE WOULD BE AT THE REGISTRATION OFFICE THE FOLLOWING WEDNESDAY AND WOULD TEST ALL THE REGISTRANTS THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS BELIEVED TURNED DOWN UNJUSTLY. WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON CAME, THE REJECTED REGISTRANTS WAITED ON THE DOCTOR WHO NEVER SHOWED UP. THIS INCIDENT WAS ONLY EXPLAINED TO VERIFY ONE OF THE REGISTRARS (DR. WEICHSELBAUM) ATTITUDE AND FEELINGS TOWARD NEGRO REGISTRANTS.

THE OTHER REGISTRAR (MRS. E. A. LEONARD) WAS MUCH MORE CONSIDERATE IN WORDS. HE EXPLAINED TO THE CHIEF CLERK, THE LAW ALLOWED A PERSON TO TAKE THE LITERATE TEST MORE THAN ONE TIME. HE SAID, "I TRUST AND HOPE, NO CITIZEN IS BEING DENIED THE RIGHT TO REGISTER AND I WANT STAND FOR THIS." HE ALSO SAID "I FEEL EVERY HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATE SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO REGISTER."

THE HOTTEST POINT OF THE MEETING WAS GENERATED WHEN MRS. LEE, AN EX-COURT WORKER, EXPLAINED TO THE BOARD OF REGISTRARS HOW THE CHIEF REGISTRATION CLERK TRIED TO DRIVE HER OUT OF THE COURTHOUSE (THE SHERIFF AND ONLY THE SHERIFF HAS THE RESPONSIBILITY OF ENFORCING THE LAW WITHIN THE COURTHOUSE) AND WALKED UP TO HER AND SNATCHED SEVERAL ILLITERATE TEST FORMS FROM HER HAND. THESE FORMS, WHICH CONTAINED THE ILLITERATE REGISTRATION TEST, HAD BEEN GIVEN REJECTED REGISTRANTS. MRS. LEE WHO WAS THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS COURTHOUSE WORKER AT THAT TIME, WOULD ASK THE REJECTED REGISTRANTS FOR THEIR NAME AND ADDRESS SO THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS COULD SOLICIT THEM IN ONE OF ITS ADULT CITIZENSHIP SCHOOLS. THE ADULT CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL TEACHERS, TEACH THE REJECTED REGISTRANTS THE ANSWERS TO THE ILLITERATE TEST. IN TALKING WITH THE REJECTED REGISTRANTS, MRS. LEE WOULD EXPLAIN THAT THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAD ALL THE ANSWERS AND WOULD TYPE THEM ON THE BLANK IF THEY FELT THIS WOULD HELP. AT THIS POINT, MOST OF THE REJECTED REGISTRANTS WOULD LEAVE THEIR BLANKS WITH MRS. LEE. THE CHIEF CLERK NOTICED MRS. LEE TALKING WITH THE REJECTED PERSONS. AT FIRST SHE TRIED TO SCOLD MRS. LEE FROM THE COURTHOUSE.

After Mrs. Lee ignored her, she burst up to Mrs. Lee and snatched the forms from her hand and said "you have no business in this building or with these blanks and I want you to get out of here and leave these Niggras alone". All of this, the registration chief clerk denied. She did admit, "asking this girl not to interfere with registration.

Mr. Minnis had not made a comment during the whole meeting. The chief registrar observed this and asked Mr. Minnis to state his opinion. Mr. Minnis stated he was just an observer but would like to make an observation if permitted to do so. The Board of Registrar's agreed they would like to hear the opinion. Mr. Minnis said, "I feel true communication and consideration is lacking between the Negroes and Registration officials." He gave one example, dealing with the incident of the 65 or 70 year old woman related by the chief registrar. Mr. Minnis reminded the chief registrar that he had admitted calling a 65 or 70 year old Negro lady GIRL. Mr. Minnis asked the registrars how would you feel if you heard a Negro man call a 65 or 70 year white woman GIRL? How do you think that 65 or 70 year old Negro woman felt when you called her GIRL, Mr. Debele? Then Mr. Minnis went on to say, Negroes have dignity, "they have a chip on their shoulders, because us white people put it there. How many white people ever smile or treat Negroes with common courtesy? I notice in this meeting, these Negroes address each of you as Mr., Dr., Mrs. etc, but you address them by their first name and you call me Mr." said Mr. Minnis. "Lady and gentlemen, can't you see how easy it would be to transfer this attitude into the registration of Negroes? I don't believe Mr. Debele would call a 65 or 70 year old white woman GIRL. Would you Mr. Debele?" The members of the Board and the chief clerk did the unbelievable thing; turned a deep RED color and froze at the same time. At this point, Mr. Minnis suggested a solution to the problem. He stated, "I feel sure all of you realize there is a problem and I believe you are willing to do your best to dissolve it. I believe I know a very easy way. HIRE A NEGRO REGISTRATION CLERK. Just the sight of a Negro in the registration, would rid many Negroes of this fear we all admit they develop. We admit some Negroes are just nervous in the presence of white people. I am sure the attitude of the white clerks are responsible for some of the Negro registrants becoming nervous. Now, just picture a Negro walking up to that registration window and being greeted by another Negro. Do you believe this alone would give comfort? I think you could settle the problem by hiring a Negro registration clerk." There was no great resentment expressed but the registrars and clerk got red and redder, mum and mummer.

By now the whites were really ready to close the meeting. The final agreement was that the Crusade for Voters would find all the registrants turned down unjustly and bring them down to the registration the following Wednesday afternoon. At this time the registrars would be there to test these registrants and would allow Hosea L. Williams, president of the Crusade for Voters, to stand inside of the registration office and observe closely. The registrars agreed to test every applicant without knowing whether this was their first or second trip. The meeting closed and one of the registrars invited Mr. Minnis to dinner. Mr. Minnis was unable to accept due to a previous commitment.

The following Wednesday Hosea L. Williams got an excuse to leave his job without pay at 12:00 noon, arrived at the registration office at 1:00 P.M. ready to observe. Williams' walked up to the registration window and asked the clerk, "May I come inside?" She said, "For what?" This was the chief clerk, she was in the meeting when the registrar's agreed to let Williams observe. Williams informed the clerk of the agreement. The clerk replied, "I have not been informed of this, you will have to see ATTORNEY DEBELE." "MAY I SPEAK TO ATTY. DEBELE," SAID WILLIAMS. "NO", SAID THE CLERKK. "HE IS NOT IN". "BUT HE PROMISED TO MEET ME HERE", SAID WILLIAMS. "WELL HE IS NOT HERE; THEREFORE YOU WILL HAVE TO STAND BACK FROM THIS WINDOW", REPLIED THE CLERK. WILLIAMS GETTING HOTTER AND HOTTER REQUESTED "WILL YOU CALL HIM, TELL HIM I AM HERE AND WANT TO COME TO OBSERVE INSIDE AND ASK HIM WHAT TIME HE WILL BE OVER HERE?" THE CLERK WENT OVER TO THE DESK BITTERLY AND MADE A CALL. SHE RETURNED TO THE WINDOW WHERE WILLIAMS WAS STANDING WITH A 'CHESHER CAT' SMILE ON HER FACE. "ATTY. DEBELE IS NOT IN HIS OFFICE AND HIS SECRETARY DOESN'T KNOW WHEN HE WILL BE BACK", RESPONDED THE CLERK. YOU COULD SEE THE EXPRESSION CHANGE ON HER FACE, AS HER ATTUTUDE RETURNED TO NORMAL (BITTER). "I DON'T HAVE ANYTHING ELSE TO SAY TO YOU SO STAND AWAY FROM THE WINDOW AND DON'T DISTURBE ME OR THESE PEOPLE".

WILLIAMS RETURNED TO THE OTHER SIDE OF THE HALL WHERE THE COURTHOUSE WORKER WAS AND WAITED UNTIL 1:30 P.M. HE DECIDED TO CALL ATTY. DEBELE'S OFFICE HIMSELF FROM A PAY PHONE THAT WAS IN HERRING DISTANCE OF THE REGISTRATION CLERK. WILLIAMS DIALED THE REGISTRAR'S PRIVATE OFFICE AND ASKED TO SPEAK TO ATTY. DEBELE. THE ANSWERER OF THE PHONE WANTED TO KNOW WHO WAS CALLING. AFTER SHE LEARNED THE CALLER, SHE STATED, "ATTY. DEBELE IS OUT OF THE OFFICE FOR THE AFTERNOON". WILLIAMS THEN CALLED DR. WEICHSELBAUM, THE OTHER REGISTRAR WHO HAD PROMISED TO MEET THEM AT THE REGISTRATION OFFICE THAT WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON. AFTER FINDING OUT WHO WILLIAMS WAS, DR. WEICHSELBAUM'S SECRETARY INFORMED WILLIAMS "THAT THE DR. IS BUSY AND WILL BE LEAVING THE OFFICE FOR THE REGISTRATION OFFICE AS SOON AS HE FINISHED WITH WAITING PATIENTS". WILLIAMS ASKED, "HOW LONG DO YOU THINK IT WILL BE BEFORE THE DR. WILL BE FINISHED WITH HIS PATIENTS?" THE SECRETARY DID NOT HAVE ANY IDEA. SHE STATED, "IT MIGHT BE 1, 2 OR THREE HOURS. I JUST DON'T KNOW". AND HUNG UP. WILLIAMS LOOKED AT THE CLOCK ON THE WALL, WHICH SHOWED 2:00 P.M. AS WILLIAMS LEFT THE PLACE LOOKING AND FEELING WHIPPED, THE CLERKS LOOKED OVER WITH A FACE OF GAIETY. WILLIAMS STOOD OUT IN THE HALL AS SEVERAL OF THE FAST REJECTED REGISTRANTS WALKED UP TO THE REGISTRATION WINDOW AND REGISTERED WITHOUT A BIT OF TROUBLE. WILLIAMS NOTICED NOT ONE SINGLE PERSON WAS TURNED DOWN WHILE HE WAS DISTANTLY OBSERVING. BY 2:30 P.M., WILLIAMS CONVINCED HIMSELF THAT NEITHER OF THE REGISTRARS WOULD SHOW UP. HE ALSO REMEMBERED HE WAS ON LEAVE WITHOUT PAY AND RETURNED TO HIS PLACE OF LIVELIHOOD.

IT IS IMPORTANT THAT THIS WHOLE EPISODE BE UNDERSTOOD. DURING NEGOTIATION, THE REJECTION OR TURN-DOWNS OF NEGRO REGISTRANTS DROPPED FROM 30 TO 40% TO 2 - 5%. TURN DOWNS REMAINED ABOUT 5% FOR ABOUT 30 DAYS. THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ARE SURE MUCH O F THIS WAS DUE TO PRESSURE FROM THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. THEY DEFINITELY DISPLAYED THEIR INFLUENCE, FOR MORE THAN ONE REASON. ONE OF THE MAIN REASONS WAS A COMING SPECIAL SENATORIAL ELECTION. THEY WANTED TO DEVELOP A CLOSER FRIENDSHIP WITH THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS; FEELING THIS WOULD GIVE THEM A BETTER CHANCE AT THE NEGRO VOTE. THEY HAD PUBLICLY ENDORSED A CANDIDATE FOR THE SENATORIAL RACE AND HAD MADE SOME INQUIRIEES CONCERNING NEGRO SUPPORT.

BELIEVING THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS GREATLY DESIRED NEGRO SUPPORT IN THE SENATORIAL RACE, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS APPROACHED THE COMMISSIONERS WITH SOMEWHAT OF AN INTEREST. A MEETING WAS HELD BETWEEN THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AND THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. WITH THE KNOWLEDGE THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS PROVIDED SALARIES FOR THE REGISTRATION CLERKS, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ASKED IF IT WAS POSSIBLE THAT THE COMMISSIONERS COULD PROVIDE A SALARY FOR AN ADDITIONAL REGISTRATION CLERK. THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ASKED IN THE SAME BREATH, IF IT IS POSSIBLE FOR THE COMMISSIONERS TO PROVIDE AN ADDITIONAL REGISTRATION CLERK. THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ASKED "WILL YOU SEE YOUR INFLUENCE TO SEE THAT THE REGISTRARS HIRE A NEGRO CLERK?" THE COMMISSIONERS TRIED TO ACT AS IF THIS REQUEST BEFUDDLED THEM. WE WERE ABLE TO INTERPRET THE ACT BECAUSE WE KNEW THE MAYOR OF SAVANNAH HAD PREVIOUSLY APPROACHED THEM WITH THIS IDEA. THE MAYOR HAD DONE THIS AT THE ADVICE OF MR. MINNIS AND THE DIRECT REQUEST OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS. THE COMMISSIONERS READILY AGREED THIS WOULD BE A GOOD WAY TO OFFSET THE REJECTION OF NEGRO REGISTRANTS. THEY ALSO CLAIMED THEY WOULD MEET OUR DEMANDS BUT IT WOULD HAVE TO BE DONE IN THE FALL OF 1965 (SMILE). REMEMBER, THIS WAS JANUARY OF 1963. THIS THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS COULD NOT BUY. THE MEETING CLOSED WITH THE UNDERSTANDING THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WOULD USE THEIR INFLUENCE TO PREVENT UNJUSTLY REJECTION OF QUALIFIED REGISTRANTS.

OUT OF THE THREE YEARS THE CHATHAM COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAS BEEN IN OPERATION, IT HAS BEEN VERY HARD TO GET MASS COMMUNITY SUPPORT. UNDER THE VEP, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAS BECOME OF AGE. DUE TO THE AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS THROUGH THE VEP, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS OBJECTIVES, OPERATION, ACCOMPLISHMENTS AND VALUES HAVE BEEN COMPREHENDED BY THE MASSES. EFFORTS OF THE VARIOUS COMMITTEES HAS OBTAINED FOR US NOT ONLY FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTIONS, VOLUNTARY WORKERS BUT ALSO GOODWILL AND COMMUNITY SENTIMENT.

ONE SET BACK I HAVE TO ADMIT IS THE TEMPORARY CONFLICT WITH THE NAACP. BEFORE APPROVAL OF THE $4,000 GRANT, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS RECEIVED $100 PER MONTH FOR OPERATIONAL EXPENSES FROM THE SAVANNAH BRANCH OF THE NAACP. THIS $100 PER MONTH WAS GRANTED TO THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS BECAUSE THE NAACP SPONSORS COUNTY-WIDE MASS MEETINGS EVERY SUNDAY AFTERNOON. DUE TO THE GREAT INFLUENCE THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS CONTRIBUTES TO THE MEETINGS BY KEEPING THE GENERAL PUBLIC INFORMED POLITICALLY, IT WAS DECIDED BACK IN 1961 TO SHARE THE FINANCIAL CONTRIBUTIONS WITH THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AT A RATE OF $100 PER MONTH (THIS WAS ABOUT ½ OF THE COLLECTION). THEREFORE, THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS NEVER HELD A SUNDAY MEETING, BUT CONDUCTED ABOUT 2 OUT OF EVERY 5 OF THE NAACP'S MEETINGS. THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ALWAYS MAINTAINED A SECRETARY IN A COUNTY HEADQUARTERS' OFFICE. THE $100 PER MONTH SUBSIDIZED THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS INDIVIDUAL, BUSINESS, AND CHURCH CONTRIBUTIONS WHICH AMOUNTED TO ABOUT $125 PER MONTH.

AFTER THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS MADE PUBLIC THAT IT HAD RECEIVED A $4,000 GRANT FROM THE VEP FOR A THREE MONTH VOTER-REGISTRATION PROGRAM, THE EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE LOCAL NAACP MET AND VOTED TO STOP SHARING ITS FUNDS WITH THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS. OFFICIALS OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS OBJECTED DUE TO THE FACT THE GRANT WAS FOR ONLY THREE MONTHS, BUT THE NAACP BOARD VOTED 20 TO 10 TO NO LONGER SHARE ITS FUNDS WITH THE CCCV.

THE PASSING OF THE NAACP'S "STOP SHARING FUND MOTIONS" ACTUALLY MATURED THE CCCV. THE SITUATION DEMANDED THAT THE PUBLIC BECOME INFORMED (WITHOUT A BIG DISPLAY) AS TO THE REAL NATURE AND PURPOSE OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS. THIS WAS DONE WITHOUT DAMAGE TO ANY INDIVIDUAL OR ORGANIZATION. THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS "EXECUTIVE BOARD" VOTED TO CHARTER THE ORGANIZATION *SEE ATTACHMENT #10 AND LATER APPLY FOR TAX EXEMPTED STATUS. WE TRUST THIS "MATURITY" OF THE CCCV WILL ALLOW THE ORGANIZATION TO DEMAND THAT OF THE PUBLIC WHICH IS RIGHTFULLY ITS, FINANCIAL SUPPORT.

AN EXAMPLE OF THE POLITICAL ATTITUDES THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS HAS BEEN ABLE TO DEVELOP AMONG NEGROES, UNDER THE VEP, WAS DISPLAYED ON FEBRUARY 13, 1963 SENATORIAL RACE. IT JUST SO HAPPENS THAT CHATHAM COUNTY'S VEP HAD JUST REACHED ITS PEAK. A NEGRO, ATTY. E. H. GADSDEN QUALIFIED WITH ONLY TWO WEEKS TO CAMPAIGN. HE HAD VERY LITTLE MONEY AND INEXPERIENCED PERSONNEL TO WORK WITH. IN MY OPINION, HIS CAMPAIGN COULD NOT HAVE BEEN RUN LESS EFFECTIVE. AT HIS FIRST PUBLIC MASS MEETING, EXACTLY 20 WAS IN ATTENDANCE. AT HIS SECOND AND LAST MEETING, THERE WERE NOT MORE THAN 75 IN ATTENDANCE. I FELT THE CAMPAIGN WAS GEARED AT THE CLASS AND NOT THE MASSES. THIS USUALLY MEANS POLITICAL SUICIDE, BUT NOT FOR A NEGRO CANDIDATE IN CHATHAM COUNTY. NOW, CHATHAM COUNTY IS NO DIFFERENT FROM ANY OTHER COUNTY, BUT THE NEGROES WERE VERY CONSCIOUS OF THEIR DUTY TO VOTE IN EVERY ELECTION DUE TO THE VERY ACTIVE VEP OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS AT THAT TIME. OUT OF 52,000 REGISTERED VOTERS, 32,000 VOTED. THERE WERE THREE WHITE CANDIDATES (TRIBBLE, GRAYSON, AND BAKER). TRIBBLE POLLED 14,000, GRAYSON 6,000 AND BAKER 4,000. THESE WHITE CANDIDATES SPENT "MUCH" MONEY IN CAMPAIGNING. THE NEGRO POLLED 8,000 VOTES WITH LITTLE MONEY AND A VERY POORLY OPERATED CAMPAIGN. HE (THE NEGRO) POLLED ABOUT 500 "NON-NEGRO" VOTES. ABOUT 12,200 NEGROES WERE REGISTERED. ABOUT 58% OF THE NEGROES VOTED (POOR I ADMIT) BUT ABOUT VERY GOOD WHEN THE HISTORY SHOWS ABOUT 30% OF THE NEGROES VOTE IN MOST SPECIAL ELECTIONS. NOT ONLY WAS THE PERCENTAGE OF NEGROES VOTING IN THIS SPECIAL ELECTION INDICATIVE OF THE VEP'S EFFECT BUT 98% OF THE NEGROES VOTED THE SAME WAY.

THE VEP MAGNIFIED THE POTENTIALS OF THE CCCV TO THE EXTENT, PUBLIC OFFICIALS BECAME MUCH MORE CONCERNED ABOUT THE PROBLEMS OF THE NEGRO PEOPLE. AN EXAMPLE OF THIS WAS THE COURTHOUSE WORKER. A PERSON WAS PLACED IN THE CONFINES OF THE CHATHAM COUNTY COURTHOUSE AS A COURTHOUSE WORKER IN FEBRUARY, 1961. AS HAS BEEN STATED, FROM JANUARY THROUGHOUT MARCH, COURTHOUSE TRAFFIC IS EXCEPTIONALLY HEAVY. THIS IS DUE TO CITIZENS BUYING TAGS, MAKING TAX RETURNS, PAYING TAXES, ETC. OUR COURTHOUSE WORKER ONLY GREETS CITIZENS AND ASK IF THEY ARE REGISTERED TO VOTE. IF THEY ADMIT TO BE NON-REGISTERED, THE COURTHOUSE WORKER TRYES TO GIVE THEM GUIDANCE, MORAL SUPPORT AND INDUCE THEM TO REGISTER. THE WORKER DEFINITELY DOES NOT DISTURB, OR IMPEDE UPON ANY CITIZEN. THE DEPUTY REGISTRAR (TAX COMMISSIONER), A KNOWN SEGREGATIONIST, TRIED TO MAKE THE WORKER LEAVE THE COURTHOUSE. AFTER REFUSING TO OBEY THE SEGREGATIONIST, THE SHERIFF WAS ASKED TO ARREST THE COURTHOUSE WORKER. THE SHERIFF INFORMED THE TAX COMMISSIONER THAT THE WORKER WAS NOT VIOLATING NO LAW. THERE WAS A LAW ON THE COUNTY BOOKS, TO THE EFFECT THAT NO FINANCIAL SOLICITATING COULD BE MADE WITHIN THE CONFINES OF THE COURTHOUSE. AFTER THE DEPUTY REGISTRAR FOUND OUT HE COULD NOT HAVE THE WORKER ARRESTED, HE FRAMED THE WORKER. HE, HIS SON AND ONE OF HIS EMPLOYEES SWORE OUT A WARRANT CLAIMING THE COURTHOUSE WORKER (A NEGRO MALE TEENAGER) ATTACKED HIM. THE COURTHOUSE WORKER WAS ARRESTED, JAILED, TRIED AND FOUND GUILTY OF ASSAULT AND FINED $100.00.

AT THE NEXT MONTHLY MEETING OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS THEY PASSED A NEW LAW "THERE SHALL BE NO SOLICITING OF ANY KIND IN THE CONFINES OF THE COURTHOUSE". WE WERE NOTIFIED THAT IF ONE OF OUR WORKERS RETURNED TO THE CHATHAM COUNTY COURTHOUSE, HE OR SHE WOULD BE PLACED UNDER ARREST, TRIED AND FINED FOR VIOLATION OF A COUNTY ORDNANCE PREVENTING SOLITICATION OF ANY KIND WITHIN THE CONFINES OF THE COURTHOUSE (INCLUDING REGISTERED VOTERS).

AFTER OUR VEP GOT UNDERWAY, WE SENT ANOTHER WORKER TO THE COURTHOUSE IN JANUARY, 1963. AFTER TWO DAYS THE CHIEF REGISTRATION CLERK TOLD THE WORKER SHE COULD NOT BE ASKING PEOPLE WHETHER OR NOT THEY WERE REGISTERED WITHIN THE COURTHOUSE. THE WORKER IGNORED THE CLERK. THEN THE CLERK SAID "IF YOU DON'T LEAVE OUT OF THIS COURTHOUSE IMMEDIATELY I WILL HAVE YOU ARRESTED". THE WORKER STILL IGNORED THE CLERK. THE CLERK WENT BACK INTO HER OFFICE, CALLED THE CLERK OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND REQUESTED THAT THE WORKER BE PLACED UNDER ARREST FOR VIOLATION OF A COUNTY ORDINANCE. THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS CLERK GOT IN TOUCH WITH THE COUNTY ATTORNEY (JOHN SOGNIER). THE COUNTY ATTORNEY GOT IN TOUCH WITH THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS (MR. WILLIAM LYNES). MR. LYNES CALLED THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS OFFICE AND NOTIFIED THE SECRETARY THAT THE COURTHOUSE WORKER WAS VIOLATING A COUNTY ORDINANCE BY SOLICITING REGISTERED VOTERS WITHIN THE COURTHOUSE. THE SECRETARY INFORMED THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS THAT THE WORKER WAS NOT SOLICITING REGISTERED VOTERS BUT GIVING ASSISTANCE TO REGISTRANTS AND ESPECIALLY THOSE COMING TO THE COURTHOUSE THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF THE VEP. THE CHAIRMAN WANTED TO KNOW MORE ABOUT THIS VEP. THE SECRETARY EXPLAINED IT IN DETAIL AND EXPERENES INFORMED HIM OF OUR GOAL. AT THIS POINT, THIS POLITICIAN (THE CHAIRMAN OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS) WANTED TO TALK TO OFFICIALS OF THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS ABOUT THEIR WORKER'S ACTIVITIES IN THE CONFINES OF THE COURTHOUSE. A MEETING WAS SET FOR THE FOLLOWING AFTERNOON.

PRESENT AT THIS MEETING WERE THE COUNTY ATTORNEY, CHAIRMAN OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS AND THREE MEMBERS OF THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS. THE COUNTY OFFICIALS WERE VERY FRIENDLY AND COOPERATIVE. THEY CONGRATULATED THE CRUSADE FOR VOTERS FOR BEING ABLE TO GET SO MANY NEGROES TO COME REGISTER. THE COUNTY ATTORNEY STATED "EVERYTIME I PASS THE WINDOW (REGISTRATION) 7 OR 8 NEGROES ARE THERE REGISTERING." WE EXPLAINED, THIS IS THE MAIN REASON A WORKER HAS BEEN PLACED IN THE COURTHOUSE, TO GIVE THESE PROSPECTIVE VOTERS GUIDANCE AND MORAL SUPPORT. AT THIS POINT THE CHAIRMAN POINTED OUT THERE IS A LAW ON THE BOOKS AND WE WERE VIOLATING IT. WE INFORMED THE COMMISSIONERS, WE HATE TO RESORT TO CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE BUT WE FEEL THIS COUNTY LAW DISALLOWING CITIZENS TO HELP OTHER CITIZENS GET REGISTERED WAS UNCONSTITUTIONAL, AND WE WOULD IGNORE IT UNLESS THE COMMISSIONERS MADE SOME ADJUSTMENT. WE ALSO INFORMED THE COUNTY OFFICIALS THAT IF THEY JAILED OUR WORKERS, WE WOULD HAVE TO SETTLE THE PROBLEM AT THE NEXT ELECTION. THE COMMISSIONERS INFORMED US THEY WOULD NOT BE INTIMIDATED NOR WOULD THEY RESPOND TO A THREAT. BUT THEY DID ASK US TO REMOVE OUR COURTHOUSE WORKERS FOR ONE WEEK. THIS WOULD GIVE THEM TIME TO CALL A SPECIAL MEETING AND CONSIDER THE MATTER.

WE REMOVED THE WORKERS FOR ONE WEEK. AFTER A WEEK'S TRUCE, THE COMMISSIONERS NOTIFIED US THAT THEY MET AND AGREED TO ALLOW THE WORKER AS LONG AS THE WORKER'S EFFORTS DID NOT IMPEDE COURTHOUSE FUNCTIONS. WE ASKED THEM WHAT ABOUT THAT ORDINANCE PREVENTING OUR WORKER FROM TRYING TO GET CITIZENS REGISTERED TO VOTE WITHIN THE CONFINES OF THE COURTHOUSE? THE ANSWER TO THAT QUESTION WAS, JUST FORGET THAT ORDINANCE, WE WANT REMOVE IT FROM THE BOOKS BUT WE WILL FORGET IT IS THERE. I AM SURE, HAD IT NOT BEEN FOR THE VEP, THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WOULD HAVE JAILED OUR COURTHOUSE WORKERS.

ANOTHER PLACE OF SHOW, SHOWN BY OUR VEP WAS THE REGISTRATION OF 500 STUDENTS. THE VEP SCHOOL AND PTA COMMITTEE ALONG WITH THE YOUTH COMMITTEE HAD GONE INTO THE NEGRO HIGH SCHOOLS AND DONE A FAIR VOTER-EDUCATION PROGRAM, COOPERATION OF THE HIGH SCHOOL PRINCIPALS WAS THE ONLY THING BLOCKING THE REGISTRATION OF THE STUDENTS ABOVE 17½. THE SOTOMMA CLUB (WHITE GROUP) TOOK HIGH SCHOOL REGISTRATION AS A PROJECT. THEY SENT REPRESENTATIVES TO EVERY HIGH SCHOOL TO SPEAK TO THE FACULTY AND STUDENT BODY. THIS IS ALL THE NEGRO SCHOOLS (PRINCIPALS) NEEDED.-(PROMPTED BY A WHITE MAN, WOMAN OR GROUP) AFTER THE WHITES SPOKE ON VOTER-REGISTRATION IN THE SCHOOLS, WE RETURNED AND SHOWED CITIZENSHIP MOVIES AND OFFERED TRANSPORTATION. WELL, 72% OF THE NEGRO STUDENTS REGISTERED, WHILE ONLY 30% OF THE WHITE STUDENTS REGISTERED.

ANOTHER PRODUCT OF THE VEP WAS THE ASSOCIATION AND UNDERSTANDING DEVELOPED BETWEEN COUNTIES OF OUR U. S. CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT. WE HAVE BEEN AWARE OF THE NECESSITY FOR SUCH ASSOCIATION FOR SOME TIME BUT THE LACK OF FINANCE AND ORGANIZATION PREVENTED SUCH. THE SOUTHEASTERN GEORGIA CRUSADE FOR VOTERS (FIRST U. S. CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT) HAS BEEN ABLE TO ORGANIZE TO THE POINT, ONE COUNTY PARTLY UNDERSTANDS THE VALUE OF A COORDINATED (COUNTY TO COUNTY) PROGRAM. IN OTHER WORDS, SOME COUNTIES UNDERSTAND HOW THEIR PROGRAM AFFECTS THE VEP IN THE OTHER COUNTIES. SOME OF THE COUNTIES UNDERSTAND IT IS A RESPONSIBILITY OF THEIRS TO AID OTHER COUNTIES IN THEIR VEP.

THE INVIDIDUAL HAS BEEN ENLIGHTENED SO MUCH BY THE VEP WE HAVE LESSENED THE STEREOTYPE IDEA "NEGROES CON'T HAVE INTELLIGENCE ENOUGH TO REGISTER IN LARGE NUMBERS". MANY HAVE STOPPED SAYING ALL THE "INTELLIGENT NEGROES ARE ALREADY REGISTERED AND NOW YOU ALL ARE SCRAPING THE BOTTOM OF THE BARREL". MANY NEGROES ARE GOOD PROSPECTS BECAUSE THE VEP GOT THEIR FRIEND OR NEIGHBOR REGISTERED AND THEY WENT BACK AND TOLD THEM HOW EASY IT WAS. THE VEP HAS AWAKENED SOME WHITES, EVEN THE NEWS MEDIA. THEY BEGAN TO REALIZE NEGROES ARE BECOMING POLITICALLY MINDED AND THE POLITICIANS MUST ACT MORE AND MORE FAIR TOWARD THEM.

ONE OF THE GREATEST VALUES CHATHAM COUNTY RECEIVED FROM THE VEP WAS THE DEVELOPING OF PATRIOTIC WORKERS. I AM SURE MANY WORKERS STARTED OUT IN THE PROGRAM FOR THE LITTLE EXPENSE MONEY INVOLVED. BUT ONCE THEY GOT INVOLVED, ORIENTATED AND DEVELOPED A DESIRE TO GIVE COMFORT TO THE LESS FORTUNATE. MANY MONEY SEAKERS BECOME DEDICATED AND TURNED OUT TO BE WELL-EQUIPPED FREEDOM FIGHTERS.

AS FOR ORGANIZATION, THE CCCV HAS BEEN ABLE TO BEGIN GRASS ROOT ORGANIZING THROUGH THE VEP PROGRAM. BY THIS, I MEAN THE ESTABLISHING OF DISTRICT PRECINCT AND BLOCK STRUCTURES THAT ARE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MAJOR PORTION OF OUR GET-OUT-THE-VOTE CAMPAIGNS. THIS EFFORT HAS BENEFITED GREATLY THROUGH THE SOLICITATION EFFORTS OF THE VEP CANVASSES. ALL VEP WORKERS WERE INSTRUCTED TO TAKE ALONG VOLUNTEER WORKER BLANKS *SEE ATTACHMENT #11 AND SOLICIT WORKERS FOR VARIOUS EXECUTIVE BOARD STANDARD COMMITTEES ALONG WITH THEIR VEP DUTIES.

LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL: ON MONDAY NIGHT, JANUARY 20, 1963, I MET WITH THE EXECUTIVE BOARD OF THE LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL, AT WHICH TIME THEYMET ALL THE REQUIREMENTS NECESSARY TO BECOME ELIGIBLE FOR A $125.00 VEP GRANT (UNDER THE TERMS OF THE SOUTHEASTERN GEORGIA CRUSADE FOR VOTERS *SEE ATTACHMENT #2. ON WEDNESDAY JANUARY 22, 1963, A VEP CHECK FOR THE AMOUNT OF $125 MADE OUT TO THE LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL WAS GIVEN TO THE PRESIDENT, MR. RALPH QUARTERMAN (P. O. BOX, ALLENHURST, GEORGIA - TR 6-3743). MR. QUARTERMAN WAS ALSO GIVEN COMPLETE INSTRUCTIONS AND NECESSARY FORMS AS TO THE REQUIREMENTS AND FUNCTIONS OF THE VEP. MR. QUARTERMAN LET ME BELIEVE THAT LIBERTY COUNTY WOULD BEGIN WORK IMMEDIATELY. ON FEBRUARY 10, 1963, I RECEIVED VEP FIELD REPORTS, VEP FORMS #4 AND 2 VOUCHERS, VARIFYING THE EXPENDITURE OF $50.00. ONE OF THE VOUCHERS SHOWING THE EXPENDITURE FOR $10.00 WAS SIGNED BY MR. QUARTERMAN HIMSELF, THE OTHER EXPENDITURE OF $30.00 AND $10.00 ($40.00) WAS SIGNED BY A WORKER, MRS. MAGGIE WILLIAMS (RT. 1, BOX 91, McINTOSH, GEORGIA). AN INVESTIGATION PROVED THAT THE LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL HAD REALLY NOT STARTED ITS VEP, BUT MRS. WILLIAMS WAS TEACHING AN ADULT CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL CLASS WHICH MR. QUARTERMAN WAS SUPERVISING. AFTER EXPLAINING THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN THE ADULT CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL AND THE VEP, THE LIBERTY COUNTY SITUATION WAS CLEARED UP. MR. QUARTERMAN EXPLAINED THAT HE WAS UNDER THE IMPRESSION THAT THE VEP GRANT COULD BE USED FOR THE OPERATION OF THE ADULT CITIZENSHIP SCHOOLS. THE MATTER WAS CLEARED UP AND AS OF APRIL 1, 1963, THE LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL HAS THEIR $125.00 IN DEPOSIT IN A SEPARATE CHECKING ACCOUNT. I WILL RE-INVESTIGATE THIS MATTER TO ASSURE YOU THAT THE LIBERTY COUNTY CITIZENSHIP COUNCIL WILL PARTICIPATE IN THE SGCV, VEP AND USE THE $125.00 ACCORDING TO TERMS OF THE VEP.

WHEELER COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS: ON FEBRUARY 4, 1963, THE SGCV ORGANIZED A WHEELER COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS IN ALAMO, GEORGIA, UNDER ITS VEP.. REV. A. GORAM (P. O. BOX 422, ALAMO, GEORGIA) WAS ELECTED CHAIRMAN. THROUGH THE EFFORTS OF THE VEP, WHEELER COUNTY WAS ABLE TO ACCOMPLISH A LONG SOUGHT GOAL. THIS WAS THE 1ST TRULY ORGANIZED, NON-PARTISAN, VOTER-EDUCATION PROGRAM ESTABLISHED IN THIS COUNTY. AT THIS TIME WHEELER COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS IS IN THE PROCESS OF COMPLETING ITS ORGANIZATIONAL STRUCTURE FOR ACTION UNDER THE VEP.

BURKE COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS: MY FIRST CONTACT WITH BURKE COUNTY WAS ON JANUARY 6, 1963. I MADE A TRIP TO WAYNESBORO, GEORGIA AND MET WITH AN INTERESTING GROUP OF CITIZENS UNDER THE LEADERSHIP OF MR. HERMAN LODGE (1139 QUAKER ROAD, WAYNESBORO, GEORGIA). THE PURPOSE OF THIS MEETING WAS TO TRY TO COORDINATE THE LEADERSHIP OF BURKE COUNTY AND ENCOURAGE THEM TO ORGANIZE A VEP AND JOIN THE SGCV. THE MEETING WAS A PARTIAL SUCCESS. SEVERAL MEETINGS WERE HELD AMONG THE NEGRO LEADERS OF BURKE COUNTY

AFTER MY VISIT. ON FRIDAY NIGHT, MARCH 29, 1963, A DELEGATION OF NEGRO LEADERS FROM BURKE COUNTY, RERRESENTING VARIOUS COUNTY-WIDE ORGANIZATIONS, MET WITH ME AT THE HEADQUARTERS OFFICE OF THE SGCV. THIS BURKE COUNTY DELEGATION WAS LED BY THE CAPABLE AND ABLE REV. M. J. ELLIS (BOGGS ACADEMY, KEYSVILLE, GEORGIA), CHAPLAIN OF BOGGS ACADEMY. THIS MEETING WAS HELD IN SAVANNAH, INSTEAD OF BURKE COUNTY DUE TO THE FACT THESE COUNTY LEADERS WANTED TO SEE AND WITNESS THE SET-UP OF THE SGCV. AFTER TWO HOURS OF ORIENTATION, IT WAS AGREED THAT THIS DELEGATION WOULD ORGANIZE A BURKE COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS UNDER THE VEP AND JOIN THE SGCV'S STRUGGLE FOR HUMAN DIGNITY.

EMANUEL COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS: AN ATTEMPT WAS MADE ON JANUARY 14, 1963 TO LAUNCH THE EMANUEL COUNTY VEP, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF AN ALREADY ESTABLISHED ORGANIZATION KNOWN AS THE EMANUEL COUNTY VOTERS LEAGUE. UPON ATTENDING A COUNTY-WIDE MEETING, I WAS ABLE TO DETECH A GREAT AMOUNT OF DISSENTION IN THIS ORGANIZATION. AN INVESTIGATION OF EMANUEL COUNTY PROVED IT NECESSARY TO ESTABLISH A COMPLETE NEW ORGANIZATION IN ORDER TO ATTAIN THE DESIRED DEGREE OF COUNTY PARTICIPATION UNDER THE VEP. THIS LED ME TO REQUEST THE EMANUEL COUNTY LEADERS TO CALL A GENERAL COUNTY-WIDE VEP MEETING. THIS MEETING WAS CALLED ON FEBRUARY 20, 1963. AFTER EXPLAINING TO THE CITIZENS OF EMANUEL COUNTY THE SGCV - VEP, IT WAS UNANIMOUSLY VOTED TO ORGANIZE A COMPLETELY NEW STRUCTURE. A COUNTY-WIDE MEETING WAS CALLED IN EMANUEL COUNTY ON FEBRUARY 25, 1963 AT WHICH TIME THE EMANUEL COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS WAS ORGANIZED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. JOE BINES (RT. 2, SWAINSBORO, GEORGIA).

MCINTOSH COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS: MCINTOSH COUNTY WAS FOUNDED FOR ALL PRACTICAL PURPOSES WITHOUT AN ORGANIZED VOTER REGISTRATION EFFORT. THROUGH THE SGCV-VEP A COUNTY-WIDE MEETING WAS HELD ON FEBRUARY 28, 1963 FOR THE PURPOSE OF EXPLAINING IN DETAIL THE VEP. ON MARCH 4, THE MCINTOSH COUNTY CRUSADE FOR VOTERS WAS ORGANIZED UNDER THE DIRECTION OF MR. BRITT JOHNSON (P. O. BOX 351, CRESCENT, GEORGIA).

TATNALL COUNTY CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP LEAGUE: ON JANUARY 10, 1963, THE TATNALL COUNTY CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP LEAGUE FULFILLED ALL REQUIREMENTS TO PARTICIPATE IN THE SGCV-VEP. A CHECK OF $125.00 WAS MADE OUT TO THE TATNALL COUNTY CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP LEAGUE AND GIVEN TO THE PRESIDENT, MISS PEARLIE INEZ EALEY (RT. 1, BOX 8, COLLINS, GEORGIA). FOR INFORMATION CONCERNING THE ACTIVITIES OF THE VEP AND TATNALL COUNTY *SEE ATTACHMENT #12.

ATTY. BRANTON, I TRUST YOU WILL HAVE MERCY AND TRY TO UNDERSTAND HAVING TO WORK 8 HOURS EVERY DAY FOR A LIVING AND OPERATE THE SGCV, PLUS THE CCCV IS NOT AN EASY TASK. TRY TO UNDERSTAND, SIR, I AM NOT ASKING FOR MERCY FOR MYSELF BUT I AM PLEADING FOR UNDERSTANDING AND FORGIVENESS OF THE LATENESS OF THIS INCLUSIVE REPORT. MAYBE, AND I MEAN MAYBE, THAT DUE TO EXPERIENCE I WILL BE ABLE TO DO BETTER IF GIVEN A SECOND CHANCE. UNDER SEPARATE COVER YOU WILL RECEIVE VOUCHERS AND COMPEETED NECESSARY FORMS TO ACCOUNT FOR THE SGCV TOTAL GRANT OF $4,000.00.

I HEREBY SWEAR AND BEG FOR ANOTHER GRANT.

RE: Field trip to Anniston, Alabama and Birmingham, Alabama

Between the hours of 1 and 4 p. m. on May 18, 1963, I visited with Rev. Reynolds and Dr. Rogers of Anniston, Alabama. We talked about the registration work being done in that community, and the possibility of doing greater work in the future.

As we talked, it was developed that there is an existing organization that is concerned with the use of the ballot. Yet, it does appear that this organization conceives of its main function as being that of getting out the vote at election time. It was indicated that the organization does hold regular weekly meetings each Tuesday, and that it draws together between 30 and 50 individuals.

At various times, this organization has conducted registration drives. The last drive was conducted during the period of February 11-19, 1963. In this drive, 20 people were registered, though some 100 attempted to get registered. The number that did, in fact, get registered was low mainly because the registration office indulged in all sorts of delaying tactics. The campaign was carried out by the use of the door-to-door canvassing and telephone methods. Most of the work and leadership was supplied by local people. Rev. Reynolds indicated that Mr. Bernard Lee of SCLC did express some interest. He suggested that Mr. Lee made several visits of about one hour each, and that he supplied the sum of $100 for the drive.

As I talked with Rev. Reynolds and Dr. Rogers, I got the feeling that a successful drive could be conducted in this city, especially since three of the leading ministers are already trying to do something in this regard.

From Anniston, I went over to Birmingham, and worked with Mrs. Johnson and Miss Nelson on a registration program for some 10 counties this summer. A copy of these plans will be mailed to us in a few days.

RE: Field Trip to Gadsden, Alabama

On May 21, 1963, I visited Gadsden, Alabama, and spent three hours (8-11 p. m.) talking with the leadership of the Gadsden Improvement Association. There were twelve men present. I viewed the group as being a good cross-section of the community (workers, professionals, religious leaders and youth). Particularly impressive was the spirit with which this group approached their work. It was very refreshing to hear them say from time to time, that they had made mistakes, and that they are learning a great deal as they move along.

This community has had some sort of social action for the past two years; sit-ins, picketing, omnibus suit, and registration complaints to the Justice Department. Most of these actions have been without any kind of real results, and yet the people did not seem discouraged.

The local people of Gadsden had working with them, Mr. Lee of SCLC from November until the SCLC program opened in Birmingham in early April. With Mr. Lee's help, the organization has completed a survey of 90% of the homes in the city, and is now able to say where the registered voters are and are not. Along with the survey, they have established area committees, conducted clinics, and carried on registration weekly mass meetings where attendance ranges between 75 and 100. During the following months, the organization registered:

February- 11
March - 71
April - 30

These people were very impressed with the leadership that had been given by Mr. Lee. There were two basic problems:

1. The uncertainty of Mr. Lee in the future, and
2. The lack of money.

The organization felt that while Mr. Lee had been of great help in the past, and could probably be in the future, there is always the possibility that he might be called away again. It was their feeling that the people felt some kind of let down when Mr. Lee left, and that they were inclined to wait on him rather than looking to themselves.

The people did say that, "Mr. Lee was for everything", meaning direct action, and voter registration. I believe I can predict that there will be direct action in Gadsden this summer unless the bi-racial committee, now acting, works fast and positively.

I explained to these men that VEP would have to require that a program sponsored be restricted to voter education. This they understood. They also knew something of the possibility of a direct grant. They are not sure that they will want such a grant. They think they see advantages in it, but they also consider their organization as being a part of SCLC.

RECOMMENDATION:

Gadsden is a city in which I am sure a very successful campaign can be conducted. If the organization makes an application for a direct grant of a reasonable amount, I would like to see it acted on favorably.

MEMORANDUM

Re: Field Report - Gadsden, Huntsville, and Birmingham, Alabama.

Gadsden, Alabama

I arrived in Gadsden, Alabama, Friday, June 21, 1963 about 9 p. m. after having made a last minute decision not to go to Tuskegee because of the weather. I had accepted an invitation from Mrs. Bernice Johnson to join her in a workshop of Macon County leadership.

In Gadsden, I was interested in finding out just how effective Mrs. Johnson had been in getting Gadsden ready for the July registration drive. I talked with Mr. Quimby Berry and Mr. Joseph Falkner, both of whom I had met in previous meetings in Gadsden. I was unable to see Mr. Q. D. Adams and Dr. S. W. Stewart, principals in the registration movement because they were at a mass meeting where Dr. M. L. King, Jr., was speaking. Mr. Berry and Mr. Falkner had been in the meeting taht Mrs. Johnson had held, and felt that she had done a good job of inspiring the leadership, but that not a lot had been done organization-wise. Their explanation for the lack of organization was in the fact that the city was so completely involved in demonstrations that people could not think if anything else.

I was interested in finding out to what extent the people with whom we would like to deal with in voter registration were also giving leadership in the present demonstrations. In this regard, I found that to the extent that there is local leadership, it is the same people. This is good, I think, except for the fact that the present situation is not affording the local people much opportunity to learn anything. All of the national organizations have field representatives in Gadsden now except NAACP and NUL.

I was told by Dr. Stewart that they intend to go directly into voter registration as soon as the demonstrations are over. We both agreed that it is perhaps too early to determine whether the present demonstrations will have a favorable or unfavorable effect. A little later, I am to meet with the people of Gadsden and plan how the campaign should be conducted.

Huntsville, Alabama

A reading of the Madison County reports made urgent in my mind a visit to Huntsville. I arrived in Huntsville June 23, 1963, with the intention of inquiring into why registration for the last 90-day period was so much lower than the previous 90-day drives that VEP had sponsored. The best count for the last sponsored drive seems to be about 175 as compared with 752 for the previous drive. Mr. Adams and Rev. Bell explained the drop-off this way:

"...We spent our first month conducting a survey of the community to determine the registered and non-registered, and so we did not concentrate on getting the people to the registration office....
....We only had one day in May on which citizens could register....
....June reflected an upward trend in that we were able to register 122 people in this two-day period..."

There were things that neither Mr. Adams or Rev. Bell did not mention that I feel are responsible for the low registion, most of which add up to a complete reorganization of the approach to running a drive. The survey that was conducted was good, and needed to be done, but not at the expense of other things. The mistakes, as I view them, are:

1. Mr. Adams abandoned the idea of trying to involve large numbers of individuals, and went back to trying to run the drive through his own organization.

2. The new committee started trying to pay people to work rather than spending their money on arousing the community.

3. Mr. Adams will not accept the fact that the Madison County people are not going to follow his leadership.

The committee is at the end of its second period of sponsorship. I would not look with favor on another grant of the size like the past two. I feel that they will apply, but consideration should not, in my mind, go beyond such token support as would be necessary to keep the committee intact.

Birmingham, Alabama

I spent the time in Birmingham talking with Mrs. Bernice Johnson. I will not comment on her actitvities in this report. Mrs. Johnson has promised us a report that will spell out what she has been doing in detail. I will comment when that report is received.

RE: Field trip to Columbus and Albany, Georgia

Friday, May 24th, I visited Columbus and Albany, Georgia. In Columbus, I made an effort to see Mr. Vernon Mitchell, but was unable to do so. I felt that I should see Mr. Mitchell because he, more than any other person, gives the appearance of being able to get the job of registration done. There were other men that I could have spoken with, but I thought it unwise to see the others because part of the problems there seemed to grow out of the fact, as Mr. Mitchell says, that "...when plans are made, we talk with one group, but when work is to be done, we come to him." Not being able to see Mr. Mitchell, I went on to Albany, arriving at about 4 p. m.

I went first to the SNCC office. Upon finding the office closed, I inquired around and learned that Rev. Charles Sherrod was meeting with a group in the Shilo Baptist Church. I went to this meeting, and found Sherrod and about 70 other individuals. They were making plans for some kind of direct-action program, the exact nature of which, I am not sure.

When the meeting was over, and after Sherrod had driven some of the students home, we sat down to talk. I asked Sherrod to review the voter education for the four counties for the past 30 days. In answering this question, Sherrod explained that very little had been done, and that his staff THAT had taken care of the project in the past, and had decided to take a leave of absence from the project, and THAT they were now engaged in direct-action and in jail. I reminded him of his commitments under VEP, and he said that he had remembered the commitments, and that he had instructed his Atlanta office to inform VEP of the individuals that were on leave. I asked him to please send such a letter himself, so as to avoid any further delay. This he promised to do. We talked for a brief moment about the future of voter education in that part of the state of Georgia, so far as SNCC was concerned. Mr. Sherrod was a bit noncommittal, and I did not get a chance to explain the idea fully because he received a phone call that informed him that one of the homes in which SNCC workers were living in Sumter County was under threat of an attack, and he had to go to that point to help provide defense.

I spent Friday night in Albany, and left the next day for Columbus, arriving at about 10:30 p. m. I made a second attempt to see Vernon Mitchell, but was unsuccessful. I tried to talk with Mr. McClury, but he was out of the city. I came back to Atlanta.

Friendly City Mortuary, 112 E. Church Street
600 E. Hampton Street, CA 5-7005
Dr. W. H. Young, Pres., NAACP
Rev. James O. Rich, Pres., Ministerial Alliance,
324 W. Reed Street

The three organizations listed above work together on most civic things. During the last city election, there was a great registration drive, Rev. Rich explained. The local NAACP Youth Council conducted a house-to-house canvass. The adults supplied cars to help in the follow-up. The Youth Council also used the telephone as a way of getting people to go out and register.

There was no exact count kept as to the number of persons registered. Rev. Rich estimated that the number was close to 500 for the six months preceeding (January to April,) 1963. It was also estimated that there are now 1800 to 2000 Negro people qualified to vote.

Anderson did not receive outside help. Such money as was used in the 1963 drive ($60) was borrowed from the Youth Council of the NAACP, and later paid back out of collections taken in mass meetings. Rev. Newman made three trips into the city for speeches. Most of the persons Rev. Newman contacted felt that they had not received outside help. None of them had heard of the Centennial Registration Committee.

Rev. Rich indicated that during the campaign, they did not establish any kind of permanent registration machinery, but they did copy the names of all Negro people that are on the registration books.

It is interesting that in the last city election, there was a margin of less than 200 votes cast between the candidates for mayor.

The registration office in Anderson County is open on the first Monday and Tuesday of each month.

Perhaps the most interesting thing about this visit is the fact that Rev. Rich indicated that the Board of Registrars is willing to conduct night registration if some organization will pay each of the three members of the Board a day's wages - the sum of $10.

I suggested to Rev. Rich that the VEP might be willing to help with this cost if the community made arrangements for such night registration, and would work at arousing the non-registered.

I am impressed with Rev. Rich's sincerity.

In Greenville, the Non-Partisan Voter Registration Committee carries on the work of voter education, and other civic and social activities in the community. It was felt by several persons that I talked with that while there was much respect for the NAACP and CORE in the community, there are many citizens that would feel greater freedom if neither of these names are used. It was explained that the membership of these organizations (NAACP-CORE) are quite loyal to the voter education program.

The Board of Elections meets for the enrolling of new voters on the first Monday of each month. There has never been any complaint about the Board being unfair - neither has there been any cases of an individual being turned down, Mr. Sampson said.

Most of the voter education in Greenville takes place just prior to an election by tradition.

During the months of September, October, and November, the "GNPVRC" working with the Greenville Human Relations Council conducted a voter registration drive with Atty. Sampson acting as drive chairman. During this time, approximately 800 persons were contacted by house-to house canvass. As a result, 70 persons qualified to vote in September, and another 50 was estimated to have qualified during the months of October and November, 1962. During the early months of 1963, the committee secured the help of Mrs. Septima Clark to conduct a citizenship school.

During the course of the registration activities described above, the committee spent the sum of $230.30, $150 of which was contributed by the NAACP. The committee also had the help of Mr. John Edwards, who is associated with Mr. John Brook's office. Considerable help and leadership was also provided by Miss H. Smith of the Human Relations Council.

Mr. Sampson seems to be "Mr. Voter Registration" in Greenville, S. C. One leaves Greenville without really knowing whether this is good or bad. He is, without question, sincere in his efforts. He is also quite impressed with himself - this could mean that he does not work well with people. Regretably, he knows all of the techniques of registration, and is not too open to suggestions. He has concluded, wrongly, I think, that the only way a drive can be conducted is by getting enough money to hire a crew of canvassers. I got the impression that Mr. Sampson felt that VEP had sat down and deliberately decided to by-pass the city of Greenwood. In spite of this unfavorable thing, I still think Greenwood has possibilities.

There is no NAACP or any other of the "Big Five" working in this city. The only organization in the city of a civic nature is the Negro Voter's League. However, there are the traditional religious and social organizations.

During the months of October and November, 1962, there was registration and get-out-the-vote activity in the community. Mr. Harrison suggested that during the 60-day period, some 500 new voters were added to the books. (I personally felt that this might be an exaggeration.)

Their approach to arousing the community was by the use of church mass meetings. A car pool was established to take the people to the polls.

I got the feeling that there has been some kind of political activity in this community for quite some few years. I was told that six years ago, a Mr. Gimps ran for the city council, but withdrew before the election after several threatening phone calls.

Mr. Roberts felt that most of the things that they have requested of city hall have been received favorably. Gaffney has had Negroes on the police force since 1954. During the first week in June, there was the sitting of the first all-Negro jury in the history of the county, and possibly in the state. There was general agreement that the Board is fair in every particular. I was told that in Cherokee County, citizens are not required to read any part of the Constitution. The only thing that one has to do in this county is sign his name to the registration form.

Mr. Harrison indicated that future work might be a little difficult because some members of the group had informed the white community which of the candidates they had decided to block vote for. He suggested reluctance to sit down and plan things.

A number of men in the community that are not open to economic pressures could run a good drive, it was stated. I left the city with the understanding that they would get the group together and consider a drive, and let VEP know what help they think that we might be able to give.

Gaffney is a small country town, but I got the feeling that there exists here quite a bit of social consciousness - judging from the knowledge that existed of current news. (Mississippi-Alabama University).

Kelley Alexander, Pres., N. C. Conference of NAACP Branches

I have today held quite an extended conference (some 4 hours) with Mr. Kelley Alexander, Pres. of the N. C. Conference of NAACP Branches. The reception was warm and informal, even though we did spend the first 30 minutes indulging in the game of name dropping. I must admit that Mr. Alexander is much more skilled at this than I. He can get at least three first names into every sentence.

There was very little specific information that Mr. Alexander was able to supply. However, he was fast and free with generalities. Among them:

"...North Carolina is the best organized state in the country - some 96 branches of the NAACP...
...We are able to raise money fairly easy and will present the national office with some $8000 in a few days...
...We are doing a good job across the board on the NAACP program, voter education not excepted. Communications are gotten out to branches regularly about registration requesting information about what they are doing. They are slow to respond...
...I know of no help that has come into the state to help with voter registration, but the branches are nevertheless getting organized...
...We are ready to move, all we need is money."

From this conversation, set in generalities, I got the following impressions:

1. Mr. Alexander is a part of the old line leadership in the Negro community, and because of this, he is not able to judge what is in fact a good registration drive, or what is effective organization. Compared with 10 years ago, much of what he called good is in fact good. But compared with what we know about what is possible in voter registration, such conclusions would not be allowable.
2. Mr. Alexander is a successful businessman and as such, is much too busy to give the attention that is required to keep abreast of the facts of the office that he holds.
3. Mr. Alexander is sincere in his efforts, but is bankrupt for ideas as to how to get the job of voter education done. He does have to his credit an open mind so far as approaches are concerned. I feel that a man with ideas could work effectively with him - providing he understood the importance of never allowing Mr. Alexander reason to feel that he might be over-showed.
4. I found Mr. Alexander and his office staff to be very cooperative. I was supplied with everything I asked, including a list of N. C. contacts.
5. I don't think we can expect Mr. Alexander to make any real contributions to voter education unless somebody with time, energy, and sophistication in voter education works closely with him.
6. I had every reason to believe Mr. Alexander, when he told me that "...people all over the state know me...the only thing that you have to do is mention my name as you move about".

I accepted his invitation to talk with him again after I have been across the state.

The last voter registration drive in Lexington was conducted during the months of April and May in connection with the last city council race in 1963. There was no outside help, or outside money. Mr. McClain, NAACP Field Secretary, made three trips into the community this year. The last trip was made Monday night, June 10, 1963. This trip was not related to voter registration.

The last registration drive was conducted by arousing the people in mass meetings and then supplying car pools.

The days of registration are every day of the first three weeks of each month. The fourth week is given to challenging. In this county, individuals can go to the house of the registrar in their precinct and register any day. The registrars are very cooperative, and will bring the books out into the community if requested.

Winston Salem is a city with about 30,000 Negro citizens of voting age, 12,000 of which are presently registered. This city has a long history of political activity. It was the first city to elect a Negro to its city government.

I talked with Mr. C. L. Montgomery about the city and its registration program, and was directed to Dr. F. W. Jackson of the NAACP Political Action Committee. Dr. Jackson is, at present, very much involved with the demonstrations in Winston Salem. He is a member of the Mayor's Bi-Racial Committee, which was established for the purpose of finding a solution to the pressing problems. Dr. Jackson told me that his main interest, so far as the community is concerned, is with registration and voting. He indicated that during the year of 1962, some 350 new voters had been added to the book. He seemed quite proud of this number, and also of the fact that the NAACP has a membership of 1000. It was his feeling that a very successful drive could be conducted as soon as the demonstrations are over, mainly because Rev. W. R. Crawford, Negro alderman for several years, lost his bid for the state legislature by less than 300 votes. Plus the fact that the Negro community is not entirely satisfied with Dr. Lillie Louis, as the Negro member of the Board of Education.

During the last campaign to get new voters, the methods employed were mass meetings, hand bills, door-to-door canvassing. Canvassers were paid $1 per hour for their services. Winston (Forsyth County) has open registration. There are eight Negroes that can register citizens. They often do so after church on Sundays.

I also met with the executive committee of the NAACP in one of its monthly meetings. The main business of the meeting was the demonstrations that were presently taking place in the city. There was a split in the community over this issue. The field secretary of the NAACP was interested in having the demonstrations; the local branch wanted to call a halt for awhile.

I was invited to make a statement to the body. I explained the VEP program, and talked about some of the programs that we are presently sponsoring. (Kingstree, S.C., Greenwood, Miss.) In this connection, I pointed out that 350 new voters was not too impressive in view of what we are finding to be possible. This was not well received by the group.

It was the feeling of this body that with money, they could do a great job. Money to hire workers was suggested over and over by the group.

I talked with Mr. Sam Harvey of the Urban League at his office about his Winston voter registration plans, and about his last drive. Most of what Mr. Harvey had to say about his last drive is contained in his last report to us. It is significant to note that the League now, as an associated body, is called the "League Guild", and is made up of some 80 women which will be able to work with the league's staffof two people.

Mr. Harvey said that during the last drive, which ran for 90 days, they added 350 or so new voters, mostly from the rural areas of the county. In order to obtain this number, the League worked through some 12 rural churches, and also used house-to-house canvassers.

Mr. Harvey said that during the last campaign, they had been able to build up a list of registered and non-registered voters, which will be used in future work. It is the intention of the League to concentrate in the city in future work.

It is interesting to note that both the League and the NAACP claim that they were responsible for the few people that were registered.

I also talked with Mr. Charles McLean, the field secretary of the NAACP for the state of North Carolina. I got the impression that Mr. McLean is more involved in giving the impression that he is doing something about registration than he is doing something in fact. He was not able to discuss the state organization or state activities with any degree of clarity. It was interesting to note that he was willing to admit that he knows little or nothing about VEP.

In High Point, I made an effort to talk with Mr. Tartt Bell, mainly because of the fact that we have made a grant to the Friends Service Committee for work in Greensboro. Mr. Bell was out of the office attending a meeting on Race and Religion in Greensboro. I was told by the secretary in Mr. Bell's office that William Ramsey would be in charge of the project, but that he was in Nashville, Tennessee.

I talked with Atty. Longfoot, a Negro citizen of the city of High Point. Mr. Longfoot was excited about the possibility of a registration program. High Point, (Gilford County), is subject to open registration. I think it might be desirable to consider the possibility of changing the Friends Service Committee project from Greenwboro to High Point in view of the successful work that is being carried on in Greensboro now.

In the spring of this year, High Point elected a Republican city government, one of the councilmen is a Negro, a Mr. Robert Brown.

When I arrived in Greensboro, I contacted Mr. John Edwards who is now on the NAACP staff as Mr. Brook's assistant in voter registration. News of Mr. Edwards' effectiveness as a voter registration worker had reached me before I met him. I found Mr. Edwards at the "Church of the Redeemer", which is serving as the headquarters of the demonstrators and voter registration.

Mr. Edwards was in the fourth day of his voter registration work in Greensboro. Greensboro (Guilford County) is an open-book registration county. There are four Negro registrars, three in Greensboro, and one in High Point.

Largely through the efforts of Mr. Edwards and the students that work with him, great use is made of the time that the Negro registrars give them. When the registration work began, the efforts were made to get the people to go to the registrar by house-to-house canvassing. Then, an arrangement was worked out to take the registrar to the people in a car. This, Mr. Edward said, was too slow. So, it was finally decided that they would set up a registration point in the community and bring the people to this point. At the YMCA, a point of registration, the registration workers were able to register 122 people between the hours of 6 p. m. and 10 p. m., Wednesday, June 12th. The present registration drive will continue through the month of June. It is planned that several registration points will be established at well located places throughout the city.

The community is being aroused by the use of hand bills, door-to-door canvassing, radio statements (paid for by businessmen) and sermons on citizenship on Sundays in various churches.

The city of Greensboro has had a budget of $100 that was granted by the NAACP through the office of Mr. Brooks; Mr. Edwards' expenses not included. The Greensboro project is one of the few projects in which I observed new approaches being employed. I believe it will continue to be a success.

There was a city council election in the month of May. All councilmen are selected by city-wide vote. There were two Negroes that ran for seats on the council - both were defeated. This, I think, will help registration work because Greensboro has had Negroes on the council for the past 12 years.

Mr. Louis Alston, owner, Carolina Lines, 336 Petty St., Durham, N. C.

My visit to Durham was not motivated by any expectation of registration in the near future. Durham is a county in which registration is possible only during the month just before an election. Three of the weeks of that month are given to registration, and one is given to challenges.

I went into the city of Durham because we sponsored a drive there last year, and also because Durham is a kind of pace-setter for Negro people in other parts of the state.

I talked with Atty. Floyd McKissick in Durham. Mr. McKissick is the North Carolina advisor to the Youth Council of the NAACP. Talking with Mr. McKissick seemed important because he is the person behind the newly formed "Commanders" which is responsible for most of the demonstrations in the state. I know as a fact that to a great extent, registration work in North Carolina will depend on the degree to which students can be used. It was the students that carried on the last registration drive in Durham through the grant that was made to the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs. As I talked with Mr. McKissick, I was able to learn that the adult part of the community is not very active, and that the DCNA is made up of the old line leadership, and is proven to be a little conservative. Durham has possibilities for a great drive when the books are open because there does not appear to be any fight between the old and new leadership.

I was told that more of the national organizations work has contributed to registration activities in Durham. The Youth Council functions to a great extent independent of its national body. Great admiration was expressed for Mr. John Booker. He has been able to obtain considerable aid for the "Commanders".

It was the feeling of Mr. McKissick that when the demonstrations died down, the same persons will be available for voter registration. I talked with many of the "Commanders", and I was favorably impressed with each of them.

During the last registration drive (1962), 3700 new Negro voters were enrolled. Mr. McKissick made jokes about the fact that our grant went to the DCNA and Mr. Wheeler's connection with SRC. Jokingly,

In Raleigh, I made quite an effort to see Mr. Campbell and Rev. C. W. Wood; they were the contacts that had been supplied to me. I was unable to see either of them for the reason that they were both tied up with other business. Just as I was about to abandon my efforts in this city, I decided to call the YMCA and see if the director there could point for me any person that had been interested in civic affairs, mainly registration. This paid off. I was supplied with the name and address of Rev. Grady Davis. It turned out that Rev. Davis was president of the Raleigh Citizen's Association. The RAC is an organization that is made up of many organizations, among them the churches, social groups, lodges, business organizations and the NAACP.

Raleigh is the capitol of the state of North Carolina. It has been the scene of political activity in the Negro community for more than 75 years. There is, at present, a Negro on the city council by the name of John Winters.

Registration drives are held quite often in this community. The registration books are available at all times. There are six precincts that have Negro registrars. During the months of July and August of 1962, 1654 new Negro voters were added to the books. It was estimated that the drive cost about $200, not including the maintenance of 15 students who did the actual work of carrying on the drive. The students were under the leadership of Miss Dorothy Dawson, a field secretary of SNCC. It appeared to me that Miss Dawson made a great impression on the citizens of Raleigh.

The students that worked in Raleigh worked as individuals. There was no mention of organizations. I asked twice if the community had received help from any of the national organizations, and each time, the answer was no. I was told specifically that none of the field representatives of CORE or NAACP came in during the drive. I was also told that the best drive would be carried on by the RCA, mainly because it is composed of all groups.

The method of registering the people in the last drive was by canvassing first, and later by taking the registrar in a station wagon to the people. When the registrar was taken to the people, four or five individuals would work house-to-house to get the people to come out and register. I was told confidently that Raleigh is ready for another drive. Rev. Davis indicated that he felt that it should be possible to register even greater numbers than before. The RCA has raised some money for this, and that such a drive should be under the sponsorship of RCA. Care should be taken to make sure that students are organized to do the work before the drive starts. Most of the RCA members are adult citizens with responsibilities that would conflict with their working in such a drive.

In Petersburg, Virginia, I talked with Mr. Herbert Coulton about the work and plans of SCLC in the Fourth Congressional District of Virginia. Mr. Coulton was quite glib with his remarks as to plans and equally vague as to present and previous work.

Speaking of previous work, Mr. Coulton pointed out what he considered the major registration problems - among them:

1. The Fourth Congressional District is mainly rural in its makeup.

2. The registration books are available only on the second and fourth Wednesday of each month.

3. The long distances over which the people have to travel in order to get to the registration office.

4. The fact that most of the ministers are absentee ministers.

5. The limited amount of money available to the Fourth Congressional District workers.

6. The poll tax.

Mr. Coulton impressed me as being sincere in his efforts as well as being possessed of the ability and willingness to be creative in the matter of registration. I think it is important that Mr. Coulton saw possibilities of great success in registration by giving picnics and parties for these rural people.

I inquired specifically into what SCLC had in the district organization wise. In this regard, Mr. Coulton's remarks were enlightening to me, and embarrassing to him. In the first place, Mr. Coulton could only speak of what other organizations are doing. He made mention of several independent organizations, two or three NAACP branches, and several churches that he is working with. Perhaps the most impressive thing that he had to show in this part of the discussion was the file of people that have indicated a willingness to canvass. (He agreed to supply us with a copy of this file.)

Mr. Coulton showed me evidence of mass meetings that have been held and that will be held in connection with his work. However, he would not talk about how many people have been registered. It was his contention that such figures would only be reliable when they are released through official sources.

I left Petersburg with the feeling that while not very much is actually being accomplished now, there are, nevertheless, great possibilities because Mr. Coulton appears to be completely open to suggestion and direction.

Dr. G. K. Butterfield, Citizens Committee of Wilson and Wilson County, 617 E. Nash St., Wilson, N. C.
Dr. Frank Saliver, Men's Civic Club, 603 E. Nash St.

On Sunday afternoon, I met with the Citizen's Committee of Wilson and Wilson County. Rev. T. A. Watkins of the NAACP and Dr. Frank Saliver are members of this committee, and were present in this meeting. There was agreement that work in registration has been in the hands of the Citizens Committee for many years, and that they usually run some kind of drive for new voters just before each election.

Wilson is a county with open registration. New voters can enroll five days out of each week. At present, there are about 2000 Negroes on the books. In the days when councilmen were elected by districts, Dr. Butterfield served two terms himself.

Registration in this community has the making of effective political organization. At present, the community has street and block organizations that meet regularly. In the past, it has been the practice of the Citizen's Committee to hire workers to canvass for new voters, house-to-house, but the committee felt that there is something wrong with this method. In the last drive, the committee got less than 5o new voters in a two-month period.

While there is open registration in Wilson County, it does not operate as in the other counties. All new voters have to go to the county courthouse between the hours of 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. in order to register. This policy is not set by state statutes, but by the county commission. The commission plans to check to see if night registration is possible, and if such is possible, the committee will plan for a short drive in late July. If night registration is not possible, the committee will plan for a drive for October and November, These are the months when most of the citizens (farmers) will not be working. In any event, we can expect to hear from this committee.

FAYETTEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

In Fayetteville, I spent part of my time talking with people about registration that I met on the street and in the train station, and in the demonstration headquarters. It did not appear that such programs (registration) had been mentioned to them before. The city was very much involved with the demonstrations that had taken place during the past three days. I don't think any thought had been given to the question of, "after demonstrations, what next?" This state of things did not disturb me too much, since I know that Atty. McKissick was high in leadership, and that he is very much committed to voter registration.

My main reason for going into Fayetteville was in order to talk with Mr. John Brooks, Regional Director for NAACP. I had gone into Richmond, Virginia, in an effort to talk with Mr. Brooks, who was already enroute to North Carolina when I arrived.

When I met with Mr. Brooks, my conference was as disappointing as it had been with Mr. Alexander in Charlotte, and with Mr. McLean in Winston Salem. It was, from the outset, a conversation set in generalities. Mr. Brooks preferred to talk about his philosophy of voter registration rather than work that he was giving leadership to. I have great respect for Mr. Brobks' ability as a registration worker, but he is not using it, so far as I can see. His approach, as he sets them out, all appear to be very sound. But I don't find them being employed. Mr. Brooks is highly respected all along the line. No one offered any criticism of his methods of operation. I refused to ask him or anyone else what he is doing.

I heard him deliver a very effective speech to an audience that had assembled in connection with the demonstrations. Mr. Brooks explained that the thing that he was doing was getting to be known by the people, and that he was going to transfer their interest into voter registration when the demonstrations are over. He can do this, if he will.

SUMMARY

Q. How effective is each of the "Big Five" organizations in carrying on registrations? Why?

A. All of the "Big Five" organizations are effective, to a degree. None of them are doing all that they can. All of them, with the exception of the Urban League, are finding their resources overtaxed by the present demonstration in which they are engaged. All of them suffer from a shortage of staff workers skilled in basic organizational knowhow. The NAACP is, without question, the most capable of the "Big Five". It has to its advantage, the most mature structures (more branches), a long and respected history, the largest number of members of influence. Yet, the NAACP was not found to be working as an organization effectively at any point in voter registration. The district and state officers did not know the facts that might be expected of their offices. I now think that E. Franklin Frazier might have been right when he charged that there is a tendency on the part of many of these leaders to identify themselves with the job for the social prestige that it affords.

Q. How much is being done in the way of employing new techniques in order to get individuals registered to vote?

A. At only one point along the entire circuit did I find new approaches being sought and employed. In most cases, it is still only a matter of mass meetings and house-to-house canvassing.

Q. How much thought is being given to the question of what are the fources causing Negro people not to register?

A. Very little deliberate thought is given to this matter. In almost every case, groups just decide to run a drive and then strike out. They seem to operate on what they think the forces are. Sometimes they are right, sometimes wrong.

Q. How much is being done in registration campaigns to establish any kind of structure, that will be helpful in getting out the vote?

A. I found only two places where this seemed to be important, Wilson and High Point. I got the feeling that block organization in High Point had been considered in an effort to defeat the Democratic city government, which was accomplished. In Wilson, Dr. Butterfield, Negro councilman for many years, I think probably undertook such organizations in an effort to regain his seat after he was defeated by a new policy of city-wide elections. I was told at one point in the trip that such organization would be undertaken when there were people registered that could be so organized.

Q. How much political consciousness exists in the small towns and hamlets?

A. This is a question that has troubled me for some time. I rather suspected that I would find consciousness in these small places. To answer this question, I visited the city of Gaffney, South Carolina. One name was supplied to me by a questionnaire in token at South Carolina State College. The questionnaire, which raised the question, "Who has expressed an interest in registration in your community?" I visited that one persons and found that the citizens of that community had had an organization of a purely local nature for many years that was working on civic affairs. This community had been by-passed by the national organizations. I rather suspect that this experience will duplicate itself as we explore more.

Q. What are the ares where large numbers can be enrolled in a short period of time?

A. The most promising areas seem to be those counties in N. C. Where there is open registration. This determination is based on ease of registration procedures and limited white opposition. It is expected that other areas will be added to this list as we make more trips.

Q. What is the effect of demonstrations on registration efforts?

A. With one exception, there was agreement at every point that the demonstrations create a climate and an interest in registration that makes enlisting new voters much easier. It is not thought that the two actions can be carried on at the same time. Demonstrations are all-consuming. Once the demonstrations are over, registration seems to be the next step.

Q. Who are the opinion-makers at every crossroad along the circuit of this field trip?

A. An answer to such a question is highly involved and will require a lot of work. On this field trip, we tried to collect a list of the names and addresses of every person that is president of anything. We now have a sizable portion of the NAACP branch presidents. We have a list of every organization (with officers - names and addresses) in Winston Salem, N. C., and a similar list for Greensboro, N. C., Anderson, S. C., Greenville, S. C., and Durham, N. C. has been promised.

The attached field report consists of visits to each of the cities listed above, [redacted] on the days indicated.

The field trip, which is the subject of this report, differs from all others in that it was undertaken with some express purposes and objectives in mind, rather than just checking on what our projects are doing, which has been my general practice.

As we moved along the outlined circuit, we sought the answer to each of the following questions:

1. How effective is each of the "Big Five" organizations in carrying out registration drives? Why?

2. How much is being done in the way of employing new techniques in order to get individuals registered to vote?

3. How much thought is being given to the question of what forces cause Negro people not to register?

4. How much is being done in registration campaigns to to establish any kind of political structure that will be effective in getting out the vote?

5. How much political consciousness exists in the small towns and hamlets?

6. What are the areas where larger numbers can be enrolled in a short period of time?

7. What is the effect of demonstrations on registration efforts?

8. Who are the opinion-makers at every crossroad along the outlined circuit?

The findings of this trip are set out in the same way that they have been in the past. In the summary, we try to supply some kind of answer to each of the question areas. It is understood that these answers have not been arrived at scientifically. They are set out as only a starting point, and may change or be altered as we add more facts.

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Subject: Field Trip to Decatur, Alabama, June 28, 1963

I arrived in the city of Decatur Friday evening, June 28th at 8:30 p. m. The occasion was one in which the Limestone County Voter's League, an affiliate of the Alabama Coordinating Committe, had scheduled - a mass meeting for the beginning of a registration drive. I had been invited by a letter from Mr. Melvin Sykes, who acts as chairman of the committee.

When I arrived at the Mount Olive Baptist Church, there were some 450 people waiting for this particular meeting. This came as some considerable surprise to me, because Limestone County was one of the counties in north Alabama that had done very little in the business of voter registration prior to this year. Mr. Melvin Sykes has, for quite some period of time, had an interest in voter registration, and had just about, in my opinion, lost his interest in voter registration due to the lack of cooperation in the community.

Prior to my coming to Decatur, Alabama, Mrs. Bernice Johnson had made a visit to the city under the sponsorship of the Coordinating Committee, and had talked to Mr. Sykes and one or two other individuals. There were several reasons why not very much was to be expected of the Limestone County Committee. One of the main reasons being that it appeared that the leadership of Limestone County was so middle-classed in its outlook that it did not appear that they had any basis through which, or by which, they could communicate with the masses of the Decatur citizentry.

It appeared that Mrs. Sykes had assumed a large part of the responsibility of putting the meeting together. She was publicly congratulated for the efforts that she had made in getting the mass meeting together, and there seemed to have been general agreement on the part of all the persons present, that this was a very successful meeting. I was told by Mrs. Sykes that this was the largest single group that she had ever known to manifest any interest in voter registration. Part of the credit is due to the kind of work that she did in putting the meeting together - plus the fact, Decatur is a city that, to a very great extent, takes its leadership from the Huntsville community, and Huntsville, having gone through a successful period of sit-in demonstrations, as well as successful registration drives, motivated the Decatur community.

It was particularly interesting to hear Mrs. Sykes refer to the audience as being one in which there were real grass-root people, because it was our prior opinion that Mrs. Sykes, perhaps more than anybody else in the community, suffered from a set of class values that would block her path to being successful in this kind of community activity. Quoting Mrs. Sykes directly, I heard her say at one point, that "...there were people in the church that had never been in that church before".

I was invited by the committee to deliver the principle address on this occasion. In speaking to the group, my main objective was to make them aware of the fact that voter education is not an isolated project being conducted in one or two scattered communities, but rather, it is a program that is being conducted throughout the entire South. In an effort to do this, I insisted upon the idea that the VEP is interested in building a chain of active movements for voter education across the entire South, and in this connection, I insisted that Decatur was one of the principle links in this chain, and that there rested on them a responsibility to go ahead and make their drive successful. In addition to this idea, I make some references to the kind of activities that are being carried on in Mississippi, South Carolina, and Georgia; laboring to some extent, the hardships that are being encountered by other people in other communities, and the kind of courage and determination with which the people in these communities are facing the hardships in an effort to get registration work done. It was my feeling that the people were very interested in the stories of the hard-core areas, and were greatly motivated by my telling of such things as the Travis shooting, and this kind of thing. All in all, I feel the speech was very well received.

I think we can reasonably expect the city of Decatur to go forward with a real registration drive, and yet there was good evidence of a fact that Decatur is a community in which someone would have to go in and work with them on techniques. I think it is perhaps the lack of skill in techniques which caused the people to become discouraged in the past.

There was a good cross-section of the people of the community. School teachers, principals, preachers, businessman, and laborers - all of which seemed to have been very much aware of the desirability of going forward with a good registration drive.

After the meeting was over, I spoke with the leadership of the Limestone County Coordinating Committee. In this brief conference, I explained in detail the nature and operation of VEP, and indicated to them that there was a possibility that VEP might be willing to underwrite some of the expense of their activities. In this connection, I urged upon them, the desirability of doing a good job in the one-week registration period in the first week in July. I have requested of the committee that they supply us with a letter indicating just how successful they had been.

There is a lot of potential leadership in the Decatur community, and yet, I feel that this leadership will not be effective unless there is some close planning, at least through the early stages of their drive.

Decatur is a community, I am told, in which there is little or no opposition in the registrar's office, so far as Negro registrants are concerned. There were some 20 or 25 people in this mass meeting that had come from other sections of the county. This would lead me to the conclusion that perhaps Limestone County ought to be made one of our target areas for a project in the early fall. I would therefore recommend that we encourage the Decatur Limestone County Coordinating Committee to think in terms of working out a program and a budget, and applying to the VEP for sponsorship.

Re: Field Trip to Dallas, Texas

During the weekend of July 12, 13 and 14, I was out in Dallas, Texas. This particular field trip I prefer to describe by saying that I sat at a crossroad of history into which was flowing all of the wonderful political traditions of the Reconstruction, Populist, Lafollit, Roosevelt periods of yesteryears, along with the currents that are so dynamicly unfolding at this present time.

The occasion was the organizational convention of the Texas Democratic Coalition. I had been invited out as a VEP observer by Mr. Larry Goodwin, the Coalition coordinator. By prior arrangement of some 16 individuals, four delegations of 25 persons each had been invited to attend this convention. The character and orientation of the Coalition hammered out in the meetings is reflected in the Statement of Purpose that was adopted. This statement ran as follows:

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Democratic Coalition

The Democratic Coalition is a voluntary association of individuals from the four groups which historically, in Texas, have constituted the core of support for the programs, principles and candidates of the National Democratic Party. These four groups are Negroes, Labor, Latin-Americans and loyal-liberal Democrats. The primary purpose of the coalition is to broaden communications between rank and file workers as well as leaders of these four groups with the view toward (1) developing programs beneficial to the cause of progressive democracy and (2) developing working precin ct organixations that can strengthen grass roots support of those programs and (3) developing functioning local Democratic Coalitions. The coalition seeks to emphasize the function of precinct organizations in increasing voter participati n in Texas as a necessary prerequisite to the election of progressive candidates. In the poll tax and election season of 1963-64, the coalition will seek to develop programs in the following specific areas:

1. Joint organizing efforts to achieve maximum voter participation in the November 9, 1963, election to repeal the poll tax.

2. Following this election, the grass roots organizing effort will continue through January 31, 1964, with the objective of obtaining the largest possible number of qualified voters for the 1964 primaries and general election.

3. To facilitate (1) and (2) above, the coalition will seek to raise sufficient funds to win the poll tax repeal election and then donduct the most massive voter registration drive yet attempted in Texas. Two hundred thousand new voters, in selected precincts and counties, will be the objective os this registration drive. The coalition will seek to work with local labor unions, PASP chapters, Voters Leagues, senior citizens, Young Democrats, and other loyal Democratic organizations.

4. Implementation of the "Team Program" as an organizing aid in the precinct registration effort will be attempted to the extent of the coalition's financial resources.

5. In the areas where such candidacies should help stimulate voter interest, the coalition will seek to encourage the early announcement of candidates while voter registration is still in progress.

6. The coalition will adopt, from time to time, such other programs and policies which, in the opinion of the Steering Committee, will further the basic objective of building precinct organizations to conduct registration and "get out the vote" drives.

7. The coalition will seek to promote maximum consultation among its members on the selection of candidates so as to encourage the kind of general agreement that will result in coordinated political effort. Participation in this coalition shall amount to a commitment by each of the individuals who are representative of their respective groups at local and state levels that no individual member will endorse candidates prior to formal consulation with the other members of the Steering Committee of the Coalition. The Coalition shall never endorse candidates unless all four groups agree. Endorsement by the Coalition shall bind the members of the Steering Committee to vigorously and in good faith recommend to their respective organizations the candidates endorsed by the Coalition.

8. As a matter of policy, members of the Coalition feel the struggle for civil rights now gaining momentum across America is essential to the building of a more just society and, as such, deserves the energetic support of all. The working out of a joint effort whereby genuine progress can be achieved in the emotional and politically volatile area of civil rights will be one of the chief objectives of the Coalition, as it functions on a day to day basis throughout 1963-1964. Similarly, the legal plight of workers in Texas has served to undermine the health of the economy, affecting directly or indirectly every one of Texas' 10 million people. Since no true economic progress by the broad mass of Texas citizens can be achieved under present state laws restricting employees rights, this entire area of legislation is, with the broad area of civil rights, of central concern in building a more progressive Texas: so that employee rights shall be made meaningful and so that the fruits of full employment and employment opportunity will be made equally available to all.

It must be understood that this statement of policy was not arrived at easy. There was considerable floor fighting over the provisions contained therein. It was particularly interesting to observe the four factions of the Coalition charging each other with misdealings in the past. The Negro delegates at the convention were quite positive and uncompromising in their charge that in previous coalitions, they had been the victims of a double-cross or sell-out. One of the spokesmen for the Negro delegation reviewed the history of coalitions in the state of Texas, pointing out that the same factions - Labor, Negroes, Mexicans, and liberals had coalesced in the past, and that Negro people had delivered their communities to the voting polls only to discover after the election, that the other three factions had not done so.

The spokesman at this point in the deliberations of the convention was a Mr. Sutton, a very successful businessman. Mr. Sutton and a Dr. Brooks joined in expressing the opinion that Negro people could no longer accept the excuse that Labor and liberals could not control their followings. Both of them indicated that they and the Negro community was willing to join into the Coalition, but that in doing so, it should be understood that in the event that the other factions of the Coalition failed to deliver, they would feel no hesitancy in scraping the entire organization, so far as they were concerned.

The Labor representatives and the liberal representatives were quick to defend their position, though I do not think it made any substantial influence on the opinions or the individuals that had spoken before. I was impressed by, and saw great hope in, the capacity of all of the delegates to face the difficult problems of coalition, deal with them, and yet remain intact.

The deliberations of the Coalition's organizational meeting were held on Saturday, July 13th. On the Friday evening before the Saturday meetings, the Negro delegation met at the Dallas City YMCA. In this particular meeting, they agreed on a statement that they would place before the Coalition sessions, stating what the Negro people felt that they had a right to expect as a result of their participation in the Coalition. It was also in this meeting that the Negro people prepared a statement for the press, calling upon the governor of Texas to follow an outlined course of action. A copy of this statement is here attached.

It was my pleasure to make remarks at the session held by the Negro delegates, as well as the sessions held by the entire Coalition. In speaking to the Negro delegates, I addressed myself principally to the kind of determination that I have the opportunity to see as I move about in the South from one registration project to another. In this regard, I cited the number of people that we are able to stand up for registration in Kinstree, South Carolina, and in Greenwood, Mississippi, and urged upon the Negro delegates to go out into the streets and bring all of those persons that were not presently participating in the political life of the community.

When speaking to the four factions of the Coalition on Saturday, I addressed myself to something of the history of coalitions, pointing out what I believe history dictates as the failure for these previous attempts at coalition. In this regard, I suggested that to a very great extent, there is a tendency on the part of white liberals to always elect to work in the Negro community, rather than work in the white community to find other people like themselves. I suggested that the civil rights struggle, when it matures, will be to a very great extent, an economic struggle, and that they would find many persons in the white community that could find Negroes natural allies for their own personsl aspirations. I tried to drive home the point that Negro people are already finding basis for coaltion, and that unity in the Negro community was taking place at a pace unlike any other period in history; and that a coalition such as was being put together at this time must take into account of the necessity for laying plans that would prevent the Negro people from being pitted against the white people by those who have a vested interest in segregation. These remarks found favor with all the factions of the Coalition, and were commented on by two or three of the speakers that followed my remarks.

In an afternoon session, the Coalition, having agreed upon its statement of policy and purpose, went into a consideration of the election of officers and the structure and operation of the Coalition, which might be described as follows:

FORMAL STRUCTURE

> Formal structure of the Democratic Coalition was produced by the Steering Committee which now numbers some 200 members. The four main groups in the Coalition will have equal voting strength through their representative co-chairmen.
> Named as co-chairmen of the new organization were leaders from the four main factions in the liberal democratic coalition. They were Dallas Negro attorney W. J. Durham, president of the Texas Voters League; Hank Brown, Texas AFL-CIO president; Albert Pena, president of the Political Association of Spanish-Speaking Organizations (PASO); and Franklin Jones of Marshall, described as an attorney representing the "loyal Democrats". The chairmanship will rotate among these four co-chairmen; the group's headquarters and staff will be located in Austin.

The various delegations present at the Coalition convention seemed to me to represent a very excellent cross-section of leadership for the state of Texas. In the Negro community, the Mexican community, it was evident that we were talking with the leadership of the principal organizations existing in those communities. It is significant that the 25 persons from labor were also the 25 executive members of the AFL-CIO for the state of Texas.

After the deliberate sessions of the convention were over, I attended a cocktail party at which there were present, several political dignitaries - among them, the Senator Yarbrough.

On Sunday morning, Larry Goodwin and I met for two hours to discuss the convention of the previous days, as well as to discuss the Coalition as VEP fits into the operation. Most of what was said can be summarized in Mr. Goodwin's answer to my question, what does he expect of VEP? In this regard, Mr. Goodwin pointed out that there were some three or four things that he would want VEP to do. Number one, he said he would like VEP to supply technical advice relative to registration. He also would like for the VEP to receive any funds that are available for registration work in the state of Texas, and dispense them to the proper sources in the state of Texas, mainly to the organization known as VOTE, which stands for "Voters of Texas Enlist". The organization known as VOTE was put together in the last hour of the Coalition meeting, and is to be understood to be a separate organization from the Texas Democratic Coalition, with the sole purpose of conducting a registration drive. Thirdly, Mr. Goodwin indicated confidentially, that he would like for VEP to make available some money for registration work to the Negro Voter's League, as a way of giving the Negro people independence in theCoalition, which he felt was desirable in order to maintain the kind of militancy that would make possible the contunied effectiveness of the Coalition. And, fourthly, Mr. Goodwin felt that VEP could be of real help to him and the Coalition leadership in helping it not only to work techniques of registration, but also in helping it to arrive at, and stay on, sound philosophical principles as they continue their operations. I think this particular fourth request on his part grows out of the discussion that had been given to the reasons why coalitions in the past had failed in this country.

I was greatly impressed by the workings of this convention. The organization's proposed operations and the issued commitments of the Coalition are sound, and point the wa y for a new period in American history, if they continue.

I recommend, therefore, that the VEP lend all the assistance that it can within the framework of its existing limitations and structure.

Re: Field Trip to New Orleans, Louisiana

On Saturday, July 20th, I visited the city of Mobile and talked with Mr. J. Harvey Kerns, and Mrs. Yvonne Minor, relative to the New Orleans project. Mr. Daniels was unavailable for conference on this particular day.

When I introduced myself to Mr. Kerns, as being the field director for VEP , he began immediately to assure me that they were having great success, and that everything was going well. He went into some considerable detail in explaining the structure of their organization. He indicated that they had some 150 students that were presently canvassing the neighborhood for new voters. He also indicated that they had distributed more than 15,000 hand bills about voter registration in the community. Mr. Kerns was equally verbose in explaining the organization and structure of the coordinating council, explaining that the council had come of the best people, and most important people in the community on its executive board. I personally felt that Mr. Kerns was just a little over-impressed with the importance of the executive committee of the coordinating council.

I think perhaps I felt just a little sorry for Mr. Kerns, because he was so certain that his registration drive was a booming success. It is for that reason that I didn't press him for more specific information. I did, however, ask him if the New Orleans Committee was enjoying any new techniques that he would be willing to tell me about. At this point, Mr. Kerns said that there were no such things as new approaches in voter registration, that you hire yourself some canvassers, and get out in the street and canvass. I did not have the heart to tell him that the old social work approach to voter education was not the only approach, and that it had not proven to be even the most successful approach. I listened to what he had to say, thanked him for the conference, and left.

After some effort, I was able to locate Mrs. Yvonne Minor who acts as the secretary in the voter education office in New Orleans. Mrs. Minor took me over to the voter registration office where she showed me the kind of work that they had been doing. I was impressed by the amount of paper work, and the amount of research that had been accomplished through the efforts of the 150 students that Mr. Kerns spoke of. I think it would be fair to say that the New Orleans office, on a local basis, would rival the Atlanta office on a region-wide basis, so far as paper work is concerned, and yet, Mrs. Minor had to admit that they were getting very few people registered. Some part of this is due to the approach being employed, and some part of it is due to the fact that there seems to be a slow-down problem in the office of the registrar. I challenged Mrs. Minor as I had the people in Mobile, to think of creative ways of conducting registration drives. It was a pleasure to find her open-minded on this particular subject. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Minor related to me the fact that she and Mr. Daniels had considered using a technique that they called a "Beer Bust". The idea being that they would get one of the brewerys to supply them, free of charge, with a quantity of beer, and that they would invite peopleto a kind of beer party, whereby they would discuss voter registration, and encourage people to go down and register. She said that while they had discussed this as a technique, they had not found the courage to try to use it. I encouraged her in this regard to go ahead with this idea, and any other unique idea that she was able of thinking of, assuring her at every step, that if she would but allow herself, she could find numerous ways of being creative in the matter of presenting voter registration, and that only creativity would bring results because had the traditional methods been effective, then there would not be a need for registration drives at this time. I frankly believe that she accepted this proposition, and can be expected to try to do something along these lines.

Mrs. Minor impressed me as being the kind of person that can be quite effective in voter registration, if surrounded by other individuals of some skill and ability. I think this is based, to a great extent, on the fact that she had some real grounding in an understanding of political issues, such as education, housing, and the like. And yet, I am just a little afraid that she will become discouraged in her work when she finds that she has argued housing, employment, recreation, and the like, as sound political issues without substantially moving the populus to the registration poll. I intend to be in constant contact with Mrs. Minor, as I feel that the paper work that she has done, coupled with some new approaches to registration, can produce some real fruitful results.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Subject: A Field Trip Into Greenville, South Carolina

August 1st, I arrived in Greenville, South Carolina, and talked with Atty. Donald Sampson. This was my second trip into the Greenville community, and my second conference with Atty. Sampson.

Following the formula that the Research Director had worked out, and the quota established for Greenville, I asked Mr. Sampson whether he felt that it would be possible to register 1100 Negro citizens between August and February 1st. It appeared that Mr. Sampson was doubtful as to whether or not such a registration would be possible. This particular question and Mr. Sampson's hesitancy led us into a discussion of the problems that previous registration drives had encountered along with the various techniques that had been employed. Mr. Sampson was particularly qualified to talk about this subject, as he was the chairman of the last registration drive that had been conducted in Greenville during which time some 70 new voters were added to the books. I think it would not be unfair to say that Mr. Sampson felt proud of the fact that they had registered some 70 people. However, I think we were successful in disabusing Mr. Sampson's mind of any feeling or notions of success as we related to him the kind of successes that we are now able to get out of other communities, such as Kingstree, Williamsburg County. I think Mr. Sampson accepted the idea that greater work could be done in Greenville. I asked him in this regard whether or not he felt that it would be possible to get a drive organized and off the ground by the first of September. In this regard, Mr. Sampson pointed out that there existed in the Greenville community, three organizations that ought to be concerned with registration - the Human Relations Council, the NAACP, and a committee known as the Committee on Negro Affairs. Mr. Sampson was quick to point out that all three of these organizations are extremely conservative and could not be relied on to do an effective job. RTB says this would also apply to VR activity.

He indicated to me that within the past year, there had been several civil rights programs, and that all of these programs had received considerable criticism from the three established organizations. Mr. Sampson recommended, in this connection, that it might be more desirable to try to select individuals from these various organizations that would be willing to try to carry on a truly effective registration program. Mr. Sampson, with my suggestion, agreed to call together a committee of some 20 individuals that have a reputation for being willing to work in social action. This he agreed to - contacting the registrar's office to see if additional days, or possibly night registration could be granted. Mr. Sampson also agreed that he would contact the senator from that particular district to see if it would be possible to get the senator to deputize several Negroes to conduct registration.

As we talked about the various problems that had been encountered in the past, Mr. Sampson put at the top of his list, the inability to get Negroes to go down and attempt registration. It is his feeling that the board is fair, and that the Negro people of the community can generally count on being registered if they can read and write just the slightest bit. As we talked about the inability to get Negro people to do down and register, we inquired into the technique that had been used in previous drives in order to get people to attempt registration. It appears that all effort had been geared to the idea of canvassers going house-to-house to try to persuade people to go down and register. This method, Mr. Sampson agreed, is rather long, drawn out, and extremely tedious. We pointed out to him that there were a number of different techniques being employed by committees in order to get Negro people registered.

We also pointed out that perhaps the overshadowing problem with voter registration has been a lack of stimulation on a community-wide basis. We suggested to him that the Voter Education Project in Atlanta might, at some future time, undertake an effort to create a climate across the state in which registration would be possible without a great deal of persuasion. Among the various approaches discussed, Mr. Sampson seemed to have been particularly impressed by the idea of running a registration drive in the form of a contest between the existing local organizations. I rather suspect that this will be the kind of drive that Mr. Sampson will urge upon his group when he has assembled it. Before I left Atty. Sampson's office, he instructed his secretary to begin the preparation of a list of clubs, and churches in the community. I think we can reasonably expect that there will be some kind of registration work of a meaningful nature in the very near future.

I recommend, therefore, that the Voter Education Project set aside the sum of $800 for work in Greenville County, if and when the registration committee meets the requirements of the Voter Education Project.

I further resound that Mr. Sampson be informed of the fact that this approbation has been set aside, and that we await a full description of his committee, its plans for operation, and a detailed statement of their budget.

Subject: A Conference with Mr. Frank Robinson and Mr. E. Brown

August 3rd, in the city of Newberry, I met with Mr. Frank Robinson and Mr. E. Brown, the coordinator for the CORE program in South Carolina. CORE is assigned all of the 5th and 6th congressional districts, as well as Clarendon County in the 1st, Sumpter County in the 2nd, and Spartanburg in the 4th congressional districts.

I was told in great detail of the plans that these men have for these 18 counties assigned to them. Aside from Williamsburg County and Spartanburg County, I was not able to find information of any organized effort of the kind we need being made.

There is no question about the time that these men are putting into their work, but I do question that this assignment ought to be re-evaluated.

Mr. Robinson reported to me the breakthrough in Williamsburg County (Kingstree). July 5th, 96 citizens applied for registration, and 65 were successful as compared with May, in which 238 applied, and only 16 were successful.

It is now time to begin to pin this operation down.

I shall, unless advised otherwise, request of Mr. Robinson that he supply us with a list of the people that he is working with in each of the 18 counties assigned to CORE. This, I would like to have before I finish my county-by-county visits in South Carolina.

MEMORANDUM

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Subject: Field Report on Oconee and Union Counties, South Carolina

August 2nd, I visited the city of Wahalla, South Carolina, and talked with Mr. A. J. Wittenburg about the possibility of registration in the county of Oconee, of which Wahalla is the county seat.

I had not visited this community before. Mr. Wittenburg was not known to me or VEP before, except as just a name supplied in the questionnaire that was administered to South Carolina State College students. When I met Mr. Wittenburg, I learned that he had been working in voter registration for the past seven years through an organization known as the Oconee County Civic Association.

I was told by Mr. Wittenburg that they had absolutely no difficulty so far as the office of the registrar is concerned. It was stated that the only thing that a citizen is required to do is sign his name. It was explained that the county does have a card that citizens are expected to fill out, but that it does not object to an applicant getting the help of a friend.

Mr. Wittenburg indicated that his organization had an index card on every Negro person in the county, unless they had come in within the past 6 or 8 months. These cards, he explained, indicated whether or not the person is registered.

I asked Mr. Wittenburg what his organization's future plans are, and he indicated that they had a drive planned to begin about the 1st of September, with a goal of at least 500. This was, of course, very good to hear, because it was exactly double the quota that we had set. Mr. Wittenburg suggested that I should talk with the president of the Oconee County Civic Association, a Dr. H. E. Hill, who lived in Seneco, South Carolina, some 20 miles away. I went to visit Dr. Hill.

August 2nd, I visited Dr. Hill in his drug store in Seneco. The main reason for visiting with Dr. Hill was to try to get a better picture of the Oconee County Civic Association, and to compare Dr. Hill's statements with the ones that had been made to me by Mr. Wittenburg.

When I met Dr. Hill, I found him to be a real registration live-wire. Perhaps the most rewarding thing about this experience was learning the kind of job that the organization had been doing without any outside help at all. I was impressed by the fact that there was little or no interest expressed in outside financial assistance until I began to suggest to Dr. Hill that I thought his community was politically mature enough to begin very serious block organization. I also asked Dr. Hill if he had any knowledge of any kind of organization of a civic nature existing in the adjoining county, Pickens. To this question, Dr. Hill replied that he and some members of his group had organized that county once, but that organization had gone out of existence. I then asked Dr. Hill if he thought it would be possible to revitalize the group through the use of his organization, indicating that VEP would underwrite the expense - and he agreed that his organization could and would be happy to do so.

I asked Dr. Hill if he thought it would be possible for his organization to register 249 citizens between August and February 1, 1964, and he said that he was confident that they could, and that their goal is 500 for the same period.

Dr. Hill described for me the structure of his organization, and gave the names and addresses of the various officers in each section of the county.

I was introduced by Dr. Hill to a Mr. Charles Sloan, the owner and proprietor of the Sloan Recreation Hall, a pool room. Mr. Sloan is a man who has adopted the attitude that if a man is old enough to play pool, he is old enough to register and vote. He has made it clear that if you are going to play pool in his hall, you have to register.

Mr. Sloan has in his possession, more than 100 certificates of men in the community that he has gotten to register. This approach of Mr. Sloan's, we plan to exploit in other communities.

I recommend:

1) That VEP set aside the sum of $500 for the Oconee County Civic Association for work in Oconee and Pickens counties.

2) That the association be informed of the fact that this appropriation has been made, and that we await indication of their readiness and willingness to use the funds effectively.

August 3rd, I visited Dr. J. P. Long in Union, South Carolina, at his office in the Union Community Center. Dr. Long was pointed out to me by a man I met in the street in Union.

Dr. Long is president of the Union County Voter's League which has a membership of about 400. It was explained to me that the League has been doing registration work in the county for about seven years. The League meets once each month on the first Monday.

I was told that there are about 900 Negro people registered in the county, and that they are shooting for 2500 by November, 1964. Dr. Long told me that he keeps before his people the fact that 2500 voters can control any election in the county. There were more than 2500 Negroes registered in this county before the new registration of 1958 was declared.

It is felt by Dr. Long that there is not a problem in the registration office, and that the office will take as many people as they are able to present. The only requirement is that the applicant be able to sign his name.

Dr. Long indicated that he did not feel that his organization needs VEP funds, but that he would appreciate very much VEP supplying him with all of the information that we can about what is happening to affect Negro people of a political nature.

He indicated that they have a job keeping interesting news and programs before their meetings, which are held once each month. (Union County was assigned a quota of 525 by our formula. I think this will be easily obtained if we just keep up with this group.

Subject: Field Trip to Spartanburg, South Carolina

August 3rd, I visited Spartanburg, South Carolina, with the intention of talking with Mr. Frank Robinson of CORE about their program in the 5th and 6th congressional districts.

I later learned that Mr. Robinson had been working in Spartanburg during the week, but that he had gone home for the weekend. I talked with a Miss Shirley Worford who had been working with Mr. Robinson. Miss Worford impressed me as being a very sincere and devoted person. She told me that she, Mr. Robinson, and Mr. Brown had been canvassing in one of the difficult areas of the Negro community in Spartanburg, and that they were getting some results.

I could not keep but regreting the unfortunate way that registration is being approached in this community. We had assigned a quota of 2526 new voters to this community, but this figure cannot possibly be realized unless there is greater community involvement. Mr. Robinson understands the importance of involving more people, but I get the feeling that he has given up on getting this part of the job done. Spartanburg is a community in which a citizen is only required to sign his name, I was told.

Miss Wofford told me that she is trying to work out some plan for setting up a tent in the camp-meeting tradition. Just how this will be done, and what it will consist of, I am unable to say at this time. We can be sure that what is presently being done will not bring the desired results.

I plan to prepare a list of suggested steps to follow, and get it over to them in the very near future.

Subject: Field Trip to Fort Motte, South Carolina

Saturday, August 10th, I attended the Second Congressional District meeting of the Non-partisan Coordinating Voter Registration Centennial Association of South Carolina. An invitation had been extended by the association's chairman, Dr. C. H. Thomas, Jr. The meeting was held in the New Bethany Baptist Church of Fort Motte, South Carolina.

When I received the invitation, I assumed that it would be a meeting of possibly a half-dozen individuals that would have to be persuaded to believe that they were involved in a kind of activity that is worth the time that they are putting into it. It happened that I could not have been further from the truth. All of the persons present seemed quite enthusiastic about what they are doing.

Below is a list of the counties that make up the Second Congressional District. The figure beside the counties indicate the number of persons in each delegation:

Banberg - 3	Calhoun - 19	Richland - 6	Lexington - 3

The meeting was opened at 11 a. m. with a devotional service followed by a statement of purpose by Mr. I. S. Leevy of Columbia. Mr. Leevy is a man well known to all political circles in South Carolina, and known to many persons around the nation. Mr. Leevy is a man 86 years old, and has been active in the political life of South Carolina for more than 60 of those years. He has been twice a candidate for the U. S. Congress, twice a candidate for the South Carolina legislature, three times a candidate for the city council of Columbus, and has also offered himself as a candidate at the county level.

Mr. Leevy's remarks were general in nature, built around the importance of non-partisan voter registration. He admonished the delegates to go back home and organize on the block, street, and ward levels. He proclaimed that he was neither Republican or Democrat, and that in his 86 years, he does not know a single white man that had not double-crossed him, no matter how friendly he may have appeared to be. Mr. Leevy dealt with the effort of the Republicans to organize in the South along the most conservative lines possible. These remarks were interesting and well received because Mr. Leevy is ~~known~~ thought as a long-standing Republican. He said in his remarks, "They say I am a fool, but one thing you know, and that is, I will pay for what I believe - most of you know I have financed this thing since it began".

After the speech, each delegation was called upon to report their progress since their last meeting in Lexington in May. The various county delegations had been instructed in that meeting to go back to their counties and begin at once to organize their ward and register people. The delegation reported as follows:

COUNTIES	ATTITUDE OF BOARD	WORK ORGANIZED SINCE MAY	NO. OF PEOPLE REGISTERED SINCE MAY	OUR QUOTA	PROGRESS IN AN EFFORT TO GET ADDITIONAL DAYS FOR REGISTRATION
AIKEN	Very good	Have met in every precinct-4 formal organizations	No record for June. July, 131; August, 133	1708	Senator has promised additional days.
BAMBERG	Fair	One county leadership meeting-no word formally organized	No record-but there are a few		Will contact Senator-have not done so yet.
BARNWELL	Fair	Beginning to organize	Between 15 and 25 since May		No reference
CALHOUN	Fair	3 wards organized	June-13, July-11, August-15.		No reference
LEXINGTON	Fair	10 wards organized	5 since May	851	No reference
ORANGEBURG	Good?	No representation at this meeting	It was reported that there is good regis. work going on		------
RICHLAND	Good	18 or 20 precincts; Most activity is taking place through "school district clubs"	68 since May	4764	No report
CLARENDON	Fair	Just getting started	Same, but no record		Senator has been asked; he is looking into it.
SUMPTER	There were two persons present, but not the right ones.

My overall impression of this meeting is very favorable. The spirits of the persons present was very high. Most of the people reporting for the various delegations were reporting for their meetings, and did not answer some of the questions that we would be interested in. In some instances, they talked about what they had learned about other counties not in their congressional district. For example, it was reported that Charleston and Newberry counties have obtained two extra days for registration. It was also reported that in Newberry County, more than 500 people have registered since May.

Mr. Leevy made a number of references to things that he could remember about the Negro's participation in the political life of South Carolina, such as the Negro congressman George White from North Carolina and a Negro postmaster in Columbus. Some time before the last of September, I intend to sit with Mr. Leevy, and take a taped interview that can be written up in a small pamphlet and distributed through the schools under a title like "This I Remember". This would be quite inspiring, I feel, and would serve as a part of the things that we are calling "climate creation". I rather feel that much of what we have called apathy is in fact despair in the face of having been taught in the schools that when Negroes were given a chance in politics, they "messed up".

I promised the group in my brief remarks that we are going to try to help every project by calling all club leaders and ministers in the state into the service of voter registration. I explained that we are starting very soon with our newsletter to supply an overall picture of registration work in the South. This we feel will give these leaders something to say to the people.

I feel that the NPCVR Centennial Association is the group that we will want to be identified with in the Second Congressional District. Our quota for the district is 7323 which I feel they can obtain between now and February 15, 1964.

I recommend financial assistance as soon as it can be made available.

Subj: Field Trip to South Carolina Covering the Counties of: Allendale, Hampton, Jasper, Beaufort, Colleton, Dorchester, Berkley, Charleston, Clarendon.

- Introduction -

This field trip, which extended over the period August 19 through August 24, and which involved some 1300 miles in the southern part of South Carolina, has been the most personally rewarding trip of any made thus far. The general voter registration enthusiasm that was encountered at almost every stop seemed well to affirm my conviction that the successes possible through the Voter Education Project are almost unlimited.

After having reviewed, almost as a coincident, the history of the South Carolina white primary fight of the 1940's, we set out with a view to find as many of the principles of that struggle as we possibly could. It was our feeling that if we could find those individuals that had seen the importance of the ballot at this early time, we would most likely be locating individuals who would be devoted, sincere leaders for such a program now.

This field trip was restricted to the First Congressional District which consists of nine counties, all of which have more than 30% Negro population, and none of which were assigned a part of the 23,000 new voters that we established for South Carolina. In all these counties, with the exception of one, the registrar is reported to be at least reasonable in his attitude toward Negro applicants.

Each of the counties is covered in separate sections of this report. The discussion of the counties is followed by a detailed description of a proposed congressional district meeting, along with a summary and recommendation.

Section I.

On August 20, I visited Charleston, Beaufort, and Jasper counties. Charleston County has a 37% Negro population. Political activity in this community is much more advanced than in most other parts of the state which explains to some extent the success of registration work. I visited in Charleston with Mr. Esau Jenkins, one of the principals in the white primary fight in the 1940's. He is now director of the Sea Island Center Progress Club, and also director of the Citizen's Committee of Charleston County Registration and Education Project. The latter of these organizations is presently carrying on a registration program under the sponsorship of the VEP, and was successful in registering 501 new Negro voters during the month of August.

This was the third time I had met with Mr. Jenkins. It is always a pleasure to be in his company. Mr. Jenkins was quite free in showing me the records of his registration drive. I learned that it is an established practice with the committee to keep detailed records on all of their contacts. As I examined these records, I was able to determine that the committee checks on all persons contacted as to whether they have attended the voter education classes, whether they have tried to register, and whether they were successful. Persons that are not successful are followed up by the committee until they succeed. The records reveal clearly the number of persons that had registered each month.

I asked Mr. Jenkins to what factors might his success for the month of August be attributed. He explained that the registration drive is conducted in conjunction with two registration classes, in which citizens are prepared to make application. The classes are conducted two nights per week, and hold for two hours each session. Mr. Jenkins explained that August was a record month, and they would not likely get as many as 500 during the month of September, but that a creditable number can be expected.

Several things in and about the committee office suggests a very live program. The committee has obtained a new Volkswagon which has signs on it about the work of the committee. A standard voting machine has also been obtained from the county on which instruction can be had five days per week from 9 to 4 o'clock. Citizens are being urged to come in for instruction by use of the radio and newspaper.

I asked Mr. Jenkins if he anticipated any significant change in his present operation. Mr. Jenkins indicated that no great changes are anticipated, but that some addition to what they are presently doing would be desirable.

This question brought Mr. Jenkins around to discussing about what he thought was possible in that area of the state with a little help. He indicated that registration successes were possible in just about every county. He talked about how he had seen the citizenship schools being a tool to political consciousness in a matter of weeks.

Three schools that have been under the general direction of Mr.Jenkins are scheduled to come to a close on the first of September, due to the fact that the source of funds has run out. I encouraged Mr. Jenkins to apply to VEP for citizenship school funds, not only for the three Charleston County classes, but also for two classes in Berkley, since Mr.Jenkins has been doing work in that county also. During the month of August, 53 new voters were added to the rolls in Berkley County as a result of this work. As I talked with Mr. Jenkins, I wished that more people could have been present to experience the tone of hope and enthusiasm that was so evident in what he had to say. I was inspired by him to think of trying to get the leaders of the area into a meeting together. This became one of my objectives from this point on so far as this trip was concerned.

Section II.

In Beaufort County, I visited with an old friend of mine, Atty. Charles Washington. Atty. Washington has, for several years, worked closely with registration activities in the county. This work has been mainly in the hands of the Penn Community Center of Frogmore, South Carolina. We reviewed together the 22 page statistical study prepared by the Frogmore group. (A copy of this report is here attached.)

Beaufort County, with its 39% Negro population, can be pointed to as proof to some extent of what a voting Negro community can do. It is the only county in the state, and possibly the South, with a Negro on the county Board of Directors. Mr. LeRoy Brown was elected by the St. Helena township in 1962. In this county, Negroes represent their community on the library board, and the school board.

I went out to the Penn Community Center with Atty. Washington to talk with the director, Mr. Courtney Siceloff, but learned upon my arrival that he was out of the city. However, I did talk with several other individuals, among them, Mr. LeRoy Brown, Mr. Jones Richardson, president of the Voters League, and Mr. A. J. Brown, NAACP president. There is not, at present, a voter registration drive being conducted in Beaufort (however, all of the machinery and know-how does exist), it's just a matter of setting the time for a drive. The Penn Community Center has a South-wide voter education leadership conference plan for 26 days, starting September 30. I asked Mr. LeRoy Brown and Atty. Washington about coming to a meeting in Charleston to talk about organizing on a district basis and making plans for a registration drive. The idea was warmly received. They promised that they would come and bring others, especially Mr. Siceloff and Mr. A. J. Brown if they were available.

Section III.

In Jasper County, I visited with Mr. Joe Orr. Mr. Orr's name is one that I had heard mentioned in several communities in connection with voter registration work. I was given to believe that Mr. Orr had been in registration work for quite some few years. He was also one of the principles in the white primary fight.

Mr. Orr is an old NAACP man, but he explained that he is now carrying on, to the extent that he is, through a chapter of the South Carolina Human Relations Council.

Mr. Orr indicated that the problem with registration as he saw it was a matter of having the finances to carry on an effective program. He indicated that he and a few others had supplied the finances in the past, but now that he is retired, he does not have the money to use for the purpose. The registrar has proven to be reasonable in the past, through he may change, Mr. Orr said.

I discussed with Mr. Orr, the idea of coming to a district organizational and registration planning meeting. He said that he would be happy to do so, that he had tried to get together such an organization several years ago, but had not been too successful.

Mr. Orr indicated that his group registered 50 people in August, and that he had in mind planning for a big drive. He also said that he had asked for additional days and nights for registration, and is hopeful of getting same.

Section IV.

In Hampton County, I spent some five hours on August 21 looking for "the registration man." It is interesting that at every stop, it was reported to me that some serious registration work was being done in Hampton County, but not a single individual in the neighborhing counties was able to supply a name or address. The news of what was being done had spread throughout the area, nevertheless. Once in the county, I began a general inquiry, and finally was directed to the home of Mr. Jack Delooch.

Mr. Delooch told me that there had been three registration meetings in his county within the past 30 days, and that at one of those meetings, he had been chosen county chairman in charge of voter registration. He reported that his group had registered 60 people during the first week in August (this had been told to me before), and that they are in the process of trying to get some kind of organization in every precinct in the county. It was his opinion that greater numbers would be registering in the future. The registrar is good, and will even help an applicant to qualify, I was told.

Mr. Delooch is a Federal employee, and has accepted leadership in this program because he felt that he was less open to economic pressure if and when Negroes began to register in large numbers. I told Mr. Delooch about the meeting being planned for Charleston for September 21, and he indicated great interest and assured me that he would be present.

Section V.

Allendale County was visited August 21. It was without question, the weakest community on this entire trip. Not a single individual at any point would say anything encouraging about the county. Suggested contacts were not to be had from anyone. In Allendale, I could easily understand, within just a few minutes, the truth of the way the county had been represented to me. I don't think I have been in many communities where the presence of white domination was so evident.

None of the people that I talked with were willing to speak freely, not even to the giving of their names. As I introduced myself, I usually presented the individual with one of my cards. This was the best way in the world to cut off communication, particularly with those that understood what my business was. In some instances, individuals were totally ignorant of voting, or elected to pretend to be. In one case, I talked with a barber in his shop, and he closed his door and told me in low tones that I would not find anybody that would be willing to get mixed up in that kind of thing. After several inquiries, I came upon a Mr. Robbie Dicks, Jr., an employee of the Pilgrim Life Insurance Company. Mr. Dicks explained that he understood that at one time, Negroes voted in the county, but that for several reasons, they had been forced to stop their participation. I talked with him about the kind of things that are taking place all over the country in the civil rights field, and the kind of help that is now available to communities. I asked Mr. Dicks about coming to the September 21 meeting, and he agreed that he would come and try to bring someone with him. I expect to see him at this meeting because I think that what I ran into in this county was a real case of fear and despair. It was certainly was not an attitude of not caring.

Section VI.

I visited Colleton County August 21. I had been instructed at some several points in this trip to talk with the Rev. Matthew McCollum. Rev. McCollum, a board member of SRC and a veteran civil rights man, was indeed a source for uplift and refreshment. As I talked with him, I was sure the idea of getting the community leaders together in a meeting was a good one. In my brief conference, I got the assurance that he could supply almost any kind of leadership a district-wide organization would demand.

In our conversation, Mr. McCollum, in a pedagogic sociological way, analyzed the problems that would be encountered and something of what could be done to overcome them. Having recently moved into the community, Mr. McCollum had not done any registration work in this area. He did indicate the need for a civic organization and said that he was thinking of organizing one. He said that there was a Voters League, but that he did not think that "it amounted to very much."

I feel certain that Rev. McCollum can service a district organization well, and also get things moving in Colleton County. I told Rev. McCollum about our planned meeting in Charleston. He thought it was a good idea. After checking his calendar, he promised that he would be free, and could be expected to attend.

Section VII.

On August 23, I visited Dorchester County. This was another one of those extended searches for a particular person. I had been told by Mr. Orr and Mr. Jenkins about a Rev. Lewis H. Simmons that had been identified with registration work for quite some time, and who had also been associated with them in the primary fight. I was told that I would find Rev. Simmons in Summerville.

When I arrived in Summerville, I was directed to several other persons that were supposed to be the leaders of voter registration, but I continued my search for Rev. Simmons.

I located Rev. Simmons at the Emmanuel Vocational School which is a little community service school in which children are taught some arts and crafts. Rev. Simmons explained that he had started the school as a kind of "get the children off the street program." It has been in operation now for several years, and has a very nice day nursery attached. The nursery is being supervised by Rev. Simmons' wife. This project of the Simmons', along with his church, I should think, would give them good contact with the community.

Rev. Simmons took great delight in telling me of the days when they used to teach illiterates to memorize part of the Constitution, and how they used to pretend that they were reading it.

Rev. Simmons indicated that he had found it a bit difficult to get people to work at registration unless an election was coming up. He said that they had been getting people to go down, but he did not suppose that he had gotten more than 140 in the past seven months. He said that he did not think that the Board of Registrars were too technical on the literacy requirement, and that at one time, the registrar had brought the book out into the community.

I asked Rev. Simmons about coming to the proposed Charleston meeting. He received the idea, saying that he would be there, and that he wanted to learn what the other fellows are doing in order to interest citizens in non-election periods.

Section VIII.

My trip into Berkley County was purposely to meet some of the people that Mr. Jenkins had been working with. In the county I visited with, a Mr. Samuel Weigfall, in the community of Moncks Corner. Mr. Weigfall is president of the Berkley County Voter Education Project. He confirmed the fact that had been given to me by Mr. Jenkins as to the 53 voters and the one registration class.

I was told that an effort is now being made to try to get committees established all over the county.

My general impression was that we can expect registration to continue in this county. However, I do feel that the services and leadership of the Charleston County people will be needed for quite a while yet. I told Mr. Weigfall of our planned meeting in Charleston September 21. He agreed that he would come and bring others.

Section IX.

I visited Clarendon County August 21, and talked with Mr. Billie Flemming in the city of Manning.

This was the second time that I had met with Mr. Fleming, an old NAACP man and president of the local branch. This was an interesting visit because on this occasion, I took time to hear in detail Mr. Flemming's personal story of the economic pressure that is being placed on him for his civil rights leadership by officials of the city and county, as well as business interest.

Mr. Flemming has, and has had for some time, a great interest in voter registration. He reported to me that during the month of May, 125 persons had been registered, largely as a result of the work done by John Edwards, an understudy of Mr. John Brook. Mr. Flemming told me that John Edwards was not in registration work now, and had not been for 60 or 90 days, but was working with the NAACP commandoes.

As a result of the loss of John Edwards' services, registration work has slowed to almost nothing. There does not appear to be any likelihood that the work is going to be done in this area unless a person can be obtained to give full time to it. It was Mr. Fleming's feeling that the NAACP branch could advise and give leadership, but that it did not have the kind of membership that could or would get out and do the work.

I tried to move the discussion around to a consideration of a community organization approach -- ministers and club leaders of all kinds participating. But, I did not get through to Mr. Fleming in this regard. He thinks NAACP so completely, that I feel that this is perhaps the way it will have to be organized -- hoping that as the branch moves along, it will find it desirable to ask for help. I would not choose to try to do the job any other way at this time. I don't think I see any other approach now.

Mr. Fleming has in mind a person to do the registration work that he has great confidence in. I got the feeling that he had made some indication to the man that he could get him on some kind of pay roll in this capacity. I met the individual and was favorably impressed with him.

I was asked by Mr. Flemming to check to see if funds for this individual could be had -- either through NAACP or as a direct grant. The major problem with using this man is that he would have to give up his present employment. It was without any certainty of future employment. Mr. Flemming understands and appreciates this problem, and would be interested in what VEP is prepared to do, feeling that possibly some adjustment can be made.

Summary

The First Congressional District, which consists of nine counties, is that area of South Carolina that has Negro population in excess of 30%. When the decision was made to take each state district by district, a formula was arrived at that was believed to have been a basis on which it could be determined something of the extent to which registration work would be successful. Our experiences had indicated that where Negro population exceeds or approaches 50%, there would be considerable difficulty in the office of the registrar. So it was that we decided that we would only assign quotas to counties that had less than 30% Negro population. And, so it was that every county in the First Congressional District was left out of the 23,000 quota that was assigned for the state of South Carolina in our overall quota of 300,000 by February 1. This field trip, then, was designed to investigate to some extent, the soundness of the theory that registration efforts would not be fruitful in counties of more than 30% Negro population.

As indicated in the report, each of the counties visited in the First Congressional District, with the exception of one, appears to be areas in which registration can be conducted on a successful basis. In eight of the nine counties, it was reported to me that the registrar's office is at least reasonable in its administration of the requirements necessary to registration.

In each county, there seems to have prevailed the attitude that whatever is lacking in registration, is to a very great extent lacking in the Negro community, and mainly in the lack of organization. This, of course, would mean that as a result of the field trip just completed, a re-examination of the principles on which the formula for assigning quotas was based needs to be re-examined. It is certainly true that registration work is being carried on in most of these counties, and can be expected to continue to some degree. It would then appear that the VEP might properly concern itself with how to make for, and obtain, more effective registration activity.

There was found in every county, except one, some enthusiasm for making an effort to improve the techniques of conducting registration drives. It is because of this exsiting situation that a considerable part of the concern in this field trip was devoted to checking on how much interest there existed for a meeting of leadership in the First Congressional District. Such a meeting is planned tentatively for the 21st of September, and is scheduled to be held in the city of Charleston in what is known as the Garden Room of the Brook's Real Estate Building. A more detailed description for the proposed meeting is attached to this report. There is good reason to believe that out of such a meeting such as this one, considerable improvement in registration techniques might be gleaned. This conclusion is based on an evaluation of the quality of the leadership that was contacted on this particular field trip.

(To Be Held in the City of Charleston, S. C., September 21, 1963)

It is our thinking that this meeting might be held for a period of about five hours starting at 10 o'clock a. m., and carrying through until about 5 or 5:30 p. m.

It would seem that this meeting might properly give attention to four general areas. The first area I think might be described as a discussion devoted to the South-wide registration efforts. In a discussion of this sort, some attention might be given to the historical significance of the ballot, the worth of the ballot, the use of the ballot, and what is presently taking place -- not only in southwest South Carolina, but all over the southern region. I would think that this particular discussion, I would want to handle myself.

A second discussion (and I think about an hour might be devoted to each of these discussions) ought to concern itself with the problems of registration that might be anticipated at the very outset. This discussion, it would seem, ought to be open for each delegate to place before the meeting, any particular problem that it has encountered in connection with registration. It would seem that such a discussion would prove quite fruitful in problem-solving. The Rev. Matthew McCollum would be an ideal person to conduct this particular discussion because when I met him, most of our conversation was devoted to a discussion of the various problems that can be anticipated when registration is approached in a more serious and diligent fashion.

A third discussion might properly concern itself with techniques of registration. It would certainly be desirable to have Mr. Esau Jenkins to place before the meeting a complete discussion of the kind of registration drive that he had conducted successfully, and in addition to this, some time and attention might be given to the various types of approaches that we find being made all over the country. I would think that the various delegates in attendance ought to have the opportunity of discussing, criticizing, examining, and analyzing the various techniques of conducting registration drives, with a view to determining whether these various techniques would be effective in their respective areas.

The fourth discussion ought to concern itself with a discussion of quotas for the respective counties on the basis of realistic examination. It would be possible to determine something of the nature of the budget that would be required as well as affording the VEP some basis for arriving at what can reasonably be anticipated. These quotas, I should think, should come from the individuals in the various county delegations and should be based on what they feel they can accomplish within a specified period of time.

With these four facets of the meeting behind the delegates, I should think that they would then be ready to constitute a First Congressional District voter education project with the election of district officers, and perhaps, the selection of a paid coordinator.

Recommendations

1. I recommend that the VEP encourage and expand where practical, the citizenship classes presently being conducted by Mr. Esau Jenkins.

2. I recommend that the VEP accept and promote the proposed leadership meeting at Charleston, S. C., September 21.

3. That the VEP establish a budget of $300 to be spent on the conducting of this meeting; that this $300 be spent in paying the transportation of the delegates to the meeting at the rate of 8¢ per mile; that a portion of this money be used to buy one meal, to rent the hall, and other miscellaneous items.

4. I recommend that the formula of 30% not be applied so far as the state of South Carolina is concerned, and that a new formula be constituted to apply to the state of South Carolina, that would be determined, to a great extent, by what the delegates feel that they can reasonably expect to accomplish within a given period of time. (February 1, 1963).

5. I recommend that all grants to organizations in this area be made on a temporary basis at least until after the September 21 meeting, if this meeting is, in fact, to take place, so as not to subtract from the leadership that these local applications for sponsorship might contribute to the overall district program.

6. That the VEP adopt as a working formula, $1 per new registered voter, so as to afford the field director some basis for discussing what can reasonably be requested of VEP by agencies making applications.

Subject: Field Trip to Columbia, South Carolina and Saluda, South Carolina

August 29, I made a hasty visit into Columbia, South Carolina, in order to talk with Mr. Ben Mack, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's director of citizenship schools.

The urgency of this meeting was occasioned by my continuing concern over the slowness with which CORE is moving in the 5th and 6th Congressional districts.

CORE, having been assigned to the 5th and 6th Congressional districts is responsible for work in 16 counties, plus three additional counties, one in each congressional district -- First, Second, and Fourth. The quotas assigned for these areas total 6,865 of the 23,000 that we have set for South Carolina by February 28, 1964.

We have not made a county-by-county visit into each of the counties assigned to CORE, as we have in each of the other counties. I do have good reason to know that work is not going at the desired rate. I say this not as a criticism of what CORE workers are doing, so much as to the rate at which they can be expected to progress. CORE has only two persons working in this very large area, and cannot be expected to do any more than what is being done.

My trip to Columbia was to see what Mr. Mack thought SCLC could possible do and would be interested in doing. Mr. Mack indicated that SCLC has, within the past three years, operated 32 citizenship schools in South Carolina, but that none of them have been held in either the 5th or 6th Congressional District. This indication came out of a county-by-county examination of the state.

I am personally impressed with the citizenship school program -- it has certainly contributed to registration.

Mr. Mack did not express any enthusiasm for going into the 5th and 6th districts, and yet, I think if his office would request it, he would go.

This would leave at least two possible courses open to VEP. We can:
1) Try to interest SCLC or some other organization in working with CORE in this area, or 2) Go into this area county-by-county, and set up a program designed to help CORE with its chosen task. The former is more desirable, I feel, so as to free me to move now into North Carolina, and do the kind of thing I have done in South Carolina.

Saluda, South Carolina

On August 30, I visited the city of Saluda. This visit was the last in the present South Carolina series designed to examine the possibility of obtaining the assigned quota of 23,000 in that state by February 28, 1964.

In Saluda, I talked with Mr. Robert S. Taylor. Mr. Taylor is a past president of the Saluda NAACP branch, as well as an officer in the Masonic Lodge. I was told by Mr. Taylor that the two organizations with which he is affiliated has been doing registration work in the community for several years and that the people in city hall have come to think of the Negro people as holding the balance of power.

Mr. Taylor said that they made registration a matter of concern at every meeting of the NAACP and that they are not taking any more fellows into the lodge unless they are registered. He said that they had not had a drive in several months, but that during the last one, they did succeed in adding some 150 new voters to the list, bringing the total to about 500. Mr. Taylor said that the drive ran for about four months, and that they had 30 canvassers working which they paid out of a fund of $300 that they had raised. It was indicated that no money had come into the community for any outside source.

I asked Mr. Taylor if he thought it would be possible to double the number of Negro voters and what would be necessary to do this. He said that it would be possible if they could get a little outside help.

I suggested to Mr. Taylor that he get his groups together, map out a drive, and submit the plan and a budget to VEP. We can expect to hear from Mr. Taylor in the near future.

RE: First Congressional District Organizational Meeting held in Charleston, South Carolina, September 21, 1963

Janet has, in her notes, more than adequately summarized this meeting. A tape recording was made of the meeting so that the actual words of the participating speakers can be examined.

There are several things, however, that will not be reflected in Janet's notes or the tape, that I think worthy of noting:

1. I have not worked with a group that was as cooperative as this one. There was not a single occasion where I had to beg the group for order.
2. We had wholesale informality and freedom of expression from the beginning to the end.
3. There was no wandering off after lunch, which is so often the case in meetings of this sort.
4. There was no needless speaking just to be seen.
5. There was enthusiasm, frankness, and candor throughout the session.

All in all, I feel very good about the meeting, especially when old veteran workshop men like Mr. Siceloff described the meeting by saying, "It could not have been better". Rev. Matthew McCollum said, "It was the best thing of its kind that I have ever attended".

The registration forms are here attached. They will reflect the facts relative to representation in the meeting.

Individual travel expense vouchers will reflect the fact about the cost of the travel expense.

After having come through this meeting, I am absolutely convinced that I could not have conducted it without Janet's very able assistance. She was busy from the time the meeting started until after it was over. I am satisfied with my decision to pay the expense of her travel down to Charleston out of my pocket, after the request for same was rejected. I do not request reconsideration of this matter. However, I do feel that VEP should compensate her for a day's work, even though Janet has said that she will willingly donate these services.

Because of my belief that this was a worthwhile adventure, I would recommend that with your approval, the same thing be done as soon as possible in the third and fourth congressional districts of South Carolina.

Minutes of the Voter Registration Meeting
Charleston, S. C.
10 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., September 21, 1963

Part I.

The meeting was opened by RTB, and led in a brief devotional service by the Rev. Matthew McCollum.

RTB cited the purpose of the meeting, which was to exchange ideas concerning voter registration. He expressed appreciation to the delegates for their attendance, and expressed appreciation for their having retained their belief that we can make something decent and worthwhile out of the world in spite of the Birminghams. He thanked them for all they had done in the past in the areas of political activity, community work, etc.

RTB went on, in his brief opening speech, to tell of some of the things he has encountered during his travels throughout the 11 southern states. He told of the hardships and brutalities that registration workers have undergone, and added that help in all forms was possible to distressed persons seeking aid.

Most of all, the determination, urgency and immediacy of the times was stressed, and the need for having something for Negro children to grasp once their parents had struggled to educate them, instead of having nothing to hand out to them. The idea that this responsibility lay on the shoulders of people throughout the southland, and might extend to saving the entire world because of incidents like the Birmingham atrocity, which was publicized throughout the world.

This short address was enthusiastically received, and set the pattern for the entire meeting, which moved along smoothly with participation from every delegate present. Ideas and suggestions came forth with a great deal of zeal and interest.

Anticipation of Registration Problems, and Approaches to Solving Them.

Part II.

Courtney Siceloff, of the Penn Community Services, and the Rev. Matthew McCollum, of Walterboro, S. C., were the leaders of this discussion. All of the problems listed below were brought out in open discussion by these two individuals, along with the attending delegation.

The problems cited:

1. The problem of reaching the "pool room" segment of the community.
2. The apathy of the people.
3. How suspicion is aroused when money is involved.
4. Dictatorship tendencies of the leaders.
5. The dodge of elected politicians and methods they use to get around issues.
6. The illeracy problem.
7. City Hall pressure.
8. The fear of economic reprisals.
9. The fear of the "unknown".
10. Abusiveness of registrars, such as name calling.
11. The failure of those who finally register to vote.

The solutions:

1. Insistance of picking leaders with a high moral character.
2. Encouragement in the wise use of the ballot.
3. Block and door-to-door campaigns.
4. Registration schools.
5. Show proof of some persons who have registered successfully without economic reprisal.
6. Reporting of abuses to Justice Department to have such cases checked into.
7. Stressing the importance of political education, and implementing the importance and advantages of the power of the vote.
8. Reaching the aged, so that their influence might be used in the community.
9. Reaching the under-35 group for the door-to-door campaigns.
10. Overcoming the problem of pronouncing difficult words in attempting to register.

The meeting then recessed for lunch.

Techniques Used in Registration

Part III.

This segment, led by RTB, brought out the comments of several of the registration leaders in the meeting. RTB brought out the fact that one successful technique is to involve a great number of people. The highlights of these other comments are as follows:

Mrs. Bernice Robinson was called on by RTB to express some of her ideas. Mrs. Robinson has been noted for her work in Mississippi, as well as South Carolina. Her ideas are as follows:

1. Set up citizenship schools.
2. Organize young people and senior adults alike. The use of young people for on-the-spot training, and the adults for coffee hours, community dinners.
3. Stress political education after registration, and give the individuals reasons for motivation.
4. Recognize the fact that different techniques have to be used in different sections and situations.

Billy Fleming, Manning, S. C.:

1. Check books on registration to determine number of Negroes registered.
2. Publish booklet, as was done in Manning, with the registered voters listed that headlines, "Is Your Name in this Book?", and put copy in every church, school, known organization, etc. (This idea was very well received because, as it was brought out, so many people will say they are registered, who are not. With the booklet, they cannot dodge the issue, and shame at not being registered and having their names appear in the booklet so publicly and widely distributed will cause them to go ahead and register.
3. Do a county auditor search of known Negroes with property assessed at $300 which can serve as a prospective list of voters.
4. Impressing one's congressman as to the changing times, and the power of the Negro vote.

Esau Jenkins, Charleston, S. C:

1. Organize and ask people what they want.
2. Check registration books.
3. Have persons sign name on application blanks, then set up meetings, get in touch with individuals and set up citizenship schools.
4. Set up voter education office with voting machines, and have newly registered people come in to be trained in its use.

Mr. Delooch, Hampton County: (Newly organized group)

1. Organize leadership school
2. Personal contact and urging.
3. Door-to-door contacts.

Other county representatives stressed the importance, as did the others mentioned above, upon the need of citizenship schools, and the urging of Negroes to take advantage of night school training, to overcome the barriers placed before them in pronouncing difficult words, when they go to apply for registration.

Rev. McCollum closed this section with the following suggestions:

1. Use youth workers door-to-door.
2. Enlist teachers to teach citizenship in high schools in their civic classes.
3. Conduct campaigns with clubs, churches.
4. Run a candidate for office. (His contention was that even if the candidate was not expected to win, it would cause a number of Negroes to register, knowing a Negro was running for an office).
5. Increase organization at precinct meetings. Participation in precinct meetings would cause a voice that can be heard in national conventions. Delegates were urged to get the legislative manuals for needed information.

Part IV.

The figures below indicate the number that the delegates arrived at that they believe can be registered between now and February 28th, in their respective counties.

Jasper - 750 to 1000
Beaufort - 1000
Charleston - 2000
Berkeley - 500
Clarendon - 500
Hampton - 500
Dorchester - 700 to 1000
Collenton - 500

Part V.

Election of District Officers:

The delegates unanimously decided to name the organization "The First Congressional District Voter Education Project".

The officers were elected as follows:
~~Chairman~~ - Mr. Billy Fleming
Co-Chairmen - Mrs. Bernice Johnson

Secretary:
Mrs. Frieda Robinson
Treasurer:
Rev. Matthew McCollum

The Steering Committee: (This committee will be responsible for electing the Coordinator. Names are to be submitted to the committee for consideration.

This committee was selected from representatives of each county. They are as follows:

John S. Boyd - Clarendon County
J. H. Hosey, - Hampton County
Cleaver B. Johnson-Beaufort County
Vanuel Mitchell-Jasper County
Rev. Lewis H. Simmons-Dorchester County
B. E. Price-Colleton County
Ruby Francis-Charleston County
Rev. Samuel Wakefield-Berkley County

A key person is to be selected from each county, and the name sent in to the Secretary.

The ~~Executive~~ EXECUTIVE Committee will serve as ex officio members of the ~~Steering~~ Steering committee.

RTB urged members to do something about Allendale County, who had no members represented at the meeting.

Rev. Simmons dismissed the meeting.

RE: Field Trip Into North Carolina Covering Gastonia, CHARLOTTE Winston-Salem, and Concord

This field trip, made September 11, 12, 13, and 14, covers the nine counties in North Carolina where by state statute, registration is permanent, and possible at least 5 days every week, except during election periods.

Wednesday, September 11, I visited Gastonia County, where I talked with Dr. W. C. Floyd of 256 West Page Avenue, and Rev. C. M. Young of 222 West Page Avenue, phone, UN 7-7782.

Dr. W. C. Floyd is past president of the once very active Citizens Committee, having been unseated about four months ago. I am informed that many prominent persons in the city found it desirable to break Dr. Floyd's leadership because he was felt to be pushing integration too vigorously. The Negro community of Gastonia is now divided into two well-defined groups.

The break came when a group of citizens entered the name of the local high school principal in the race for the city council. Dr. Floyd took the position that rather than see this man represent the Negro community, he would run against him. This he did, and carried all of the Negro boxes 2 to 1, but was not elected. The other Negro gentleman was elected largely by the white citizentry.

It is interesting that in this city, the ministers are the most militant and the professional and businessmen are the ones trying to hold to the more conservative roles. Rev. Young related an incident in the spring of the year in which the ministers assembled for a prayer march on city hall with the professional and businessmen leading the opposition against the project. The march was called off at the last minute.

As I talked with Dr. Floyd, he did not feel that he could be of help in carrying on a registration drive at this time because he does not have influence in any of the organizations. Rev. Young felt that the thing that is needed is direct action. He is presently trying to get one of the action groups to come in. A coordinating committee has recently been organized which will bring together the leaders of all organizations and possibly some new leadership to work on local problems. The president of the NAACP is the high school principal. It is not felt that at this time the branch could carry on an effective registration drive.

I recommend that VEP delay action in this county at least until the newly formed coordinating organization has time to chart its course.

Wednesday evening, September 11, I made a visit to Mecklenberg County, the city of Charlotte. This trip was made in response to an invitation accepted a week before to address the high school PTA. The address was well received. Of the 300 or so persons present, some 15 or 20 came over and said that they intended to give their support to the registration drive there in progress.

Mr. Earl Davis of COPE spoke briefly on the same program, and was very effective. I learned as I moved about in Charlotte that Mr. Matt Reese, who had promised the registration committee $1000, later informed them that any money that the committee got from VEP was in fact Democratic party money. This statement, I neither denied nor confirmed.

Registration work in Mecklenberg County is moving smoothly and can be expected to continue. We can anticipate reports from this group in the near future.

Thursday, September 12, I made a brief call on Dr. F. W. Jackson of Forsyth County. I was checking to see if Dr. Jackson had gotten the NAACP and CORE leaders together as he had promised the week before that he would.

Dr. Jackson informed me that the meeting had been held and real accord had been reached. He said that they had worked on their approach and budget, and that they had sent these plans down in a letter to the project director. I recommend immediate favorable action if the proposal is reasonable.

September 12, I visited Concord, where I talked with Dr. Shutte who is dean of Barber Schotia College. Dr. Shutte is quite a local functionary. He is a member of the Mayor's Committee on Racial Affairs and several other things. Much to my surprise, I was infromed that Cabarrus is not a county with open registration.

Dr. Shutte informed me that he does not feel that there is any discrimination problem in the registrar's office, and that there is no real need for outside help. I think that we will want to call on Dr. Shutte next year when registration is possible.

Re: Field Trip to Monroe, Albermarle, Greensboro, and Raleigh, N. C.

September 11, 1963, I visited Mr. H. V. Moss in Monroe (Union County), North Carolina. Union is a county with a Negro voting age population of 4423, of which 2098 are presently on the book. It is also a county that by statute has year-round permanent registration.

Mr. Moss is a former officer of the NAACP. He said to me that the organization is not doing very much now. I was greatly surprised when Mr. Moss contended that Union did not have year-round registration. I told him what the statute provided, and he promised that he would look into the matter further.

I inquired of Moss as to what organization would be able to carry on an effective drive. To this, he said that he did not know. He indicated that it might be possible to pump some life into the NAACP. Mr. Moss said that he was now functioning as an individual. This attitude, he explained, was because of the fact that in the community, there is still left over some of the Robert Williams' movement, and that it was increasing in attractiveness. Mr. Moss said that this group was working very hard on racial problems, and was gathering a following. Mr. Moss felt that the motives of the group were questionable, and that he did not wish to be identified with the organization.

Another trip will have to be made to this community when a more detailed study can be made.

I visited Albermarle (Stanley County). In the community, I talked with several persons on the street about civic activities. Each of these conversations pointed to a Mr. Wadell as the man that I should talk to. It seemed to be an accepted fact that he was the civic leader. Mr. Wadell, however, works in Charlotte, and so I was not able to talk with him. I am satisfied that when I meet with Mr. Wadell, that I will be able to get the entire picture.

I concluded from what was said to me that nothing is being done in Stanley County at the present time registration-wise.

There does not appear to be a problem of open discrimination in the registration office. Stanley is a county with a Negro voting age population of 2164, of which 1500 (66%) are now on the books.

September 12, I visited Greensboro, North Carolina, just one week after having been in this area. This time, I was interested in talking with Mr. Richard Ramsey more so than Dr. Simkins, the prospective project leader.

Dr. Simkins is the NAACP head - Mr. Ramsey is an AFSC staff man. Mr. Ramsey and Dr. Simkins worked very effectively together in the August AFSC drive.

I told Mr. Ramsey that there was a possibility that VEP would be making a continuing grant to Greensboro, and that we would hope for and need his help in making the program as effective as before. He assured me that we could depend on him in this regard.

Mr. Ramsey had urged upon me and Dr. Simkins the idea of hiring an A. & T College student, Mr. Barnfield, that had worked with the August Friends project, saying that he could, because of his past experience, do a good job of coordinating the project.

Mr. Ramsey was to have talked with Barnfield to see if he would be willing to give up his part-time super market job to do this work. I learned from Mr. Ramsey that he had not been able to make this contact. He assured me that he would look into this matter as soon as he returned from his vacation the last of September. We can expect to hear from Dr. Simkins and Mr. Randall in the near future.

I visited Raleigh, North Carolina, September 12, and talked with Rev. Grady Davis, president of the Raleigh Citizen's Association.

I had talked with Rev. Davis in great detail about a registration drive in Raleigh on a previous trip in the early summer. The memo of that field trip reflects that Rev. Davis was greatly impressed with the work that the NSA had done in that community before.

I was given to believe that VEP would hear from the Citizen's Association before August regarding a new drive. Such a communication did not come. As I talked with Rev. Davis, I found him to be just as excited about a drive as before. It developed in our conversation that one of the reasons that a request for VEP sponsorship had not been made was because I had not said enough about outside help. Rev. Davis and his association is very desirous of having a drive conducted, but the individuals that make up the association are so otherwise involved that they were a little reluctant about accepting sponsorship knowing that they will only be able to serve in an advisory sponsoring role.

On this visit, Rev. Brown of SNCC was traveling with me, and he was able to say to Rev. Davis that his organization would like to come in and help in such a drive. This seemed to be all that Rev. Davis needed. He was ready there on the spot to start planning the drive.

I asked him to check with his organization and see if the kind of cooperation could be obtained that the NSA project had gotten. I asked what Rev. Davis thought the organization would need money-wise. To this, he replied that they would need very little, if the students could be sent in. He thought maybe three or four hundred dollars for a 90-day drive to be used for office supplies and transportation would be adequate. Rev. Davis is Dean of the Shaw University School of Divinity, and can help in recruiting some students there.

I have since talked with Jim Forman and he says that he can send in five students if VEP sponsorship can be had.

I recommend that VEP take speedy action to effect a Raleigh project. I rather suspect that in this case, VEP may have to assume a little more than its traditional role in getting this program off the ground. The people in Raleigh are likely going to wait on SNCC. SNCC is going to ~~visit~~ wait on VEP.

Addendum to Raleigh, North Carolina, Report:

September 20, 1963, I talked with Earl Davis (COPE), on the phone about Raleigh, North Carolina. We had agreed in a conversation in Washington, D. C., that we needed to collaborate before either organization moved in this area.

COPE has received a request for funds in the amount of $3800 to be used in a registration drive from Raleigh.

There are several interesting facts about this request that COPE has received:

1) The individuals that signed the letter to COPE represent themselves as the officers of the Citizen's Association.
2) They set out a proposal without description of their structure for carrying out the program.
3) The names signed to the letter to COPE are not names that appear in the detailed report submitted to us at the end of the NSA project.
4) The letter that COPE received did not come on Citizen's Association stationary.

NOW!

1) The letter that we received from the Citizen's Committee is on letterhead.
2) The officers that appear on this stationary are the same persons that are mentioned in the NSA report.
3) I am impressed by the fact that Rev. Grady Davis, the man that we are working with, expressed very little interest in money coming directly to his organization. I feel that we are dealing with the right group and for that reason can proceed with our consideration of their proposal.

Re: Field Trips to Mecklenburg, Forsyth, and Guilford Counties, N. C.

September 4, 1963, I visited Charlotte (Mecklenburg County), North Carolina, and met with the Charlotte Voter Registration Coordinating Committee at the invitation of its president, Dr. R. A. Hawkins. There were eleven individuals present, all of them leaders in their own right. This group has, at various times, received national publicity for their work under the name "Mecklenburg Organization on Political Affairs."

Mecklenburg is a county in which there is a Negro voting age population of 34,150. It was represented to me that less than 10,000 of that number is registered, in spite of the fact that Charlotte has a long history of political activity. It is now an area without any Negro elected officials. The leaders in this meeting reflected some real concern about this fact.

It was estimated that 3,000 Negro people have registered within the past 12 months, but many more than this is anticipated because efforts in the past have not been as organized as they might have been.

I was greatly impressed by the interest, enthusiasm, and general know-how present in the group. I discussed with the group the nature of the VEP program across the South, and what the project requires of each participating agency.

It was explained to me that the chief need of the organization is financial help. I understand that a house has been made available to the group for its use for three or four months, without cost. It was contended that there was immediate need for funds to decorate the office, buy stationary, and other office equipment.

I favor a grant of $1000 to this group for the next 30 days, pending the receipt of a formal request containing a historical statement, a description of their methods of approach, and an itemized budget.

This was my second trip to Charlotte, but the first time that I had met with this group. The members are highly Democratic-party orientated, but I am assured that their registration work will be non-partisan. I find it a regretable fact that Mr. Kelley Alexander, NAACP national board member in charge of registration, has not found it possible to live up to any of his promises to work with this group.

September 15, 1963, I visited the city of Winston Salem, North Carolina. This was my second trip to this area. On the prior visit, I went in on the heel of our having just made a grant to the Urban League. The memo for that trip will show something of the reception that I received in NAACP quarters. This time, I visited with NAACP leaders under different circumstances. Talking with Dr. F. W. Jackson, it was apparent that this time, he had the whip in his hands. He had watched the Urban League operation very closely, and had rightly concluded that not very many people had been registered by that program, nor had there been any real assessment of political attitudes.

The NAACP in Winston Salem is a very interesting group. It enjoys a lot of local popular support, and has, by that fact, made a number of desegregation gains. The branch is certainly not one of those that will be heard to say the association is right or wrong. They fight as a body with state officers, and is sometime highly cricital of the national office. This season, they are venting their spleen on the Urban League, not without some reasons. It is, and has, for quite some time, been a generally accepted conclusion that Urban League is in that city of Winston, a tool of the very wealthy Hanes family. It is felt in many quarters, that Urban League cannot be expected to become too involved in advancing the cause of Negro people. It is admitted by many that they have not really been identified with any of the mass movements, even in the area of jobs.

I talked with Dr. Jackson, and Mrs. Louise Wilson of CORE seriously about a joint program in Forsyth County. They agreed that they can work together and should be given a chance to try their skills with VEP support. I encouraged them to apply for a grant, setting forth their proposal and budget in detail.

Forsyth County has 24,952 Negroes of voting age, 14,798 of which are presently registered. It was the first county in the state to have Negro elected officials. (1946).

We may expect to hear from the leader in Winston Salem, North Carolina, within a few days.

I recommend that VEP honor the request from Winston Salem, if the proposal reflects that it is a joint NAACP-CORE project; that the proposed period is 90 days and not more than 4 months, and if the cost is less than $3000.

September 6, 1963, I visited Guilford County, the cities of Greensboro and High Point.

In Greensboro, I talked with Dr. George Simpkins, who is president of the local NAACP.

Dr. Simpkins related to me the work that had been done in Guilford County by both John Edwards of the NAACP, and by the American Friends Service Committee.

During the time that John Edwards worked in Greensboro, (July, 1963), I was informed that some 270 people registered. Dr. Simpkins indicated that Edwards was very effective in getting the job done, and expressed regrets that he was moved out.

Dr. Simpkins had only words of praise for the work that the AFSC did during the three weeks of their August project. It was felt by Dr. Simpkins that the success of the Friend's project was due largely to the use of interracial teams. This group accomplished three important things: 1). They created the need for and succeeded in obtaining the appointment of two additional Negro registrars; 2). They registered 803 Negro citizens; 3). They built up a card file of about 4000 Negro homes that can be used in future registration work. The card file is now in the hands of the NAACP.

Dr. Simpkins said to me that he felt that registration work should be continued while the community is aroused, and that interracial teams should be used.

We may expect a request from Dr. Simpkins as NAACP president, or Mr. J. B. Battle as chairman of the Political Action Committee of NAACP within a few days.

I recommend that we act favorably on the request if the budget is for a sum of less than $2000, for 90 days, and providing there is evidence of structure to carry out the program.

RE: Field Trips to North Carolina, the District of Columbia, Virginia, and South Carolina

Section I.

This field report covers the period September 30, 1963, 7:30 a. m., to October 6, 1963, 8:30 p. m., and includes visits in Lexington, North Carolina, Washington, D. C.; Falls Church, Virginia, Petersburg, Virginia, Norfolk, Virginia, Newport News, Virginia, Portsmouth, Virginia, Suffolk, Virginia; Sumter, South Carolina, Manning, South Carolina, and Orangeburg, South Carolina.

The first stop in this field trip was made Monday, September 30 in Lexington, North Carolina, for the express purpose of checking the validity of information that had been given to me back in the month of June. North Carolina is a state in which, by statute, there are only 9 counties in which registration is possible year-round. The other 91 counties supposedly have only 3 weeks for registration. The statute is constructed in such a way as to leave open the possibility that a county might, at its own discretion, increase the 3-week period.

Davidson, the county in which Lexington is located, is not one of the year-round counties, but it does appear to be a county in which discretion is being employed. I had been told by Mr. Clarence Roberts, president of the local NAACP, that it is possible to register any week-day by going to the home of the registrar. Knowing that I was on my way into Washington to talk with a group of gentlemen from North Carolina, I felt that I would need to know of at least one county in which discretion was being employed. By visiting again with Mr. Roberts, it was confirmed that registration is possible any day that an applicant presents himself at the home of the registrar.

Tuesday, October 1, at 6 o'clock a. m., I arrived by car in the District of Columbia. The anticipated conference was scheduled for 10:30 a. m. I arrived at the appointed place at the designated time. The reception was formal, and yet warm and cordial. The conference had been scheduled for 11 o'clock, but it did not get underway until about 11:15. Mr. Reese, the arranger of the conference, had been tied up in other matters. The North Carolina delegation, which included Mr. Tom Davis, Executive Director of the North Carolina Democratic party, busied itself flipping about the office building, meeting party VIP's. I waited for about 10 minutes, and then it appeard to me that I, too, was quite busy, so I went for a 30-minute walk around the block. I frankly felt that I could not afford to appear to be more interested in the conference than the delegates that I was to meet with.

When we got down to talking about the business of the hour, it was quite obvious that Mr. Reese was working at making everyone feel at ease. Without pulling any punches, he pointed out that the VEP was engaged in the business of registering Negro people, and that the party needed our cooperation, and that we could make use of the party's cooperation in accomplishing what we are attempting to do.

My first remarks were given to the nature and operation of VEP, and its relation to SRC. These remarks caused one of the North Carolinians to raise some question about SRC, to which I explained that the SRC is an organization about 14 years old, and that it enjoys the reputation of being one of the nation's most distinguished research organizations in the area of the behavorial sciences.

Matt Reese sought to confirm what I had said by passing to each person, a list of the SRC directors. It appeared that several of the North Carolina delegates knew and held in great esteem, members of the SRC board. With this, the conference was off to more serious matters. The North Carolinians proceeded to explain that they were really quite sound on the race question. That they had gone down the line for Mr. Kennedy, even though he was running way behind the state ticket. They felt that since they had risked the success of the state ticket, this was proof that they had come to this conference table because of their interest in Negro people. As the conversation unfolded, I politely interjected the idea that there had been a revolt in Gilford and Mecklenburg counties, and that Republican administration had been elected. After this exchange, we were ready to talk about what each other had to offer.

Early in the discussion, I discovered that somehow, the North Carolina gentlemen had the idea that VEP could possibly stop or stem the tide of street demonstrations. I restricted my remarks to what I felt they could, as North Carolina party officials, do, to get large numbers of Negro people registered. I suggested that they could secure the appointment of deputy Negro registrars, or insure the presence of the registration books in the Negro community for night registration. At this point, the North Carolina gentlemen were quite timid. They were afraid that if they did any such thing as was suggested, it would become known in the white community and would deliver the coming election into the hands of the conservative elements of the state. Matt Reese urged the North Carolina delegation not to be over-cautious. I did not get the feeling that he was making any great deal of progress in selling this idea. The conference concluded with a discussion of the fact that special consideration did not have to be decided upon at this point. Especially since there will be a special registration period in which all books in the state will be available for a 10-day period during the month of November in connection with a school bond election.

Mr. Davis invited me to visit him in North Carolina with specific questions and ideas. I accepted his invitation. We adjourned in great cordiality.

As I reflect on this conference, I recall that the gentlemen from North Carolina were, in the old Southern tradition, more than free in the use of my first name. I chose to keep the conference on a formal basis. It was, for me, kind of like the day when the judge said, "Randolph, I don't think your client is demanding too much. Why don't you get with Lawyer Brooks and try to work this thing out?"

We shall keep the doors open to see what these gentlemen have to offer to the program to which we are committed.

Wednesday, October 2, I visited Norfolk, Virginia, and an old classic, "Don Juan in Hell" provides, I believe, an appropriate description of how I reacted to registration work in the state of Virginia. There is little of the hostility of Mississippi, and yet registration work is almost as frustrating. The poll tax seems to stand as an insurmountable barrier to mass registration. The registration law is so conducted as to require that a citizen pay not $1.50, but $5 instead. A worker is almost defeated before he statts, when he tries to convince a non-voting citizen that he should register. This is the story of much of the slowness with which registration moves in the old commonwealth.

In Norfolk, I visited with Mr. Arthur T. Freeman, the project director at the headquarters of the project in the YMCA building. There was much evidence to show that Mr. freeman was trying to get the job done. Canvass sheets reflected the effort that had been put into trying to get citizens registered without great success. I examined other literature that indicated the several approaches that had been made. Mr. Freeman explained that the very fine group that had started off in the drive had fallen away to make the faithful few discouraged by the miserable record that they were establishing. He is ready to resign himself, disheartened and embarrassed and feeling a little ill-equipped to argue that a person ought to take out of a $35 or $40 a week budget that is already overloaded, $5 to register, when the person is not convinced of the full worth of the ballot. Mr. Freeman and some of his workers had journeyed to Newport News the week before to try to get some ideas about conducting registration, but to no avail.

We talked about various ways that a community might approach the poll tax. Among other things, we discussed group raising of poll taxes, We examined all the related problems to this idea, and agreed to continue to study this approach. I suggested that he might check to see if many of the Negro insurance companies would be willing to put up $500 to pay poll tax for policy-holders and collect the amount 15 or 25 cents a week, as the collector comes around to collect premiums. Mr. Freeman agreed to investigate this further. Copies of some of the literature that the Tidewater Registration Project has prepared and distributed is attached.

On October 1, 1963, I visited Petersburg, Virginia, and talked with Mr. Herbert Coulton, the SCLC man in that general area. Mr. Coulton has been conducting registration in Petersburg and neighboring communities for several months.

At the time that I arrived at Mr. Coulton's office, he was packing for a trip into Danville where I am informed that registration is proceeding at an accelerated rate as a result of the recent demonstrations. Mr. Coulton, unlike most of the registration workers in Virginia, manages to keep up an optimistic attitude toward his work. When I talked with him serveral weeks before, I suggested that he should look to new avenues for getting the job done.

It was particularly pleasing to have Mr. Coulton report that he was securing from the high school records, the names of individuals in the community that would be 20 or turning 21. These individuals can register without having to pay a poll tax.

He also indicated that a program is being planned using name talent. Admission would be a registration certificate. This program is expected to be held sometime during the month of November.

The registration books will be closed due to an election during the month of October. Attached to this report is a proposal, setting forth the areas and budget for SCLC registration work in Virginia.

More to come.

Re: A Continuation of Report Started October 9, 1963 Covering Trips to North Carolina, the District of Columbia, Virginia, and South Carolina

On October 3, I visited Newport News, Virginia, and talked with Mrs. Norveate Downing, her secretary, and several other persons working with her. Being able to get together this group on a minute's notice, along with the general appearance of the registration office, suggests that in Newport News there is some registration activity.

Persons in the Newport News group are quite different from the persons I had talked with in Norfolk. Mr. Arthur Freeman saw the poll tax as a burden and a barrier to registration. Mrs. Downing saw apathy as the basic barrier. Of course, Mr. Freeman is a working-class man, while Mrs. Downing is the wife of a doctor.

Mrs. Downing felt just a bit embarrassed by the few people that they had been able to register, but placed the blame on the Negroes themselves rather on the approaches being made, or the nature of the requirements. She said that they are breaking through the lack of concern, according to the increases that are taking place.

The Peninsula Coordinating Committee, the organization that Mrs. Downing works through, is now receiving requests for help from the Hampton community, but they have not moved into this community yet. Great interest was expressed in the VEP newsletter. I was supplied with a photograph of the Peninsula Committee at work, along with the request that we not publish anything about them in the newsletter alongside our most successful drives.

I tried to discuss different approaches to getting the job done, such as groups working together to encourage registration, as well as group paying of poll tax. It was Mrs. Downing's feelings that these ideas would not be looked upon favorably by the registrar. Mrs. Downing ~~had~~ seemed to me to consider a good relationship with the registrar absolutely necessary to get anything done. I appreciate her attitude, and yet I think it could possibly prove burdensome in the future. It might just be that when the people of Norfolk have tried some new approaches, the Newport News group will find they can do likewise.

October 3, I visited Portsmouth, Virginia, and talked with Mr. David Muckel. Mr. Muckel had been in contact with VEP, and had made a request for some assistance. At the time of our previous communication, we were not able to consider the request of Mr. Muckle. So it is that I talked with Mr. Muckle against this background.

I felt, as we talked, that Mr. Muckle had felt some injury to his feelings, because we had not honored his request. I explained that we are always in possession of more requests than we are able to handle, but that we follow a pattern of holding onto each such request, anticipating that we will be able to assist in some way at some future time. Mr. Muckle explained that there is, in the community, an organization known as the Central Civic Forum, which I concluded is some kind of coordinated group. Mr. Muckle said that in spite of our failure to act, they had gone ahead planning for a registration drive. The plans of the group are not complete, but it seems clear to me that they are working to improve a block/ward structure that had existed for some time.

I was told that the last registration drive that the group conducted was in 1960. It ran for about nine months, and they were able to add about 500 names. I encouraged Mr. Muckle to place their plans and requests before us again, and that it was entirely possible that we might be able to assist him at this time. We may expect to hear from this group in the very near future.

October 3, I went into Suffolk, Virginia, intent on talking with Mr. Moses Riddick. His name had been supplied to me by Miss Fannie Neal. The anticipated conference could not be held because Mr. Riddick was not in town. For my own benefit and curiosity, I decided that I would stop some people on the street and ask them who I should talk with about trying to get Negro people registered. I stopped three individuals, and in each case, the first name mentioned was Moses Riddick. One young man, appearing to be about 25, said, "There ain't but one Negro leader here, and that is Mr. Riddick. You don't need to talk to anybody else." When I have an opportunity to be in Suffolk again, I will certainly talk with Mr. Riddick.

October 4, I went into Sumter, South Carolina, to argue with Frank Robinson and Edward Brown about the CORE program in the Fifth and Sixth Congressional districts. This turned out to be a very rewarding visit. Somehow, it appears that in all of our previous conversations, Frank had not fully understood the basis of my great concern about this program.

He had assumed that the reports that he had been sending to New York had been coming down to us in Atlanta. We had not gotten his reports, and thus I had assumed that very little was being done. We were both pleasantly shocked when we learned the source of our problem. Frank showed me some of the reports that he had sent to the national office. An abstract of his August report is attached here. Frank promised that he will, in the future, let us have copies of his reports direct.

I was particularly delighted to find that Mr. Robinson and Mr. Brown are taking seriously the insistence upon their developing local leadership. It will suffice for this report to say that we are pleased with the progress that has been made in this regard. The contact list, here attached, reflects to some extent, the nature of the work being done in the business of developing local leadership.

October 5, I made a brief visit into Manning, South Carolina, which was on the highway from Sumpter to Orangeburg. In Manning, I talked with Mr. Billy Flemming, the newly elected chairman of the First Congressional District Voter Education Project. I had been with Flemming just the week before, so that I felt I needed only to call and urge upon him the importance of holding regular meetings of his executive staff, less his very young organization fall apart before it gets off the ground.

I was encouraged by the spirit and confidence that Mr. Flemming expressed. I have the feeling that there are possibilities that great things will come of this.

I recommend that VEP decide, as soon as possible, what funds are available for work in this area by this group.

Remarks on the First Congressional District Voter Education Project will be submitted separately.

October 5, I arrived in Orangeburg, South Carolina. This visit was occasioned by news that stepped-up demonstrations were taking place in the city.

Demonstrations in Orangeburg have been in process for more than eight weeks, but have only recently enjoyed the support of the entire community. My principle interest was in inquiring into whether the registration committee was taking advantage of the opportunities to push registration in the various meetings that demonstration-planning would require. I am satisfied that every effort is being made to keep this matter before the people. New registration workers are being enlisted.

I have talked with Dr. Thomas by phone since my visit, and he informed me that on two occasions, they have, as a way of throwing the opposition off guard, taken the students that assembled for downtown demonstrations, and sent them on what they called "Operation Door-Knock for Registration." The cops were left downtown waiting and confused. This added leg work seems to be paying off. The number registered last Monday was up to 240.

Re: North Carolina Conference of the NAACP

Wednesday, October 9, 1963, I drove into Charlotte, North Carolina, to attend the 20th anniversary of the North Carolina Conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This was, for me, to be a kind of homecoming, because it was this state conference that I attended the organizational meeting of some twenty years ago.

As I drove along the highway, I thought of those days back in 1942 and 1943 when campaigns were waged around trying to stop whites from spitting out of windows on Negroes; trying to compel businesses to use courtesy titles; trying to save the life of a single man on a trumped-up charge of rape, or something of this nature. Those campaigns were all-consuming.

I ran through my mind memories of individuals that I anticipated seeing. I likewise anticipated a number of dynamic sessions in which a number of significant questions would be raised and wrestled with. I accepted in advance the fact that some of the questions we would raise would not be answered, and that many of them would have to be laid aside without even being fully analized. I sped along, anticipating the great hours ahead.

After eight sessions of this conference, I drove away depressed and disheartened by an organization withered away without just cause. The questions anticipated were never really raised. The answers given were superficial and empty. As I drove back towards Atlanta, I raised with myself the question, "What did I gain, and what did I contribute?" This question served to remind me of a quotation from Immanuel Kant's "Critique of Pure Reasoning":

> "To know what questions may reasonably be asked is already a great and necessary proof of sagacity of insight. For if a question is absurd in itself, and calls for an answer where none is required, it not only brings shame on the propounder of the question, but may betray an incautious listener into absurd answers...."

Thus presenting, as the ancient said:

> "....the ludicrous spectacle of one man milking a he-goat, and the other holding the sieve underneath."

The conference opened for business at 11 o'clock a. m. under the general theme "Freedom Now - The Negroes' Challenge in an Age of Civil Rights Revolution." Rev. J. E. Arnnett, chairman of the North Carolina Church Work Committee of the NAACP presided at this session. Introductory remarks were made by Mr. Kelley Alexander, President of the North Carolina State Conference; Mrs. Ruby Hurley, Southeastern Regional Secretary; Rev. Edward Odum, National Church Secretary, and Mr. L. A. Ashford, National Youth Secretary.

The keynote address was delivered by Dr. Claude V. Broach of Charlotte, North Carolina. In none of these statements was there anything that suggested the existence of any kind of theme, or that any serious consideration had been given to reasons for the calling of the state conference. There was much pulpit-pounding, but very little content, limited inspiration, no instruction, but a lot of fellowshipping.

This session was followed by a 2:30 o'clock session divided into what was styled as workshops, but turned out to be no such thing, just pulpit-pounding built around praise for those that will do and condemnation for those that won't do.

Rev. Pyant spoke on the subject, "A Look at the Techniques of Negotiation"; Rev. W. E. Banks spoke on the subject, "Direct Action"; Rev. J. E. Wertz spoke on "Effective Use of Interracial Interdenominational and Interfaith Relations." These three speakers were followed by a speech by Rev. Ward that was programmed "The Negro Voter Picture in North Carolina." The speaker ran the gamut of Negro grievances and was effective in his delivery, but in the speech, left out the voter registration picture almost entirely.

The statement on the southwide registration campaign was followed by a statement given by Mr. Ashford on the subject, "Motivating Negro Youth to Prepare for New Opportunities." The content of this statement centered around jobs that Negroes could get if they were qualified. Had there been an opportunity for discussion, I think I would have raised the question, "Should we not give some attention to getting those jobs that Negroes can qualify for as a source of motivating youth, as well as getting the money that would make college training possible?" But, of course, this was a workshop in name only. And so, the hour passed without any kind of discussion.

The last two hours of this session were given to a consideration of mass membership and finances with Mrs. Ruby Hurley holding forth. This was a most regretable aspect of the conference. After all of her years of experience, she is still talking down to people, rather than talking with them. Some of the problems of the entire southern region are made clear when you see Mrs. Hurley scolding and insulting the very people that she has to work with. She said she was "putting it on the line", but nothing was quite so clear as the fact that NAACP's major membership and finance problem stems from the leadership having not developed a program that the people feel really involved in.

The third session of conference, held at 8 p. m., was the traditional minister's banquet. Rev. Odum was the speaker. The speech was a good one, more inspirational than anything else. I gained a great deal of respect for the National Church Secretary, and expected to see him putting to use the understanding of people that he had reflected the next day. Such did not happen. There is a strange kind of fraternalizm in the North Carolina Conference that seems to prevent individuals from being honest with each other, even when the success of the organization is involved.

I saw some old friends at the banquet, and was made happy thereby. I inquired about a number of people that I felt should have been there, and learned that these people were no longer functioning with the conference. Greensboro, Durham, Winston Salem, Raleigh, and Charlotte were very poorly represented.

Friday, October 11, came as almost any other day in Charlotte, with the exception of the fact that there was good coverage in the morning press.

The conference opened its fourth session with a song service and devotion, followed by a memorial. Organization of the convention was taken care of next, followed by the state president's annual address, which amounted in so many words to, "How I Love the NAACP, Oh, How Great I Am!"

After lunch, the conference was called to order at 2 p. m. for the fifth session. Four matters were up for consideration:

1. "Implementation of An Effective Youth Program"
   Mr. Ashford effectively worked his way through what seemed to be the difficult problem of adult-youth relations.

2. "Direct Action"
   Discussed by Rev. Banks effectively.

3. "Hospital Integration"
   Discussed by Dr. Emery T. Rann, and proved to be very informative.

4. "Voter Registration"
   Taken care of by John Edwards.

There was time given for questions in this session, but the people who needed to hear the questions and answers (the state officers), I observed, chose this time to leave the auditorium. I think it is significant that they seem not to have felt that they could benefit from this part of the program.

The part on voter registration conducted by John Edwards represented the kind of thing that I felt the conference needed more of. He was the only person that dared to try to do a workshop. He divided the group into two sections, and asked each section to try to project a plan for conducting a registration drive. After this was done, they proceeded to criticize the plans. I feel that there was substance in this kind of approach.

The evening meeting got underway at 8 p. m. with Mrs. Hurley as the principal speaker. It was a good speech, and it was well received. There was a lot of tired, worn-out blasts and threats, and little or no call for rededication. But this being a mass meeting, it served its purpose.

One regretable fact of this session was the fact that the weakness of the organization could be seen. There were about 100 empty seats in the auditorium that would only seat 450.

I did not attend the Saturday session of the conference, but elected to attend the youth meeting instead. This did me good. It was like NAA in the old days. Before the youth got into their work-session, I had to leave for Atlanta. I left with the feeling that things worthwhile would take place in this meeting.

As I look at this conference, I am grieved. It could be so much more than what it is. It seems to me that several important questions need to be asked:

1. Why is there so little support from the major cities in the state?

2. How is it that there has been so little change in state officers?

3. Why is so little attention given to conference planning?

4. Why is voter registration treated so lightly?

5. Why is there such reluctance on the part of officers to critically look at themselves?

6. How would it be possible to get officers to examine their conclusions about threats from other organizations?

7. When will this conference take stock of its assets and make use of them?

All is not lost the the North Carolina NAACP, but history is not running with it.

On October 24, I will visit Rev. Arnnette in Goldsboro, North Carolina, and try to get him to work on getting the NAA ministers to do something about the special registration that is coming up in late November or early December. I will likewise talk with John Edwards in Durham on this trip about the same thing.

Re: Twenty-Second Annual Conference of the NAACP - Darlington, S. C. and trip to Raleigh, & Durham N.C.

Friday, October 18, I attended the 22nd annual conference of the South Carolina conference of branches of the NAACP, meeting at the St. James Methodist Church, Darlington, South Carolina. I had gone out to Darlington at the invitation of Rev. I. DeQuincy Newman, Field Secretary for South Carolina.

Friday, the 18th, was the second day of the conference, and was also the day that the conference was to give attention to the matter of voter registration.

I arrived at the St. James Church at 9 o'clock a. m., and found only three persons, one of which was not associated with the conference. The printed program indicated that the conference was to start business at 9 a. m. By 10:10, a crowd of 21 persons had collected, and the meeting was on the way.

I was introduced to Mr. J. Arthur Brown, President of the state conference, and was impressed with his sincerity. Things were not running according to the printed program. Someone filled in for the man that was to conduct the devotion.

A memorial service followed the devotion. The Rev. W. B. Knox of Rock Hill delivered the address. I followed each of his words carefully, and regretted that he did not have something more organized to say. Yet, I feel that he tried and did the best that he could. When the memorial was over, it was 11:20 a. m.

Mr. Brown came forth and named persons that he was appointing to three committees. When this was done, it was apparent that confusion swooped down on the deliberation. Mr. Brown went out of the auditorium as if to look for someone. I observed him holding a brief conference with some individuals standing in the church yard, among them, Mrs. Ruby Hurley. After about 10 minutes, he reentered the church, and then held a quick conference with Rev. Newman. At this point, Mr. Brown came before his audience, which had now reached 24, and announced that the Field Director for the Voter Education Project out of Atlanta was present, and that he felt that the conference should take advantage of this opportunity to hear from this person. The facts of the matter were that the scheduled speaker on "Labor and Industry" had not shown up, and none of the others were prepared to carry on this part of the program, and I was asked to fill in. This time, I felt I was doing a real service for the conference.

I spoke briefly about 35 or 40 minutes, starting with the fact that they were to be congratulated for having laid aside their business in order to be present. I felt the need to say something about the need and the possibility of doing more to build the state conference, and did, indicating that Negro people had not traditionally turned away from difficult tasks. I pointed to the beautiful modern church in which we were meeting as proof of our ability to do great things with little resources. I went from this point to talk about the southwide registration drive, noting special cases of registration workers overcoming great difficulties.

When I had finished, I had the feeling that the persons that had heard what I had to say had a little more confidence in their ability and the ability of the NAACP to do a job in registration.

The conference leaders were relieved by the fill-in. And, at least, I had gotten before them something of what other communities were doing registration-wise. We adjourned for lunch.

After lunch, Mrs. Hurley spoke to the group on "membership and finances." Many persons in the group participated in this part of the program. It was a problem-solving session, but the real problem of the conference was never taken up.

After this discussion, Dr. Charles Thomas of Orangeburg was scheduled to talk about political action. Dr. Thomas sent word that he could not be present. I filled in again. This time, I talked about the mechanics of registration, setting forth some of the things that our many drives seem to indicate as sound approaches, as well as some of the traditional problems. My audience of 28 enjoyed working with me in finding answers to problems that I proposed. When this was over, it was 4 p. m.

I did not bother to try to make plans for greater registration work to be done through this group. Such would have been fruitless, I believe.

There were other sessions to follow, none were related to voter registration, and besides, I had had it.

Everyone present seemed to be aware of the lack of organization and the poor attendance. Some explained it by the fact that Rev. Newman had been from one demonstration area to another all summer, and had not had the opportunity to work on the conference. The problem goes much deeper, I feel.

October 23, I drove into Raleigh, North Carolina, accompanied by Reginald Robinson of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee. This trip was planned against a background of my having made three trips into this city, the first having been back in April. Reginald Robinson's exploratory visit was, in a sense, the fulfillment of a request of the local people that VEP get a student group to come in and do the recruiting and leg work necessary for an effective drive.

We went first to the home of Rev. Grady Davis, Dean of the Shaw University School of Divinity. Rev. Davis got together a group of leaders in a matter of minutes.

In the group was Mr. Joe Sansom, Vice President of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, and Mr. John Winters, the Negro member of the city council. The local group explained the plans that they had made in preparation for the coming of the student group. I was impressed with the plan and attitude of the group. I raised with them the question, "What relation does Rev. Ward have with the group?", explaining that we had knowledge that he had made a request of COPE in the name of the committee. It was explained that the group had placed requests with several agencies with the intention of accepting only one. It was indicated that the most preferable offer was the one that VEP was supplying because it was workers that Raleigh needed more so than money. This answer was satisfactory to me. The rest of the time of this meeting went into planning how many students should be brought in, and how they would be housed.

I was especially pleased to observe that John Winters and Reginald Robinson were able to pick up what had been a back-slapping relationship, developed when they worked together in a drive in 1961.

It was felt by the local group that VEP might want to contribute the sum of $300 to take care of refreshments that would be available at the end of each work day. I promised to recommend same.

The locals indicated that they intended to spend considerable money on publicity and mailing. I feel that we have the working of a good drive.

October 24, I met with Mr. John Brooks and Mr. John Edwards of NAACP in Durham, North Carolina. This was an important conference, as I am convinced that if NAACP is going to be effective in voter registration in North Carolina, it will have to be done through the youth councils.

We planned, in outline fashion, a youth conference devoted to voter registration for some time about November 15, 1963. The meeting is planned tentatively for the eastern part of the state, probably Goldsboro. An effort will be made to bring together some 300 students. The NAACP will bear the expense of this meeting.

It is to be hoped that we will come out of this with some kind of system for carrying on work in most of the 100 counties of the state during the special registration period in late November. Planning along these conference lines will continue.

I also attended in Durham, a summit meeting of Negro leadership from all over the state, called to discuss a march on the state capitol. The NAACP was represented by Charles McClain, John Edwards, and John Brooks. SCLC was represented by Golden Frank and Andy Young. CORE was represented by Floyd McKissic. There were also many representatives of local organizations. No agreements were intended or arrived at.

I was afforded the opportunity to say a few words about voter registration.

After the meeting, I talked with Charles McClain, who has some grandoise plans of reviving a now defunct NAACP congressional district organization. Mr. McClain promised to keep us informed as to his progress. He asked that I suggest to the VEP director that he request of Roy Wilkins that he be assigned to voter registration in North Carolina for the next nine months. I have not formulated my opinion of this yet.

A Negro woman, active in the Negro voter registration drive here, was arrested by by U. S. marshals yesterday on a postal law violation.

The woman, Emma Louise Bell, was taken to Jackson where a charge of forging a signature to a $25 money order was lodged against her in U. S. District Court.

She faced a hearing on the charge before U. S. Commissioner John Countiss in Jackson.

U. S. District Attorney Robert Hauberg said in Jackson this morning that the Bell woman is accused of forging the name of a Campbell College student to that students money order from home and trying to cash it in McComb over a year ago.

The money order was allegedly stolen at Campbell College and taken to McComb where the forgery attempt was made. Hauberg said that analysis of handwriting of the owner of the money order, that of the Bell woman and several others led to her arrest.

Campbell College is a church-supported all Negro institution in Jackson.

The woman was arrested at SNCC headquarters here yesterday and lodged in city jail briefly before being taken by marshals to Jackson.

Fall Grand Jury Meets Here Monday

Delayed Cases Expected To Be Tried This Term

The fall term of Circuit Court will open Monday morning with Judge Arthur Clark, Jr. of Indianola presiding.

There are several cases continued from the last term that are expected to be tried this term. Among these is the case of five Negro students from Mississippi Vocational College who were indicted by the May Grand Jury on a charge of assult and battery with an attempt to run down a group of white boys on a 50 mile hike near Itta Bena. The Negroes have all been expelled from the college and have been out on bond since last May.

Two white men, William Greenlee and Wesley Kersey, indicted in May on a charge of assault and battery with intent to commit murder in connection with the shooting of Jimmy Travis, Negro voter registration worker, are also expected to be tried this term. Both Kersey and Greenlee have been free on $5,000 bond each.

Both cases, those involving the Negroes and the white men, were continued during the last session of court on the grounds that numerous instances of racial tension in the state and surrounding states, prevented the defendants from receiving a fair and impartial trial.

When arguing the motion last May, attorney A. H. Bell said on behalf of his clients Greenlee and Kersey, "time is a great healer and by November it is felt he can receive a fair trial."

The fall session of the Grand Jury will be empaneled on Monday.

Making his first appearance in Circuit Court this term will be the new district attorney, George Everett. Everett, a former agent with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, was elected to the office of district attorney in the August Democratic primary elections and faces no opposition in the general election.

Parham H. Williams of Lexington, former district attorney, resigned from that post after the primary elections and Everett was appointed by Gov. Ross Barnett to fill the remainder of William's term, until January 1 before taking over on his first full term.

Breach Of Peace

JCKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Negro and a white student faced breach of peace charges today after attempting to join a white audience at a Jackson music concert.

Police said Robert E. Honeysucker 20, a Negro student at Tougaloo Southern Christian College here, and Nicholas Bosanquet, 21, an English exchange student at Yale, were arrested on breach of peace charges Friday night at the city auditorium, where the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra of London was giving a concert.

The concert was open only to season ticket holders and police said the two refused orders to leave.

Bosanquet was helping other Yale students campaigning for Negro druggist Aaron Henry of Clarksdale for governor as a write-in candidate in next Tuesday's general election.

Probe Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department has been urged to investigate reports of police brutality and interference with Yale students helping in a Mississippi Negro political campaign.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., in a letter to the attorney general, urged that "all possible steps within your jurisdiction be taken to protect the lives of young Americans engaged in legitimate political activity in the best tradition of a democratic society."

Mock Vote

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) —Voting continues today in a statewide mock election with Aaron Henry, Clarksdale Negro and state president of the NAACP, heading a "freedom ticket" as a write-in candidate for governor.

The voting started Sunday in Negro churches and clubs.

A spokesman for the NAACP said it would not be known how many turned out to vote until the ballots were counted.

There is no provision for a write-in candidate under state law except where a candidate dies before the election.

The general election will be Tuesday with Lt. Gov. Paul Johnson, the Democratic nominee, facing GOP nominee Rubel Phillips. Their names were on the mock election ballots.

Negro leaders claimed the mock election would be an effective protest against the state's political situation. A small minority of Negroes are qualified as voters in Mississippi.

Five Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee workers were arrested and placed in city jail Saturday night and charged with blocking a public side-walk and failure to obey police officers.

Police Chief Curtis Lary said that the five, two Negroes, Willie James Earl and Dorothy Higgins and three white persons, Richard Frey, Jane Stembridge and Frederick Hirsch, had set up a table on the sidewalk in the 200 block of Johnson Street and were distributing leaflets to passers by.

Lary said they were asked to move and when they did not, they were placed under arrest.

Hirsch has been released after posting a $100 bond.

Wilkins Urges Demo Party To Clip Wings Of Solons

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — A Negro leader wants to see Mississippi's congressmen shorn of their seniority if they persist in an effort to block President Kennedy's re-election.

Roy Wilkins, executive sercetary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Sunady his group would ask the Democratic Party to take action — if the state goes ahead with its unpledged electors plan.

A spokesman for the Democratic National Committee in Washington declined comment and said there would be none forthcoming.

There has been speculation that some Democratic members of Congress might try to strip seniority rights from those members who fail to support the party's presidedntial nominee.

Speaking to the windup session of the state NAACP convention, Wilkins said:

"In view of the announcement of Mississippi to abandon or cut itself loose from the national Democratic Party and elect independent electors, the Mississippians in the House and Senate should be denied their seniorty and the committee chairmanships that go with seniority."

Wilkins was commenting about a state Democrats plan to run a slate of unpledged presidential electors in 1964 to try to defeat President Kennedy's re-election.

Turning to the civil rights bill before Congress, Wlkins said he thought the measure was "useful" but 'not fully adequate to the needs dof 1963."

The bill should give the attorney general more power to initiate action in civil rights cases, he said.

The state NAACP branch reelected Aaron Henry of Clarksdale as president.

Dr. Gilbert Mason, a Biloxi physician, was elected first vice president. Dr. B. E. Murph of Laurel was named second vice president.

Mary Cox of Jackson was re-elected secretary and Essie Randall of Jackson was re-elected treasurer.

The convention adopted a resolution calling for an immediate trial of Byron de la Beckwith, Greenwood white man charged in the slaying of Negro leader Medgar Evers.

In other resolutions, the convention laid the groundwork for creation of what it called a task force for voter registration, plugged hard for a civil rights bill which would, among other things, withhold federal funds from states flouting federal laws, and urged stepped-up Negro applications for civil service jobs, public school desegregation, and housing desegregation.

Re: Statewide Registration Committee Meeting - Macon, Georgia

October 26, 1963, I attended the meeting of the "Statewide Registration Committee" that was held in Macon, Georgia. This was my first time attending one of these meetings. It was a pleasure to observe the extent to which this organization has affiliates across the state.

Most of the deliberations were given to reporting on what is taking place in each of the counties. Not enough attention, I thought, was given to future plan-projecting. It might be that this is done at another time, or in another way.

The attached tables will reflect the meat of the reporting that was done. It is perhaps important to state that the youth and adult delegates have a harmonious relationship, though they did not hold their meetings together.

There is much to be desired in this organization. I have reason to believe that it will continue to develop. Structure-wise, it looked very good.

Negroes Say They'll Fight Paul's Election

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Negro civil rights leaders said today they would challenge in federal court the results of the Mississippi gubernatorial general election.

Bob Moses, campaign manager for Aaron Henry, the Clarksdale Negro druggist who ran for governor in a mock election, told a news conference arrangements were being made to file suit to void the election of Lt. Gov. Paul B. Johnson in Tuesday's general election.

Moses indicated the suit would be based on a federal statute passed during Reconstruction which allows a candidate defeated in a state or federal election to challenge the outcome of the contest on the basis that persons supporting the candidate were unlawfully denied the right to vote because of race.

Henry, who is also president of the Mississippi National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, did not run in an official election but only in a mock election.

Moses maintained "the results of the mock election indicated at least 80,000 persons would have voted for Henry, if they had not been disfranchised."

The mock election was sponsored by Negro civil rights groups to spotlight the power of the state Negro at the polls.

Moses termed the mock election "a great success" and said a massive voter registration drive would be launched Dec. 1 as a result.

The Rev. Edwin King of Tougaloo Southern Christian College ran as lieutenant governor candidate in the mock election.

Mike Sayer, information officer of the election said incomplete results showed:

Henry 72,869; Johnson (D) 296; Rubel Phillips (R) 290. For lieutenant governor: King 72,532; Carroll Gartin (D) 301; and Stanford Morse (R) 401.

Moses said "private and police intimidation throughout the state severely cut down the number of participants."

"The 80,000 is only a fraction of the persons who actually supported Henry," he said.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Re: Trip to Miles College on October 25, 1963

On Friday, October 25, I visited Miles College at the invitation of Dr. Lucius Pitts, President, to talk with the group of students that are to conduct a registration program under a grant of $16,000 from the Field Foundation.

I arrived at Miles College at 2 p. m., and went to the office of Dr. Pitts, and talked there with him for about fifteen minutes. During this time, we exchanged ideas about Birmingham voter registration progress. I specifically asked Dr. Pitts whether it was his intention that the ten students that are to work in the project would concern themselves with political education research, or the more practical business of getting Negro citizens registered. Dr. Pitts explained quite emphatically that it was his intention that these students concern themselves with actual registration, rather than surveying and education.

After this brief conversation, I met with the students for a period of four hours, during which we were involved in a very enthusiastic give-and-take discussion about registration. Several of the students had been leaders in the recent Birmingham demonstrations. The discussion got off to a very sharp give-and-take with my raising with them the question as to how they had been successful in involving tens of thousands of people in the recent demonstrations. I followed this question with the suggestion that while they had been successful in involving large numbers, they did not know themselves what motivations had been effective. The purpose for this line of argument was to suggest to the students that if they could discover what they had done in order to involve large numbers before, they could possibly use these same motivations to involve large numbers in registration. The group held on to the idea that they knew what their source of motivation had been. When asked whether or not they had involved people by discussing social issues, or by the use of the idea that this is [redacted] what people are doing (fashionable). There was considerable difference of opinion. I pursued the line of reason that if they discovered that the participation in the demonstrations had come as a result of dealing with people, on the basis that this is what people are doing in other communities, then they might more properly go to the people with this line of approach in registration; but if, on the other hand, they discovered that they had involved people by talking about social issues, then they should structure their approach and literature around social issues.

It was not intended that this kind of discussion would consume such a long period of time, but it did. The students seemed to have felt that they were on the road to discovering what decisions had to be made in order to conduct an effective drive in terms of numbers. In an indirect way, I was attempting to help them discover what had been the source of their success in the past, while making no attempt to suggest what the source of the success had been.

This discussion, I felt, could have gone on for an additional two hours, without anyone becoming exhausted, except that time would not allow. I have an invitation to visit with this group again whenever my schedule will permit. I feel the visit was as much help for me as I feel it could possibly have been for the students. I intend to visit again with them when their project is in operation.

I am pleased that some members of the group were willing to say that our session was the best that they had had in a list of nine. Frankly, I did not know what I was going to do with the time when I arrived.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Re: Field Trip to Miami, Florida November 6-7, 1963

The primary purpose of this field trip was to answer for VEP the questions, what were the factors that made for the success of the September 16-28, 1963, Dade County, Florida, voter registration drive, and to what extent was Weldon Rougeau influencial in that success.

Aside from inquiring specifically into these two areas, there was some attention given to such matters as political motivation, group cooperation, and political understanding. Findings relative to these latter matters are reported only in part here, in an effort to be brief. It is anticipated that at some more convenient time, it will be possible to include this data in some kind of summary.

This report is based on 24 interviews conducted in the Dade County area. All of the people interviewed were either involved in the subject drive, or would be expected to know about it because of their relation to the total life of the community.

Weldon Rougeau is a Negro man about 24 years old, a former student of Southern University, and a native of the state of Louisiana. Mr. Rougeau was active in the Southern University student demonstrations of 1961. He has, for more than a year, worked as a voter registration field secretary for the Congress of Racial Equality.

Prior to September 16, 1963, voter registration proceeded at a moderate rate though impeded, to some extent, by registration requirements, official indifference, exploitation of registration ~~of registration~~ by certain individuals for money or prestige, and by limited organizational experience by registration workers.

During the eleven months that proceeded September 16, 1963, 3764 people registered, largely as a result of Rougeau's efforts. This rate of progress he described as personally frustrating. He said, "More could and should have been accomplished, and yet I feel that I did all that I could do. But aside from this, the office [CORE national office7 was on me to do more." Rougeau related to me some of the criticism that he was getting from other CORE officials, and the kind of replies that he gave. Some of the criticism, he felt was unfair. Based on the facts as they were given to me, I agree that the criticisms were unfair, and yet, it did force Rougeau to stop and more seriously analize the work that he was trying to do. Rougeau says that as a result of the position that he was in, and the kind of thinking that he was forced to do, he came to the following conclusions as being necessary to an effective registration program:

1. None of the "Big Five" civil rights organizations were going to be of any real help - not even the CORE chapter in Miami.

2. Coordination of groups would consume much time and produce little.

3. The registration officials had to become more cooperative.

4. The ~~process of registration~~ opportunity to register had to be made more convenient.

These conclusions Rougeau drew as a result of a number of related observations. It was observed that:

1. The "Big Five" organizations seem to be more interested in their image and over-all program than in any single project. This was evident in their unwillingness to do anything other than make promises.

2. That all organizations were contacted by mail and personally, but could never be assembled for a single meeting.

3. That many people tried to register, but could not wait because the officials worked so slow.

4. That many citizens of the county lived more than twenty miles from the county courthouse.

The conclusions that Rougeau drew, the observations that guided him to these conclusions, and the decision that he made, explains, in the main, the success of the Dade County drive.

Rougeau says that when he looked at the total picture, he decided that he had to get the book out in the Negro community, and that he had to so conduct the drive as to not bring the county leadership together in order to avoid wasting time with personal and organizational bickering. The first job was to get the book.

The method to be used was decided upon. Rougeau decided that he would "...try to get friendly persons in the white community to work with the people in the courthouse, ~~H.~~ contact the group leaders in all of the communities as if conducting several separate drives."

In the early stages of the preparations for the drive, two persons were of great help to Rougeau. They were Mr. Seymour Samet of the American Jewish Committee, and Bishop Coleman F. Carrol, chairman of the Community Relations Board (Bi-racial Committee of Miami).

Bishop Carrol had just a few days before being approached about the registration drive, called the clergy together and gotten a statement from the group supporting the civil rights struggle.

When Rougeau approached the Bishop about registration, he asked Rougeau what he felt he (the Bishop) could do. Rougeau said to him that he wanted the Community Relations Board to take the lead in getting the book for the Negro community. Bishop Carrol promised to take the matter before the county officials.

By the time the Community Relations Board met with the county manager, several members of the Board had been reached by Rougeau. Each of these members were ready to urge upon the county manager the acceptance of the proposed registration plans as the most urgent of a number of issues.

Some of the persons that had been contacted were Dr. John Brown, Mr. Neal Russ, Bishop Coleman, Carrol, and Mr. Neal Adams.

In the meeting, Dr. John Brown was told by the county manager, Mr. McNair, that all that had to be done was to supply him with the list of places for stations and persons to be deputized. The implication being that he would instruct Mr. Claude Brown, the hired director of registration.

The influence necessary had been applied. The letter was supplied to the county manager. It contained the list of persons to be deputized as well as a request for the book at eleven stations for thirty days. It was decided by the county manager to set up the eleven stations, but to cut the period of time to two weeks. The period was cut because there was also a request from the white community for special registration, and the county wanted to reduce the expense.

While waiting for the decision of the county, contact was made with Mr. Seymour Samet of the American Jewish Congress, who in turn introduced Rougeau to Mr. Max Karl of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. Mr. Karl supplied a list of real estate, newspaper, TV, and public relations people that should be contacted. The following is a summary of the results of following up these contacts:

1. The Richmond Home, Inc., supplied one of the offices.

2. The Bonded Realty Agency supplied one of the offices.

3. TV people could not be involved because of possible reaction that might come as a result of being involved with CORE.

4. The public relations firm of Venn and Cole, Asso., was on the list supplied by Karl. Cole of the association introduced Rougeau to a Claude Pepper* representative. He (Rougeau) approached Cole about funds, but was unsuccessful because of CORE affiliation.

5. Cole introduced Rougeau to the Duport Plaza owner, Samuel Kipnis, who gave $200. (The only financial contribution).

There were other sources of aid that are not mentioned here. In almost every instance, the aid was a matter transacted between Rougeau and the aiding individual. Rougeau was likewise the link between the eleven communities. There was not even a campaign headquarters.

Below is a list of the various stations established, along with their locations. The numbers indicate just how many people were registered at each:

It cannot be contended that the success of the drive turned on some unique approaches, as there did not appear anywhere in this investigation anything that was not common to most registration programs. Such approaches and attitudes as are revelent will appear below in the notes on some of the interviews conducted.

Dr. John Brown:

Dr. Brown is a member of the Community Relations Board, and one of the persons that helped Rougeau with the drive. I met Dr. Brown at a CORE chapter meeting. He was being quizzed by the group as to what the Board was doing. Dr. Brown's answers seemed to me to be curt and almost insulting.

In a bar after the meeting, Dr. Brown gave freely of his ideas about the civil rights struggle. As the conversation unfolded, moving mainly on questions that I asked, it became apparent that Dr. Brown felt that the problem of unemployment among Negroes was, in the main, a lack of preparation on their part; that Miami did not need demonstrations in order to avail public accommodations to Negroes; that the Cubans were no economic threat to Negroes; that the success of registration drives comes as a result of a combination of Rougeau dedication and relenting apathy in the Negro community. Overshadowing all of these impressions was the one that suggested that Dr. Brown seemed to feel that he was among a small group of persons that had a right to think for the Negro people.

I asked Dr. Brown how much the Negro people of Miami understood about the political process and the value of the ballot. He was quick with his answer - "Nothing," he said. I followed with several other questions, such as how could he be sure that Negroes did not understand the value of the ballot. I asked if it was possible that the refusal of Negroes to register might mean that the process was too slow to effect the change desired, and can it be that Negroes feel that they have no one to vote for? And, finally, I asked him if it was not possible that the problems with which most Negroes are concerned are not ever being raised in politics today. These questions only served to confuse Dr. Brown. His answers were embarrassing to both of us.

Mr. Frank Reed:

I talked with Mr. Reed in his home (10338 S. W. 172nd Street, Perrine, Florida). Mr. Reed is president of the Perrine Improvement Assn., a disabled veteran, and the leader of the registration drive in his community.

Mr. Reed was warm in his reception, and free with his statements. He made us comfortable and offered drinks.

I asked Mr. Reed how he would explain the success of the drive. He answered by saying, "We had the book out here - thanks to your boy.... [referring to Rougeau]....We could have registered twice as many if it had not rained every day."

I asked Mr. Reed, "How old is your Improvement Association?"
Answer: "Ten years."

Question: "Are there other organizations that do the same kind of work?"
Answer: "No."

Then came my big question: "Why hasn't someone risen to challenge your leadership?" Mr. Reed explained, "We elect a man in the association with the understanding that as soon as he learns the job of his office, that we are going to take him out. We call ourselves training leadership. It's a kind of honor to be taken out of office."

Anticipating Mr. Reed's inability to deal with the next question, I asked hesitatingly, "How much do the people understand about the ballot?" He answered, "Not much." I did not push him. I just let him talk. In less than five minutes, he was telling me how they decided what they were going to demand of politicians, how they communicated to the community who they were going to vote for, based on who was making the greatest offer. He pointed out how they had gotten sewage, paved streets, and the like.

He told me of an instance in which a politician, to use his words, "....approached me with an envelope as big as me, stuffed with dollars; the old man said there was money enough to buy three new cars. We turned him down."

Mr. Reed suggested that we wait around, because he was waiting on a call from a man (Mr. Saslow), who was running for the town council. We waited. The call came. I heard him say on the phone, "I think the people are going to vote for you, but I think you had better build those two tennis courts before all the voting breaks out to make sure the people vote right."

When the conversation was over, Mr. Reed rejoined us and said, "That bastard said he would start to work on the tennis courts in the morning." Laughing, he added, "We get what we want - the people know what we are asking - and they are watching to see if it comes forth."

I asked Mr. Reed if anything was being done to bring about any kind of unity between Negroes, poor whites, and Cubans, on such issues as employment. Mr. Reed stopped laughing for the first time, and became very sober. He then said, "I don't try to meet any whites. The white man is dirty. I don't want to know any of them by name because I might have to kill one of them; if you kill a man, its better on you if you don't know him." What Mr. Reed had to say was disconcerting at points, and yet I had the feeling that I was talking with a man that had a real understanding of integrity and friendship. His respect and affection for Rougeau was so very obvious. He told me of how he helps people with their taxes and other semi-legal matters. Mr. Reed gave me his rules of effective leadership. They were: 1. Don't lie, and 2. Treat all people with respect.

I found it interesting to hear him spell out the association's elaborate system for checking on who in the group was informing to the white community.

They are very desirous of getting back into a drive.

Mr. Alvin Bryant:

I talked with Mr. Bryant in the teacher's lounge of the Mays Junior High School. He is a teacher of social studies, and boy scout master in the community. Mr. Bryant appeared to be about 22 years old, very serious in his demeanor, and very interested in the progress of Negro people.

I said to him that the VEP was very pleased with the part that he and his boy scouts had played in the recent drive. I asked whether the fact that he was a teacher had played a part in the willingness of the people to cooperate with him. He expressed the view that this was not a community in which the people had any trust or respect for teachers. He said, "Other than as teachers, the people think of us as only doing what the people downtown want." I asked him why did they support their drive, and he answered, "I think it is because we explained voting in terms of what the people want, but the big thing was the fact that the book was convenient. We could have registered twice as many if it had not rained."

Mr. Bryant talked about the fact that he had promised the people that he could get street lights for them if they would vote.

It was interesting to hear Mr. Bryant say, almost as if it had not occurred to him before, that "....they registered because the books were out in the community.....after a few people registered, they went back and told others, and it gained momentum like a snowball."

Rev. Luther C. Pierce:

I talked to Mr. Pierce in his office, 309 Huntington Building. Mr. Pierce is a white man, chairman of the Greater Miami Council of Churches, and a member of the Community Relations Board.

There was general conversation. I explained the research nature of VEP, and then raised the question as to what in his opinion had been persuasive in getting the county to make the book available in the Negro community.

Mr. Pierce explained that a white woman had demanded the book in her community under a law that the county seemed not to be aware of, and had proven her point. So, the county directors knew that there was legal authority for such. And secondly, the Community Relations Board had pushed the proposal.

He said he felt that Miami was favorable on race relations, because of its dependence on the tourist trade, and because of the numbers of Easterners in the state.

He pointed with pride to the fact that in the matter of race relations, the churches have willingly given leadership to the community.

I asked Mr. Pierce if the publicity about the big registration drive among Negroes had caused any great concern in the white community.

He said that he had not heard of anything that he thought could be considered undue concern. He said that someone had raised the question about the fact that there were eleven special stations in the Negro community, and only eight in the white. The explanation, he said, came quickly that whites had had the books before, but not so for the Negroes.

I asked Mr. Pierce if there was a possibility that Negroes and Cubans might get pitted against each other. He said that this was once a problem of great fear, but that it was being eased by the rapidly re-location of the Cuban people.

I asked about the emergence of the extreme right in the South, and whether it was going to mean a setback for race relations. Mr. Pierce dismissed the question with the statement, "We don't have an extreme right problem."

Mr. Neal Adams:

I talked to Mr. Neal Adams, owner of a very successful grocery store, and a member of the Community Relations Board.

I asked Mr. Adams what he thought had been the basis for the success of the drive. Mr. Adams expressed the view that the success had come because of three main facts:

1. The books were available.

2. The books were in the hands of Negro registrars.

3. There was a man not identified with any of the local factions that could work full time sparking the drive in every community.

I asked Mr. Adams what he said to people in order to get them interested in registering. He said that he told people that if they did not take a part, they were going to lose the things they had.

He said, "I don't talk about what they can expect if they do vote, because many things that people ought to expect are hard to perceive from where they presently stand. People don't believe me when I try to tell them that one day their children will work in the city hall and county courthouse as officials and clerks."

Dr. Simkins:

Dr. Simkins is a Negro physician in the Miami community, and a very loyal NAACP member. I knew that he was a part of the stand-back established leadership group. He had not participated in the drive. I felt that it would be desirable to talk to someone that had not been involved.

I asked Mr. Simkins what in his mind was the basis for the success of the drive. He listed the forces in this order:

1. Paid trained workers.

2. The offerings of candidates.

I discovered that Dr. Simkins was not talking about the drive, but was spelling out a philosophy for success. I was embarrassed to learn that he was not talking about the big drive just completed. I suspect he did not know very much about it.

I changed the conversation to the Cuban crisis. I asked if the Negro and Cuban communities could possibly get together. He said he did not think so.

I had been told that Negroes resented the treatment given the Cubans. Dr. Simkins said that there is just no basis for communication. Negroes don't feel that the Cubans are taking their jobs; they know the Cubans are better trained, he said. I asked how the Negroes felt about the Cubans receiving $100 per month. Dr. Simpkins said the $100 had stimulated the entire economy, and Negroes are benefitting.

There are several factors that were mentioned time and time again in the interviews relative to the success of the Dade County September drive. They are listed below in the order of their importance and occurance:

1. The availability of the books.
2. The leadership of Rougeau.
3. The absence of group conflict.
4. The use of Negro registrars.
5. The apparent endorsement of, or cooperation of, county officials.
6. Political education of the issues.
7. The absence of a climate of tension in the community.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Re: Field Trip to Columbus, Georgia, November 14-15, 1963

INTRODUCTION

Columbus, Georgia, perhaps more than any other city with which VEP is working, seems to be an ideal community for serious social research. There appears to be individuals and institutions that span entirely the political education spectrum. The forces that sustain the existing order, as well as those that make for change, lay very close to the surface of accepted common knowledge. These forces can be unearthed and examined with much less speculation than would be necessary in most communities.

The field trip that is the subject of this report was undertaken for the primary purpose of making an on-the-spot examination of the NAACP voter education project now being carried on in Columbus with VEP sponsorship.

For convenience, the report is divided into five sections, each of which describe what might be regarded as a different political camp; all of which influence the operation of voter education activity. A conclusion is attached.

Section I: The Non-Partisan Voters League

The Non-Partisan Voters League is an organization that came into existence during the middle 1940's, largely under the leadership of Dr. Thomas Brewer. In the early days of its history, the organization enjoyed the respect and support of most of the community. Militant was the word that was used to describe its activities in those days. Most citizens remember the organization as the backer of the Primus King case. Now it seems that most of what the organization stood for died with Dr. Brewer. And yet, the organization still lives. Several personalities are always mentioned when the organization is mentioned. Among them, Rev. Blue, Rev. Reynolds, and Mr. Marshall.

The League restricts its activities in the main to getting out the vote. One does not have to search very hard to find persons that will, in vile language, accuse the members of the League of selling the Negro vote to the highest bidder. Investigation and interrogation in this regard revealed that most of what is said is based on what people think or believe, rather than on what they know. We were able, however, to get a lead on a tape recording between a county commissioner candidate and a member of the League. This tape, though made secretly, reflects the leadership in action. We are told that all of the terms of the bargain are clear and understandable.

It is interesting to talk with members of the League. They represent themselves to be militant leaders of the community. One member explained that they are the ones that get the candidates out into the Negro community for examination.

A non-member of the League explained that he once went to one of the League's examination meetings. He said that none of the candidates that were to make appearances came; that as the evening grew old, the presiding officers of the League apologized for their absence, and then proceeded to read a suggested slate of candidates. Another member moved the adoption; the motion was put to a vote. There were crys of "not ready," but the vote was taken, and the motion carried. My informer said the action almost precipitated a physical fight.

The next order of business in the meeting was a consideration of how the decision was to be reported to the community. When this matter had been disposed of, one member suggested that since there was more than one organization represented, the expense money that had been received ought to be divided. I am told that it was obvious that this person had not understood how these matters were handled. This matter was not to be discussed. My informer commented, "....He should have known...." The officers of the League were found without words. Then, it was quickly stated that this was just the thing to do, and that the two groups would meet the next week to take care of this matter. The next day, members of the League were out on the street explaining the advantage of block voting, naming the men to vote for, and citing some of the concessions that had been gotten by the wise use of the vote.

Most of the members of the League are over 50 years of age with very limited education.

Once, in one of the League meetings, the suggestion was made that an effort should be made to get all of the community organizations together to conduct a registration drive. Mr. Marshall, who was presiding, interrupted the meeting to explain in all seriousness that the Non-Partisan Voters League was chartered to do registration work, and that no other organization could work in that area of community activity. Such confusion was caused that agreement was impossible.

The above describes the meetings and practices that seem to be standard procedure with the League. It would be a mistake if the assumption is made that the League and its members are without influence on opposition in the community. One person in another political group said he could not afford to be associated with the League.

Section II: The Liason Committee

The Liason Committee came into existence as an adult organization to support the student demonstrations. This camp is made up of the middle-age group of the community. This organization enjoys the support of most of the professionally trained people in the community.

Outstanding in this group are such men as Mr. McClury, secretary of the YMCA; Dr. Scott, physician, Mr. Thompson, attorney; Mr. Kitchen, secretary, USO. This groups seems to feel that it has a right to lead the community. Its attitude is strengthened by the fact that some of the members have been chosen to sit on a bi-racial committee.

This group feels perfectly free to sit in judgment on all segments of the community. It knows exactly what all other parts of the community should be doing. It is committed to the idea that no additional demonstrations are needed. Negotiation is the proper way, by their success, they say. The Liason does not participate in any of the registration activities because the motive of the persons are questionable, or either because there is too much confusion involved.

The work and influence of this group will be reflected in the description of the other groups. Rev. Blue of the Liason leaders, was quoted by the local daily press as having referred to the leaders of the NAACP and SCLC as "outside agitators." It was explained to me by another Liason member that it is strategy to tell the white people about the coming of the "outside agitators" as a way of getting concessions. Rev. Blue is under attack by one of the registration leaders who is also an owner of a Negro weekly. (See the attached cartoon).

Section III: The Muscogee County All Citizens Registration Committee

The Muscogee County All Citizens Registration Committee is an affiliate of the Georgia State Registration Committee, which is affiliated with SCLC. This organization has, for the past three years, carried on registration activity in Columbus. The Committee has a membership of young and old citizens. Some of the persons that are members of the Non-Partisan Voters League are also members of the Committee.

Vernon Mitchell is perhaps the most active person on the committee. Previous trip reports will reflect the nature of the program that he directs.

A visit to the office of the Committee on Friday, November 15, proves that he is finding it possible to carry on registration activity. There were seven women and one man in the office - all appearing to be in their early twenties. The group was holding what appeared to be a brief session. There was a discussion of what section of the city that was to be worked that day.

Mitchell read to the group a letter from Rev. Andrew Young (SCLC) which contained a check for $59. The letter and its contents was not well received. It appeared that the group had expected a larger sum. Mitchell expressed regrets that there were not funds to pay the expenses that the group had incurred, such as baby sitters and transportation. Some discussion followed as to whether they could afford to continue to work. The group agreed that it would work on. There was also some discussion of whether the group would continue to have its Sunday evening canvassing dinners. They decided that they would meet on Sunday evenings, but cut back on food.

I asked the group to tell me some of the problems that they are encountering in their work. They listed the following:

"....NAACP taking credit for what we are doing....

....NAACP telling people not to go with us to register....

....NAACP promising people that they will pick them up and then failing to do so....

....We got a list of high school students that said they would go down and register. The list comes from the principal. A few hours after we had the list, a man came an got it back and took it over to the NAACP office....

....The county has promised that it will bring the book out into the Negro community - the Liason Committee says we should wait....

....Somebody has spread the rumor that we are being paid....

....Mrs. Wooten tried to discourage us by saying that she is being paid, and that we are fools if we are not. We lost one of our workers as a result of this statement...."

I asked Mitchell in a private conversation why he had denied to Wiley that I had visited him. Mitchell stated that he did not associate me with the name Blackwell. He said that when he came to the VEP office, and was received by a white secretary, he assumed that Wiley was white also, and that he was off-guard, and did not connect me with the project. He said that he had planned to tell how Calhoun had exploited him, and had just about destroyed his program. Mitchell insisted that he had to decide what he was going to say and not say. Quoting Mitchell, he said, "Man, I don't tell white people but so much, and I was trying to decide what I was going to say and not say, and in the process, I denied knowing you or VEP. My impression of Wiley messed up the whole interview." Mitchell suggested, feeling that I doubted his story, "You ask Andy Young if I did not ask him why he did not tell me that the director of VEP was a white man."

As we talked to people around the city of Columbus, we found more conflicting views about Vernon Mitchell than any other person. The youth have a great deal of respect for him. Mrs. Wooten, director of NAACP voter education, described him as the biggest liar in the county. McClung has mixed feelings about him, suggesting at one point that the man is overcome with bitterness. A group of military wives seemed ready to follow his leadership. I did not find anyone that would play down Mitchell's efforts in voter registration.

I examined the records in the Committee office. There were canvass sheets that reflected that there is registration activity taking place. There were records that indicated that the group had registered about 80 people during the week, and 103 the week before.

Section IV: National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

The NAACP camp in Columbus, Georgia, consists of a very active youth council and an adult branch that is rather conservative and inactive. At the present time, the youth council is carrying on a voter registration drive under VEP sponsorship. The drive enjoys support of the NAACP adults. However, this support is very much limited. The adult branch rarely draws more than twelve or fifteen members to a meet. This low ebb, I was told, is due in part to the prestige that the branch lost this summer when it tried to check the demonstrations of the youth. This issue, I am sure, does effect the success of all activities in this camp.

There are many conflicting ideas as to what the facts are of this conflict. Mrs. Jean Benton, advisor to the youth council, described the situation in this language: "....they treated the youth dirty....they closed the churches to them....the national youth secretary couldn't even get a room at the YMCA...." McClung says the youth secretaries that came in from Savannah and New York were impossible. "When they arrived," he said, "they started by saying, 'We have come to start some demonstrations.' The adults objected to some outsiders deciding what Columbus needed. We couldn't reason with them."

In one meeting, after negotiation had been held downtown, one of the youth secretaries, a Mr. Brown, told the membership, "You should have seen your president in that meeting, you would have been ashamed of him. He really played the part of an 'Uncle Tom!'" McClung said, "The group didn't even listen to what the young man was saying. He was planning to go on from there, but I interferred and told him that Mr. Ford /the president/ is a man that we have a great deal of respect for - if I was Ford, I would not have been quite as composed."

McClung said that another youth secretary, Mr. Hill, in the same meeting, told the group that if they did not support the youth, they would lose their charter. At that point, the threat was made that they would deliver the charter. The conflict continued until contact was made with the national office. The youth secretaries were withdrawn.

The conflict left the community divided among those who agree with the adults, those who agree with the youth, and those who try to say that there was no real conflict.

One person made much of the fact that the NAACP president did not attend the trial of Colfus Tyson, the very active youth leader. Another talked about how limited Tyson was in ability. (I did not find him so). And still another insisted that the youth are more loyal to Mitchell than to their NAACP advisor.

This side-choosing, I would believe, would have its effect on a NAACP drive, no matter how well planned.

I visited the office of the NAACP voter registration drive, and talked with a Miss Annette Brown. She had been with the project only two weeks, and though appearing to be efficient, she did not seem to know very much about voter registration in general, or the project in particular.

I asked how they went about getting people to register. It was explained that the students canvassed after school, and they called the office and reported the number that had agreed to go register; that she and Mr. Wooten went out the next day and carried the people down. This approach, I was told, involves more than 50 youths, and had resulted in about 231 people being registered since the project started.

There appeared to be the need for better organizing in the project and the office - only four canvass sheets could be found, even though some 18 youths are called by the director as "regular" in their participation.

I talked with Mr. Wooten, the director of the project. She was very cordial. She expressed the feeling that the drive was picking up, that Mitchell was creating confusion by telling lies, and that she felt that there would be better results if there was no group conflict. Mrs. Wooten said that she felt that the conflict could be worked out, that she had no objection to working with Mitchell.

I went with Mrs. Wooten out to Carver High School to meet with Tyson, the youth council president. Tyson and I talked about what he is saying to people when they went canvassing. The essence of which was that they simply ask people to register to vote.

I asked Tyson if he ever saw any of Mitchell's people in the field. He said that he never had. I asked how he felt about Mitchell's project. He interpreted this as a kind of check on Mitchell, and hastened to explain that Mitchell had worked with them in the demonstrations, and that the only reason he was not working with him was because he had been told that voter registration was a NAACP project.

My interview with Mrs. Jean Benton concluded my study of the NAACP camp. Mrs. Benton is advisor of the youth council. She operates a very successful real estate business. She moves in the NAACP camp, the Liason camp, and has an open mind on the Mitchell camp. As a matter of fact, she said that she had thought that they were going to work together. This would have been the case if Mr. Patton had not said that if there was coordination, the NAACP would pull out entirely. This point, Mrs. Benton said, was made clear in the first meeting at which Mitchell was present.

Mrs. Benton said that she would try to arrange a reconcilation meeting now that Mr. Patton doesn't object, because, as she puts it, "....I don't have time to play - I got off the bi-racial committee because all the Negroes on it seem to have turned white."

Section V: The Camp of the Unidentified

In Columbus, aside from the identifiable organizations expressing an interest in civic matters, there are some that are not so easy to identify.

There is a group of ladies that are married to soldiers stationed at Fort Benning that are interested in doing something to change the community. A Mrs. Brown seemed to be the prime mover. I talked with her about the efforts that she has made to get a citizenship school started. Mrs. Brown said that she has found it very discouraging to work with the people in Columbus; she said that in her efforts to get a place for the classes to meet, she had gone to the USO now under the direction of Mr. Gordon Kitchen. After the first meeting, she informs me that she was told that she probably would not be able to use the USO in the future, and that she really ought not concern herself because the people of Columbus did not need to be encouraged to register. These ladies are planning to stop a number of visits to segregated public accommodations.

Another member of the Liason Committee told me that he agreed with Mr. Kitchen's attitude in regard to the use of the USO, because he had been told that in the very first meeting, they were in the building singing freedom songs.

There are other unorganized unidentified groups in the community that might possible get civic social action in the near future.

Mrs. McClung suggested that the possible solution to Columbus' leadership problem would be for some group, that has not before expressed an interest in civic affairs, to come forward. Going further, she suggests that a group like the Pan Hellenic Council could take leadership without having to labor under the various burdens that the other groups labor under. She said that this kind of suggestion is being seriously examined in some quarters.

CONCLUSION

At the outset of this field trip, we were concerned primarily with checking the effectiveness of the NAACP project under VEP sponsorship. And yet, in back of our mind was the standing commitment of the VEP to study selected projects in some detail.

Not in a single instance has time allowed for the kind of investigation that our research design would require, yet it is hoped that this report will provide a kind of door-opener to some of the areas that must be entered if the requirement is to be met. There is no pretense that this report meets that requirement.

The statement of the research problem in our February, 1963, "A Statement of the Research Aims and Methods of the Voter Education Project" provides as to the problem:

> "A study of the effectiveness of organized effort and political activity in the broadest sense - in attacking the cause of low registration in various sections of the South."

With this as the state problem - it would seem that there is information here from which some meaningful insight can be drawn. More specifically, there is information about organizational attitudes, structure, and practices. This information will be helpful in the final study of theeffectiveness of organized effort.

The information herein does allow conclusions as to the effectiveness of the NAACP project and sources from which the frustration comes.

Re: Field Trip to Winter Haven, Florida and Marianna, Florida

On Friday, November 8, 1963, I arrived in Winter Haven, Florida, to attend the 23rd annual meeting of the Florida State Conference of NAACP branches. It was a pleasure to attend a conference in which the planners seemed to have put some serious effort into constructing the meeting. This I had not experienced in other conferences.

I attended seven sessions and found each of them worthwhile. These sessions will not be discussed here, but will be included in a much more inclusive statement of findings and observations relative to the NAACP's effectiveness as a voter registration agency later.

It is important here to note several aspects of the conference that relate directly to voter registration:

I attended a workshop under the direction of Mr. W. C. Patton, NAACP voter registration Regional Director. Mr. Patton began by reviewing the work of the various branches in voter registration. In some instances, he congratulated branches, and in some, he critized them. It was interesting to see this done, because there seems to be a tendency on the part of NAACP officials to scold conferences as if this is the only way of motivating them. I have, from time to time, inquired into this practice. The answer has most often comes back, "You have to put it on the line."

After Mr. Patton had finished his remarks, he went into an explanation of some canvass sheets that he had passed out, and then informed the delegates that the conference was going to recess for two hours, and that every one was going and canvass the Winter Haven community. This came as a real surprise, but was taken in good spirit.

When the group returned from canvassing, I moved about in the crowd, listening to what was being said. The group was enthusiastic. It was easy to see that many of the people had not done canvassing before, but had found the experience interesting.

Mr. Patton's workshop raised several questions worthy of research. Among them:

1. How effective are registration workers that have not been through some kind of instructive program on how to canvass?

   a. If relatively effective, can it be assumed that there is a community of understanding already existing for which no instruction is needed?

   b. What then is the contribution being made by the traditional workshops that teach how to canvass?

   c. Might this workshop time in conferences be better used for other things?

2. Which is more motivating - the scolding ("Put it on the line" speech), or the speech that is devoted to a clear, frank appraisal of work done?

We see some of all kinds of speeches as we move around. This last question is one that studies in persuasion have not dealt with, so far as Negro people are concerned. (If this is an area that we would be interested in exploring, I can recommend a friend that has just completed the doctoral requirements in public address and persuasion).

The sessions, speeches, and discussions in the conference were traditional, but by and large, effective. In this conference, I had a chance to observe the famous Father ~~Goodson~~ GIBSON. He is one of the most prominent NAACP members in the state of Florida. I had tried several times to interview Father G~~oodson~~ IBSON when I was in Miami, but found it impossible. I spoke to him after one of the sessions, and explained to him how imperative I felt it was to have his appraisal of the Dade County registration drive. He assured me that he would talk with me. The effect was that he spent the entire conference time avoiding me.

Father ~~Goodson~~ GIBSON is extremely impressive, handsome, and articulate. I watched him deliberately precipitate three or four floor fights, just to place himself at the center of the stage. He lost the vote in each of these fights. All of his assets were not enough to sustain him. I concluded as I observed Father ~~Goodson~~ GIBSON, that I was seeing the passing of the day when a leader can make it on what he says. The question of the hour for leaders seemed to be, "What are you prepared to do?" The conference unseated Rev. A. Leon Lowry, and elected Mr. Rutledge Pearson, a much younger man.

The vitality of the youth delegates was almost frightening. We could not help but ponder all of the many things that they could be used to accomplish. Their present direction seemed to me to leave much to be desired.

On November 10, 1963, I arrived in Marianna, Florida, to address the NAACP branch upon the completion of a successful registration drive. The invitation had been arranged by Mr. W. C. Patton. My host was Rev. Walter Pope, president of the local branch.

Marianna is the community in which several years ago, a mob lynched a Negro man and drug his body through the streets until it was greatly mutilated. I talked with two people that observed part of this affair. I went in with some reservation, expecting to find the community living in an atmosphere of oppression. This was not the case.

The meeting was truly a reward for me. Some 600 people came out for the program and interrupted the speech several times with applause.

The people of Marianna are on their feet. The motivation stems from within the community, and will continue with or without the NAACP or VEP.

Accuse Officers

OXFORD, Miss. AP)—Three Negro civil rights workers told a federal court jury Tuesday they were beaten while prisoners at the Winona, Miss., jail.

Five white men are on trial in federal court on a [redacted] forcement officers, or former officers, at Winona. The Justice Department filed the charge.

In other testimony, a Negro man said police gave him a blackjack and he struck one of the civil rights workers with it.

Willie Kidd, who said he lives at the jail and acts as a sort of janitor, added that he didn't hit the prisoner very har.

Those who testified as to the beaings were Fannie Hamer James West and Lawrence Guyot, a worker for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

The commitee said it sent workers to Winona to test whether the bus depot was desegregated, as ordered by law. They were arrested.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO DECATUR, GEORGIA

Sunday, November 24, I went to Decatur, Georgia, and spoke for the Dekalb County Citizens Committee, on the occasion of their Voter Registration Appreciation Program and Reception.

This affair was well attended with what appeared to be a good cross-section of community leadership on the platform. It was interesting to note that one of the officials of the county Information Department was present to urge the citizens present not to consider their job finished as there are still many other citizens that are still unregistered. He expressed the fact that the county intends to register every person of age, and passed out literature indicating that night registration is now being conducted in the county.

I was greatly impressed by Miss Rosetta Williams, the project director, and will favor another drive under her sponsorship should she apply.

A copy of the night registration announcement and the Appreciation program is attached.

Registration Information

From the DEKALB COUNTY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS and the DEKALB COUNTY BOARD OF REGISTRARS

Neighborhood voter registration has been started in DeKalb County in order to make it easier for qualified citizens to register to vote. This new program carries the Registrar's Office throughout DeKalb County for nighttime voter registration.

We believe the neighborhood voter registration program will result in a large increase in the number of DeKalb County voters. This program brings voter registration officials to you, and we encourage our citizens to utilize this means of registration.

Before being eligible to register, a person must be 18 before the next general election (November 3, 1964) and he must have lived in DeKalb County for six months and in the State of Georgia for one year.

Sixteen militia districts in the county each will be visited once a month by the Registrar's Office. Hours for the neighborhood voter registration are from 6 p. m. to 9 p. m. The schedule for each month is:

MILITIA DISTRICT	DATE	LOCATION
REDAN	FIRST MONDAY	REDAN SUPPLY COMPANY, REDAN ROAD
STONE MOUNTAIN	FIRST TUESDAY	FIRE STATION, 6715 MEMORIAL DRIVE
LITHONIA	FIRST WEDNESDAY	SCOUT HUT, LITHONIA
PHILLIPS	FIRST FRIDAY	MURPHEY CANDLER SCHOOL, KLONDIKE ROAD
SHALLOWFORD	SECOND MONDAY	DUNWOODY SCHOOL, 5339 CHAMBLEE-DUNWOODY ROAD
DORAVILLE	SECOND TUESDAY	COMMUNITY CENTER, PARK AVENUE, DORAVILLE
DIAMONDS	SECOND WEDNESDAY	ROCK CHAPEL SCHOOL, STEPHENSON ROAD
EAST ATLANTA	SECOND FRIDAY	LESLIE J. STEELE SCHOOL, 2162 SECOND AVENUE
BROWNINGS	THIRD MONDAY	FIRE STATION, 4013 LAWRENCEVILLE HIGHWAY, TUCKER
PANTHERSVILLE	THIRD TUESDAY	FIRE STATION, 2522 MCAFEE ROAD
KIRKWOOD	THIRD WEDNESDAY	PARKVIEW CIVIC CLUB, 353 WILKINSON DRIVE, S. E.
CLARKSTON	THIRD FRIDAY	FIRE STATION, 2559 LAWRENCEVILLE HIGHWAY
EDGEWOOD	FOURTH MONDAY	CANDLER PARK CIVIC CLUB, CANDLER PARK DRIVE, N. E.
EVANS	FOURTH TUESDAY	MOUNTAIN VIEW CIVIC CLUB, REDAN ROAD
MILLS	FOURTH WEDNESDAY	FIRE STATION, 1686 CONSTITUTION ROAD
CROSS KEYS	FOURTH FRIDAY	FIRE STATION, 5472 PEACHTREE ROAD, CHAMBLEE

The Decatur Militia District, which is the largest in the county, will use the regular Registrar's Office in the DeKalb Building in Decatur. This office will be open until 8 p. m. every Thursday night, and it is open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Friday.

Mrs. Irene B. Scott, Chief Registrar, says no site was located for neighborhood voter registration in the McWilliams Militia District in southeast DeKalb. But citizens in this district can register at one of the adjacent militia districts, because a person does not have to register in his own militia district. He can register at either the regular office in the DeKalb Building in Decatur or any of the 16 neighborhood sites.

We urge all qualified DeKalb County citizens who are not yet registered to utilize the neighborhood voter registration program. Register. . .then vote.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO NORTH CAROLINA - SPECIAL NAACP VOTER REGISTRATION WORKSHOP
NOVEMBER 22-23, 1963

Every man is entitled to at least one defeat. I have had mine.

Thursday, November 21, 1963, I left Atlanta enroute to Rocky Mount, North Carolina, to attend a special statewide voter registration workshop being conducted by the youth councils and college chapters of NAACP.

The idea of a special workshop came about as a result of many having concluded that the adult NAACP branches in North Carolina could not be expected to be effective in voter registration in the near future. The attitudes expressed by officials at the October state conference had given me just cause, I felt, for this conclusion. Before I left the state conference, I sold John Edwards, a regional voter registration officer, and Quinton Baker, state youth president, on the idea of taking up the task of holding a registration workshop.

Even before I left Atlanta, I felt that I was having more difficulty than was necessary in learning the details of the meeting. But, even so, I moved out for Rocky Mount, not only with optimism, but with communications from the national offices of the Delta Sigma ~~Chapter~~ THETA, and the YMCA, both indicating that they wanted to help. We also carried with us a list of all the Negro school principals, many of whom could have been called on to do special jobs in a registration drive.

The special registration workshop and all of the side-line planning was undertaken with a view to taking advantage of a special thirteen day registration period in December, 1963, in which the books will be open in all of the counties. In North Carolina, the registration books are only open before election (usually once or twice per year), in 91 of the 100 counties.

I arrived in Rocky Mount Thursday evening, twenty-six hours before the first session of the workshop was to begin. I was intent upon helping Edwards and Baker pull the loose ends of the meeting together, as well as helping them to structure the meeting in such a way as to come out of it with individuals with the kind of training and information that would possibly lead to activity in some seventy or eighty of the 100 counties.

I was in the company of Mr. Edwards six hours Thursday evening, and all day Friday. I tried numerous times to discuss plans for the workshop, but found him totally imperious in this regard. When I would suggest that we make plans, Edwards would answer that he could not do anything until Mr. John Brooks arrived from Richmond.

On Friday evening, about 8 p. m., delegates began to arrive. I had the feeling that my asking questions was beginning to make Edwards uncomfortable. I did observe some getting together between Edwards and Baker, but they were not ready to take me in.

The next day, and before John Brooks arrived, I went to the church and found that printed programs had been prepared. (A copy is attached). This suggested to me that planning had been going on for some time. The most regrettable thing about the planned program, and the thing that I had hoped would be avoided, was the holding of a workship that was set in the traditional fashion. This I was not successful in preventing. And so, the workshop went off to no avail. The content of the various sessions is hardly worth reviewing.

There must have been about 170 people present representing some 40 counties. I tried in every conceivable way, to get the director of the workshop to talk about a statewide program for the month of December, and what the attending individuals would be expected to do in their counties. I had prepared for the workshop, a table showing a distribution of 25,000 voters over the 100 counties. In this table, we used 10% of the Negro potential. Most of the quotas were realizable, we feel. In several counties, the quotas were under 20%. The tables were never used.

By mid-day Saturday, I had given up all hope of getting a full-blown statewide drive out of this group. I asked Edwards if he would try to establish some special congressional district committees that would spend the next two weeks building around themselves some kind of registration committee. Edwards said that he did not have any authority to do any such thing. There was, in what he said, a ring of intimidation coming from higher-ups.

I did not want my trip to North Carolina to be completly fruitless, so I decided to explore the thinking of Earl Davis of COPE, and John Brooks of NAACP, relative to the whole area of voter registration.

This, I felt needed to be done in John Brooks' case mainly, because he has chosen to almost completely ignore VEP. His attitude has always been interesting, in that he is one of the two NAACP officials working directly in voter registration. In previous field trip reports, I have suggested that while Brooks has been personally friendly, he has never failed to be very critical of VEP.

The opportunity came for me to raise some questions when the three of us went out for lunch. Brooks was up to his old game of talking about how VEP was wasting money that could be used wisely. This time, he had the full support of Earl Davis. I suggested several times that VEP is a research organization in the area of voter registration, and that our operation would naturally be a bit different from an organization that had registration as its sole objective. This gave cause for great laughter, with one of them saying, "We don't need any more research, surely not at the rate of spending that is presently going on." Davis commented, "What is it about Negro registration that you can't find out in a library in a few hours?" Following this idea, he said, "Anything you want to know, I can tell you." Brooks laughed agreeably. I was appalled by their ignorance, and lack of appreciation for serious social research.

Taking up the challenge, I said, "You know as I move around, I find many different approaches to motivating people. Sometimes, a speaker talks about pressing issues, employment, and the like; sometimes the approach is, 'This is what Negro people are doing all over the South'; and then sometimes, its a matter of saying, 'Register because it is right - its good citizenship', or the like." I named individuals that follow each of the lines, and suggested that we would be better equipped if we knew which of these lines is the most motivating. I did not feel at the time that I could simplify the matter any more than I had, but they did not see any value in knowing things like this. Brooks' reaction was, "Well, Patton does it one way, I do it another. That's just the way it is."

I tried to get them to explore the question of why it seemed impossible to get tens of thousands of Negroes to register when at the same time, they seemed quite willing to participate in demonstrations around public accommodations issues. Several other questions were raised, but to no avail.

We ended with Brooks saying as he has many times before, that VEP is possibly doing a lot of harm to the civil rights movement by making grants because this would cause people to become dependent, and not willing to raise their own funds. I tried to point out that our big agencies are administers of the funds, and that they decide what money is needed and how it is to be used. Brooks closed the conversation with, "Well, this is a good conversation, but I suppose we had better get back to the meeting." I realized then that I had not gotten to first base with my efforts to get them to thinking about some of the obvious questions that we don't know the answer to. So far as Brooks was concerned, we had just been talking - nothing worthy of thinking about had been said.

Now, of course, it would seem to me that in the process of exploring the thinking and attitudes of these two men, both important in the area of voter registration, we have, in part, learned something of the problems of increasing political participation among the people that they work with.

Record Order

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A Mississippi voter registrar was under orders of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals today to open his records to federal inspection.

The appeals court decision Friday was the latest in the long series of court battles which started in 1960 when the Bolivar County registrar of voters refused to show his books to federal inspectors.

Earlier a U.S. District Court had ordered that the books must be opened for inspection, but only for the "listed voters" for the 1960 elections.

The Department of Justice contended that the district judge had erred in limiting the inspectors to only the listed voters. They contended that "the limitation completely denied the attorney general an opportunity to inspect the records as to those who may have been denied illegally the right to qualify."

Officers Acquited

OXFORD, Miss. (AP)—Five white men were acquitted Friday for allegedly beating six Negro prisoners in the Montgomery County jail in Winona.

The 12-man all white federal court jury deliberated one hour and 15 minutes.

The defendants were charged with conspiracy to deprive six Negro prisoners of their civil rights by inflicting summary punishment.

Winona Police Chief Thomas Herod, Sheriff Earl Patridge, Winona Policeman William Surrell, state highway patrolman John Basinger and former highway patrolman Charles Perkins were the defendants.

The six Negroes were among a group arrested June 9 for disturbing the peace in a Winona bus depot.

Mass Drive Seen

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An Alabama Negro who has figured in civil rights demonstrations in the South says a vote registration drive in Mississippi next summer may create such a crisis "the federal government will have to take over the state."

John Lewis, national chairman of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, said Friday the group would send a host of volunteer voter-registration workers into Mississippi from the nation's college campuses.

He said the result will be to have hundreds of thousands of Negroes "standing in the voter registration places all over the state at one time" and mass arrests probably would result.

Lewis, in San Francisco to address a church "freedom rally," told a news conference the goal of his organization in such a plan was to assure "that Negroes should be allowed to vote in the 1964 election."

Lincoln Star Com. 12-76

COFO Launches Vote Campaign

Mississippi Free Press 12-21-63

"Our goal is that 20,000 Negroes attempt to register between now and March first."

With this announcement the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO) chartered its main course for the coming weeks at its convention Sunday in Jackson. For the success of this renewed voter registration drive COFO needs the active support of all those who want Freedom.

"We can't just talk about Freedom," Dave Dennis told the convention. "We've all got to do something about it. We've heard from too many people who are behind us and not enough who are up in front working with us."

The convention also announced a poll tax drive to go hand in hand with voter registration. With the deadline for paying the $2 tax less than two months away, Dennis declared, "We must pay our poll tax now to be able to vote in next year's elections." Members of the House of Representatives and the seat now held by Senator John Stennis will be decided in 1964.

Although an amendment to abolish the poll tax is on the verge of ratification, it would apply only to federal elections. Poll tax receipts for two years are still required for voting in state and local races.

In order to ease the burden of the tax, COFO will attempt to raise money to pay the tax for citizens who can not afford it.

In further action, Aaron Henry, President of COFO, suggested that an attempt be made to open channels of communication with Governor-elect Paul Johnson.

"We are going to have to live with Johnson for four years," he said. "It is up to the Negro leaders in the state to take the first step in seeking some understanding with him on the problems facing Mississippi."

In keeping with the goal of creating a state-wide political organization which is representative of Negroes, the convention set up executive committees in each of the five Congressional Districts.

The committees will be responsible for carrying out COFO programs in their areas, beginning with the current voter registration drive. Their success will depend on the willingness of every Negro to do his part for change and progress in the state.

For additional information about COFO, write to 1017 Lynch St., Jackson, Miss.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Randolph T. Blackwell

Re: Field Trips to Manning, Orangeburg, and Columbia, South Carolina

Friday, December 6, 1963, I attended the meeting of the First Congressional District Voter Education Project which met in Manning, South Carolina, at the home of Mr. Billie Flemming, chairman of the group.

This was one of the semi-monthly meetings that the group has held since their organizational meeting September 21, 1963. There were two principal matters on the agenda for consideration.

1. Discussion of the VEP grant.

2. Progress reports from each of the county groups.

After the meeting was called to order, and the preliminaries disposed of, Mr. Flemming read two letters. One of the letters was from Mr. Branton to the group, and the other, a copy of a letter from Mrs. Bernice Robinson addressed to Mr. Branton. (Copies of both letters are in our files.) With the reading of these two letters, the principal issue was clearly drawn, which was: Would the First Congressional District organization want to pay Mrs. Robinson the money that it had promised in view of the fact that the grant was much smaller than expected. The organization had conceived of a six-month program with a budget of $20,000. Of this sum, it had allocated the sum of $2,000 to pay Mrs. Robinson's salary as Field Secretary, and $2,000 for field expenses. The total grant from VEP was $6,000 for a four months project.

The issue having been made clear, Mr. Flemming asked me to have something to say. I responded with a statement that included the following ideas:

....That VEP was pleased with the consistancy of the meetings and the work being done....

....That the demand for VEP funds across the eleven Southern states had compelled us to limit the grant to the stated sum....

....That experience dictates that an organization such as theirs should think seriously about the real contribution a field person could make in holding the organization together....

....That I was sure that they would find it possible to supplement the grant with funds in the local communities.

After I finished my remarks, several persons from the floor were recognized. Each of them made passionate appeals to the group to keep Mrs. Robinson on as the Field Secretary. Perhaps the most influencial statement came from Mr. Boyd. Mr. Boyd is the much respected past president of the NAACP, rememberd mainly for the Clarendon County school desegregation case. He told the group that the First Congressional Voter Education Project was the best thing that he had seen in the area in his 89 years, and that it must not be allowed to die. The tone of the statements was adapted by the group as a matter of common consent. Mrs. Robinson was retained at the promised salary.

It was agreed that Mrs. Robinson, the chairman, and the treasurer would meet and try to work out a system for reducing the field expenses. Progress reports for each county will be submitted by the group secretary in detail at a later time.

Delicious refreshments were served by the host.

On December 7, I talked with Dr. Thomas in Orangeburg about his project and organization in the Second Congressional District. He spelled out to me a very elaborate plan that the Statewide Centennial group has for conducting a statewide registration program. I did not make an effort to discuss this matter in detail with him because he said that he plans to submit the entire plan to us after a meeting that they will be holding early in 1964.

I also talked with Ben Mack in Columbia, South Carolina. In the course of the conversation, it was reflected that SCLC is now conducting 38 citizenship classes in the state of South Carolina.

Voter Education Project

Orangeburg Office
Orangeburg, South Carolina
January 25, 1964

In November 1961, we asked the Chairman of Board of Registrars to allow us to get names of registered Negroes from books. He referred us to the State Senator.

He inturn referred us to the Chairman of the Board who again sent us to the Senator.

The Senator than said he would take it up with the Attorney General on his next trip to Columbia.

The Senator again sent us to the Chairman of the Board.

We then wrote the Secretary of State, who referred us to the Registration Board.

We wrote the Attorney General and he sent us to the Board or the Clerk of Court.

At last, on August 4, 1962 we received a phone call that the office would be open on the 6, 7 & 8th of August at which time we could get the names.

Results: We checked the books on the dates named and through August 8, 1962 there were 3,223 Negroes registered in Orangeburg County.

We may not have all persons from Bamberg and Barnwell Counties who registered during this drive because we can obtain the names easier in Orangeburg County than in the others counties.

See Organization of Orangeburg County attached.

With the very, very small amount of cash that we had for expense and with the loyalty of volunteer workers, the above has been accomplished to date.

RE: FIELD TRIP TO SOUTH CAROLINA JANUARY 21-26, 1964

I have today, Tuesday, January 21, spent 3½ hours conferencing with Dr. Charles H. Thomas and Mr. James McPherson in the city of Orangeburg, South Carolina. Dr. Thomas is chairman of the Centennial Voter Registration Committee for the state of South Carolina.

This organization, when it was first conceived, was to have been a statewide voter registration association. It was planned at the time of organization that the CVRC would have subdivisions organized along the congressional district lines.

Mr. I. S. Leevy of Columbia, South Carolina, was chosen in the initial meeting to be chairman of the Second Congressional District. Early in the year of 1963, the CVRC, after several visits made by the Field Director of the Voter Education Project of Atlanta, decided to concentrate its activities, partly at the encouragement of the Voter Education Project, in the Second Congressional District. So it is that the CVRC came to be more a Second Congressional District organization rather than a statewide project.

The CVRC organization, proceding under the name of the Second Congressional District organization, so far as the Voter Education Project is concerned, is organized around two offices. One in Orangeburg, South Carolina, and one in Columbia, South Carolina.

The Columbia office is responsible for registration in Aiken, Calhoun, Lexington, and Richland counties. The field work for these four counties is conducted by Mr. Jessie Walker, under the general supervision of Mr. I. S. Leevy. The Orangeburg office is responsible for registration activity in Orangeburg, Bamberg, and Barnwell counties. This activity, field-wise, is under the direction of Mr. James McPherson, under the general supervision of Dr. Charles H. Thomas. Progress reports in the Voter Education Project office in Atlanta will reveal that the Orangeburg office is by far the most effective of the two offices in the Second Congressional District project.

The field trip that is the subject of this report, was occasioned by the desire to accomplish four things:

1. We wanted to check on the progress being made by the Second Congressional District organization under the now existing Voter Education Project grant.

2. We wanted to collect such information as would be necessary to make a determination as to what grants should be made in the future.

3. We hopedto make such investigation as will enable the Voter Education Project to determine whether or not it would want to participate in the sponsorship of a statewide voter registration program now being proposed by several South Carolina leaders.

4. To collect such information as would be of value to the Voter Education Project from a research standpoint.

I had a long conversation with Dr. Thomas relative to the work of the Second Congressional District in which Dr. Thomas very readily conceded that Second Congressional District is far from being a complete and effective organization. We noted in this regard that there are several counties where there does not appear to be any kind of registration activity worth considering. Dr. Thomas explained the lack of organization by indicating that the Second Congressional District leaders had received numerous promises from individuals in the non-active counties, but that most of these promises had not been fulfilled.

I took this occasion to remind Dr. Thomas of something I had suggested several months ago relative to the distinction between the leading citizens and leaders, suggesting that I thought perhaps he was still contactin g leading citizens rather than leaders in the community. I suggested, in this regard, that if he looked for the little, insignificant non-pretentious person in the community, quite likely he would find that person is carrying on some kind of activity. This conclusion was supported by the experiences that we had in the First Congressional District of South Carolina. As best as I am able to determine, Dr. Thomas did not react to this line of discussion one way or the other. However, this line of discussion did serve to move us into a consideration of the proposed statewide organization in which Dr. Thomas will undoubtedly be one of the principal figures along with Mr. I. DeQuincy Newman, Field Secretary for the NAACP, Rev. Matthew McCollum, and Mr. I. S. Leevy.

I suggested to Dr. Thomas, relative to the statewide organization, that it might just be that at this stage in the political development of South Carolina, there are not enough dedicated persons to project a program on a statewide basis, and that it might be more desirable to think in terms of rigid congressional district and county organizations, rather than the statewide organization. In making this suggestion, I had hoped to alert Mr. Thomas to the possibility that the Voter Education Project would not be interested in financing a statewide program.

After my conference with Dr. Thomas, I held an extended conference with Mr. James McPherson, the Field Director for the Orangeburg office of the Second Congressional District organization. I listened at great length to Mr. McPherson's discussion of the difficulties he was encountering in finding persons that would assume responsibility in Bamberg and Barnwell counties. It is interesting that throughout this entire discussion, Mr. McPherson continually used the expression, "Finding a person that has the courage to do the job." In this expression, there is the suggestion of some kind of intimidation not yet fully defined.

Mr. McPherson is a gentleman in his late 70's, a retired postmaster of some 45 years service. It would be fair, I think, to say that Mr. McPherson is effective in what he is doing. A good way to measure the effectiveness of Mr. McPherson is to consider the fact that for the year August 9, 1962 through September 1, 1963, only 232 people were registered in the county of Orangeburg. Now, this figure should be compared with the four-month period September 3, 1963 through January 1, 1964, during which time 625 persons were registered. This comparison reflects almost three times the accomplishment under the leadership of Mr. McPherson.

I inquired of Mr. McPherson what plans he had for the Orangeburg office for the year 1964. In this regard, he replied that he is still making trips leading to Bamberg and Barnwell counties, and that there are some hopeful signs now showing up in Bamberg county. It is his intention, he indicated, to continue registration programs as well as organizational activity down to the precinct level.

For research reasons, I asked Mr. McPherson what was the source of his personal motivation in voter registration. This is a question I think we should raise more often as we near the end of this project. Mr. McPherson gave the answer that might reasonably have been anticipated. Going off into an explanation of the importance of voter registration and political participation to the success of the Negro people in the acquisition of their rights, I stopped him somewhere in the middle of this discourse and pointed out to him that almost everybody was engaged in trying to do something about it, and that there must be something more personal than general importance and significance of voter registration. Then it was that Mr. McPherson got around to explaining his own personal motivation.

He indicated that he felt that he had many reasons to have confidence in the future of the Negro people. He said that through the years, people had gone out of their way to befriend him during a period of illness and several other instances that he cited, suggesting that this kind of befriending came as a result of a kind of leadership that he had tried to supply through the years. And then he went on to say that he felt that he wanted to have a personal investment in this historical period. An investment that went unrewarded. He wanted to give of himself. I was particularly pleased to have Mr. McPherson say to me that he rather suspected there were numerous people around the South that would like to make personal investments in this struggle, and that the biggest problem was the business of finding them. The conference with Mr. McPherson was rewarding in several ways.

As we approach the end of the Voter Education Project, I suspect that one of the questions that we are going to have to deal with is the distinction between the first voter education project started under the general leadership of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, and the second one under the leadership of the Second Congressional District organization. It is noted at this point that the first project was a total failure, and the second one is reasonably successful. As I talked with Mr. McPherson, I got the feeling that I had obtained a new understanding as to why the first project failed.

It will be recalled that Mr. Reginald Robinson, who was directing SNCC's project, lost confidence in it and the capacity to work with established leadership in Orangeburg county because of the refusal of the leadership to make available certain existing records to him. From this point, the relationship between Mr. Robinson and the leadership of the community degenerated down to nothing. Almost by coincident, I discovered that Mr. McPherson, the man that held the records from Robinson, appears to be a stickler for record-keeping. A kind of personality thing. As he took me through his files, he was meticulously placing everything back in the place where he moved it from. When he finished, he said to me, "I keep these files under lock and key because if I say anything to anybody about this program, I want to be able to back it up in black and white. If any question is raised about numbers registered, or money spent, I want to have the record clear." Looking back over our first project with this experience in mind, I think it is entirely possible that Mr. Robinson might have interpreted this attitude as being devious on the part of the established leadership, rather than just a personality trait.

Mr. McPherson and Dr. Thomas are strongly committed to the idea that the demonstrations of the summer, that are still in progress on a limited basis, contributed meanfully to the success of their registration program.

On Wednesday, January 22, 1964, I conferenced with Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman and Mr. I. S. Leevy, both of the city of ~~Charleston.~~ Columbia.

Mr. Leevy is the director of the office of the Second Congressional District Voter Registration Committee at Columbia. This was my fourth time to have the opportunity of talking with him. It must be remembered that Mr. Leevy requires that one be prepared to sit and have him review the history of South Carolina for the past eighty years, most of which centers around his business successes and his efforts over the years to establish a two-party system. Mr. Leevy is known throughout the state of South Carolina and a sizable portion of the southern region as a long and distinguished member of the Republican party. To have Mr. Leevy go through these historical experiences is always time consuming and a burden on his leadership ability, and yet he always manages to include something that is quite interesting. In this connection, it was interesting having him relate to me his experience in addressing the South Carolina legislature in joint session some twenty years ago. These historical gems, I often feel, could be used as sources of motivation if they were delivered to the right kinds of audiences.

My main purpose for visiting with Mr. Leevy on this occasion was to inquire into the degree of success that he was having in the counties that are served by the Columbia office of the Second Congressional District. Mr. Leevy, being blind, was unable to supply me with accurate records of the success of his office, but was able to talk in general terms about various aspects of the program that could be regarded as successful.

In this connection, he pointed out that the four counties covered by the Second Congressional District office at Columbia are now presently organized. County chairmen have been chosen and in some instances, precinct organizations have been established. An examination of the VEP files will indicate something of the success of the registration work done thus far.

Mr. Leevy said to me that he had found it necessary to change his field representative. This job was formerly under the general supervision of Rev. Heagens. Mr. Leevy explained that he found it necessary to acquire the services of Rev. Jessie Walker of the Benedict College faculty.

When talking about problems, Mr. Leevy suggested that he was having some considerable difficulty finding men that were willing to work and not pad their travel expense accounts. It appears that some serious problems now exist between Mr. Leevy and Dr. Thomas at Orangeburg, South Carolina, resolving principally around Dr. Thomas' refusal to honor the expense accounts as they are reported to him by Mr. Leevy. Both gentlemen have spoken to me freely about the problem and each of them see it from an entirely different point of view. Dr. Thomas feels that the expenses are excessive; Mr. Leevy feels that they are realistic.

Mr. Leevy said to me that Dr. Thomas implied that he had attempted to cheat or obtain fund that he was not justifiably entitled to. Mr. Leevy said that he responded to Dr. Thomas' suggestion by saying to him that the last two men that had accused him of being dishonest had not come out too lightly. In one instance, he had given a gentleman the content of his pistol, and the other, he had sued and recovered $2,000. It was pleasing to have Mr. Leevy say that this program is much too important for this kind of child play, and that he had made a trip to Columbia since the dispute and had a very cordial conference with Dr. Thomas.

Mr. Leevy and I agreed that it is important to systematically organize every precinct in the state. Efforts are being made to obtain from the Secretary of State, precinct maps for each of the counties in the state. It appears that these maps do not exist for more than 50% of the counties. I am informed that due to a general laxness in voter registration offices across the state, registrars proceed to place people in precincts without the map to refer to, and that in many instances, husband and wife are registered in different precincts.

I examined while in the Columbia office, copies of letters that had been sent out to people across the Second Congressional District inviting them to the Columbia meeting. I am given to believe that a sizable number of people will be present for this statewide meeting planned for Sunday, January 26.

Conferences have been arranged for me to meet with Mrs. Simpkins, Mrs. Stillman, and Mr. Solomon, of the state teachers association. These conferences are to be held between now and Sunday with the hope of soliciting their support for the statewide meeting.

Mr. Leevy and I discussed in great detail the difficulties of placing too much emphasis on top leadership and too little emphasis on grass-root contacts. We likewise agreed that efforts in the future must be placed on grass-root participation. At present, we are thinking in terms of establishing some kind of machinery for enlisting 1,704 precinct workers which would give us one precinct worker for every precinct in the state. I am using Larry Goodwyn's 12,000 block worker record as a source of inspiration in selling the idea of 1,700 precinct workers. Of course, this does not mean that we must actually have 1,700 block workers, for the reason that there are some precincts where there are no Negroes. It would thus appear that with some cooperation between the five major civil rights agencies, the 1,700 can be realized in a few days.

In my conference with Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman, who is the Field Secretary for the South Carolina Conference of NAACP Branches, I had hoped to have the opportunity of discussing some general registration in detail. However, I discovered during the conference that very little had been done in the way of planning for the proposed statewide meeting that was to be held on Sunday, January 26. So it was then that instead of talking about registration theory, we went into a very deliberate effort to plan this meeting. For some very good reason, I am sure, Rev. Newman had not planned any organized programs for the meeting, despite the fact that he had assumed considerable responsibility for this meeting.

I hesitate at this point to say that Rev. Newman is not a good organizer, and yet it did disturb me somewhat to have him say that he had just thought that we would allow the meeting to unfold. I think perhaps I would not have had as much reservation about the idea of allowing the meeting to unfold had it not been for the fact that I saw one of Rev. Newman's meetings unfold. (The NAACP/state convention for 1963). A description of that convention is contained in a prior field report. The meeting was set as shown on the attached agenda.

When the program had been worked out, Rev. Newman and I continued our discussion in a general fashion, with Rev. Newman doing most of the talking. Rev. Newman was particularly interested in having me understand that he did not see much in Mr. Leevy's organizational ability. As a matter of fact, he said that the Second Congressional District was handicapped by Mr. Leevy's participation rather than aided by it. He further suggested that work in Columbia would never succeed as long as Mr. Leevy occupied a leadership role. A matter to be investigated further, is the suggestion of Rev. Newman's that Mr. Leevy seized the leadership of the Second Congressional District organization from Rev. R. S. Crumlin after he had been duly elected.

I feel that the conferences with Mr. Leevy and Rev. Newman were beneficial both in terms of smoothing out some of the difficulties in the operations, and also, in terms of supplying me with some understanding of several ticklish problems.

The rest of the day was spent in contacting people by telephone and arranging for conferences that will be held on Thursday and Friday. I was in contact with a student at Benedict College by the name of John Gaines. It is hoped that at some future time, it will be possible to assemble the student council presidents of the six colleges in the Second Congressional District, with a view to bringing greater student participation in voter registration activity.

A conference has also been arranged by phone with the director of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Company for this region, along with the head of the state teachers association. The outcome of these conferences will be reported in other portions of this field report.

Wednesday evening, January 22, at 8:30 p. m., I held a conference with Mr. Ben Mack, state supervisor of the SCLC citizenship school program in the state of South Carolina. The primary purpose for this particular conference was to urge upon Mr. Mack the importance of putting some special effort into making certain that the people that have worked with him in the citizenship program would attend the Columbia Centennial Committee voter registration meeting Sunday, January 26.

I learned from Mr. Mack that he had not received an invitation from Rev. Newman to this meeting. I took it upon myself to extend this invitation and to urge him to come prepared to explain the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's citizenship program and the extent of same. Mr. Mack explained to me that because of a prior commitment, he would not be able to attend this meeting, but that he would certainly see to it that some person from the SCLC was there prepared to represent the Conference.

I took this opportunity to inquire of Mr. Mack what his opinions were relative to the problems that Mr. Leevy seems to encounter in working with other individuals in the Second Congressional District organization relative to voter registration. Mr. Mack's opinions might be summarized by saying that he holds the idea that one of the main reasons why Mr. Leevy is not as effective as he might possibly be is because he tends to involve individuals in his registration program because of their personal relationship with him, rather than because of the ability and willingness of individuals to participate in the program. To quote Mr. Mack, "Some people get the pay and recognition while others do the work," and that "The persons doing the work are now finding it convenient to not participate."

Mr. Mack pointed specifically to the former field representative for Mr. Leevy, a Rev. E. W. Hagans. Mack said that Rev. Hagans was quite a competent and a person willing to do the job, but that Mr. Leevy has consistently refused to compensate Rev. Hagans with the funds that had been made available to the program by the VEP.

I was very pleased that we had gotten into this particular question because I recognized at the outset that Mr. Leevy was being accused of something that was not entirely valid. Rather than Mr. Leevy refusing to pay Rev. Hagans for the services that he was rendering to the program it appears that Dr. Thomas at Columbia has repeatedly refused to honor the vouchers that have been received from Mr. Leevy's office. It appears on the surface that Dr. Thomas is largely influenced by Rev. I. DeQuincey Newman, who is the Field Secretary for the NAACP, and that he has not moved with any haste to honor the expenses of persons who have not stood in great favor with Rev. Newman.

Of course, it is easy to understand that Rev. Newman would not hold Rev. Hagans in great favor because he has, through the years, been associated with SCLC. These kind of conflicts lead to an explanation of the ineffectiveness of various programs, and yet they do not appear on the surface at the outset of such an investigation.

Mr. Mack informed me that he had just come from the closing of one of the citizenship classes, and that there had been an audience of some 100 individuals to attend the close of the Ridgeway, South Carolina, class.

I went with Mr. Mack to the airport to pick up Mrs. Dorothy Cotton of the SCLC staff at 11 p. m. Wednesday evening. Mrs. Cotton was coming into Columbia to attend on Thursday a citizenship class closing that was to take place ~~that~~ Thursday evening in the Winnsboro community.

After we picked Mrs. Cotten up, the three of us talked generally about voter registration in the state of South Carolina, covering such subjects as precinct maps and materials for the citizenship school that might more closely tie the citizenship training program to voter registration. The thing that consumed most of the conversation was the idea that a major contribution could be made to registration and citizenship by trying to point up those aspects of Negro history, so far as South Carolina is concerned, that would afford the students in the public schools cause for pride and confidence.

Mrs. Cotton and I agreed that we would assume as a personal project, the responsibility for writing a history of the Negro's participation in South Carolina during the Reconstruction period. We felt that it is very necessary to undo many of the false impressions of this period. This history, of course, would be written for persons of sixth grade level and less, and would perhaps be printed in pamphlet fashion. It is our desire and intent to have this pamphlet prepared by the middle of the month of February.

We also talked in general terms about the need for and the absence of precinct maps as a basic tool in voter registration.

The hour of 12:30 a. m. having arrived, we retired for the evening.

Thursday morning, January 23, 7:30 a. m., Rev. Higgins came by my room on his way to work, and we held a brief conference about the work that he has been doing in the Fifth Congressional District of South Carolina.

I had suggested to Rev. Higgins during the COPE conference in Atlanta the week before, that since he did not seem to be able to work effectively with Rev. Newman, he might consider the possibility of trying to draw all of those persons in the Fifth Congressional District of South Carolina together into a congressional district organization.

In line with this suggestion, Rev. Higgins reported that he had visited several of the counties in the Fifth Congressional District, and that he had succeeded in ascertaining the names of the individuals that are engaged in voter registration activity.

I asked Rev. Higgins if he had given up on the possibility of working in the Second Congressional District. This had been implied by Mr. Mack. He said he did not feel that he could continue to work with the Second Congressional District because the program, particularly the travel, was proving expensive to him, and that there is no indication that there was going to be any reimbursement for the expenses that he was encountering. Rev. Higgins seemed to have felt that Mr. Leevy had, to some extent, participated in withholding funds from him, but he also admitted that he knew, of his own knowledge, that Mr. Leevy had paid to him $117 during the course of the period before the VEP grant came through, and that he had also spent substantial sums of money for envelopes and postage to get the Centennial Registration Committee organized in the first instance.

I agreed to meet Rev. Higgins in Great Falls for a meeting Thursday evening for a meetingof three county leaders in the Fifth Congressional District. This ended my conference with Rev. Higgins.

Thursday, January 23 at 11 a. m., I met in Sumter, S. C., with Mr. Frank Robinson and Mr. Edward Brown, field representatives for CORE. The purpose of this meeting was to re-emphasize to these two gentlemen the desirability of making certain that persons from the Sixth Congressional District of South Carolina would attend the meeting in Columbia the following Sunday.

I had also hoped to use this meeting to obtain from these gentlemen a more recent list of interested persons in the Fifth Congressional District. Mr. Robinson explained to me that he had just taken out of the mail a letter indicating the place and date for the Columbia meeting, and that he had delayed his contacting individuals in the Fifth Congressional District until this letter with the details had been received.

We checked together hurriedly the principal communities in the Sixth and Fifth Congressional District, and tried to determine what persons ought to be contacted and invited to the Columbia meeting.'

As we ran over the various communities, I was particularly impressed by the fact that Mr. Robinson and Mr. Brown seemed to over emphasize the difficulty of getting individuals from various communities. The more these two individuals talked, the more impressed I was of the fact that they, to a great extent, deal in the negative side of voter registration rather than in the positive side. I cannot help but wonder whether their effectiveness is not substantially hampered by their attitude. I am satisfied with the sincerity and devotion that Mr. Robinson and Mr. Brown bring to the program, and yet it does become a bit disgusting at times to have them always emphasize what can't be done.

The two gentlemen agreed, however, that they would start immediately to run through the various communities of the Sixth Congressional District and spread the word of the Columbia meeting. I was able to obtain from them names of some individuals that they had worked with in the Fifth Congressional District. It was explained to them that I intended to contact these individuals personally, and invite them to the Columbia meeting as a way of strengthening any request they or Rev. Hagans might have made in that particular area.

While talking with these individuals, I outlined on a map the tour in the Fifth Congressional District that I intended to cover. The cities to be covered were: Camden, Winnsboro, Chester, Rock Hill, and Gaffney.

Thereafter, I visited each one of these communities and explained the nature of the Columbia meeting and extended invitations to individuals to attend. The names of the persons attending are shown on an attachment to this report. The essence of what was said to the individuals visited was very much the same, and will not be included at this point.

One interesting thing about this particular tour across the Fifth Congressional District is the visit made into the city of Ridgeway. Ridgeway was not one of the communities that we had planned to visit as outlined in Sumter. However, on the highway from Camden into Waynesboro, we noticed markers indicating Ridgeway and remembered that we had received correspondence from an individual in Ridgeway. I decided to take the detouring highway into Ridgeway and see if I might talk with Rev. Sapp, the individual in question. An examination of the correspondence received from Rev. Sapp will reveal that there existed in his mind some confusion relative to his connection with VEP.

In a letter received during the month of January, Rev. Sapp had indicated that a promise had been made to him to take care of his travel, and that several letters had been addressed to us with no response, and no compensation. I was successful in explaining to Rev. Sapp that what he had interpreted as a promise from VEP was in fact a promise from a representative of SCLC, and that VEP would certainly like to have him continue his voter registration activity, and that at some future time, it might be possible for us to enter into some kind of agreement. Rev. Sapp accepted this explanation. I invited him to attend the Columbia meeting, and he promised that he would be present.

Saturday, January 25 at 1 p. m., I held a conference with John Gaines, a student at Benedict College. Mr. Gaines' name had been supplied to me by Frank Robinson of CORE.

It had been suggested that Gaines had expressed some interest in voter registration, and that he would quite likely have a number of contacts along with the ability to organize these contacts into a real student movement.

By way of background, Gaines has for two years been active in sit-in demonstrations across the state of South Carolina, and is perhaps best known as the leader of the group that went to jail in Rock Hill, South Carolina.

As I talked with Gaines on Saturday afternoon, he explained that he had come to the conclusion that the thing most important in the civil rights struggle is voter registration, and that he had made some effort to get some students at Benedict College together to talk about this. He indicated that when this effort was made before, the meeting had not been successful because of some mix-up on the time.

I listened with great interest to Gaines' explanation of what he thought the whole civil rights struggle was all about, as well as his explanation as to his own personal motivation in this regard. I have concluded as a result of this conference, that Gaines is a very sound student and that he can make a major contribution to voter registration activities. We talked late into the evening about the voter registration program, and I was convinced that Gaines understood the importance of this program to the total history of the Negro people in South Carolina.

At 6 o'clock in the evening, Gaines and I went to visit Dr. Jackson of the Benedict College faculty. I had been given to understand that Dr. Jackson, some three or four years ago, had obtained a special grant from one of the leading foundations to do a voter registration survey, and that this study had been completed and was in his possession, and would possibly be of some help to voter registration workers if it could be had. We were unable to contact Dr. Jackson on Saturday evening. Gaines will continue efforts to meet with Dr. Jackson and possibly obtain the study for their use.

I extended an invitation to Gaines to come to the meeting at Allen University the following day.

Sunday, January 26 came as any other Sunday to me except for the overhanging anticipation of what would be the result of the efforts made during the proceeding week to put together this statewide voter registration meeting.

I was out of bed by 8 o'clock. 9 o'clock, I went to the airport to pick up Mrs. Dorothy Cotton. Her flight out of Virginia had been delayed and did not arrive until about 10:30. I took Mrs. Cotton to her motel where we talked briefly about the role that she was to play in the afternoon meeting.

At 12 o'clock, I received a call from Rev. Newman requesting a conference with me and Dr. Thomas at 1:30. At 1:30, the three of us met at Faith Hall to review the program. We agreed that we had done all that we felt could or needed to be done to make for a successful meeting, and that from there on in, we might just wait to see how the program "unfolded."

One problem did remain to be resolved. That was the question of whether or not in this meeting we should undertake to elect statewide officers, or whether or not we should proceed with the statewide officers that had been elected the year before. The problem grows out of the fact that the people that were about to assemble had not participated in the election of the statewide officers, and yet, it was our general feeling that we did not want to place emphasis on some statewide administrative super-structure, and that what we really wanted to do was play down statewide officers. For that reason, we thought it might be more desirable to proceed with the existing statewide leadership until the various congressional or district organizations had taken form and strength. We decided in this regard that if the question of statewide officers was not raised, we would proceed as if there was general agreement, anticipating that the congressional district meetings would be of sufficient interest as to not raise the question of statewide leadership.

The meeting got underway at 3 o'clock sharp. The attendance at the time of the opening was far in excess of what we had anticipated. The room that we had decided upon was much too small for the number of persons that had received news of the meeting and had come of their own initiative. Everybody that had any part in putting together this meeting was greatly encouraged by the attendance. I think I detected in the attitude of most of the people present that this was a meeting of real significance. Every participant in the program seemed to have been involved in the business of doing the very best that they could, that part of the program that had been assigned to them.

After the preliminaries of the meeting were over, statements were heard from Mr. Arthur Brown of the NAACP, Mr. Frank Robinson of CORE, Mrs. Dorothy Cotton of SCLC, and a summary by RTB of VEP. In each of these statements, there were general expressions of what each of the organizations had to offer, and what the organizations had been doing over the previous year. Each organization, in very clear and frank terms, told what they felt they had done. It was a kind of bragging about their programs and for me, the first demonstration of wholesome rapport between the organizations.

In summarizing the remarks of the three preceding speakers, it was my pleasure to call attention to the fact that 1) we had an audience overflowing, and 2) that all three of the organizations were present and presenting their programs without any conflict. I based most of my summary remarks on the fact that statewide meetings of this sort rarely register people, and that the major task remains still before us. That task being the business of organizing county, precinct, and block organizations.

Reports were heard from the three best organized congressional districts in the state of South Carolina - the First, the Second, and the Sixth Congressional Districts. It was reported that in Georgetown county, there is reason to believe that there are more Negroes registered than white.

After the reports, greetings were to have been had from the national committees of the Democratic and Republican parties. The Republican National Committee did not have a representative. Mrs. Ethel Paynes represented the National Democratic party, and gave most of her emphasis to the report of the committee on voter registration that was established by President Kennedy.

The remaining part of the meeting was given to strengthening the congressional distric organizations in the Third, Fourth, and Fifth Congressional Districts, as well as strengthening the precinct organizations in the First, Second, and Sixth Congressional Districts. Announcements were made that had to do with the importance of attending precinct meetings and the poll tax amendment.

The meeting was adjourned by the Rev. Mr. Sapp. There was a lot of lingering after the meeting had adjourned, and a lot of individual and personal comparing of notes and programs. These observations we use as evidence of the fact that persons attending the meeting had gotten something out of the meeting and were prepared to have put some additional time into it. Those of us that had participated in putting the meeting together were thoroughly satisfied with the results as we talked, some four or five of us, in the Town Tourist Motel dining room after the meeting was over.

South Carolina is now the best organized state in the eleven, excepting possibly Texas.

Friday, January 24 at 8 a. m., I took Mrs. Dorothy Cotton to the Columbia airport to make a trip into Virginia. While en route to the airport, Mrs. Cotton reported to me that at the meeting the previous evening in Winnsboro, some thirteen persons had been graduated and that an audience of about 125 had braved an extremely rainy night to observe the program. We both were particularly pleased with the turnout because, of course, Winnsboro is a rural community.

After seeing Mrs. Cotton on her plane, I got some breakfast and then started on my tour of the remaining communities to be contacted in the Fifth Congressional District which were Lancaster and Chesterfield. I returned to Columbia about 2 o'clock in the afternoon and held a conference with Rev. Jesse Walker, the new field representative for Mr. I. S. Leevy.

In a conference with Rev. Jesse Walker, I asked him what he felt was necessary in order to put on a massive registration drive in the city of Columbia, South Carolina. Rev. Walker responded to this question by indicating that he was not certain that a massive registration drive could be conducted in Columbia at this time because of the fact that there are so many different factions in the community. He proceeded to spell out these various factions for me which sounded very much like the kind of description that had been given me of the internal problems of Columbus, Georgia. He named some four or five factions.

One faction he called the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company faction led by Mr. Higgins and his friends. Another faction he called the NAACP faction led by Dr. I. DeQuincey Newman. The third faction was referred to as the Community Civics group faction - one of the oldest factions in the community, presently led by Mrs. Simpkins. A fourth faction he referred to as the Mungin faction, led by Rev. Mungin. This faction has, in recent months, done some work in public accommodations and sit-ins. And then, of course, there was the faction which I supposed he is associated. Rev. Walker to me that he had found this factionalism such a burden to effective community activity, that he had elected in recent weeks to ignore all the factions and seek to work primarily with students. Being a member of the faculties of Benedict and Allen Universities, he feels that he can sustain his work through their help. I asked him in this connection what he felt would be necessary in order to put on a massive registration drive using students, and Rev. Walker said that he did not feel that compensation for block work or canvassing would be necessary, but that he had often wished he had some funds that he could use for the buying of refreshments at the end of a work day, as well as founds that he could spend on transportation to the registration polls. Rev. Walker also indicated that it was his opinion that students could really be motivated to work if specific jobs were given to them, rather than asking them to come out and canvass and do registration work in general. He requested specifically that the VEP or the Second Congressional District organization supply him with badges, buttons, pins, or something of the sort that the students might wear as a source of identification. A badge that might say, "I Have Registered," or "I Am An Official Voter Registration Worker." I suggested to him in this regard that most of the civil rights organizations had prepared buttons of this nature. I promised Rev. Walker that I would put some effort into obtaining some of these button for him.

From this point, I began to move the conversation around to Rev. Walker's performance as field representative for Mr. Leevy , and asked him to explain to me the extent of the organizational work that he had been able to accomplish. Rev. Walker said that of the four counties, he had been successful in organizing the Richland, Lexington, and Aiken counties, and that these counties are now working at the precinct level. The only county not organized is the Calhoun county. Rev. Walker suggested that it is extremely difficult to find persons in Calhoun that are willing to assume responsibility as leaders of the program. He suggested that Calhoun county is one of those counties in which the white community is sure to commit at least one serious atrocity a year so as to keep Negroes "in their place". We know of other areas in the country where this kind of thing is done. I was impressed that Rev. Walker recognized the effect this kind of thing can have on a community.

At 4:30, Rev. Walker and I went to the office of the Secretary of State to try to get some precinct maps.

RE: FIELD TRIP TO WILSON, NORTH CAROLINA

Today, February 13, I visited with Rev. Watkins and Dr. Butterfield in the city of Wilson, North Carolina, to talk about the Wilson project. There was one basic problem which compelled our immediate attention.

The facts of the problem are that VEP made a tentative grant of $1500 to the Citizens Committee of Wilson and Wilson County for a two-week voter registration drive, and that the first week of the drive yeilded less than 200 persons registered. As I talked with the two persons named above, I became aware of the fact that they knew they were not living up to expectations. The project seems to have gotten out of hand because the people of Wilson that are directing the project over-estimated what canvassers could do to enlist new voters without considering community preparation.

The project directors hired 20 canvassers at the rate of $1 per hour for an 8 hour day. It was expected that with such a force in the field, it would be possible to register about 2,000 citizens. This expectation was based on the number of homes that could be visited in a given hour. As viewed, this was not an unreasonable expectation. However, the expectation did not take into account anything other than the number of homes that could be visited. The pecularities of the Wilson community were not considered at all. But what is equally important is the fact that these pecularities have not as yet been identified. One thing that is now clear is the fact that the people of the Wilson community will not move as individuals. We are in agreement that it was a mistake not to have tried to move sizable numbers at about the same time through mass meetings or club action. This, of course, means planning in such a way as to excite the entire community about the matter of voter registration at or about the same time.

As I examined the financial records of the project, it appeared that the project had spent $834.38. The project had received $500 from VEP, $50 from NAACP, $50 from the Citizens Committee, $25 from a local garden club, $10 from the Masonic Lodge. The total amount of money received was $645. Of the $834.38 spent, $78.80 was used to pay for the list of registered voters and about $100 was spent on secretarial services. These expenditures can probably be considered as expenses of a lasting value, and should be subtracted from the total before VEP arrives at an average cost for each new voter.

RTB Field Trip

I suggested to the project leaders that they should suspend their operations until the project is reorganized, excepting, of course, such expenses as will be necessary to keep the office open and operating.

As we observed the project and talked with some of the hired workers, we question in our minds whether the persons working were, in fact, putting in an 8 hour day as they were hired. There did not appear to be any method of checkin on this fact. This, I think, is an interesting research data.

The drive, as it is presently operating, is considered successful in this community as is indicated by the amount of concern it is causing downtown. A county Board of Registrars is quoted in the local paper as having said, "This surge in registration has never occurred since I have been here." The attached news article taken from one of the local dailies will reflect this fact.

There are a number of shortcomings in the present operation - the most serious of which seems to be the absence of real community involvement. I made a promise to the leadershp to come back to Wilson February 20, at which time I will try to tie up some of the loose ends of the drive and possibly get some better results. It is expected that we will have at our disposal the remaining $500 of the $1500 when the project is better organized.

One of the things we will concentrate on will be the recruiting of an army of volunteers to undergird the 20 hired workers. Within the group of hired workers, there are several that hold the office of ward leader in the Democratic party, and yet, as I talked with one of them, it was obvious that they did not fully understand the responsibility or power of a ward leader. We shall talk about this to some extent when we meet on the 20th.

In working with the people of Wilson, I felt free with my suggestions and criticisms, and think they were taken in very good spirit. I have every reasons to believe that this group has applied their very best judgment to the situation and that they have worked hard at getting the job done.

I asked Rev. Watkins what help the group was getting from the outside, and was surprised when I was told that the group was not being aided by any group from the outside, and that he had not seen any expression of interest in Wilson by any of the national civil rights organizations in the past 13 years. Rev. Watkins said that he had been president of the local NAACP branch for 7 years, and that none of the leaders of the organizations had expressed any interest in registration in Wilson County. He said that occasionally, Mr. McClean, the field secretary for the NAACP had passed through Wilson on his way to other communities in eastern North Carolina. These statements take on real significance when we realize that there are only 3 cities of any size in the whole of eastern North Carolina. I am hoping that the problem in Wilson, North Carolina, is just a matter of organizing the community for effective results. All other matters seem to be in their favor.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO GADSDEN AND BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

December 18, 1963, I visited Gadsden, Alabama, to talk with Mr. Q. D. Adams about the projects commissioned by VEP for work in that city. Mr. Adams had been on our list for consideration since early summer. I had talked with him first in Birmingham at a meeting of the Alabama Coordinating Council for Voter Registration in the spring and twice on subsequent trips to Gadsden.

VEP delayed making a grant for a project in Gadsden because of the street demonstrations that had so completely involved the attention of the community leadership during the summer.

As I talked with Mr. Adams, it developed early in the conversation that the check that had been posted to his group had not been received and for that reason they had found it necessary to cut back on the operation of the program.

Records in the office of the project reflected the fact that registration had been going on for the past four months. The organization of the drive, so far as I could determine, did not justify the existence of the project office or the secretary. I suggested this to Mr. Adams and tried to indicate some of the ways that the office and the secretary could be used effectively. These suggestions seemed to have been well received. I called the VEP office about the check but was not able to work the problem out because Mrs. Levine was not in.

On December 19, I visited Birmingham, Alabama, to check on the Jefferson County projects. There I talked with Mrs. Davis Nelson, Mrs. Bernice Johnson, and Attorney Orzell Billingsley.

Mrs. Nelson showed me a report that was being typed for the VEP office that supplied most of the progress data and for that reason, we did not dwell on these matters. I was, however, very interested in Mrs. Nelson's attitude about the other group in the city working in registration. During the course of the conversation, several things became apparent. In the first place, Mrs. Nelson did not think that the youth office was producing the kind of results that would justify its continuance under the leadership of Mr. Croshen. Mrs. Nelson stated that Croshen was using the office for personal prestige and he was not infact working hard at getting people on the books. She said that Croshen had misrepresented himself when he had claimed that he was one of the student demonstration leaders. She also expressed the idea that some problems were soon to develop unless better cooperation was developed between her group and the Miles College students who are publicly claiming credit for all registration work, thereby causing doubt on the basis of their existence.

Mrs. Johnson expressed concern about Mr. Croshen and suggested that she felt that his leadership should be changed or the office closed. I think I encouraged her in this attitude with the suggestion that a careful study of this aspect of the project be made and reported to Atlanta. This she said she would do.

When I talked with Mr. Billingsley, I inquired of him as to why there had developed such a favorable attitude in the office of the registrar. Mr. Billingsley told me confidentially that he had been told confidentially that in Birmingham, the official attitude was to get rid of George Wallace and his kind, and that they were prepared to use the Negro vote to accomplish this task. Their attitude is that the Wallace kind of leadership is costing the state economically, Billingsley said.

I made an effort to visit with the Miles College Student Citizenship Project. This group is carrying on registration under a direct grant from the Field Foundation. I was unable to talk with the group because their office was closed.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA

Today, February 14, I talked with Douglas Harris and John Lane, two of the fellows that are working with Reginald Robinson of SNCC in the Raleigh project. Mr. Robinson was out of town. I was not able to find out the nature of the business that took him away from the project that he is directing. I was able to learn from the two men with whom I did speak that the progress of the project is improving.

Although the exact number of persons registered is yet undetermined, I was told that they are sure of 627 having been registered through the project. These are individuals that registered through their office. It was stated by one of the individuals that the actual count is closer to 800 than 627 because they have reason to know that some 200 persons were registered in the Mobile program, but that an exact count was not kept because of the fact that most of the registered went directly to the office of the registrar and did not come through their office as the others did. I was told that there is good reason to expect that the results will pick up in the coming days for three basic reasons:

1) The new registrars have been sworn in and have had time to get adjusted to their work.

2) The number of volunteers are beginning to increase. (At the present time, there are about 30 volunteers, 8 to 10 of which show up for work each day).

3) The weather is beginning to improve.

I inquired into the amount of adult cooperation. It seems that the SNCC workers are getting as much cooperation as can be expected. The ministers are on a committee doing house-to-house canvassing. Rev. Ward, the director for the NAACP statewide drive is putting the minister's march together. The SNCC people expressed the view that Rev. Ward is willing to work, but does not possess any great organizing talent. I was pleased to find that the SNCC and NAACP personnel were working affectively together. I made an effort to see Rev. Ward, but found that he was out of town.

RTB Field Trips

I asked if there was a separate COPE drive and was told that there is not. It was said that if COPE is reporting registration results, it is reporting the results that SNCC is chalking up. Earl Davis has spent 4 days in Raleigh since Christmas, and about the same period of time before the holidays.

The SNCC people said that they did not have any knowledge of COPE putting any money in the city. However, COPE literature was very much in evidence. This was the only literature that I saw in quantity except the hand bills that the group had prepared.

I felt compelled to relate some short-comings in what I thought the group was doing. In the first place, I did not see enough planning to satisfy me that the group was doing all that it could to to involve the community in what it was trying to do. It also seemed to me that with Negro registrars, the number of people registered did not justify the period of time that the project has been in operation.

It appeared to me that it was a mistake to try to take the registrar house-to-house. I suggested that they might try locating the registrar in one central place and moving the people to the registrar. I got the feeling that this suggestion was accepted.

While I was in the office, Mr. Sanson, vice-president of the bank came in to pick up a precinct map which suggest that he was working with the group. I expect to visit the project again next week.

I expect that the project will be all right, and yet it is a long way from sophisticated, political organization that I would like to see and feel that North Carolina is ready for.

Attached hereto are copies of the official forms that are used in registering. These forms can be shown to citizens as canvassing is being done.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO BEAUFORT AND CHARLESTON, S. C.
(Emancipation Proclamation Celebration)

January 1, I visited Beaufort, South Carolina, to participate in their Emancipation Proclamation Celebration as the principal speaker. The program was preceeded by a street parade from the city to Beaufort's St. Helena Island. There were about 70 decorated cars in the procession. It was estimated that this was the greatest celebration that had been held in quite some time. A copy of the program and an outline of my remarks is here attached. The "we are here in spite of" emphasis in the speech was an effort to take advantage of a traditional newsday approach set in motion by the Baptist church many years ago. The general reception was good.

I drove back to the city and Charleston, South Carolina. That very next day, I discussed with Mrs. Bernice Robinson, field director of the First Congressional District, regarding the importance of organizing at the precinct levels.

EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION CELEBRATION

January 1, 1964

Ladies and gentlemen, Charles Washington is an old friend of mine. I have known him for many years. Wash, I remember from around Howard University as a cool, deliberate scholar of the law. He, unlike many of our colleagues, elected at the end of his studies, to come back to this southland of ours to serve you. He could have found success in any one of the fifty states.

I want to ask you to take care of him, have faith in him. He has a wife and some children out there somewhere. Take care of them, too. A man like Charles E. Washington - so warm, so kind, so moral, and so very able, would be hard to find anywhere.

I want you to know I sincerely appreciate you inviting me here to participate in your program. You do me great honor. Great things are being done, important changes are being effected in this area, perhaps even greater than you realize. I enjoy being identified with what you are doing.

As I stand here, having heard your fine music, and now looking over the handsome audience, my first reaction is to say, "Well, we are here. We are here after more than 225 years of slavery and 100 years of legalized freedom." Ladies and gentlemen, the Negro people have a proud tradition. Theirs is an enviable record, and one of which they have no reason to be ashamed. Though far from their ancestral home, and always the victims of shameless hyprocrisy and revolting barbarity, we are here and we are stronger than we have ever been in all this long course of history. James Weldon Johnson said it, "We have come..." Langston Hughes said it this way , "Life for me ain't been no crystal stairs..."

Ladies and gentlemen, we are here in spite of the fact that we have been worked without wages, our flesh lashed, our limbs loaded with iron chains. We have been hounded and hunted by dogs; we have been sold at auctions, our families set asunder, our flesh burned, and in many cases, starved in obedience and submission - but we are here. Doctors, lawyers, teachers, poets, authors, editors, We are building homes, constructing bridges, tilling the soil, searching the outer space, moving, thinking, planning, and confessing, and worshipping the Christian God.

Ladies and gentlemen, we are here this afternoon.

Now, this is an Emancipation Proclamation celebration. It is proper that we should be so assembled on this day. When Mr. Lincoln signed this great document, he set in motion many forces that took their embodiment in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, when the Congress wrote: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and the state wherein they reside; no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor denied the equal protection of the law." This amendment and the Proclamation, therefore, legimized for those who needed it, that which had already been made legal by the laws of nature and by God Almighty.

Now, I have not come to Beaufort this afternoon to proclaim the freedom of the Negro people. I have come to say that the Negro people are not now, and never have been free. The Proclamation and the amendment left the Negro landless, without the right to free movement, and without the right to vote. It is true that these documents freed Negroes from the individual masters - but it left them slaves of society. These documents did not deprive the slave master of the power of life and death in the courts and in the streets. This power of life and death is the heart and soul of the master/slave relationship. Even the few allies that the Negro people have been able to pick up have in many instances been too ready and willing to point out the advantages of going slow. I tell you, after more than 300 years of going slow, anyone that suggests such a thing sounds to me just as rediculous as a man trying to justify telling a mother who sees her baby dying not to cry, or a man who sees his house on fire to sound the alarm mildly. I shall not labor this point further. You know the evidence as well as I do. We must not dwell too long on the past. We must think of today and plan for tomorrow.

This is a time when Negro people must be as wise as owls, as cunning as snakes, and as kind as doves. I know that this is a big order.

There is lost ground that must be regained; there is much planning ahead yet to be done.

Just one example: Less than 100 years ago, many Negro men sat among the lawmakers of South Carolina. A great service was rendered the state at that time. They set up the first real system of public schools, established decent criminal law, provided for the protection of farmer's rights and protected them against unreasonable taxation. Now, I know the history books don't say this. But we didn't write those books. You must remember that if monkeys wrote history books, they would no doubt say that people swing from trees.

We must return to those days - days when men were elected because of what they stood for, rather than because of the color of their skin. We must regain this lost ground and plan for the future.

America now stands at an historic crossroad. Down one road lies hope, and down the other, disaster. If she does not choose the right road, there may not be a second chance. The time is at hand, today, now, at this very moment, for white Americans to understand that all the hopes that it has for a decent, peaceful, fruitful life for themselves and their children is dependent upon the freedom of all Americans.

The time is now for America to understand that we have in public office the Thurmonds, the Eastlands, the Talmadges, the Russells, the Ervins, the Barnetts, and the Wallaces because we allow them to be there.

The time is now for the federal government to understand that we, the Negro people, know that there is much that it can do that it has not done to bring about a decent life for Negroes in the southland.

The time is now for white America to understand that the Negro wants only what the downtrodden have always wanted, and what a majority of Americans want today - a decent place in which to live, an income sufficient to feed and clothe his family, access to an education for his children, freedom from calculated insults, and a realistic hope for a better world.

This is the American dream.

Lyndon Johnson said in his first presidential speech, "I can not bear this burden alone." Well, I say the Negro people cannot, either. It has been the Negro people ~~that~~ who have raised their voices in every decade of our history in the defense of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Can America fail to understand what the front pages of the newspapers have been saying this entire year?

Can Americans fail to understand that the Negro has demonstrated, faced police dogs, tear gas, shotguns, vermin-infested jails, and even death because they have seen no other way to call this society's attention to that which it must do - if it is to endure.

This is what the struggle is all about. We cannot dodge the issue.

Those who profess to favor freedom and yet oppose agitation are men who want crops without plowing up the ground; they want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its many waters.

And now, I must say to my friends of the Penn Community Center, you have made a tremendous contribution to this community. You have, in the span of time that you have labored here, ~~exed~~ earned immortality, and yet, this day demands of you a new orientation. It would appear that the time is at hand for you to consider adding to your work a program that will point the way for the white community. The questions must now be raised:

How many whites in Birmingham have protested the bombing of Negro property?

How many whites have protested the use of cattle prods, pistol butts, and visious dogs?

How many whites have protested the broken heads, broken bodies, and the broken lives incurred by Negroes in their quest for that fundamental of American citizenship - the freedom to vote?

These are crimes of but a few people. The mass of the white South has not yet spoken - and yet must help them learn to speak.

As Negro people, we must stand ready to unite with men of good will everywhere. Unity must be the watchword.

We must fight for unity of ideas, unity of sentiment, unity of institution, unity in which there is no North, no South, no East, no West, no black, no white - but solidarity of the nation.

The iron gate of our prison stands half open. One gallant united thrust can open it onto a land the like of which has never before existed. One gallant united thrust can open the gate to that land that we think of when we sing: My country tis of thee, sweet land of liberty, of thee

I sing. Land where my fathers died----------

Re: FIELD TRIP TO CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

December 10, 1963, I arrived in Chattanooga, Tennessee, to review with the leadership there the NAACP voter registration project which began October, 1963. I went to the office of the project (601 East Main Street) and talked there with two ladies about the overall project. I was shown card files that they were keeping of individuals that call in indicating their willingness to go and register. I was also shown samples of literature being distributed, as well as advertisements being carried on radio and in the newspapers. I was able to determine that 2,694 people had been registered between October 28 and December 10.

I went from the office of the project to the office of Attorney William T. Underwood, the project director. I arrived in his office about 3:30 p. m., and left with him shortly thereafter to visit the two special registration stations that had been established in the Negro community for the enlisting of new voters. Both of the stations were quite active.

One of the stations was in the hands of a group that I was told has, for a number of years, worked as employees of various politicians. The other station, located in the Bethlehem Community Center, was the principal station and was in the hands of the NAACP people. I watched the operation from 4:30 to 8:30. There were several impressive things about what was going on. Among them:

1) Three registrars were kept busy for the entire period.

2) There was much that suggested the committee had planned carefully for the drive. Contact had been established with the unregistered. Two buses were busy picking up the unregistered.

3) It was most interesting to note that about half of the people registered walked to the registration station in spite of the fact that it rained the entire afternoon.

I went with Mr. Underwood to visit the non-NAACP registration stations. There was some feeling that the group in charge would not be as friendly as would be desired. However, we found the group quite free and open in their discussion. All of our questions were answered freely.

RTB Field Trip

I had the feeling that this attitude on the part of the persons operating this registration was due primarily to the way that Mr. Underwood approached them. I had noted earlier in the day that many of the people working with Mr. Underwood had been extremely critical of this group, knowing that this group was operating the registration drive principally because they had been hired by politicians downtown. This did not seem to be a matter of great concern to Mr. Underwood.

As I observed and listened to the conversation between Mr. Underwood and the ladies operating the registration stations, I had the feeling that real cooperation could be worked out between the two groups. The lady in charge of the station promised Mr.Underwood that she would make available figures indicating how many people she was successful in registering through her particular station.

After the registration books were closed, (about 8:30 p. m.) Mr. Underwood invited Fr.Hunter, Mr. C. B. Henderson, and myself to his office for a general discussion of voter registration. This afforded me an opportunity to raise several questions which I felt would be of value research-wise. I asked the group, among other things, what they said to citizens in an effort to motivate them to participate in the registration process. Fr. Hunter, responding to this question, said that he made it a point to talk with people about citizenship responsibility and first class citizenship, and good citizenship, and this kind of thing. I raised with him the question whether or not this wasn't middle class language, and didn't have any real significance to people who were concerned with the problems of making a living. Fr. Hunter indicated that the words "first class citizenship" had been used so much that they had come to mean, without explanation, the right to a decent living and a right to a good job; the right to equal employment, the right to equal education, and the like. "While I don't talk about these things specifically, these are the kind of things engendered in the minds of the people when I talk with them," he said. Mr. Henderson insisted that he made a point to talk about what could be expected as a result of participating in the election process. "I work at getting down to the meat-and-bread issues of life, rather than crouchin g the message in generalities such as first class citizenship."

Mr. Underwood offered the suggestion that he had found it effective to talk about special problems and special hard-core situations such as Jackson, Mississippi, Greenwood, and Birmingham. Being an attorney he said that quite often he pointed to a different kind of treatment in the courts and in city hall that could be expected.

I asked the group what problems they found in operating a registration drive. The answer to this question came in the form of a kind of leadership analysis. The language used was "old line" leadership and "new line" leadership.

Mr. C. B. Henderson, in responding to the question, suggested that he thought perhaps he was a part of the "old line" leadership. Mainly because when they say "old line" and "new line" they are generally talking about persons that have been in the community more than 15 years, and the "new line", of course, for those who have been in less than 15 years. Mr. Henderson also said that while he was a part of the "old line" leadership, in terms of years, he was certainly not "old line" in his attitude about Negro problems. He said that the "old line" leadership tended to measure Negro progress in the community in terms of what would have been possible 15 or 20 years ago, whereas the "new line" leadership tends to measure Negro progress in terms of what the Constitution and the laws of the United States hold. Mr. Henderson used as an illustration of this analysis the attitude taken by Mr. Mapp, president of the NAACP during the summer demonstrations in the city of Chattanooga. He suggested that Mr. Mapp had opposed these demonstrations and had in so doing, done the NAACP a great disservice.

He also suggested that there is a great tendency on the part of the "old line" leadership to not want to share the leadership with the young fellows in the community. Even though in most instances, the younger fellows are more able leaders than the "old line" leadership consists of. It was Mr.Henderson's feeling that the "old line" leadership would not at any time in the future, willingly share leadership in the community, but that this did not necessarily need to be a serious point for the reason that the "new line" leadership had gained the respect of the masses of people in the community as a result of the leadership it afforded during the summer. Mr. Underwood, in response to this same question, suggested that the main problem encountered in conducting the registration drive grew out of the fact that the NAACP representative, Mr. Patton, had not approached the setting up of a drive with the right attitude. Underwood said that Mr. Patton came in dictating what he would not tolerate and what he insisted upon having if the drive was to be conducted. I was told that Patton stated who could participate in the drive, and who could not participate. This attitude of Patton's had engendered considerable resentment on the part of local people.

I think I gained from what Mr.Underwood had to say, a feeling of great disgust with the handling of the funds for the operation of the drive. Mr.Underwood indicated several instances in which he felt that the drive could have been more effective had the funds available for the operation of the drive could have been more effective had the funds available for the operation of the drive been made available to the directors of the drive in advance. He said that Mr. Patton had refused to release any money for the conduct of the drive in advance, and that he had also refused to state how much money was available for use in the drive. Underwood said he found himself unable to move with the freedom that he felt would be necessary in order to make the drive effective, suggesting that he was not willing to go out and contact for various services - printing, transportation, and the like, unless he knew very definitely that these expenses were going to be taken care of. I got the feeling that the three gentlemen would much prefer that in the future the drive be conducted directly through the local branch of the NAACP, or some other local organization and not be burdened with the national office or the regional director.

I also asked the three gentlemen what was the attitude of the personnel in the registrar's office. There seemed to have been general agreement that the persons on the Board of Elections might be considered cooperative. They seemed to have felt that cooperation was a recognition on their part of the fact that the Negro vote was rapidly becoming a matter worthy of consideration in the community. They did not feel that the Board's attitude reflected any general willingness on its part to cooperate, but rather a response to the possible influence that the Negro vote had gained in the county courthouse.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

On December 12, I visited Asheville, North Carolina, and talked with Mr. John Daily, an attorney there of some considerable number of years, and also a leader of the NAACP.

Mr. Daily's name had been supplied to me by Mr. Tinsley Spraggins. In supplying this name, Mr. Spraggins suggested that Mr. Daily had expressed to him some real interest in a registration drive in Asheville.

After I had introduced myself, Mr. Daily, with enthusiasm, expressed the desire and the need for a registration drive in Asheville, I asked him in response to this, what organizations might properly be contacted to carry on such a drive. He indicated in this connection that there is in the city of Asheville an NAACP chapter as well as a local citizen's association. Mr. Daily said that the NAACP branch had approximately 150 members, but rarely did more than 10 or 15 attend a meeting. He was quick to point out, however, that the entire membership generally supported whatever was decided by the small meetings. Mr. Daily also indicated that there was a good relationship existing between the NAACP and the citizenship association, and that he believed that good cooperation could be had from the citizens if a drive was commissioned by the VEP for this area. Mr. Daily did not, however, believe the membership of either organization would likely do house-to-house canvassing or the block work necessary to carry on the drive, but that possibly they could hire persons to do it, and if not, students could be invited into the community.

We talked in general about the various kinds of student groups that had been effective in voter registration. The Congress of Racial Equality, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the American Friends Association, and several others were mentioned. Mr. Daily expressed the willingness to have either one of these groups come in and assured me that the community would cooperate with the students should they decide to do work in Asheville. I indicated to Mr. Daily that the VEP always hopes and looks for some local persons to assume the role of general supervisor of the project, and asked in this connection if there was a person or group in the community that he thought might be willing to assume this responsibility. In this connection, Mr. Daily indicated that Mr. Ragland, a jeweler in the community, had been very effective in working with youth groups in the past, and that he might be willing to assume such a responsibility. However, he did indicate that Mr. Ragland had given very considerable of his time and effort to community projects at the expense of his business, and that he thought this might serve as a barrier to securing the services of Mr. Ragland.

I asked Mr. Daily if he would survey the community and see if he could find a person that would be interested in working in the program. I also asked him to give us a description of the community so that we could better determine whether or not Asheville was the kind of community that VEP would want to commission a drive. Outlining this report for him, I suggested that we would be interested in knowing the number of Negro citizens in the community, the number of white citizens in the community, the number of Negroes registered, the number of whites registered. I suggested that we would also want to know something of the history of registration and political activity over the past three years; something of the various organizations thatmight be expected to cooperate in such a drive. Mr. Daily indicated that he would prepare this report and get it in the mail to us sometime during the month of January.

I did not make an effort to talk with Mr. Ragland or the other individuals that had been suggested during the course of the conversation for the reason that it had begun to snow, and it was late in the evening and I thought perhaps I should leave for Atlanta rather than run the risk of being snowbound in Asheville.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO WILSON, NORTH CAROLINA

February 19, 20, and 21 were spent in the city of Wilson, North Carolina. This was the second visit in two weeks. The sign of relief that I indulged in upon my return to Atlanta was intended to express the idea that the ill-fated Wilson project is now looking up. The number of persons registered is now in excess of 550 as is reflected by the attached news article. The success of the previous week came largely as a result of a change in attitude rather than new procedures and organization established.

I spent the time of this trip working with the leaders of the group organizing for permanent operations. Among the things accomplished were:

1) All registered Negro citizens were entered on index cards.

2) These cards were classified by precincts, streets, and house numbers on streets.

3) Leaders were chosen for the precincts.

4) Precinct leaders were engaged in a discussion of the importance of following through with the selecting of street and block leaders.

In the early hours of my working with this group, I believe I sensed a feeling of indifference to what I was doing, but after the list was broken down and the group could see the value, I got the feeling that they were really with the program.

We were able to look at the cards and determine the streets that had very few registered. Plus the card served well to suggest who on each street should be contacted to act as street and block leader.

The group decided that it would not spend any more of the VEP grant until they had had another meeting to try to enlist the army of street and block workers.

Another meeting of the group was scheduled for Friday, February 28.

On Saturday, I talked with Dr. Butterfield and Rev. Watkins about the fact that Rev. Watkins will be leaving the city of Wilson in a few days. The question, of course, was who would take the directorship of the project. They agreed that they would take this up at the next meeting, and assured me that a capable person would be secured for the job.

Negro Registration Drive Falls Short Of Goal; Effort Extended

A campaign to double the number of registered Negro voters in Wilson County "has not come up to expectations" and will be extended one or two weeks.

Rev. T. A. Watkins, president of the Wilson Citizens Committee which is sponsoring the drive, said today the campaign will be continued, "although we're going to slow down some."

The drive, during which officials hoped Negro registration would be doubled to some 5,000 registered Negro voters, actually was scheduled to end yesterday.

However, during the first two weeks of the drive, 505 Negroes registered, about 2,000 less than the committee's goal.

The drive started with a $1,500 grant from the Voter Education Program in Atlanta, "and we have not used all of our funds yet," Rev. Mr. Watkins said.

The Board of Elections, to accommodate the sudden deluge in registrations since the "Little Federal" plan was killed at the polls on January 14, has accepted registrations during lunch time and late in the afternoon.

"We can not do this any long[illegible]," Robert Griffin, chairman of the board, said. "We'[illegible] to have to observe office [illegible]

The Board of Elections is open five days a week, from 9-12 in the morning and from 1-5 in the afternoons. It is closed on Saturday and Sunday.

The only time the board is required to remain open later than its normal hours is the date that the books are closed for a pending election, which will be May 8 for the May Democratic primaries. Then it is required to accept registrations as late as 12 midnight.

Yesterday was the busiest day the Board of Elections has had since the "Little Federal" plan election, with a total of 83 persons registering. Of these, 78 were Negroes and five were whites.

Yesterday's total was not a single-day record, however. On several occasions on the last day the books were open before an election, there have been more than 100 persons to register.

Of the 505 Negroes who have registered since January 14, 290 registered this week. There have been 32 other registrations this week.

A breakdown of registrations for this past week is as follows: Monday—64 Negroes and five whites; Tuesday—38 Negroes and four whites; Wednesday, 42 Negroes and six whites; Thursday—68 Negroes and 12 whites; Friday—78 Negroes and five whites.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO FORT VALLEY, GEORGIA

On February 11, I visited Fort Valley, Georgia, and talked with Mr. T. A. Appling about the NAACP middle-county voter registration drive that he is coordinating. The drive is being conducted in the counties of Peach, Houston, Taylor, Crawford, and Macon.

Mr. Appling indicated that he was doing the best that he could, but that he was having difficulty finding individuals that could carry on effectively in each of the counties without supervision. Mr. Appling has given most of his time to Peach county - mainly in the city of Fort Valley.

In that county, it is estimated there are 5,000 whites and 1100 Negroes registered. In the city, the estimate is 2,700 whites and 666 Negroes.

The registration results seems to be moving along well. 220 persons had been registered on the preceeding Saturday, and 200 on the Monday preceeding my visit. It seemed to me that the motivation for the drive is founded in the fact that the sheriff killed a Negro man in jail very recently, and also the fact that Dr. Banks of the Fort Valley College staff has offered himself as a candidate for the city Aldermatic Board. The project is receiving very good cooperation from the students and community groups.

The books, I was told, will be closed February 26 for the city election that will be held March 11.

At the time of this visit, there did not appear to be any problems with the registration procedure.

Mr. Appling had strong objections to the way that the funds for the drive were being made available to them. It was contended that when the money is only let after the expenditures, there is a limit to what they can do. Illustrations were offered such as not having money to hire cars when needed, or to buy refreshments for students at the end of a canvassing period.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO TEXAS

January 7, I left Atlanta en route for Texas for a three-day visit of that area. The first stop was to be Houston.

I did not arrive in Houston until January 8 at 11:30 a. m. Weather conditions had made it necessary for the non-stop flight to Houston to stop at New Orleans, Louisiana. All flights out of New Orleans were cancelled until the next day.

This unexpected delay forced me to miss a mass meeting in Houston where I was to have been the principal speaker the evening before.

When I arrived in Houston, I was met at the airport by Mr. Keith Beecher, who drove me immediately to the hotel and from there to the office of Mrs. R. D. Randolph where I addressed a meeting of the Houston Wednesday Club. I think the name of the club and the very fact that this was a mid-week mid-day meeting suggest something of the nature of the group. (A summary of my remarks is attached to this report.)

After the meeting, I was introduced to several prominent citizens, the Dean of the Texas Southern Law School, and an assistant to the mayor. I was told that there were at least seven of Texas' millionaires in the group who contribute liberally to the group program.

Mrs. Randolph expressed some interest in my remarks about the need for concentrated effort to enlist more whites in the liberal group. We made an appointment to talk further about this the next day.

I spent the remaining part of the evening with Dr. Atkinson of the Texas Southern University, the predominantly Negro institution. Before coming to TSU, Dr. Atkinson was head of the Department of Cultural Anthropology at the University of Texas at Austin, Texas. We talked as we walked through the TSU Anthropology department. The tour of this department and the conversation were both extremely valuable experiences from the social research standpoint. Dr. Atkinson talked about the cultural barriers to mass involvement in political activity, particularly since 1930 from an anthropological standpoint. The theory set forth and the empirical evidence offered, I think, could be of some value to the final drafter of the VEP "Magnum Opus."

The next day, January 9, I met with Mrs. Randolph and a group of persons that work closely with her. We talked two hours about some of the implications of the recent trends in the civil rights movement. Especially those that go beyond the matter of public accommodations. We were in agreement that one of the things most lacking in the present civil rights movement is some concentrated effort to find avenues of communication between the low income white and Negro communities.

Mrs. Randolph shared with the group her successful experiences in bringing about this kind of thing. We agreed that part of the success that reactioner southern legislators have in getting elected is due to the fact that the poor white community is not voting. This is a point that V. O. Key also set forth in his book, "Southern Politics."

On the evening of January 8, I flew up to Austin and was met by Larry Goodwyn. We talked about six hours about the Coalition, the theory undergirding it, and the various stages in its development. In some cases, we were trying to access what had happened and in some cases, we were trying to speculate for the future. One of the problems that we considered was the problem of making the shift from the mass meeting stage to the serious organizational stage. The principal problem involved in this shift centered around the fact that the second stage, the organizational stage, would require different personnel. It seems almost without exception, that individuals that are good platform people are not the best organizers. This is true not only in voter registration, but in almost every kind of organization.

For the Coalition, this, of course, meant that many individuals that had been in the forefront of the Coalition in the early days when the team approach was widely used, would have to take a back seat to some other people in the second stage. Some feelings would, of course, be injured, and the objective had to be to reduce these injuries as much as possible. The best case in point was Mrs. Erma Leroy. A lady of great statue with Labor. We did a lot of theory building and finally decided that unless Mr. Durham thought it unwise, the money that Mrs. Leroy anticipated getting would be spent on some five or six individuals that were thought to have organizational skill; among them, the Rev. Thomas*, with whom we have corresponded from time to time.

A phone call was made to the office of Mr. Durham. Due to Mr. Durham's illness, Larry talked with Mr. Cunningham, who took the matter up with Mr. Durham, and later indicated that Mr. Durham was in agreement with the idea of spending the moneh on the four or five organizers.

I later talked with Mr. Booker T. Bonner, Mr. Arthur DeWitty, and Miss Lenor Rolla in an effort to determine if there is any validity to the rumor about the possibility of the Negro leadership withdrawing from the Coalition. I was satisfied at the end of these conversations that the rumor was unfounded. (A separate memo will be prepared later that will shed light on this kind of thinking.)

In Austin, I also talked with Ray Evens of AFL-CIO about the Coalition, the Civil Rights movement, and recent events in national politics. During the course of this visit, I had an opportunity to view movies that COPE had prepared on the Coalition, and also borrowed a copy for showing in Atlanta. The movie had some basic shortcomings:

1. It tried to tell too much.
2. It was oriented to Labor to such an extent that it subtracted from its use with allied groups.
3. The role of Negro people was played down to the extent that it placed the idea of "Coalition" in question.

These points were noted. Evens said that a new film was being prepared and that it will remedy these shortcomings.

I reviewed with Larry his plans for the crash registration program. The part to be played by students, Lenor Rolla, and Peter Brandon down in El Paso. Most of what was said is included in Larry's outline to us.

I returned to Atlanta Saturday, January 11, 1964.

OUTLINE OF WEDNESDAY CLUB REMARKS-HOUSTON, TEXAS, JANUARY 7, 1964

I am happy to be back in Texas. I was out here for the formation of the Coalition some few months ago. I said then that it was the greatest single political development taking place in the nation - and it still is. There is nothing to compare with it going on anywhere.

What you are doing is old enough in our history to allow you to have confidence in it, and yet young enough for you to find excitement and enthusiasm in it. This is true, regardless to what history will say about the outcome of your most recent poll tax election. Some will say you lost that election, but now, did you really?

Your efforts are in line with the finest tradition in all our history. I get a chance to talk with a lot of people across the South. I have spoken often of this great Texas experiment. People are greatly impressed and encouraged with your efforts. They see in what you are doing where they hope to be a few years from now. You are setting forth the example, and because you have done that so very well, you are in fact victors.

You are likewise victors in that you were able to force people to discuss the right to vote without artificial limitations. And then you are certainly victors in that you forced some public officials to take positions on this vital question that you know they would rather have not done so. But I feel that I must say that you are winning here in Texas and in the nation.

The precious right to vote is legitimate by every democratic tradition and by God Almighty. It is now being sought by people in this land as it has never been before, and it well be had. This is what your newspapers are saying when they report that Negro people are in the streets demonstrating. We have demonstrated because we have found no better way of making America realize that which it must do.

I have said that we will have this right. Many things point this up:

1. Mississippi Freedom Vote.
2. Alabama (Selma) Freedom Day.
3. Hamer trial.
4. White committees.

Texas must point the way - you must do this because you have had the experience.

Unity must be the guide word.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO AMERICUS, GEORGIA (KOINONIA FARM)

On February 10, I went to Americus, Georgia, (Koinonia Farm), to participate in a workshop that was being coordinated by Mr. Conrad Brown of Highlander Center, and Mr. Vincent Harding of the Mennonite Society.

The intent of the workshop was to bring together the rural ministers of south Georgia to discuss their responsibility and role in the present civil rights struggle.

I was invited to talk about the history of the Negro people and the history of protest. It was expected that in doing this, I would illustrate from Negro folklore, point up the progression and continuity of protest, using mainly the spirituals and work songs. I think perhaps I was invited because of something I wrote several years ago. Such a discussion would, as requested, try to place the present emphasis on political participation in its proper prospective.

In essence, the presentation consisted of dividing the history of the Negro people since 1860 into five periods and then describing each period.

A sizable portion of the time was given to the period 1920-1940 in which we talk about the philosophies of Washington, Dubois, Garvey, and Miller. We played recordings and reacted to questions and remarks from the floor.

I got the feeling when it was all over (some 2½ hours), that many of the ministers had come to realize that they were prepared to do work in voter registration.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO ALBANY, GEORGIA

On March 17, I visited Albany, Georgia, and visited with Mr. Willie Bolden, Mr. Slater King, and Rev. Wells, to examine the VEP sponsored drive that had been conducted from December 15 to March 15.

It was explained that the VEP grant was made available November 25, but the office did not open until December 26. Through the office and work of the Albany Crusade for Voters, twenty-five (25) Negro citizens were registered in December, eighty-five (85) in January, one-hundred eighty (180) in February, and eighty (80) in March.

Without reviewing the history of Albany, it will be recognized that the successes of these three months was quite different from the kind of success known to this area.

Two factors account, in the main, for the results of recent months. They are: The way the drive was conducted, and a change in the attitude of the city and county officials.

Looking first at the way the drive was conducted, we arrived at the conclusion that the leadership of the Crusade made it clear to the city officials and the Negro community, in as sober and temperate a fashion as possible, that it intended to conduct a registration drive.

The drive moved from the assumption of the right to vote belongs to every citizen, and that every citizen should and would want to do whatever he could to promote its success. It is significant that the drive was not crouched in threats, subterfuge, or fear of any kind. This assumption makes this drive unique and very important because almost without exception, threats, subterfuge, or fear have played a part in the planning of drives.

In conducting the drive, the Albany Crusade made use of every possible approach that it could conceive and afford. Radio and newspaper advertising, along with bumper stickers were widely used; individuals were used to carry signs on the street that urged citizens to register; ministers preached sermons about registering.

The highlight of the drive period occurred January 11, 1964. The main event of the day was a registration parade that covered some twenty blocks and was observed by about 7,000 people. The participants in the parade were: Seventeen (17) business cars, twelve (12) cars from fraternities and sororities, one (1) float (Crusade of Voters), two (2) high school bands, and forty-five (45) walking sign carriers.

All signs in the parade urged registration and only registration. An invitation was extended to every segment of the community, including some non-Negro interests.

The parade cost about $200, and was paid for by the business community. The parade was followed on the same day by a mass meeting which concluded a registration "queen" drive and a speech by the Rev. James Bevel. The day was concluded with a barbeque. The barbeque provided some healthy socializing which focused on registration.

When asked what was the community's reaction to the parade, I was told that to the best of the leadership's knowledge, only one person did not think favorably of the parade. Dr. E. D. Hamilton, a friend of the Crusade, felt that it was taking voting out of the serious vein. Dr. Hamilton later came to admit that the parade had been effective. Teachers were very surprised and pleased to learn that permission had been given for the use of the public school bands. The community in general feels that the idea ought to be repeated at least once each year.

It appears that this open and frontal attack on the problem of low voting seems to have affected some favorable changes in official attitudes. Instead of resisting the efforts of the Crusade to register Negro citizens, the mayor gave his permission for the use of downtown public parks. The police department willingly accepted the request of the Crusade group to string registration signs across the street, one of which was quite visable from the heart of town; arrests of registration sign carriers were discontinued; the registrar discontinued his technical requirements in the area of identifications. The problem of time for registration was worked out to the satisfaction of all concerned. The board did not reinstate registration on Saturday, but did give Thursday from 5 to 7 p. m. to make up for the lost time.

The change in the attitude of officials, and the way the drive was conducted has caused a new awakening in the community. The teachers have found their place in it. They do much of the surveying through their students. The much-critized ministers are preaching sermons on the subject of voting. SCLC-trained teachers are conducting classes (one of which I visited.)

The end of VEP sponsorship came quite untimely. The fruit of the ferment can just now be realized. Much of the advertisement is just now beginning to pay off. The organization of the community is just getting started. Six area chairmen have been chosen, but organization has not begun below this level. I encouraged the group to continue its organization and to pay its office rent on March 25 so as to keep things going.

Albany will most certainly be one of the communities that we will want to give deliberate research attention. The changes in approach and the changes in official attitudes are interesting and instructive. Here it appears is an example of a breakthrough in a hard-core area.

I therefore recommend:

1. That VEP make Albany the subject of specific research, not only in rejected participation, but political attitudes as well.

2. That the Crusade purchase a list of all Negro voters.

3. That the Albany Crusade be encouraged to undertake serious organization of the community.

4. That registration activity be stepped up.

5. That in order to accomplish this work, VEP make an immediate grant of $2,400 to be used for now until August 31, 1964.

I want you to go to Jacksonville, Florida on Monday, April 6, and spend Monday and Tuesday in Jacksonville making a study of voter registration in Jacksonville. The books have now closed by I want you to make an objective study of the following problems:

1. What organizations have been active in voter registration in Jacksonville during the past five years? Get the names and addresses of the leaders.

2. What organizations have been active in voter registration during the past 90 days?

3. VEP made a grant to NAACP to conduct a program in Jacksonville and reports indicate that this was a successful drive. RTB made a field trip and his preliminary report shows that the successful effort in Jacksonville was due largely to a separate program operated by Phi Beta Sigma fraternity. Please check on the extent of both drives and their respective involvement in the community and try to determine the role played by each group.

See if you can determine the need for additional registration programs when the books reopen and since your report may influence the agency to which any future grant might be made it is important that you be objective and that you talk to as many people from different organizations as possible.

You should make inquiry as to the names of people who have been active in voter registration and politics and seek them out, but without limiting you as to the people you should see I think you should, by all means, see the following people:

1) Dr. - Edward Waters College

2) Emmanuel Eaves 353-2727

5) Mrs. Queen Williams, Director of local NAACP program.

6) Mr. Ernest Lent, Director, Council on Human Relations

You should check with RTB for additional names and check with BW to see if there is any specific information which she may want you to get.

SPECIAL NOTE: You are not to tell anyone that you are checking up to see who did the work in Jacksonville or that you are trying to determine what agency should get a grant in the future and your explanation should simply be that you are working for the Voter Education Project and that you are making a study of registration problems in the Jacksonville community. YOu should, however, inquire specifically as to the effectiveness of particular individuals and organizations in past registration programs. You should check with local NAACP people to see if you can determine the exact manner in which their program was set up and who came in from the national office, how the director was selected, what budget they had.

You should ask NAACP people to offer any criticism which they might have as to the way in which their own program was conducted but you should not, in any way, offer any criticism of anything that any person or agency has done.

If you feel that you need to stay over until Wednesday then ~~XXX~~ this will be all right, but you should check with the VEP office so that we will know how to get in touch with you.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO FORT VALLEY, GEORGIA

On March 17, I visited Fort Valley, Georgia, to examine again the drive being conducted under the auspices of the NAACP. I was pleased with what I found. It was said that this was the best registration drive that the county has experienced.

This time, I spent my time with Dr. Stallworth, Dr. Banks, Mr. Acker, and two other persons. I did not meet with Mr. Appleton, the director of the drive on this trip. It was felt by some that the registration successes have been exaggerated a bit. There were no accurate records. Some of the men expressed the view that a better director could have been chosen, and yet none of them were prepared to set out any specific criticisms.

Dr. Stallworth offered the following statistics:

County Potential

White - 3,600 Negro - 4,500

Number Registered in the County

White - 2,300 Negro - 1,360

Number Registered in the City

White - 1,700 Negro - 990

The following criticisms of the drive were offered:

1. Limited money - only $155.

2. No certainty as to how much money could be spent.

3. Miss Hayes, field worker for NAACP, had been publicly critical of all other groups doing registration work.

I asked Dr. Stallworth if they had plans for continuing the drive after the election that was to be held the next day. He expressed the opinion that the work would be continued. He said, "I don't know if we will ask NAACP again." I encouraged him to consider the fact that the present structure was NAACP, and that he might want to try to work out whatever problems that exist, rather than trying to start from the ground floor.

I talked with the group about the upcoming city election in which Dr. Banks was a candidate. I asked him how many votes had been polled by candidates during the last city election. It was answered that the lowest person elected received 696 and the highest got 809.

I asked if a list of all the registered voters (Negro) had been obtained. The answer was no. This, of course, meant that there was no card file, and very little organization in the way of systemized "Getting-Out-The-Vote."

I felt compelled to say to the group that they had a less than 50-50 chance of electing Dr. Banks with the present organization. I suggested that a card file and "Get-Out-The-Vote" personnel with specified assignments were absolutely necessary to political victory.

It was suggested that the chances of victory could be increased to 90-10 if they would sit some people down to even at that late hour, and develop the card file, make "Get-Out-The-Vote" assignments, and appoint some poll workers.

(A report made to VEP reflects that an effort was made to follow all of the suggestions except the one on poll-watchers.)

Dr. Banks lost a seat by fifteen (15) votes.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO WILLIAMSTON, NORTH CAROLINA

On March 27, 1964, I visited Williamston, North Carolina, and talked with Mr. Golden Frinks about his plans for registration in eastern North Carolina.

On the evening of my arrival, Mr. Frinks was quite busy with demonstrations. Some forty (40) individuals were down from the East, mostly Amherst College divinity students.

In the midst of planning to house the arrivals, and keep a record of those that had been jailed, and those that would likely be jailed, I was able to get Mr. Frinks out for an hour of conversation.

Mr. Frinks pointed out that his hope included work in eleven eastern North Carolina counties. The counties in question are Northampton, Gates, Hertford, Bertie, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Washington, Terrell, Beaufort, Chowan, and Martin. It was explained by Mr. Frinks that there is some kind of registration activity going on in every county. In the counties of Chowan and Martin, canvassers have contacted more than 400 individuals each.

I was very favorably impressed with what appeared to be Mr. Frinks' skill in handling a situation with a lot of unrelated problems. It seemed that everybody was relying on him and that they had great respect for his decisions. Mr. Frinks was not able to spell out any well-organized program. I am not even sure that all of these areas are organized. The very best that he was able to do was name a few individuals.

I asked Mr. Frinks in what way he felt that VEP could be of help to him in getting the registration work that he hoped to do done. He indicated that the people that he is working with are among the poorest in the state and that he would be able to make good use of any money that is made available to him - giving token contributions to the people that canvass. He also suggested that he needs money for transportation and secretarial help.

The counties, excepting Edgecombe, that Mr. Frinks has expressed an interest, are counties that are not being seriously considered by any other group, not even the NAACP statewide program. All of them fall within what is known as North Carolina's "Black Belt." Seven of the counties have at least 50% Negro population.

Mr. Frinks promised that he would place before VEP a plan and a budget. If this plan and budget is realistic when received, I favor favorable action regarding same.

Re: EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA (HALIFAX AND WARRENTON COUNTIES)

It is reasonable to expect that visitations to and examinations of communities as an agent of VEP would be as objective and as impartial as possible; and yet, my heart goes out for the people of Warrenton and Halifax counties. In both communities, I found serious and able leadership trying to carry out the high purpose of democracy in the face of unbelievable odds and police brutality.

In Halifax, I was told that a curfew required that Negro people be off the street by 9 p. m. The marks of intimidation were as visable as the street signs. I was introduced to a boy that two police had held under high pressure fire hoses until blood burst from his forehead and the area around his eyes, during the course of public accommodations demonstrations this past summer. This was not an isolated case of inhumanity, and yet, I feel that registration successes can be realized.

A separate report on each area follows.

HALIFAX COUNTY

Halifax County is a community located in Eastern North Carolina. It has a total pupulation of 58,000 citizens, 32,000 of which are Negroes. Some 14,000 white citizens are registered, and 1,600 Negroes. Racial prejudice and discrimination against Negro people is rampart, and poverty, so far as the total community is concerned, is an established fact. The community is largely agricultural, and is high on the state's priority list for "War on Poverty" consideration.

The Halifax Movement, which is headquartered in the Cofield Funeral Home, in the city of Enfield, North Carolina, has as its chairman, Mrs. A. C. Cofield. There are community organizations all over the county. In the Roanoke Rapids area, Mr. Garland Brown is the chairman of District 1, assisted by Mr. Johnnie Garner and Mr. Jasper Wilkins. Mr. A. C. Cofield is chairman of District 2, and is assisted by Mrs. Walter Neveille and Mrs. Pattie Taylor of Weldon and Mr. Salte Jenkins; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Smith of Scotland Neck are chairmen of District 3 and are active in Palmyra. They are assisted by Mr. William Taylor of Connaconara, Mr. Fred Harrell of Roseneath, and Mrs. Blanch Brooks of Hobgood. Mrs. Arlene Gee of Enfield is chairman of District 4 and is assisted by Mr. Tyler Vaughn of Enfield. Mr. Billie Simmons and Mr. and Mrs. James Johnson of Faucetts, the Rev. E. M. Webster in Glenview and Hollister, Mrs. J. D. Johnson and Mrs. D. A. Manly of Littleton.

In Enfield, I talked with Mr. Reed Johnson, Mrs. Lillie Smith, and Mr. A. C. Cofield. It was a pleasure to find that they were moving along in the organized fashion that they are. The leadership in this community gave me every reason to believe that every serious effort possible will be made to get the job done. Local candidates will be offered as one way of stimulating interest.

I am satisfied that the group has some real understanding of what they want to do, and that they are not likely to come up with any imprudent actions. (Note the Table of Events attached.)

I talked with the group about the NAACP concern in the area, and was told that they had tried, over a long span of time, to get help from NAACP,but had not been successful, and that they had felt compelled to ask NAACP to stay out because they were sure that NAACP intended to stand between them and any help that they might be able to get from other sources. The group did accept a check for $50 and $3 worth of stamps from NAACP.

In response to your memo about how to avoid SCEF involvement, I can state that it is a fact that John Salter is in and out of the community from time to time. It is also true that Miss Ella Baker is well acquainted with the people of the community in that this is her native community. (She learned somehow that I had been in, and called to ask how the community was doing - she told me that that was the community she grew up in.)

Mr. Salter, I understand, was very helpful to Mr. Moses Riddick of Suffolk, who is very respected by the people of Enfield. This makes the SCEF problem difficult. However, I think we can take great comfort in the fact that the Enfield leadership is very strong and capable.

The attached budget is one that was submitted by the Halifax Movement to the state NAACP at the request of Mr. John Edwards. No action was taken on the budget.

WARRENTON COUNTY

On March 26, I visited Warrenton, North Carolina, and talked with Atty. Theaoseas Clayton, and his wife about registration work in the community.

Mrs. Clayton has communicated with VEP several times before and is well known to us. All of the things that she has said in her various communications were confirmed by this visit.

Mrs. Clayton has, for some time, been a very loyal NAACP worker. I was interested in her appraisal of the NAACP statewide program. Mrs. Clayton said to me that there was not much to be expected of the program. Her remarks question the seriousness of the state president of branches. Mr. Clayton was even more critical.

Much of the attitude seemed to stem from a feeling of lack of concern of the state officers in the past. I am sure that Mrs. Clayton wanted VEP to bypass the NAACP program and deal with her local community, and yet, she did not say this. She did ask if it could not be done. Here is a real case of the Association risking the loss of a person that can be of real help. Both of the Claytons hold the view that if assistance does not come direct, they will not get it.

It was my pleasing experience to go with Mr. Clayton to one of several house meetings that she is conducting. The instruction in registration procedure was very well done. I know that people were benefitted by this. The work there is of a nature that I feel that we will surely want to be identified with.

I recommend that we make a grant to this area as soon as possible.

The following is the basic structure of program activity for the Halifax County voter registration campaign through the primary election of May 30, 1964. A separate program will be worked out for summer voter activity -- and another program for fall voter activity.

The program that herewith follows is merely the basic structure. Many other affairs, which aren't listed, will be conducted on a day-to-day basis as time allows.

This official, basic program structure is for the use of the District Chairmen, their various Precinct Chairmen -- and, of course, the County Chairman and the staff members and key volunteer workers. The official program listing is not intended for general distribution.

Re: Field Trip to South Carolina May 4, 5, and 6 to: North Augusta, Orangeburg, Manning, Sumter, Florence, Camden, Columbia, and Saluda

Any time spent in the state of South Carolina is time well spent in view of the real possibility of increasing the voting strength of the Negro people. This statement is especially true now that there are voter registration organizations in each of the six congressional districts of the state.

The field trip that is the subject of this report was occasioned by the need to work out some problems that seemed to be developing between the Fifth Congressional District leadership and the representative of CORE.

The first stop was made in North Augusta where I talked with the Rev. S. L. McCain. Rev. McCain lives out in the rural district, and it was no simple matter to find him. Almost from the beginning of our conference, I was impressed with the Rev. McCain's sincere dedication to the task of voter registration. He is a man of limited formal training, and yet I feel certain of his ability to get the job done. He indicated that the Third Congressional group had succeeded in involving only four counties (Edgefield, McCormick, Saluda, and Newberry), but that they had obtained the services of a field man, and that he was engaged in the business of drawing in the other counties.

Rev. McCain indicated that the group had held three meetings since the meeting in Columbia, and that registration work is underway in each county. It was especially important to receive the report that registration work was proceeding in McCormick, an area that has generally been held to be impossible.

Rev. McCain persuaded me to go over to Saluda and talk with Mr. Charles Daniels, the field man, whom I had met at the SCLC conference about two or three weeks before.

In Orangeburg, I talked with Rev. I. D. Newman and Dr. Charles Thomas. The three of us talked about the Second Congressional District and agreed that the work was proceeding at a favorable pace as reflected by the reports received. We spent some time talking about the entire state effort. I was pleased to hear Rev. Newman say that the organization that now existed in the state is much superior to anything that has ever existed before in the state to his knowledge. Rev. Newman at the time was comparing the South Carolina Voter Education Project with the now-defunct Progressive Democratic Association, and the Palmetto Voters League. As the conversation unfolded, it was agreed this was now the time to hold a statewide meeting. Such a meeting had been proposed before, but had been discouraged for the lack of statewide organization. The feeling was that such a meeting should and could now be held. It was decided that the meeting should be held on May 30, 1964, in the city of Columbia; that Rev. Newman would obtain the largest church auditorium in that city; that RTB would obtain the services of WB as the principal speaker for the evening public meeting.

It was the thinking that an early evening session should be devoted to problems of running for public office at which all of the men that offered themselves for office in 1964 would sit and discuss their mistakes and what they had learned. It was also felt that the various precincts, county, and district leaders should get together and talk about the problems of voter registration in general.

It was agreed that this should be done up in the very best order, as a way of serving notice on all public office aspirants that there is a Negro vote worthy of consideration.

All of these plans were understood to be tentative. It was felt that they could only be worked out when the six district chairmen met together. Such a meeting was planned for May 9, 1964, at Faith Hall, Allen University, Columbia, South Carolina. I agreed to take the message to the other district leaders.

May 11, 1964

In Sumpter, I visited with Mr. Ed Brown and Mr. Frank Robinson. In this regard, we were interested in checking to see how these men viewed their relationship with the Fifth Congressional District leaders in light of the fact that Mr. Haile had indicated some displeasure with these individuals as district coordinators.

Mr. Robinson was, as usual, emphasing what people will not do rather than what they will do. Robinson contended that Mr. Haile is a "Johnny Come Lately" to voter registration, seeking only an increase in his personal status and influence. He suggested that Mr.Haile is a very thin-skinned person who wants you to pay him a lot of personal attention.

Robinson said that he felt that successful work might have to be accomplished by by-passing the local leadership. It was interesting to note that he (Robinson) did not have an organized plan of by-pass.

I continue to be impressed with the fact that Brown and Robinson always seem to dwell on the negatives rather than the positive aspect of everything. At one time it may have been effective motivation to paint the ugliest possible picture; however, I am not sure about this technique for the present.

Robinson and I went from Sumpter to Florence to attend the Sixth Congressional District meeting.

In Florence, I had intended to visit with Dr. Beck, but was pleased to find when I got to Florence that Dr. Beck was surrounded by representatives of nine counties, and that a very lively meeting was in progress. There were about 75 persons in attendance, when it was expected that there would be only 20 to 25.

The meeting had been called for the express purpose of re-organizing the district. Mr. Esau Jenkins had been invited to help with the orgainzation. Mr. Jenkins made the formal presentation, relating the work of the First Congressional District, what had been accomplished, techniques used, and their relationship with VEP.

Frank Robinson was presented, and he made a statement about the work that he had been doing, and hoped to be doing in the district. I was called from the floor to make a statement; the essences of which are contained in the attached news clipping.

The organization stage of the meeting went over smoothly. There was an air of enthusiasm that hung over the meeting from start to finish.

From Florence, I went to Camden and met with Mr. Haile, chairman of the Fifth Congressional District. This visit gave me an opportunity to appraise the Robinson-Haile problem from Mr. Haile's point of view.

Mr. Haile indicated that he did not want VEP to feel that he was saying that they did not want towork with Robinson. He said that he was questioning the paying of these men a salary to do work in the Fifth when they appeared to know so little about what they were doing. Mr. Haile appears to be a very successful funeral director, and is much more articulate than Robinson, I feel these facts influenced his attitude toward Robinson to some degree.

Mr. Haile said that the last time that these men came to call on him, he told them that they were needed in other counties of the district rather than in Camden or his county. I agreed with him in this regard.

It appears that the problem that we are having in this regard is the same as it has always been; no plan of=operation in Robinson's possession. Mr. Haile did not fail to point this out.

From Camden, I went to Saluda, and met with Mr. Charles Daniel, the man that had been chosen to do the field work for the Third District.

Mr. Daniel is a barber and seems to have quite a bit of time at his disposal for this work. When I arrived at Mr. Daniel's home, I was told that he was at the courthouse helping some people get registered. This confirmed for me some of the very favorable comments that had been made to me by Rev. Newman and McCain about Mr. Daniel's devotion to the job.

Mr. Daniel reviewed his work since he had been put on the job by the Third Congressional District. His first assignment was to visit the three northern counties so as to involve them in the district organization. This he had just completed and had received favorable replies from each. I was pleased that he had been in contact with the individual that our prior visit in these counties had shown to be the individuals engaged in voter registration.

In each of the districts, I was informed that a district meeting was scheduled for either the coming Friday or Sunday except, of course, the Sixth Congressional District where one had just been held.

As I talked with the six leaders, I told them of the Columbia meeting planned for May 9, and they all agreed to be present.

Negroes Open Campaign Here To Register, Educate Voters

The Sixth Congressional District Voter Education Project was launched Tuesday night in Florence at the Mt. Zion AME Church, and the new organization will receive $6,000 from the Southern Regional Council over a three-month kickoff period.

The purppose of this movement, according to field director R. T. Blackwell, is "to coordinate the voter registration drive in all nine counties of the district."

"However," he said, "our end purpose is to bring the community to the point of voting for improved housing, employment and health benefits for all citizens."

Also represented at the meeting were the Congress of Racial Equality by Frank Robinson, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference by Essau Jenkins, a number of local NAACP officials and Dr. R. L. Beck, president of the Voter Association of Florence.

"If we believe in democracy," Blackwell said, "the day is far past when the presence of Negro people ought to reflect in employment and public office. We must begin to vote for men on specific issues.

"The specific issues we face today," Blackwell went on, "are meat, bread and shoes for our children, houses for our family, jobs with some amount of dignity, and these are the issues which should affect all people in South Carolina."

The Tuesday meeting was coodinated with those in other S. C. districts and was the fourth of a series over the last two months.

Plans of the fledgling organization also include for each county in the district, political education and a literacy program where needed.

Newly elected officers were Dr. Beck, director and treasurer, and Robinson, district chairman.

County chairmen are Jonas Deas, Florence; Dr. P. C. Kelly, Horry; F. E. Cain, Marlboro; Alex Alford, Georgetown; Henry Issac, Lee; S. T. Graham, Darlington; Rev. J. W. Robinson, Dillon; James A Hodges, Marion and Rev. S. A. Gadsden, Williamsburg.

Re: South Carolina Leadership Meeting

May 9, 1964, I met with the six congressional district leaders of the state of South Carolina. This was a special meeting called for the purpose of planning a statewide political meeting. It was felt by the group that the time was right for them to do something to call attention to the fact that the Negro vote in the state was a factor to be considered, and that if something was not done by the group, some nondescript group would certainly do something, and possibly make statements that would not be to the best interest of the Negro people.

The group decided that a mass rally should be held on the evening of May 30, and that two sessions should also be held in the early afternoon. One of the afternoon sessions would be attended by Negro candidates and office holders, so as to compare experiences and discuss problems. It was to be hoped that out of such a meeting, a formal branch of the South Carolina Voter Education Project could be put together. This group would serve as a kind of ongoing tutorial body for future candidates.

It was also felt that all of the county and congressional district leaders need to get together and address themselves to the question of, "What after the Southern Regional Council's VEP goes out of existence?" This question and other matters were to be the chief concerns in the afternoon session.

The group decided that a real effort should be made to swell the group in attendance from communities other than the city of Columbia, where the meeting is to be held. The group set a budget of $500 for the meeting, with the hope that VEP would contribute something to this cost.

As I looked at the group, I felt that I could see some of just about everything that VEP has encountered. Effective and ineffective leadership, devoted impersonal leadership, and some personal interest leadership, fear, ignorance, etc.

It now appears that the South Carolina Voter Education Project will be the best thing that will be left when our operation no longer exists. It should therefore be made the subject of serious research scrutiny.

Re: Conference-Workshop Sponsored by the Arkansas Council on Human Relations

On April 29, I attended a conference-workshop sponsored by the Arkansas Council on Human Relations. The objective of the conference was to bring together rural churchmen so as to discuss some current problems and to supply them with some needed information.

The meeting was attended by about 100 persons, mostly ministers. I was impressed by the general interest in the program that prevailed. There were many opportunities for individuals to have walked off and yet they all stayed through the long and tiring day.

I am slowly coming to the conclusion that one of the things that the action group is not doing is developing programs that rural people can confidently play a part in. This experience in Arkansas did much to strengthen this attitude.

I made one formal presentation, and talked informally with four or five small groups. We shared experiences that had to do with how to motivate people. I stressed the importance of relating voter registration to issues that concern the people. It was interesting to watch these ministers discover in conversation, the unsoundness of their conclusion that, "the people aren't interested in anything." Indirectly and without ever saying so, I argued that they, as ministers, stood to benefit materially from "community improvement-uplift programs." [redacted]

I would describe the persons that made up this group as being the infant stage of social engineering, but who hold forth much promise if worked with.

Ozell Sutton and Nat Griswold impressed me as being in possession of the know-how for getting a great job done. Their open-mindedness, along with their frankness and excellent personal relations are things that are rarely seen in a team of this sort.

Field Trip Reports
RTB

On April 20, the council staff and I talked in detail about the future of voter registration in Arkansas. There were many factors that we had to speculate about (free registration and the constitutional amendment). It was jointly decided that the entire matter could possibly wait until Griswold and Sutton came to Atlanta in late June.

A copy of the program for the conference is attached.

Re: ASCARV Meeting in Birmingham, Alabama

April 26, I went to Birmingham, Alabama, to speak for the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting. As usual, I am compelled to say that this group surpasses all others so far as loyalty and support for the leadership is concerned. There was good representation from all of the counties, and yet, these semi-annual meetings continue to come off with little or no discussion as to what political power can really mean, or how to interpret same to others. My impression, taken from things said, was that Mr. Patton does not look with favor upon Negroes running for public office. Theoretical discussions of, "Register for what?" seems not to command the attention of Mr. Patton (the leader).

There was report after report from different communities about what is being done registration-wise. It was like a good Baptist testimonial service, and was enjoyed by all.

I gave the principal speech for the meeting, and addressed myself to the general subject, "Things That We In Voter Registration Are Not Doing Enough Of."

In the afternoon session, a group of high school essay contest winners read papers. These essayists expressed more political awareness than was to have been expected.

Plans were made for a crash registration campaign this summer.

Attached is a copy of the program and samples of the literature that was distributed.

ORGANIZING A SUCCESSFUL REGISTRATION CAMPAIGN

By: W. C. Patton

In my years of experience in organizational work, I have observed one or two persons deciding that they are going to project some type of campaign which ends up with them making a few public announcements, putting out some placards and a few handbills. This, they call a campaign.

Take it from one who has had the experience, a successful campaign requires a lot of planning, a lot of work and the involvement of a lot of people.

I have always tried to stress the fact that a lot of people, plus a lot of hard work, plus some money equal success. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on a lot of people and hard work.

No one or two persons can operate a successful campaign and likewise, success does not come by wishful thinking. It requires a lot of work that has been well planned.

A successful campaign must be well organized and should have available, all the necessary tools, such as the people, material, money and facilities, but without proper organization and coordination, it means nothing.

A well organized campaign consists of:

1. An intelligent dynamic chairman and several co-chairmen. The chairman and co-chairmen should be persons who have influence, leadership ability, some followers, time and should be dedicated.

2. Other officers such as campaign director, secretary, assistant secretary and treasurer, along with a few other dedicated persons should serve as the steering committee. Never discriminate against ladies. They have proven to be most beneficial.

3. Much of the work can be divided among committees such as car pool, publicity, recruiting, telephone, speakers bureau, finance and such other committees as may be needed from time to time.

Many of the committees will find it profitable to use retired people, shut-ins, invalids, housewives, young people as well as the white collar worker and the factory workers.

(a) The car pool is designed to carry people to be registered or to the polls, as the case may be.

(b) The publicity committee puts up the advertisements and sees that everybody knows a campaign is in progress.

(c) The recruiting committee assists in finding new workers.

(d) The telephone committee should be a very large committee with members located in the various sections of the city and county.

It is their responsibility by telephone, to inform the people of the campaign and what is expected of them. Also to inform them of the time and place of registration, the availability of a car pool and such other information as you may desire for them to have.

(e) The speakers bureau is a speech making group. They should appear in churches, before clubs, sororities and other public or private meetings when possible.

(f) The finance committee is the fund raising group. Therefore, it helps to get your most influential people on this committee.

4. Perhaps the most important people of all are the block canvassers. They are the ones who must get through to the people on the grass root level.

Each block should have a canvasser, for they are the ones who must persuade the unregistered to register.

5. The city, town, and county should be divided into sections with one or more leaders responsible for their section. The block captains should make progress reports weekly to the leaders of their sections and the leaders in turn make weekly progress reports to the campaign director.

6. Special emphasis should be placed on the director. Not very much can be expected or will be done without a campaign director. This person may be a paid or volunteer worker, but it must be someone whose time is his own and who will devote plenty of time daily to the running of the campaign.

We also like to use housewives who are unemployed.

The person who serves as director should be one who is competent, intelligent, likable with executive ability. This person should also be one who can corral workers and have the ear and respect of the community.

7. The campaign should start with a "bang" and end with a "bang". It should not run longer than seven weeks and should not be permitted to drag out. It should be well advertised.

8. Weekly pep rallies should be held with the workers. Serve light refreshments if possible. Door or attendance prizes may be given. These prizes and refreshments may be solicited from the merchants and businessmen of the community.

9. Fund raising -- Funds are vital parts of a campaign which should be raised before the campaign begins, if possible.

Avoid, as far as possible, calling on your block workers to help raise or give funds for the campaign. Call on a lot of other people who will not work, to make contributions.

Call on the churches, lodges, clubs, fraternities, sororities, labor unions, business firms and the "big shots" to make donations.

The finance committee can sponsor teas and other fund raising projects.

10. Special attention should be given by the director and campaign chairmen to the weak spots in the campaign. The trouble may be with a section of the blockworkers, the transportation committee, the telephone committee or some other place. That is why it is so important to have good active persons as chairmen of committees and other key spots.

11. Citizenship Sunday and Twilight Marches, similar to the Mother's March in other campaigns, are very important.

On Citizenship Sunday, every minister should be preaching and talking about the importance of the ballot. A three minute speaker should be sent to each church to talk about the project during the morning worship.

12. Don't let inactivity on the part of the ministers, teachers or others discourage you. You must realize to begin with, that it is always a miracle when you get a large number of persons from ministerial ranks, the teaching profession and other similar groups to help.

13. Clinics -- There are a lot of people who want to become qualified voters but are a bit shy of the application and other tests required in some states. To help these people, clinics should be conducted in the various sections and communities to teach the people that which they do not know about registration.

    Competent instructors should be assigned. The clinics should be held at least once per week and should not last longer than one and a half hours.

    They may be held in churches, lodge halls, homes, etc.

14. At the close of the campaign, a Recognition Program should be held for the workers. Merit certificates should be presented and light refreshments served. A lively pep and appreciation talk should be given.

15. The youth -- The youth can also participate. They may be used as three minute speakers, canvassers, and on various committees.

16. Finally, there is no substitute for hard work, organizing, planning and executing your plans.

    Follow the old saying - "Plan your work, then work your plans". "Success will not come by wishful thinking".

    People plus plans, plus hard work and some finance will yield success.

STATEMENT OF APPRECIATION

TO: The Honorable Mike Mansfield and Senator Hubert Humphrey:

We, the undersigned take this method of thanking you and other courageous senators for championing the cause of human rights by your effort to have the Senate ratify the civil rights bill as was passed by the house.

You are exercising the courage, conviction and fortitude of a real Statesman.

Senators Hill and Sparkman of Alabama unfortunately, are not expressing our views nor do they share our philosophy in their active opposition to the bill.

We aspire for full and complete freedom.

May God bless you and give you the needed grace and strength to be victorious.

POINTS ON HOW TO GET OUT THE VOTE ON ELECTION DAY

Many elections are lost because the voters fail to go to the polls on election day and vote.

A vote not cast is a vote against you.

So you can see that it is very important to get voters to the polls on election day.

This however, can not be done by wishful thinking. You must organize and work toward the end of getting every known and unknown voter to the polls. To accomplish this task, I would suggest:

1. Call the interested leaders together and organize a "GET OUT THE VOTE CAMPAIGN."

2. Organize a car pool for the people who need transportation.

3. Organize a corp of baby sitters to take care of the children while the parents go to the polls.

4. Ten days before the election, organize a telephone committee to call all the voters and urge them to go both to your voters meeting the night before the election and to the polls on election day.

5. Arrange community meetings the night before the election to give the voters the needed information.

6. Send announcements to the churches about your meetings and urge the the people to go to the polls.

7. Assign a worker to every block to be responsible for knocking on the door of every voter ten days before the election and tell them of the coming election.

8. The block workers should call the block captain who will make a second call to the home of every voter, the day before the election to inquire if the voter needs transportation to the polls, and if they need a baby sitter.

   The block captain should tell the voters of the arrangements to provide transportation, the baby sitters, and the voters meeting.

9. The time for beginning the organizational structure is now (thirty days before the election).

10. Make use of everybody, the retired, the invalids, the shut-ins, the unemployed, the professional workers, the factory workers and the house wives, etc.

Re: Trip to Tuscaloosa, Alabama

On May 25, I visited Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and spoke at a mass meeting that was sponsored by the "Tuscaloosa Citizens for Action Committee." The Executive Secretary for the group was Rev. T. Y. Rogers, Jr. The invitation from this group was extended through Mrs. Edwina Smith of the SCLC staff. The mass meeting was scheduled for 7 p. m. I arrived at 7:10, and found an audience of about 1,200 people singing with great enthusiasm.

The speech was well received - punctuated at several points with applause. It was very apparent to me that the group had been fired up for action by some extended period of work. I understand that Rev. Bevel has been working in the community for some time. I had the feeling that someone or group had better point this group in some specific direction, or anything can possibly happen.

I talked after the meeting with Rev. Rogers and several other leaders of the group. It was revealed that the community has fine citizenship schools in operation at the present time. Several weeks ago, Mrs. Septima Clark and Mr. Ben Mack went to Tuscaloosa and conducted a citizenship teacher training program. As a result, several ministers were trained to conduct classes. The five classes that are presently going on are under the supervision of ministers. This is a new situation. We have not had preachers involved to this degree before. It will make an interesting research fact to see just how successful they are.

I was impressed with this community. There is a lot of ready potential and the leadership seemed to be honest and sincere. Even when I called on my friends at the college (Stillman College), they had words of praise for the leaders.

I encouraged the group to apply to VEP for a grant.

Re: Field Trip to Montgomery, Alabama

On ~~June~~ May 27, I visited Montgomery, Alabama, and talked with Solomon Seay, Attorney, Mrs. Idessa Williams, Mr. James Orange, Rev. B. J. Johnson, Rev. Eaton, a Mrs. Gregory, and Mrs. Dungee along with the Board of Directors of the Montgomery Improvement Association.

This visit was occasioned mainly by the fact that VEP has never been entirely satisfied with the kind of progress that has been made by the programs we have sponsored in the past. To date, there have been some four or five different grants. I started by inquiring of Mr. Seay about the project that was under the leadership of the local lawyers. I indicated to Mr. Seay that we had not felt the four hundred odd persons registered during their drive represented what we had expected the group to accomplish. Mr. Seay was pleased to explain that the figure of 400 or so only represented the number that had been successfully entered into the books, and did not include those in excess of 1,000 that had applied, but had not been registered. Mr. Seay contended that the number successfully registered was in fact in excess of 500, but that Mr. Rufus Lewis and the persons that worked with him had encouraged people not to give the lawyers their names and addresses. This, to some extent, cleared up some of the problems in our minds regarding this project.

As I moved about, I asked the question, "What would be necessary to get a community-involved project going in Montgomery?" Mr. Seay had pointed to two things that he thought were hopeful signs. In the first place, he spoke highly of the SCLC task force that had recently come to the community. Secondly, he stated that much was to be expected of a positive nature as a result of the fact that MIA had finally chosen another person in Mr. Lewis' stead to do registration work. I immediately took this statement about Mr. Lewis as a matter that demanded further investigation.

At the office of the MIA, I inquired of Mrs. Gregory what were the circumstances that had brought the MIA board to the decision to get someone in the place of Mr. Lewis. At first, Mrs. Gregory was not willing to talk about the matter. I think she had intended to cover up their dissatisfaction with Mr. Lewis, but after several questions, she decided to tell it all.

The story ran like this: Mr. Lewis acted for several years, as the voter registration agent of MIA. He also served on the screening committee. As the years passed, Mr. Lewis worked less and less with the Association, but did continue to work at these jobs. For the past four years, Mr. Lewis decided, by himself, who the Association would support for public office. In some instances, the organization was not pleased with his decisions, but in no single instance were they willing to publicly disclaim these decisions. It was hoped that it would be possible to get Mr. Lewis to work with the elected committee on these matters.

This year, when the election came, I was told the Association sent its committee out to screen candidates. The committee reported, and the Association published and distributed a slate of candidates, whereupon Mr. Lewis went on the radio with a number of spot announcements, telling the people that the ballot they had received was not the right one, and that he would send them the right one in a few days. This action on Mr. Lewis' part confirmed some of the suspicions that were already being entertained in the community. Thus, the Association felt that it had no alternative but to find another person to do the job. Mrs. Idessa Williams was chosen because she had demonstrated, through unselfish, untiring service, her interest and ability.

I talked with Mrs. Idessa Williams, and was impressed by the fact that she and Mrs. Zecozy Williams were, on the same evening, holding a registration meeting in the rural part of the county. Both of them are working without pay or even expenses. As Mrs. Idessa Williams and I talked, it was apparent that she was giving considerable study to the matter. She has some well thought-out plans. It was a pleasure to talk with a person that was not putting money before the program.

James Orange of the SCLC task force, explained that his group had been working with Mrs. Williams, the only person doing anything - he felt. Orange was pleased to learn that we at VEP were pleased with what they had been able to accomplish. He insisted that they could possibly have done a much better job if they had had some basic materials. He pointed out that the $200 that was sent to Mr. Lewis from VEP by way of SCLC, has never left the bank. He said that Mr. Lewis would not buy mimeograph paper, or help in any way.

I attended a meetin g of the MIA Board of Directors. The meeting had been called so that the Board could explain its position on the Lewis question. The Board had invited all of the local ministers to the meeting. There were some members of the Board that were interested in defaming Mr. Lewis, but the Eaton chairman would not allow this.

He insisted that the group should concern itself with plans as to how it could best support Mrs. Williams. Mr. Seay made a passionate plea for unity and planning. All of the ministers pledged their support to the newly chosen director.

We can expect a request for a grant from this group. If it is reasonable, I would recommend favorable action on same.

Mr. Hugh Lowe, Miss Helen Hayes
234 Hernando Street, Memphis, Tenn.

When the final summary of the Voter Education Project is written, it will no doubt in some way reflect the fact that so far as organizations are concerned, the greatest numerical success was accomplished by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Such a summary would be accurate if it should also reflect the fact that the greater personal contributions, in terms of numerical successes, was made by Mr. W. C. Patton. At the time that these statements are being written about the contributions of Mr. Patton and the NAACP, we are more than aware of what these efforts leave to be desired.

While this report is directed to covering a field trip in ~~eastern~~ western Tennessee, an effort is made here to do even more that just this, in this instance.

Section I. - will be devoted to an evaluation of the staff that works under the direct supervision of Mr. W. C. Patton. The persons considered are Miss Helen Hayes, Mr. Hugh Love, and a Mrs. Crawford.

Section II. - will be devoted to a description of the approaches used by Mr. W. C. Patton and company, as exemplified in the various projects.

Section III. - will be given to a discussion of the effectiveness of the approaches in the ~~East~~ West Tennessee area.

Section IV. - will be a summary, in which we try to set out in a precise way some criticism, positive and negative, of what we have seen.

Section I.

Miss Hayes is a young lady, 23 years old; a graduate of Florida A. & M. University. Prior to coming to work for the NAACP, she was employed with a Negro weekly in the city of Mobile, Alabama. Miss Hayes, after leavingcollege and during the time that she was with the newspaper, was also active in voter registration and in Democratic Party activity.in the Mobile community. She is a very social person, appearing to be comfortable in about every social setting. The same kind of comfort and confidence, however, is not apparent in professional situations. In conversations with other voter registrant professionals from which she could benefit, she is too often defensive and given to flashes of anger. When working with volunteers, there is a tendency to work at being confident and all-knowing. I rather suspect that the veil that she puts up is not adequate to hide her lack of study and preparation.

Miss Hayes is a holder of a Bachelor's Degree in Sociology, but I have seen nothing in her performance that reflects her formal preparation. We spent a day in the field which afforded us much opportunity for conversation. In a casual way, we afforded many opportunities for her to say things that would have indicated what she had done and was doing in some reading that might help her better understand her job, and possibly enable her to perform with greater proficiency. I feel safe in saying that deliberate thoughts and study has given away to the rule of, "do something, even if it is wrong." Miss Hayes employs the approach directed by Mr. Patton. There are degrees of success in what she does, considerable less than her potential, I suspect. One thing is true - Miss Hayes' loyalty to NAACP and Mr. Patton is beyond question. Her loyalty to voter registration remains in question.

Mr. Hugh Love is a young man, 23 years old, married and the father of three children. Mr. Love is a graduate of the now famous Pine Wood School in Mississippi. He has also had one year of study at ~~Carmel~~ LeMoyne College in Memphis, Tennessee. We spent a day in the field together in which I was very impressed with his decisive and penetrating curosity. The line of conversation, and his choice of words suggest that he has had the benefit of serious education. Mr. Love did not appear very literate so far as things about politics and registration are concerned, and yet, I suspect that no one has pointed his attention in these directions. I enjoyed particularly, our argument about his idea that one is more successful if he presents himself as superior to the people that he works with, rather than trying to relate to and identify with people at their level. He was stubborn in his contentions, and yet quite open-minded.

In the field, Mr. Love employs an almost inflexible approach. Several opportunities were afforded him to offer suggestions to workers during the course of the day that we worked together - but in each case, he did not come through. Creativity was certainly not one of his exhibited talents.

Mr. Love has great possibilities providing his inclination for frivolity and personal ambition does not take precedence over personal development.

I had an extended conversation with Mrs. Crawford, Mr. Patton's secretary. Her serious dimensions and examinging mind, which was so very apparent as we talked, gave me reason to know that she is in the civil rights movement with design and purpose. I regretted her statement that so far as what should be done in voter registration was concerned, Mr. Patton is 98% right. I did not feel that I could afford to react to this, and yet, I did feel that such a statement can come to be reason enough to relieve her of the responsibility to think about how she can make an even greater contribution to what we are trying to do.

Section II.

The approaches to voter registration that are associated with and considered to be the personal property of Mr. W. C. Patton are in fact approaches that can be found, almost unchanged, in every manual in common circulation today. Organized labor, the major political parties, the American Heritage, the League of Women Voters, and other similar organizations, have for years milled out "how to do it" manuals and kits, most of which have not gone beyond the suggestion of setting up a card file and doing door-to-door canvassing. In these manuals, quite often, the use of handbills, sound trucks, and other communicative devices are taked onto the basic suggestions. The desirability of block organization is invariably suggested or implied. This is to be carried out through the organizational structure and leadership that is already existing in the given community. This, then, is very much the approach of Mr. W. C. Patton.

The approach and these manuals too often do not take into account the differences in communities and the need for a different approach for these communities. Such obvious differences as rural vs urgan, low income vs middle income, hills vs plains, Negro vs non-Negro, are almost without exception, ignored. By the same token, there is rarely to be found a discussion of how to appeal to different age groups - and this should be made, or how to use local issues to promote registration. The interest expressed in government in the past and at the present time by young people have not been embraced and made a part of registration manuals as a rule.

The shortcomings set out here relative to the general approach and the commonly circulated manual would, in the main, hold true of what Mr. Patton is doing. I hasten to point out that what I am saying here is that it is my feeling that the W. C. Patton approach, while effective to a degree, could be improved by taking into account the indicated shortcomings.

On Wednesday, June 3, 1964, I arrived in Memphis, Tennessee, and talked with Mr. Hugh Love, the designated director of the project. I asked Mr. Love how many people he had working in the project, and he suggested that there were some three or four hundred individuals. When I learned that we were in the office of the project, and compared the limited activity with other situations, I concluded that we did not have the same understanding of what we meant by the expression, "working in a project."

I asked how the people were recruited, and was told that they had been gotten together by phone calls to former workers, and by solicitation of clubs and organizations.

Among the approaches to be attempted, Mr. Love indicated that they plan to give prizes to the most successful indificual and organization. The kick-off meeting for the drive was held May 20, 1964, at which time the workers assembled, and were instructed and given literature. A sound truck has operated in the community since the beginning of the drive. It was estimated that some 2,500 people had registered between May 20 and June 5. I observed Mr. Love and Miss Hayes at work in the city of Memphis for a half day during which time some eight people were taken down in three trips.

I asked Mr. Love what he had found to be the major reason why people were not registered. He said, "Well, I feel that anybody that is not registered is a fool, but I guess I ought to say negligence and procrastination." I thought this was an interesting conclusion for a man working with the unregistered.

When asked about what he was saying to people in an effort to get them interested in registering and voting, Mr. Love said that he tells them that this is the only way that they can become first-class citizens. "Sometimes I tell them that it is their duty," he said.

I asked if he had a program for reaching the street corner people. He admitted after an embarrassing lapse of expression, that, "We use the same approach with all people." He then sought to explain, "The street corner people are different - they are young, they have not lived in the time when the white man was superior." This, I thought, was also an interesting expression. It might be that Mr. Love explained himself to a greater extent than he explained the people that he was speaking about.

Mr. Love stated that he had sent a copy of the NAACP sample sermong for Citizenship Sunday to all of the ministers. He was not sure how many had found it possible to use it.

I was told that the educators are helping, but he couldn't say just how. The following statements were solicited of Mr. Love:

> "The students at the three colleges are organized, but they have not done any registration work yet . . . .
> "There is a trade union organization in all of the plants, but I have not heard of them doing anything in registration . . .

"The only problem that I have is that I have too much to do, with Memphis and all of the others . . . .

"There is no paid help in Memphis - we do pay 75¢ per trip to the courthouse providing the driver takes as many as three persons . . . .

"Sometimes we spend money on office supplies and refreshments."

I asked Mr. Love if the community leadership was united. He indicated that it was, to the best of his knowledge.

In Union City, we visited with Miss Ramona Carwell, Miss Alma Harper, and Mrs. Rachel Freeman.

Miss Alma Harper is the director of the Obinon county drive. We spent some three hours talking with her. The essence of the conversation was, "I can't get anybody to work - I don't have transportation - I am not well - I have just a few days ago had an operation on my leg - the people curse you out when you try to talke with them." We were not able to find out anything that sounded like an organized program.

I asked about the attitude of the office of the registrar. Miss Alma Harper said that the registrar was very cooperative, that at one previous time, she had been able to get the registrar to set up an office in the community, but that only three people registered all day.

Miss Harper is a lady of about 50 years of age. She volunteered the information, "My boyfriend sells whisky, and sometimes I go over there and he makes them go down with me to register before he will sell them a drink."

Among the many complaints, Miss Harper said, "I have been running all over this county, spending my own money because the little money that you gave ran out."

When asked about other help, Miss Harper indicated that the only encouraging conversation that she had had was with the county president, Mr. Harvey Vick. However, it did not appear that Mr. Vick had done any actual work.

Explaining the difficulties that a worker often encounters,

Miss Harper said, "Just this morning, as I was approaching a man to ask him to register, he said, 'Here comes that G____D_____ sophisticated w_____ trying to tell us what to do!'"

Mr. Love instucted Miss Harper to get someone to drive her around and that he would see to it that the person was paid. No specific sum was discussed. I rather suspect that Miss Harper had no understanding of what her rights and limitations were in the business of hiring drivers or other help.

I don't know exactly what this meant, and yet I feel it has significance: In the middle of the conversation, President Kennedy's picture came on television. Miss Harper stopped a statement that she was making and said, "Oh, look there, bless his heart." This expression of endearment came as somewhat of a surprise to me. At another point in this trip, 70 or 80 miles away, I was told by an interviewee, "The people don't want to do anything since the President was killed - they seem to feel that all is hopeless."

I talked to Mrs. Rachel Freeman, the director of the Union City drive, who complained bitterly about the fact that none of the NAACP members or officers would help in this drive. "The drive in this city consists of three people," Mrs. Freeman said. It was her feeling that the people at the courthouse are friendly, but we just can't get the people down to the courthouse, she said. I waited for Mr. Love to offer suggestions, but the only thing he said was, "You can get them - just keep trying."

One of the persons working with Mrs. Freeman was a recent high school graduate. The suggestion was offered that if she was old enough to register, the people that graduated from high school with her quite likely would be also; that she could have a class reunion party at her home. This, it was felt, would interest them. Once at the party, she could introduce the idea of registering, and possibly helping in the drive. I left with the feeling that the idea had some appeal. I noted the fact that there was no offer of funds for testing this approach.

In Dyersburg, I talked with Mrs. Orvella Ross about her drive. Mrs. Ross sounded like she could get the job done. I think she is interested, but it was amazing how little she knew about what was expected of her. Miss Hayes made the initial contact for this project. There was all sorts of confusion. The literature had just been received, the forms to be used were not understood, there was no clear understanding of how long the drive was to last. Mrs. Ross said that Miss Hayes told her that she would receive $55 per week. Mr. Love told Mrs. Ross this was a mistake, the pay would be $25 per week.

Mrs. Ross spoke of organizing the youth for canvassing. This was discouraged by Mr. Love, saying old people will not listen to youth. (I, of course, wondered if he had heard of some of the success that youths have had in some communities.)

In spite of the consufion, Mrs. Ross had planned a reasonably well-organized mass meeting for the following night: The Rev. Hooks from Memphis was scheduled as the principal speaker.

When asked about the attitude of the registrar, Mrs. Ross said that she had just talked to the registrar a few days before. She said that he stopped her on the street and said, "Ovella, the NAACP is not coming up to the standards like it should in registration." "I told him I would tell the folks," she said.

Relative to other conditions in the community, Mrs. Ross pointed to what I think were some significant gains in employment.

In the city of Mason, I talked with Mr. T. C. Mason, the director of the drive. Mr. Mason, a man appearing to be in his late fifties, is quite articulate and sober - but he had no program in operation. He said that he was trying to get a complete list of the registered voters, and that this was holding him up. I asked him what he planned to do with the list when he got it - I don't think he had definitely decided on that part of his program. Mr. Mason complained of the lack of cooperation, and explained that many people that might possibly help are now in the field due to the season of the year.

We were asked for specific suggestions as to how to get his drive off the ground. I did not say anything, and Miss Hayes apparently did not have anything to offer. I asked what organizations there were in the community, and was told that most of the organizations are women's clubs. I followed with the question as to whether the clubs would work in a drive for a prize. Mr. Mason said he did not like the idea of paying people; he felt that they should do it out of interest in the cause. "We just need community leaders," he said, talking about professional people. "Well, what about the ministers?", I asked. "They talk, but they won't act....they are not afraid.....the whites bother you when you have no organization - when you have one, they don't bother you."

As we talked, it was very apparent that Mr. Mason had never heard of VEP or the south-wide effort. The NAACP came in for some criticism in this discussion also. Mr. Mason indicated that he did not feel that the literature that had been sent to him could be used in his community. It seemed as if he was saying that to put the bumper stickers on a car was to single one's self out for attack. Here, we see the fear coming out in an indirect way. He thought that the display cards for churches and stores were good, however.

I asked Mr. Mason if he had received sample sermons for Citizenship Sunday from Mr. Love. He said that he had, but that he had not distributed them because he did not think very much of ministers that read sermons.

I went to Brownsville, but was not able to see the project director. We were told by her husband that his wife was working, but he could not give us the name of anyone that was working with her.

Section IV.

It must be noted that most of the facts, opinions, and conclusions contained in this report are based in the main, on a three-day visit in the subject area. Such a short period of time and such limited contact is hardly adequate for a definitive investigation; and yet, it is felt that there is merit in what has been written here.

In the way of summary, I would point out:

1. At almost every stop, the projects under Mr. Patton's supervision are receiving far less in the way of funds than we here at VEP thought our grants to them would allow.

2. There is no clear cut idea as to what each project is allowed financially and for that reason, many project leaders elect to do little or nothing in the way of spending.

3. Loyalty to the NAACP and Mr. Patton is beyond question in the field and in the office. There is likewise loyalty to the job of voter registration - possibly to a lesser degree.

4. There is some understanding of the job to be done, and how to go about it, but there does not appear to be any great interest or ability to expand upon what is known, or to improve existing skills.

5. It would appear that regional leadership training institutes, well thought out and planned, would be of great benefit.

6. There is great interest in voter registration in the field, but most of it will not likely be translated into action because of the reason stated above.

In spite of anything that I have written here that may appear critical of Mr. Patton, I would like to state that I have developed a great respect for him. Some of what I have written, I would have said to him had he been in the office at the time of my visit. I take comfort in the belief that Mr. Patton and I have developed that unusual rapport wherein it is not necessary to agree in order to maintain our respect for each other.

Re: South Carolina Voter Education Project Meeting

Voter registration in the state of South Carolina has reached a level of organization and development wherein it can be expected to continue for some few years with a minimum amount of support and supervision. The leadership in the state is still lacking the confidence in its opinions that one would desire, but this will surely develop with time. The twelve or so field trips made in the state were fully justified by the positive accomplishment reflected in the three-session statewide meeting held May 30, 1964, which completed the formation of the South Carolina Voter Education Project. Against a background of three failing attempts at a statewide organization in the past twenty years, knowledgeable people in the state are now saying, "With the kind of leadership that the organization has, and with units in every county, we come closer to having a state organization than we ever have before."

The South Carolina project was developed in a way different from previous attempts. Instead of calling a few people from around the state together, and choosing state officers and then trying to move down to the local level, this organization was started at the county level, then moved to the congressional district level, and then on to the statewide level. One of the virtues of organizing this way was that leadership was passed out at each level, thereby decreasing the supply of available talent and lessening the possibility for conflict.

The May 30 meeting, the purposes of which are set out in a field report written May 20, entitled "South Carolina Leadership Meeting" went off as planned, and as set out in the attached program. The 4 o'clock session of county and congressional district chairmen was presided over by Dr. Thomas. (He has submitted a report of this meeting.)

I presided at a 4 o'clock dinner session that was closed to office holders and candidates. Some twenty persons attended. The principal speech was delivered by Mr. Moses Riddick, followed by a very healthy and enthusiastic discussion of the following questions:

1. Does the presence of Negro candidates substantially effect the interest Negro people show in the political life of the community?

2. How can interest be increased?

3. What kind of campaigns do Negroes usually conduct in the state?

4. What are some improvements that can be made on these campaigns?

5. What can we do to better prepare Negro candidates to serve, if elected?

Mr. Reddick was well received by the group, and made a real contribution. Some of the things that he said, caused me to know that I have not yet mastered the art of speaking frankly without offending. At one point, he looked at the group and said, "All of you will be defeated - you sitting there praying to God to elect you to office. Don't you know the same God that is up there now was up there when you were in slavery? I prayed to be elected, and got defeated three times. Then I went to work, and built some block organization!" In the same frank way, he talked to the group about how to raise money for registration and where to look for it. (A tape of his speech was made, and is in our files.)

The evening session where Senator Leroy Johnson spoke was attended by about 750 people who received his message with great enthusiasm. The attached news clip summarizes this session. A partial list of the 160 delegates is also attached.

Re: Field Trips to South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia

On June 15, I stopped briefly in Oconee, South Carolina, and held a conference with Dr. Hill of that city. My primary reason for talking with Dr. Hill was to inquire of him as to whether he was in contact with the congressional district leaders of the Third District.

The Third District was one of the last in the state of South Carolina to be organized, and the one district in the state that had not involved, to some degree, all of its counties.

As I talked with Dr. Hill, it was developed that he had been contacted by some of the district leaders, but that he had not gotten his organization tied into the overall organization. Dr. Hill indicated that he had received an invitation to the meeting, but had not found it possible to attend. He complained about the fact that the Third Congressional District is extremely spread out, and that to have attended the meeting would have meant traveling 150 to 200 miles.

I was pleased to receive from Dr. Hill the assurance that he is still interested in the district organization, and I assured him that I would talk with Rev. McCain and see if something could not be worked out.

On the same evening, I made an effort to talk with Dr. Hawkins in Charlotte, North Carolina, about this program, but learned that he was out of town.

In Greensboro, North Carolina, on June 16, I talked with Dr. George Simplins, and was told by him that he and his group would be interested in trying to conduct a drive sometime before the November election. He indicated that he had received a grant from NAACP for voter registration in the amount of $500.

Dr. Simpkins promised that he would supply us with a summary report and that he would place before us a proposal for another grant.

In Richmond, Virginia, June 17, I talked with Mr. Herman Benn, Rev. R. J. Wimbush, Mr. Lester Banks, Mr. John Brooks, and Mr. Earl Davis.

Mr. Herman Benn and Rev. Wimbush are officers in the Virginia Voters League. Rev. Wimbush succeeded Mr. Cook, the former Executive Secretary of the League. Rev. Wimbush explained that Mr. Cook was of senior years, and in declining health. Mr. Cook's condition was explained to have contributed substantially to the decline of the state organization.

Rev. Wimbush indicated that the League still has very good connections around the state though they are, to a degree, inactive. It was his contention that with a little help, he could reactivate this once very active organization.

I suggested to these gentlement that VEP might possibly be interested in making a grant larger than the last one if they would indicate their area of strength. In response to this, they suggested that they had contacts of significance in the Fourth Congressional District, and would like to do work in that area and possibly the Eighth. I suggested that they place a proposal before us.

Being in Richmond offered me an opportunity to talk with Mr. Lester Banks and Mr. John Brooks. I was interested in three questions:

1. What was the state NAACP planning in the area of voter registration for the period before November?
2. What financial assistance had NAACP contributed to voter registration in the state?
3. Had my former impressions of Mr. John Brooks been justified?

As we talked, I learned that the NAACP had not spent any of its funds in the state of Virginia. Nothing was said that sounded like the association plans to spend any funds before November.

Mr. Banks expressed some interest in VEP funds for the Fourth Congressional District, and some 10 or 12 cities in the state. As he talked, I got the feeling that Mr. Banks was putting his program together for the first time.

Mr. Brooks was his usual sociable self, and yet I still don't know just how sincere he is about voter registration. Mr. Brooks told me that the NAACP had done a bang-up job in North and South Carolina. He explained how he had set in operation, an organization in South Carolina that was really the ideal thing. I sought to explain some of the facts about the South Carolina program, but Mr. Brooks would not relent.

I frankly cannot tell whether Mr. Brooks believes what he says, or whether he is just careless with the truth.

One thing of value that came out of the conference was Mr. Brooks' frank suggestion that the best group to do the job in Richmond was the Richmond Crusade for Voters.

I made an effort to establish contact with this group, but the principal officers were not available. Mr. Brooks is associated with people in the group, and said that he would encourage the group to communicate with VEP.

I called on Earl Davis at his house in Richmond and had a very warm conversation about the Raleigh, North Carolina, project. He indicated that in the main, he was satisfied except for the fact that the Democratic party had not come through with its share of the cost of the program as agreed.

Mr. Davis indicated that he would keep us informed as to what are the areas of priority for the coming month as far as he sees them.

In Petersburg, June 19, I talked with Mr. Herbert Coulton of SCLC. As on previous visits, I found Mr. Coulton engaged in a kind of activity that could be interpreted as doing community voter registration, and yet his activities lend themselves to other interpretations. On this occasion, I found Mr. Coulton at the local bowling alley where he was meeting with a group of people. Mr. Coulton explained that by working with this group on a recreation problem, he is able to get them to work with him in voter registration.

As per usual, Mr. Coulton was not able to spell out an organized program, and yet he insisted that he is getting people to register constantly. He complained that he is still handicapped by the lack of funds.

Mr. Coulton insisted that through the efforts of himself and some others, a Negro would be elected to the City Council of Petersburg on the following Monday.

I told Mr. Coulton that a number of groups are expressing interest in the Fourth Congressional District of Virginia, and that VEP would be interested in any proposal that he might have.

In Enfield, North Carolina, I talked with Mr. A. Reed Johnson about the Enfield project. I asked Mr. Johnson if the Negro people had become discouraged by the fact that all of their candidates had been defeated in the last election. Mr. Johnson said that they had been prepared for that kind of outcome. They were, he said, encouraged by the showing that was made. I asked if this would effect their organization. He answered that this would serve to indicate the need for more effective organization. While I was at the office of Mr. Johnson, some 25 or 30 cars collected in the yard for a mid-day meeting of leaders from all over the county to talk about moving on with their organization.

I raised with Mr.Johnson the matter of SCEF taking credit for the work being done in Enfield. Mr. Johnson showed me the letters that had been sent out and received between himself and WAB. Commenting on his letter, he said that he would prefer not to try to discuss the matter in a letter, because there are many sides. He said that he did not feel that Salter was a Communist; that Salter had denied any such connection; that Salter had worked with them and had made a great contribution; that their organization is an old one, and that the most successful things that it had done were done before Salter came to the community.

I got the feeling that Mr. Johnson took offense to the suggestion that they might not be making their own decisions. He said that he would like to come to Atlanta and talk the matter over. I agreed that this might be a good idea. Mr. Johnson then said that he would have done the next day if it had not been for the fact that his wife had just gotten fired as a teacher because of her work in voter registration. He said that they had over the past two years or so, put all of the money that they could into community projects. He then asked if I thought WAB would pay for his travel to Atlanta, and I suggested that he should call and ask - that it might be possible.

With reference to future plans, Mr. Johnson said that the movement is still making plans to carry on, but that their future is in question due to the lack of funds. I suggested that VEP would be interested in any proposal that he might have.

In Wilson, North Carolina, June 19, I stopped and had a brief conference with Dr. Butterfield. It was important to inquire of him how his project had worked out. I was pleased to be able to say to him that we were generally pleased with the results of his project. Dr. Butterfield said that they feel that an even greater job can be done. He pointed out that the grant that VEP had made was used to pay a group of individuals that had not only worked at getting people registered, but also at setting up block organization. He said that some of the recruited block-workers later came to feel that they were entitled to pay, also. This is a problem that is being worked out. Dr. Butterfield said that they are interested in conducting another drive before the November election, and that they planned to ask for some additional help. I indicated to him that we would be interested, whatever we would have to propose.

In Raleigh, North Carolina, June 19, I talked with Mr. James Shepard, about the project in that city. Mr. Shepard reviewed for me the history of the project in what I thought was an objective fashion. He pointed out that on the whole, the SNCC workers were good. At points "they tended to be a little opinionated," he said, but that he learned to deal with that. Mr. Shepard said that he did not want to hold the fellows to a higher standard than he should. Using such language as, "They are opening doors that I would not attempt." indicating that he was not sure that they did not have a right to be just a little stubborn. "There are some things that just cannot be done here," Mr. Sheppard said.

Mr. Sheppard indicated that the project came to a successful conclusion with two problems left behind. An unpaid telephone bill and a missing typewriter. I told Mr. Shepard that Mr. Davis had said to me in Richmond that he was going to try to take care of the phone bill. I promised that I would call the SNCC office and tell them that the Raleigh group felt that their organization was responsible for the missing typewriter.

Voter's Guide

FACTS FOR VOTERS IN NORFOLK, VIRGINIA

TIDEWATER VOTER REGISTRATION PROJECT

QUALIFICATIONS

FOR VOTING

YOU MAY VOTE IF:

1. You are a U. S. citizen 21 years of age or over;

2. You have lived in Virginia one year, in Norfolk six months, and in your precinct 30 days;

3. You have paid your poll taxes as required; and

4. You are registered.

You may vote in a primary if you are qualified to vote in the general election for which the primary is held.

POLL TAX

What it is. The poll tax is a capitation or head tax of $1.50 for each year of Virginia residence (except the first), levied on every citizen over 21, whether or not he or she intends to vote.

Its relation to voting. In order to vote you must have paid, six months before the November election, any poll taxes due for the three years preceding the year in which you wish to vote.

HOW AND WHEN TO PAY

The poll tax is assessed by the Commissioner of Revenue on every person over 21 years of age known to be in residence in the city on January 1 of a given year. The bill is mailed by the Treasurer, along with other tax bills, and is payable by December 5. If you have not received your poll tax bill by December 1, call the Treasurer's office to be billed, or pay in person at City Hall. If you fail to pay the poll tax by December 5, you must pay it with a 5 per cent penalty added by the registration deadline the following May, in order to vote.

Keep your poll tax receipts - you may need to show them at the polls.

Members of the Armed Forces and Veterans.

Members of the Armed Forces and Veterans are excused from payment of the poll tax for any year or part of the year in which they were in active service, providing they claim Virginia as their legal residence. Those who are overseas may vote without registering. In that case they should apply for Armed Forces ballots from the State Board of Elections, Richmond, Virginia.

21 Year Olds. A Virginia resident who will become 21 before the date of the general election must register before the registration deadline even though he may not yet be 21. Then he may vote without paying the current year's poll tax.

SPECIAL ELECTIONS

If a special election is held before the second Tuesday in June you may vote if you were qualified to vote the previous November or if you paid all poll taxes due at least six months before the second Tuesday in June. For a special election held on or after the second Tuesday in June, voting qualifications are the same as for the November general election of that year, up to six days prior to the election unless it falls during the 30-day period before a regular election, when books are closed.

ABSENTEE VOTING

Any qualified voter who is physically unable to go to the polls on election day or who is away on business or vacation, may vote by absentee ballot. (This includes students away at school.)

How to apply for ballot

1. Ask in person at your Registrar's office for the application for an official ballot, which may be filled out immediately. You will then receive your ballot. Or you may:

2. Write the General Registrar for the application for an absentee ballot. You will receive an application form which must be filled out and witnessed by one person, giving the witness' address. Then mail or give the application form to the General Registrar not less than eight days before the election in which you wish to vote.

HOW TO CAST YOUR ABSENTEE VOTE

1. When you receive the sealed envelope containing the ballot, take it, sealed, to a notary public and follow the instructions on the envelope.

2. Return the ballot in the official envelope, by registered mail or in person. Any ballot returned in any other way will be void.

3. If you find that you will not need to use your absentee ballot, return it unopened at least three days before the election; then, if you go to your polling place on election day you may vote.

4. Even though you have cast your absentee vote, you may appear at the polls on election day, void your ballot, and vote in person.

HOW TO REGISTER

Registration is permanent in Virginia. Once registered, always registered, for as long as you maintain your legal residence.

When to register You may register any time in the year except during the periods when the books are closed - 30 days preceding the primary, 30 days preceding the general elections, and six days preceding a special election. Remember to take your poll tax receipts, or, if exempt, proof of military service.

Where to register. You may register in the office of the General Registrar, Second floor, City Hall Annex, Plume & Atlantic Streets. The Registrar's Office is open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday - Friday.

Change of Residence. If you plan to move from one precinct to another, call the General Registrar to ask that she transfer your name to the new precinct. This must be done before the registration books close. You must vote in the precinct in which you live, except that you must vote in your original precinct if there is an election within the next 30 days.

AT THE POLLS. . .

Outside the polls. No person other than judges and clerks may be within 40 feet of the voting machine and no crowds may congregate within 100 feet of the voting place.

Inside the polls. When you enter, give your name and address to the clerks to be checked on the poll tax and registration lists. When your name is found on both lists by them, you are ready to vote.

To Vote. Voting machines are in use in Norfolk in the primary and general elections. Demonstration machines are on display at the polls.

"A Program to Increase the Electorate of Tidewater"

Dear

We take this opportunity to congratulate you on being one of our new first-class citizens.

On becoming a qualified voter, you have taken the first big step toward eliminating the problems and injustices which now confront the Negro people here in the city of Norfolk and throughout these United States. We feel that one of the most significant steps the Negro can take at this hour is that short walk to the voting booth; for without the power of the ballot, the ears of the legislators and officials are deaf to the wishes of our people.

It is now up to you to exercise that God-given right in the struggle for equality. Every right entails a duty. Negroes have a right to vote, and the duty to exercise that right.

Yours for a better Norfolk,

Arthur T. Freeman

BEAUFORT COUNTY STATISTICS

1960

Prepared by

PENN COMMUNITY SERVICES, INC.

Frogmore, South Carolina

Beaufort County - 1960

This study is designed to provide a statistical outline of Beaufort County and to help locate problems warranting special attention.

Since Penn Community Services works primarily with the Negro community, this study is focused specifically on Negro, or non-white, statistics. We realize that these problems are not limited to the Negro community. While the responsibility of improvement lies partially with the Negro community, significant changes must necessarily involve total community cooperation.

Some figures stand out in the following tables:

Population: During the decade 1950-1960, Beaufort changed from a predominantly Negro County (57%) to predominantly white (62%). The county experienced the highest percentage increase (64%) of the state -- primarily white persons, through establishment of the Marine Corps Air Station.

Education: 81% of Negro students enrolling in 1950 ~~at the St. Helena School~~ dropped out before graduation; 46% of the Negro population over twenty-five years old are functionally illiterate, yet the public schools spend per Negro pupil only 70% of the funds that it spends for each white student.

Farm: Negroes comprise 74% of the farm operators but farm only 8% of the land; only 3% are tenants.

Employment: Almost one-third of the Negro families earn less than $1,000 annually, and over one-half earn less than $2,000. More than one-half the workers hold unskilled jobs.

Rural Housing: One-third of the total homes in the county either have an outdoor privy or no facility whatsoever. 15% of the homes do not have flues for heating, while one-third are without piped water.

Health: 55% of Negro babies are delivered by a midwife, and 35% of Negro births are illegitimate.

Registration: Negroes comprise about one-third of registered persons for voting, yet only 17% of those eligible are registered.

Several terms should be defined: The definition of farm was changed in 1960, to include farms that have at least 10 acres or sell $250 worth of products annually; earlier the figures were 3 acres and $150. The new definition partially accounts for the large decrease in number of farms.

Figures for the Beaufort Division include those of Beaufort city. The city statistics are listed because of their significance.

Voter Meeting

Senator: Negroes Can Change South

By DAVE BLEDSOE
Staff Writer

A Negro Georgia state senator said Saturday that the Negro voter could change the face of the South.

Addressing a meeting of the Voter Education Project in Columbia Saturday night, Sen. Leroy Johnson urged a continuation of the fight for equal rights on all fronts. The predominantly Negro audience interrupted his occasionally fiery speech with frequent applause.

"The Negro must no longer be planned for, he must be planned with," Sen. Johnson said.

He traced the evolution of the Negro movements calling them a "wind of change that is blowing across America." Much of this change is being brought on by the new generation which no longer clings to the past, he said.

Sen. Johnson predicted further demonstrations and court battles at any place "where the Negro is relegated to second class citizenship."

In his hour-long speech, Sen. Johnson outlined the areas where Negroes have been successful in advancing what he termed "their burning desire to be free.

"A man should be able to live where he can afford to live, send children to schools of his choice, vote as he pleases and, mainly, be free of segregation," he said.

The Voter Education Project, organized in 1963, achieved permanent status by a vote of the executive committee in closed session Saturday afternoon.

Dr. Charles A. Thomas of Orangeburg, chairman of VEP, said that 40,000 Negro voters have been registered in the year-long drive by the group.

Progress reports from the six congressional districts were presented to the group in closed session prior to Sen. Johnson's speech.

Drive To Double Negro Voters Now Under Way

By JACK ADAMS

The Wilson Citizens Committee has started an accelerated program "to double" the number of Negro voters in the county.

The committee, composed of Negro leaders representing various clubs, has a goal of raising the number of Negro voters to more than 5,000 during its three-week campaign, which started Monday.

Already, the effects of this campaign are being noticed at the Board of Elections. More than 70 Negroes have registered since the first of the week.

Rev. T. A. Watkins of First Baptist Church, Pender and Nash Sts., is president of the committee, which recently received a $1,500 grant from the Voter Education Project in Atlanta, Ga.

Past Programs

In the past, Watkins said, there have been programs to encourage more voter participation among the Negroes in Wilson County, but this is the strongest concerted action that has been taken.

"Apathy has held us back," Watkins added, "and lack of funds. This grant helps us a lot, and clubs also are contributing."

Prior to the January 14 election during which the "Little Federal" plan was killed, there were 2,595 Negro voters in Wilson County, representing approximately 15 per cent of the total number of registered voters in the county.

In order to increase the number of Negro voters, a house-to-house canvass is being conducted.

List Compiled

Also, the committee is receiving from the Board of Elections a list of all the Negro voters in the county. This list is being compiled at a price of three cents per name.

"With this list," Watkins said, "we can determine whether a person is registered or not. Some of them say they are and they're not, so we can just check back and find out for sure."

Workers who conduct the house - to - house canvass are paid through the funds accumulated by donations from clubs and the $1,500 grant.

Money Is Factor

"We'd like to run this campaign longer than three weeks," Watkins said, "but we'll run out of money."

Dr. E. K. Butterfield, local dentist who serves as social affairs chairman for the committee, stated, as did Watkins, that there is no political connection with the drive.

"We feel that it's just our responsibility to encourage voting and that it's every citizen's responsibility to vote," Doctor Butterfield said.

Workers for the committee have been instructed against trying to persuade persons how to vote, Doctor Butterfield added.

Since January 14, there have been 124 Negroes who have registered to vote, while, during the same period, 118 whites also have registered.

Bipartisans Crush All Attempts To Weaken Rights Bill In House

By JOHN BECKLER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Southerners raised the cry of "steamroller" today against a bipartisan group that has so far crushed all attempts to weaken the civil rights bill in the House.

The coalition of Republicans and Democrats put together by the House leaders of each party scored its biggest victory Wednesday night when it approved with only minor changes the key public accommodations section of the 10-part bill.

The provision, which, along with the rest of the bill faces a tough time in the Senate, would prevent discrimination against Negroes by eating, lodging or entertainment establishments.

A 153-68 vote against an amendment by Rep. George Meader, R-Mich., that would have drastically limited the effect of the provision, climaxed a long day of frustration for Southern opponents and touched off the first real display of bitter sectional feeling since debate started Friday.

Rep. Paul C. Jones, D-Mo., shouting, "The old steamroller is rolling," accused the leadership of shutting off attempts to alter the bill by putting up a united front against any and all amendments.

And Reps. Edward J. Patten, D-N.J., and George Andrews, D-Ala., engaged in a shouting argument sparked by Patten's

Partly Cloudy, Cooler Weather Is In Prospect

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Weather Bureau said the general rains which covered North Carolina Wednesday night were expected to taper off today. Scattered showers and snow flurries were forecast for the mountains with a chance of scattered thunderstorms along the coast.

Greensboro and Charlotte recorded the most rain Wednesday night. Greensboro had 1.18 inches and Charlotte an inch. Other rainfall reports were .98 at Wilmington, .92 at Raleigh-Durham, and .88 at Asheville.

The highs and lows for the 24-hour period ending at 7 a.m. today included 64-46 at Raleigh-Durham, 63-54 at Wilmington, 62-43 at Greensboro, and 58-46 at Charlotte.

The predicted lows tonight range from the low 30s in the mountains to 35 to 45 elsewhere.

Candidates For Governor Discuss Problems Affecting NC Economy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Various problems affecting North Carolina's economy drew the attention Wednesday of the three major Democratic candidates for governor.

I. Beverly Lake, Dan K. Moore and Richardson Preyer all were in action during the day in the Piedmont section of the state.

Lake said he would create a 100-member committee to advise him on state policy. The group would "serve without pay as a permanent committee to confer together and advise me what policies I should adopt and what I should recommend to the legislature," he told a High Point audience.

Among other things, Lake said, the committee would recommend ways in which the state could assist North Carolinians in business expansion.

He said he would not offer tax concessions or favored treatment in an attempt to lure new industry to the state.

Moore discussed the tobacco-health problem in a speech at Durham, a key cigarette-manufacturing city.

Tax Cut Bill Nears Passage In Senate

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The administration's $11.6 billion tax cut bill moved today to the brink of final passage in the Senate.

Democratic leaders said if the bill wasn't passed by tonight, it almost certainly would be approved Friday. It has already cleared the House.

At least 10 to 12 amendments —some dealing with such controversial issues as reductions in the depletion allowances for oil and gas—remained to be acted on before a final vote.

The administration cleared its final big hurdle Wednesday with a 48-45 defeat of a Republican effort to repeal the 10 per cent retail excise tax on four categories.

GOP Proposal

The GOP proposal would have wiped out World War II levies on furs, cosmetics, jewelry, watches and luggage including handbags, and would have cost the Treasury about $450 million a year.

To line up votes against it, Democratic leaders pledged a review of all federal excises later this season, starting in the House Ways and Means Committee.

After the vote on the retail excise taxes, the Senate bogged down in six hours of heated de-

Four Soldiers Die In Wreck

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) —Four Ft. Bragg soldiers were killed early today when a tractor-trailer truck loaded with 30,000 pounds of wool slammed into a car at an intersection on Interstate 95.

Fayetteville police said it was the worst accident inside the city limits since 1939.

Killed were Wilfred D. Buffington, 24, of Bauxite, Ark.; Marvin B. Atkins, 24, of Detroit; Grady D. Taite, 20, of Chance, Ala., and John D. Goodwin, 23, of New York City.

They claim the witness, Edward G. Partin of Baton Rouge, La., was "an undercover agent for the FBI" who misused their confidence during the trial at Nashville.

Hoffa and five others are being tried before U.S. Dist. Judge Frank Wilson on charges of trying to tamper with the Nashville jury. That trial ended with a hung jury.

Partin, who is under indictment on charges of embezzling $1,600 from his local, linked the defendants one-by-one with alleged attempts to rig the jury.

Partin, secretary-treasurer of the Baton Rouge local, testified Hoffa told him midway in the 1962 trial he "would pay $15,000 to $20,000 to get to the jury." At another time, Partin said Hoffa boasted he had one juror "in my hip pocket" and added that a "hung jury is as good as an acquittal."

Mrs. Emmett Riddick, executive secretary of the Board of Elections, says there also has been a number of people who thought they had to re-register every six years, even if they had voted in that period.

"I don't know where they got the idea that they had to register each six years," she said. "Their registration remains good as long as they vote each six years."

One of the reasons persons are anxious to re-register may be because of the fact that it was publicly stated that over 2,000 voters would be purged from the books if they failed to vote in the February 14 election.

It was about 7 a.m. when the searchers reported seeing the student hikers at the hut.

Rangers sent a request to Dow Air Force Base in Maine for a helicopter.

The students had food for only four days when they started the hike. They had tents and sleeping bags, and wore heavy clothing.

The search was organized Monday when the four failed to return on schedule.

Money is what it can buy...

Clothes, food, homes, cars, insurance.
Or more money.

Money in the form of interest from banks — or bonds.

Money in the form of dividends from stocks.

Money in the form of capital appreciation from rising stock prices.

A home, insurance, and emergency savings come first, of course.

We've said that time and time again.

But the next rung on your financial ladder might well be common stocks.

Why?

Because nine out of ten stocks on the New York Stock Exchange have paid dividends — 656 of them every year without fail in fact, for more than twenty years — some for over 100 years.

Because if you bought $1,000 worth of every stock on the New York Stock Exchange starting in January of 1926 — and if you reinvested your dividends as you went along — then by 1960 a person in the equivalent of today's $10,000 income bracket could have realized on the total investment a return equal to 8.2% interest compounded annually after payment of all commissions and capital gains taxes.

Purely as a matter of mathematics, $1,000 compounded annually at 8.2% would amount to $15,774 in 35 years. Or $10,000 would amount to $157,740.

Of course, the past is no proof of the future.

And just which stocks you select can make all the difference in the world. That's why anybody who means to begin a sensible investment program of his own should consult an established brokerage firm.

In this regard, you're always welcome in any one of 154 Merrill Lynch offices around the world.

Or you can simply write to us about your funds and financial situation, about how much money you'd like your extra money to earn, what you hope your investment program might accomplish for you — and how soon.

Negroes

...ing Registrations Rise; 415 Are Added

The flood of voting registrations continued to rise yesterday, with the total since the January 14 "Little Federal" plan election climbing to 415.

There were 70 persons who registered yesterday, 66 of them Negroes.

Of the total of 415, there have been 281 Negro registrations and 134 by whites.

The Negro registration is part of a concerted drive sponsored by the Wilson Citizens Committee "to double" the total number of registered Negroes.

The house-to-house canvass to solicit Negro registration started Monday, February 10.

The drive gained its initial impetus from a $1,500 grant, and has gained further financial backing from contributions by Negro clubs and organizations.

The Rev. T. A. Watkins of First Baptist Church, Nash and Pender Sts., is president of the Citizens Committee, an organization composed of Negro leaders representing several civic clubs.

Re: Field Trips

I left Atlanta early Thursday morning May 16th by private auto, and drove to Birmingham (accompanied by my entire family).

SCLC officials had made a project announcement of a gigantic voter registration program in Birmingham in lieu of demonstrations. VEP has been supporting a registration effort in that city since last fall, and we have already given the local group $9,000, and they have raised better than $2,500 in the local community for voter registration which they sent to us, and we gave back to them. The effort there is under the sponsorship of the Ninth Congressional District of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting.

Atty. Orzell Billingsley put in an effort to get better community support. Atty. Arthur Shores was made chairman of this special effort. Mrs. Bernice Johnson, a public school teacher, is now serving as voluntary coordinator for the program, and is doing a magnificent job. The only full time paid employee is Miss Doris Nelson who was the office secretary, but is now the field director.

I know something of the concern which the local sponsoring group felt regarding the announced plans of SCLC officials. During the height of the demonstrations, a SCLC official took several people from a church where they had been attending a voter registration clinic, and announced they were going to march to the courthouse, and all of them were arrested. There were some people in the group who had no intention of being arrested, and others were forced to spend long hours in jail, when they thought they would be released immediately. This action did not meet with the approval of VEP sponsored groups, and the whole episode did hamper the regular voter program. This occurred at a time when SCLC and the Alabama Christian Movement were under an injunction against demonstrations, and many people who had been active in our voter registration program felt that the VEP sponsored groups might be placed under an injunction, and there were school teachers and others working in voter registration who could not afford to be involved with people who appeared to be deliberately violating the terms of the injunction.

With this background, I felt it was important for me to discuss the voter registration drive with SCLC officials in Birmingham, and also with the VEP groups there. (ASCARV). I talked with Arthur Shores, Orzell Billingsley, Doris Nelson, Emory Jackson (Editor of the Birmingham World), and others, and the opinion was unanimous that the prior actions of the SCLC and the Alabama Christian Movement (the voter registration march) were detrimental to the registration efforts, and would likely effect the kind of program which SCLC might conduct. They felt that SCLC and the Movement should use the mass meetings simply to urge people to register, or to attend one of the voter meetings conducted by ASCARV, and then let ASCARV get them down to the courthouse. This would be good, but they also expressed doubt that SCLC would follow through on its announced plans for any appreciable length of time.

I talked with Wyatt Walker briefly, but most of my conversation was carried on with Andrew Young. Rev. Young agreed that the prior march to the courthouse had been a bad thing, and was something which did not meet with his personal approval. He stated that there were a number of students from Miles College and from the community who want to get active in voter registration this summer. I told him that James Forman of SNCC had expressed a desire to send some SNCC contacts in there, and we agreed that any voter registration program in Birmingham should be coordinated, and that nothing should be done without the full knowledge and approval of the local ASCARV group. Rev. Young was to meet with the ASCARV group on Monday, May 20th, and promised to let me hear from him soon after that date.

GREENWOOD, MISSISSIPPI

I arrived in Greenwood, Mississippi, late into the evening of May 16th, and went immediately to the COFO office. Bob Moses had left the office a few minutes earlier to go to the city police station to check on Melton Hancock, who had been arrested, and who was said to have been beaten by the city police. When Bob did not return right away, I went down to the police station and the police commissioner and the chief of police became rather disturbed on seeing me as they wondered how I happened to show up so soon after the "beating". The police alleged that Hancock resisted arrest after he failed to produce his driver's licence on the demand of the officer, and he was struck across the head with a night stick. He had been taken to the hospital. Stitches were required, and he was kept in the hospital all night. Subsequently, he was released and was given a fine which was appealed. The Justice Department is investigating the beating.

After spending more than an hour at the jail, I brought Bob back to the COFO office where I immediately went into a conference with Bob Moses, Lawrence Guyot, Emma Bell and others regarding the budget for COFO operations. A separate memo has been previously prepared regarding this budget discussion, It appears that we have people still going down to the courthouse in Greenwood each day, but we still have no information as to how many have successfully registered.

TUSCUMBIA, FLORENCE AND SHEFFIELD, ALABAMA

On Monday, May 20th, I visited Tuscumbia, Florence, and Sheffield, Alabama, and made an attempt to see several people in that area whose names had been given to me by Fannie Neal of COPE, as persons active in voter registration. It appears that this is a section of Alabama where there is very little racial discrimination in the registrar's office, but unfortunately, the office is open only two days per month. I had a very lengthy conference with Mrs. Bernice Owes, (1006 E. 18th St., Sheffield, PH - 382-1548). Mrs. Owes is secretary of the Colbert County Voter's League. She is also the secretary for the Laborer's Union, a local Negro labor union which maintains a rather nice labor hall. Mrs. Owes can be reached at the labor hall, PH - 383-3572. The Colbert County Voter's League is active in Sheffield, Tuscumbia, and Muscle Shoals, but most of the active members live in Sheffield. The president is Charlie Burgess of 200 Central Ave., Muscle Shoals, who works for Reynolds Metal Co.

The Tennessee River separates Sheffield from Florence, and there is a separate voter's league in Florence. The only place where one can register in Colbert County is at the courthouse in Tuscumbia, and this poses a transportation problem for people living in Sheffield and Muscle Shoals. Both voter's leagues are members of ASCARV, and they attend the semi-annual meetings. Other persons in this area who are active in voter registration are: Mrs. Rebecca Rutland, Box 396, Cherokee, Alabama; William Lang, Tuscumbia; James Hampton, Sheffield; and Martha Pearl Jimmer, Leighton, Alabama. Mrs. Owes promised to communicate regarding voter registration plans in that area at an early date.

DECATUR, ALABAMA

I phoned the VEP office from Florence, and Randolph Blackwell told me that a Mr. Sykes, a funeral director in Decatur, Alabama, was very much interested in talking with somebody about voter registration, and I agreed to go over to Decatur and see him. When I first talked with Mr. Sykes on the phone, he denied he had any interest in voter registration until he found out that I was with the VEP, and then he became rather eager to talk with me. I talked with him at his funeral home (1004 Bank St., Decatur), but his wife pretty well took over the conversation. Mrs. Sykes is from New York, and it appears she has not lived in Decatur too long. (They both appear to be about 60).

Mr. Sykes had received a letter from W. C. Patton informing him that Mrs. Bernice Johnson and Miss Doris Nelson would be visiting Decatur in June to help them with a special registration drive during the first week of July, which will take place in several rural counties with support from VEP. I get the impression that there is a need for someone to go into Decatur and stimulate some local leadership before much can be expected from this group.

HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA

I know that the registrar's office in Huntsville, Alabama, is open on the first and third Mondays, and since May 20th was a third Monday, I thought I would go to Huntsville and witness some registration first-hand. I mentioned this to Blackwell on the phone so that he might confirm the fact that this was the date the registrar's office would be open. When I arrived in Huntsville, I went immediately to the office of the Madison County Coordinating Committee, (228 Church St.), which is maintained in the office annex of the Presbyterian Church. I found Mr. Robert Adams, the director of the project, and a secretary on duty, but was disappointed to learn that the registrar's office had not been open at all during May on account of a special liquor referendum election which is to be held in the first week of June. It is customary for the registrar's office to close during the last 30 days propr to any election, and this was the situation here. I felt that our field director should have gathered this information (the fact that this registrar's office was closed, and about the election), since he had made two separate trups into the Huntsville area during a two-week period prior to May 20th, one of which was especially for checking on the Huntsville program.

It also appears that Huntsville pretty much drained its potential during the previous VEP supported effort, as the number of people going down under the current program is considerably smaller. The group has done a very good job in conducting house to house surveys to determine the registration status of all the people, and they know where most of the unregistered people live, and who they are. I noted that high school students were used to gather this information, and it appears that they were paid for door to door canvassing. Although the amount paid to the students was very nominal, it would appear to me that volunteers can and should be recruited for such door to door campaigning and similar activities.

Project Director

WAB:js

It should be noted that on May 12, I spent three hours talking with Lee Bell at his home about the Huntsville project. I also talked with Dr Cochin and Mrs Pierson about the project. Each of these conversation were held separately and in neither one of them was the fact that there was a special election being held mentioned. In each conversation the plans for the month were spelled out and I relied on what was told to me. I don't see that there was any thing deceiving in these people having not told me of this election nor do I see how on a Sunday I could have checked this matter or tried to.

J H Calhoun

January 4, 1963- Visited Gainesville, with Rev. Bennette, for a meeting with leaders for organization and attendance at a clinic. The meeting was held at Mt. Zion Baptist Church.

A voter-registration plan for Hall County was worked out, with arrangements for a county-wide meeting January 27, at the same place. Mr. Maynard Brown acted as temporary chairman and agreed to serve permanently and work with the Progressive Club, the Hall County Voters League and the E. E. Butler High School P. T. A. The group recommended that the combined 9th & 10th District clinic be held in Athens instead of Agusta. All churches and interested organizations were to send representatives to the county-wide meeting and outlying communities were to be invited.

We returned to Atlanta that night.

During the day I discussed with Mr. O. J. Hurd a meeting for East Point January 9, and informed him that it may not be possible for me to attend, but I would get Rev. Bennett.

I was also busy writing the V. E. P. report for the period of September 10, thur December.

J. H. Calhoun

January 8, 1963 - Talked with Mrs. Barlow, Columbus, about Vernon Mitchell, whom I had been trying to contact for several weeks. She assured me that he was interested in the registration program and would contact me when he returned to Columbus.

Attended meeting of interested citizens in Columbus to set up a program for voter-registration and discuss program of 3rd District Citizenship Clinic, in Holsey Chapel C.M.E. Church. Rev. W. J. Reynolds, temporary chairman, presided, with 25 persons present. Because the attendance was small, the group decided to have a county-wide mass meeting to invite persons from all sections and 23 organizations named in the voter-registration plan, which was revised at the meeting. Wednesday, January 30, was set as the date and the pastor of Wynton Hill Baptist Church, 2620 Buena Vista Church, extended an invitation, which was accepted. I promised to try to get Rev. H. I. Bearden of Atlanta as speaker. In my talk, the importance of coordination and ministerial leadership was stressed. The mass meeting was cited as a build-up for the clinic on February 2 and the urgency of having youth present was pointed out. A clinic committee was named composed of M. B. Jackson, chairman, B. F. Lawton, C. B. Marshall, Sam Sapp, B. F. Priester and G. F. Rivers, to meet Wednesday, January 16, at noon in the Atlanta Life Branch Office.

Began sending out 2,000 statewide announcements of clinics.

J H Calhoun

JANUARY 15, 1963 - Contacted M. F. Jackson, Columbus in regard to meeting with committee in Columbus Wednesday, after failing to reach Atty. Albert Thompson, vice chairman of the committee.

Prepared letters and material for Columbus Clinic. Arranged for Rev. H. I. Bearden as speaker for Columbus Mass Meeting, January 30, because he formerly pastored at St. James AME Church and is popular as a religious leader, as well as, his work with NAACP and the Premiss King decision outlawing the White Primary. Worked on revision of Citizenship Clinic Manual.

Attended meeting of the All Citizens Registration Committee, West Side Branch, YMCA (See Rev. Bennettes' report.) Officers for the year were not elected, but the co-chairmen Mr. Jesse Hill and Dr. C. A. Bacote were authorized to name a nominating committee to report on February 7 for the Annual election.

J H Calhoun

JANUARY 16, 1963 - Visited Columbus to meet with officers of the registration committee, headed by Rev. W. J. Reynolds to arrange for the 3rd Congressional District Clinic, Feb. 2. Place, program and publicity were discussed with the 13 leaders present: Albert W. Thompson, G. F. Rivers, Tommie Moses, Mrs. Clasie Walker, B. F. Preston, Sam Sapp, Whit Battle, Jackson Wheeler, B. F. Lawton, A. J. McClung, M. B. Jackson and Rev. Reynolds. It was agreed to prepare letters to 3 ministerial organizations from Rev. M. L. King, Jr., me and the local temporary co-chairmen: Reynolds and Thompson. Futhermore, we would send, on SCLC stationary, letters for 80 odd ministers, asking their support, as well as, blank letterheads and envelopes for the committee to use. We also worked out plans for the January 30 Mass Meeting to elect pernament officers.

Luncheon was served: Dutch Treat, and I returned to Atlanta that afternoon.

J W Calhoun

JANUARY 17-21 - Working on reports for V E P, conferring with Rev. Bennette on field work and reporting. Report submitted to Rev. Young and found to be faulty. I was asked to make a detailed summary.

Prepared letters and materials for Columbus ministers as requested. Sent out additional letters to leaders for Valdosta Citizenship Clinic 8th Congressional District January 26.

J H Calhoun

January 23-24 - Made detailed summary report for V E P. Prepared materials for Valdosta Clinic, including 25 Citizenship Clinic Manuals because printer could not get any of 1,000 revised edition of manuals ready. Conferred with Citizenship School staff or their part in clinics. Arranged to send out letters for 4th Congressional District Clinic.

J. H. Calhoun

January 25, 1963- Left Atlanta 11:45 A.M. to visit Jacksonvelle, Georgia and the 8th Congressional District Clinic in Valdosta. We arrived in Jacksonville at 5:15 and found about 30 citizens waiting. I discussed with them advances made in our state thru political action and the necessity for increasing registered voters. They presented the problem of having registered 600 in 1962, as a result of organization inspired at the 8th Disrrict Clinics in October 1961 and March 1962, but all were disqualified when called up for the test. I suggested that 100 of those who failed be brought together and examined. If the disqualifications are justified we will try to initiate citizenship training; if not it should be brought to the attention of local officials. If they fail to act, we will help to report it to the U. S. Department of Justice.

A voter registration plan for the Telfair County was developed in the meeting and they were urged to send representatives to the Valdosta Clinic, which they did.

A subsequent visit by the Citizenship School staff: Mrs. Clark and Miss Ponder, revealed that 75 of the persons interviewed, were not qualified and citizenship training is projected. Four citizens are in training at McIntosh this week and a county-wide mass meeting is planned for Monday night February 25, to which the citizenship and voter-registration staffs will attend. We proceeded to Valdosta, but the pre-clinic briefing session was apparently not understood and did not transpire. Those who arrived Friday night were; Rev. Bennette, Mrs. Ellis Mrs. Freeman and I for voter-registration; Mrs. Cotton, Mrs. Clark, Miss Ponder and Mrs. Young from the Citizenship Training techniques into the clinic such as: Singing, role playing and interpretation of the film strips, which our staff can now do effectively, after observing it in two clinics: Valdosta and Columbus. Our staff led these demonstrations in the La Grange and Athens Clinics.

J. M. Colham

January 26, 1963 - The 8th Congressional District Clinic, opening the series, began on schedule with an effective Memorial Service, led by Mr. C. C. Hall, undertaker in Fitzgerald and Principal of the Lowndes County High School. The Citizenship School staff led demonstrations and two movie strips were shown. Voter registration techniques were explained and demonstrated. District elections were held for youth, as well as, adults and chairmen were named for each county to return and start organization. The following week copies of the program, names and addresses of all delegates and officers were mailed to each of them.

Sunday, January 27, 1963 - I drove to Gainesville alone for the county-wide meeting at 4:00 p.m., which was delayed because there was another meeting in the Mt. Zion Baptist Church. The following leaders were present: Ulysses Byas, C. R. Morrow, J. W. Merrett, J. W. Morrow, Jr., Rev. Rufus Dinkins, Mrs. Marian Christian, I. J. Watson, Dr. Nelson McGhee, Jr., Austin C. Brown, Rev. Harold C. Turner and Maynard Brown.

The voter-registration program was revised and the group became convinced that a county-wide mass meeting was essential. This was scheduled for February 13 or 14, either of which Senator Leroy Johnson might be available. I was requested to provide 150 announcements and materials for kits of the District PTA Council scheduled to meet on February 9 and to help them with letters or other publicity. Prof. Byas, principal of the E. E. Butler High School agreed to take a large responsibility, so did Mrs. Christian, PTA president. Improvement of conditions in Gainesville, support of ministers and enlistment of youth, were the main topics of discussion. The ministers present expressed strong support of the campaign. I returned to Atlanta that night. During the meeting it was reported that 300 voters were added in the 1962 campaign.

It was agreed that all efforts would be made to publicize the 3rd Congressional District Clinic at the Masonic Temple, Columbus, Saturday, February 26. Several persons also agreed to attend the pre-clinic session Friday night, October 1 at the Masonic Temple. Rev. Bearden was given an honorareium of $15.00 by the committee and the party, composed of Mrs. Ellis, Rev. Bearden, Rev. Bennette and I, returned to Atlanta Wednesday night via Auto.

J H Calhoun

February 1, 1963 - Left Atlanta for Columbus at 5:45 with Mrs. Ocelia Ellis, office secretary-field worker to be joined later by Rev. Bennette and the Citizenship School staff: Mrs. Septima Clark, Mrs. Annelle Ponder, and Mrs. Dorothy Cotton, who did not arrive, however, until Saturday morning. The rest of us were quartered at the Carver Motel.

Mrs. Ellis and I had a pre-clinic session with Mr. M. B. Jackson, treasurer of the Committee, Mrs. Clocie Walker, Mr. C. B. Marshall, Mr. G. F. Rivers, Mr. Whit Battle, Mr. Sam Sapp and others. The program was reviewed and special emphasis was placed on the urgency of having youth representation. Mr. Vernon Mitchell, 1962 director, was not present, neither was Chairman Reynolds.

It was apparent, by this time, that the coordination of leadership in Columbus was still faulty. The same old group was not too sympathetic with the younger leadership and ministerial support was seriously lacking. There was still some trace of opposition to Mr. Vernon Mitchell, although most everyone agreed that he was the best person to direct the campaign. Rev. Reynolds, a hard worker was too dictatorial and lacking in organizational techniques. We were encouraged, however, by the promise of Mr. Mitchell to work with us.

THIRD CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CITIZENSHIP CLINIC

COLUMBUS, GEORGIA, MASONIC TEMPLE - FEBRUARY 2, 1963

Clinic opened with Memorial Service for the late John Wesley Dobbs, Grand Master of Prince Hall Masons conducted by J. H. Calhoun, assisted by Rev. Fred Bennette, closing with the singing of "This Little Light of Mine," one of Mr. Dobbs' favorite spirituals.

Mr. Calhoun explained the program of the Clinic and Rev. Fred Bennette, field secretary showed the film: "Knock on Every Door." Mrs. Septima Clark explained the Citizenship School Program and urged attendance from each county.

Mrs. Dorothy Cotton arrived in time to conduct singing and role playing on how to canvass, assisted by Rev. Bennette and Mr. Calhoun, who did the "fishing" interview" in which the canvasser used the prospect's interest in fishing to gain his confidence and friendliness, after which the latter agreed to go to the courthouse and register. Miss Annell Ponder and Robert Dowdell, of Americus did an unrehearsed skit protraying handling of a difficult prospect. Mr. T. J. Johnson, Sr., Mrs. Classie Walker and Miss Isoline Davis also did a skit potraying a difficult mother and daughter who were afraid of "white folks." Mr. Sam Sapp led a song and Mrs. Cotton, assisted by Mr. Calhoun brought out, thru questions the good and bad points of the demonstrations.

Only two counties being represented, voter-registration plans were worked out for each, with each delegate receiving a copy. After dinner, served to 38 of the 52 persons registered by Holsey Temple CME Church, adult and youth delegates separated. The former discussed the importance of bond issues and constitutional amendments and nominated district officers. Youth delegates discussed organization, "A Program for Youth" and nominated District officers.

In the closing session, the film "Knock on Every Door" was shown, followed by an explanation of the important points. Volunteers were taken for Courthouse Committees in Columbus, (17) and Americus (7).

The following officers were elected:

Adults	Youth
Vernon Mitchell, Columbus Chairman	James Williams, Columbus Chairman
Samuel Weston, Americus Vice-Chirman	Atha Denson, Americus, Vice Chairman
Mrs. Classie Walker, Americus Secretary	Carolyn Snead, Americus Secretary
	Gwendolyn Cox, Columbus Assistant Secretary

The clinic closed with the singing of "We Will Overcome" in a joined circle and Benediction at 4:00 P. M. The staff returned to Atlanta that afternoon.

February 4, 1963 - Contacted Rev. A. R. Hill, La Grange, in regard to the 4th Congressional District Clinic, scheduled for February 9, and Mr. Washington Virgil of Thomasville, about the 2nd Congressional District Clinic, March 2. Mr. Hill agreed to schedule of clinic and county-wide meeting set for tonight. Mr. Virgil stated that his group had re-elected him to serve as chairman and he had called them for a meeting Tuesday, February 12, after which he would contact me.

We prepared a letter to go to adult and youth leaders of the 5th Congressional District. Program and organization list for the 3rd District Clinic prepared for mailing to participants.

Went with Rev. Bennette to La Grange to meet with leaders of Troup County, where there were about 40 persons present, under the direction of Rev. Hill. A voter-registration plan for Troup County was worked out under direction of Mr.
The program of the 3rd District Clinic was worked out and assignments were suggested for role-playing. It was agreed that we would not come in until early Saturday morning for the Clinic. This arrangement was found to be unsatisfactory, however, causing us to decide to continue the pre-clinic arrangements for Friday nights.

J. H. Calhoun

February 5, 1963 - Talked with Vernon Mitchell, Columbus, about funds and activities of Muskogee County organization and arranged for Senator Johnson's visit to Gainesville for Mass Meeting. Talked with Prof. Ayers about the Gainesville meeting for Thursday night. Senator Johnson could not attend on time because of an important commitment for the Jaycee award. Conferred with office staff and arranged for letters to Columbus participants, as well as, letters to Fifth District leaders.

Attended meeting of the All-Citizens Registration Committee with Messrs. Jesse Hill and C. A. Bacote, co-chairmen, presiding. In the election of officers, the committee recommended re-election of the same officers: Jesse Hill and C. A. Bacote, co-chairmen, Marshall Arnold, Secretary; C. R. Yates, Treasurer; and Rev. C. A. Colbert, Chaplain. The co-chairmen were authorized to name necessary committees. Mrs. Bradley, of Washington Evening High School, who had brought several of her students, told of plans for registering evening school students. I suggested that we take advantage of the presence of nearly 100 persons and set up temporary sectional committees, before having to leave for another meeting. I understand, however, this was not done. I announced the Fifth Congressional District Citizenship Clinic at Wheat St. Baptist Church, Atlanta, February 23, 1963.

At the meeting of the Atlanta Negro Voters League Executive Committee, which followed, there was considerable discussion over an issue, raised mostly by Mr. C. A. Scott, Editor-Publisher of the Atlanta World, as to whether the All-Citizens Registration Committee is a sub-committee of the Atlanta Negro Voters League. The misunderstanding was clarified by Dr. C. A. Bacote, co-chairman of the committee, R. A. Thompson, Warren R. Cochrane, J. R. Henderson and myself. In the background there appeared to be political implications against Mr. Jesse Hill, who had been active for Muggsy Smith in the 1961 Mayoralty campaign and with the Democrats in 1962. It was shown that the Committee was organized in 1946, three years before the organization of the League, that it was a coordinated group of all organizations interested in registration. The Atlanta Branch, NAACP, the Urban League, and the former Atlanta Civic and Political League had been the main support. Later, the Atlanta Negro Voters League, along with the NAACP, were the principal financial backers. Recently the SCLC and last year the VEP have given financial support. Officers of the NAACP and Atlanta Negro Voters League have usually seen to it that their respective Registration Committee chairmen have been the same person. In 1962, there being different persons: Messrs. Hill (NAACP) and Bacote (ANVL), they were made co-chairmen. It was finally agreed that the League would continue to support the committee as in the past, but give closer attention.

J. H. Calhoun

February 7, 1963 - Conferred with Q. V. Williamson, Atlanta, Hosea Williams, Savannah, and William Randall, Macon about state - wide activities, with special emphasis on the Macon and Savannah Citizenship Clinics. The latter is to take the form of demonstrations for leaders from other districts since the 1st District has been working two months on a program of citizenship training and voter-registration.

The Macon clinic will precede the semi-annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League.

Mr. Williams was not able to see Rev. Young, who was out of the city.

J H Calhoun

FEBRUARY 8, 1963 - Conferred with Senator Leroy Johnson, and Dr. C. Clayton Powell on the relationship of the Senator's position to voter-registration and made plans for coordinating leadership over the state. The necessity for working with leaders like Willian Randall, Macon, Hesea Williams, Savannah, Vernon Mitchell, Columbus, Slater King, Albany, Rev. O. S. Hamilton and L. B. Wallace, Augusta, all of whom are active in voter-registration.

Rev. Mullins from Thomasville, pastor of the 1st. Baptist Church, visited the office in the interest of the 2nd Congressional District Clinic, March 2. The sponsoring group wanted information on who was sponsoring the Clinic and what political committment was required. He was informed as to the history of the Statewide Registration Committee and its affiliation with SCLC, as well as, the fact that no political committment was involved. He expressed concern with divisions in leadership, fear on the part of leaders and confusion created by the techniques of hand-outs, small favors and threats. He felt that the clinic and coordinated organization in voter-registration would help. He cited an instance of a Negro woman's being wrongfully prosecuted for drawing a gun on a white person and the Negro Ministerial Alliance refusing to raise funds for her defense as an example of the confusion. Rev. Mullins, who had been in Thomasville only one year was cautioned against projections himself, rather than working behind established leadership, unless forced to in order to get action, in which case it would be better to project a young, native citizen. We expect final response from Thomasville after their executive committee meeting Tuesday night.

I conferred with Mr. Jesse Hill on the naming of committee chairmen for the Atlanta program and brought him up to date on action of the Atlanta Negro Voter League in clearing up misunderstanding as to the origin and status of the All-Citizens Registration Committee, as well as, the League's decision to continue support of the committee with a closer affiliation with its activities.

Late Friday afternoon I learned of the dissatisfaction of VEP with SCLC reports. Upon contacting Mr. Jack Lennon of VEP, I learned for the first time the exact nature of the desired reports. At his suggestion, we were to continue the discussion, so that he could learn the Georgia Program.

FEBRUARY 9, 1963 - Directed 4th Congressional District Citizenship Clinic. Arrived at First Baptist Church, LaGrange, Ga., Rev. A. R. Hill, Pastor, at 8:50 A. M. Registration began at 9:10 A. M. with 6 present when the program began at 9:40 A. M. with the Memorial Service for the late John Wesley Dobbs, conducted by Rev. A. R. Hill and Rev. E. D. Hill, respectively. Trouble with the projector caused a delay, but the First Baptist Church had a projector on loan from the City Library, which was used to show two films: "Government is Your Business" and "Knock on Every Door." In the absence of Mrs. Dorothy Cotton, Mrs. Ocelia Ellis, with the assistance of Rev. A. R. Hill, pastor of the church and coordinator of the Clinic, led the singing and demonstrations. Two role-playing demonstrations were presented on canvassing with objectors and three high school students, Misses Grace Hill, Cornelia Hightower and Elizabeth Smith led discussions on the seven steps of organization from the Clinic Manual. A sumptuous repast was served for 44 persons at $1.00 each which was paid by SCLC. Two counties were represented: Troup and Carrollton, the latter for the first time in the 5 year history of the annual citizenship clinics. Messrs. Crogman Mullins and C. B. Ward of that county reported that they have no difficulty in registering. They expressed the need for help in organizing to increase registration from 900 to 1400 this year. Troup County representatives expressed the same interest to help increase their representations from 1200 to 3500. Because of threatening weather, causing small attendance, a meeting was scheduled for February 22 to which leaders from all 4th Congressional District Counties will be invited.

Mr. Crogman Mullins and Rev. A. R. Hill of LaGrange were asked to serve as temporary co-chairmen to initiate voter registration and set up organization for the district. Miss Grace Hill is to serve as temporary youth chairman, with the other youth forming a committee. Mr. Rufus Hill, high school student, furnished piano music for the occasion.

Rev. Fred Bennette, field secretary, Mrs. Ocelia Ellis, secretary-field owrker, Miss Emily Poole and Mrs. Septima Clark of the Citizenship school composed the staff. Mr. Thomas McBride, Troup County Farm Agent was very helpful with the Clinic.

FEBRUARY 10, 1963 - Contacted Mr. L. B. Wallace with regard to a meeting with leaders prior to the public meeting in Tabernacle Baptist Church, Augusta, Monday, February 11 at 7:30 P. M.

Worked out plans for speech in Augusta and wrote an outline for role-playing at the Athens Clinic.

J. H. Calhoun

February 11, 1963 - Cont. - Visited Augusta with Rev. Bennette and Mrs. Ellis as speaker for a mass meeting; left Atlanta at 3:45 p.m. and arrived in Augusta at 6:30 p.m., going directly to the office of Mr. L. B. Wallace. He carried us to dinner, where we encountered Messrs. Vernon Jordan, NAACP State Field Secretary, Patton, NAACP voter-registration Field Secretary, Father Morris and C. S. Hamilton, president of the NAACP. Mr. Wallace had informed me the day before by telephone that the NAACP had concluded a Freedom Rally that day; with Father Gibson, of Miami, Florida, as speaker. They left as soon as we arrived. Mr. Wallace did not mention the meeting of the group of leaders I had asked him to call before the mass meeting.

It was a cold rainy night and the crowd at Tabernacle Baptist Church was small. As we entered the church, the same NAACP group was conferring in the church office. It was encouraging to note that the two rival groups had come together after the older one, The Citizens Voters League, had elected a new president: Mr. H. C. Brooks. Father F. W. Morris is president of the other: the Augusta-Richmond County Voters League. Combining their respective voter-registration committees, with Mr. Wallace as temporary chairman, this is supposed to heal a leadership breach which had caused dissension for a number of years. The older group had been accused of accepting money from candidates under the former president, Mr. Zeigler. (See reports of Rev. Bennette and Mrs. Ellis for details of meeting)

After the meeting the NAACP group was again conferring with leaders. In a telephone conversation with Rev. Hamilton, who is a former Morehouse College schoolmate, I learned that Messrs. Patton and Jordan had been invited in a month before; he knew nothing of the activities of the two political groups until they asked to use his church about 10 days before. He said they had agreed to let me come on and speak, but that they had worked out plans to accept help from the NAACP. He advised us to wait and see how the program they adopted Monday night would work out, as Mr. Wallace had acted on his own.

In Athens last Saturday, Mr. Brooks, new president of the Citizens Voters League, was very cooperative and apologetic. He said the NAACP was to give $1100 of a $1900 or $2000 budget, but they could hardly raise their share of the amount by April 1, the close of the drive. He suggested the possibility they would ask SCLC to help if the drive should be extended.

J. H. Calhan

FEBRUARY 12, 1963 - Arranged for letters to persons who attended the LaGrange Clinic including those of record for the 4th Congressional District Citizenship Clinic, inviting them to the meeting February 22 in First Baptist Church, LaGrange for the purpose of organizing.

Called and conferred for 1½ hours with Mr. Jack Minnis of VEP in regard to deficiences in SCLC reporting, revealing the following problems:

I. VEP was not familiar with the voter-registration program of SCLC as it relates to the activities of the Statewide Registration Committee, especially in regard to the Annual Congressional District Citizenship Clinics.

II. There was lack of understanding of the basic objectives of VEP by the SCLC field staff.

A. A research project to determine:

1. The procedures and status of voter-registration in certain states and/or areas of the South.
2. Problems involved in registering Negroes in these areas:

a. In relation to state laws and practices of public officials.
b. In regard to reactions and attitudes of Negro leaders and citizens at large, especially ministers.

B. Carrying out the purpose of the project in such ways as to:

1. Provide the proper information thru records.
2. Assuring expenditures of funds for voter-registration activities.
3. Maintaining the tax-exempt status of the SRC.

III. Mr. Minnis was given the following information:

A. The Statewide Registration Committee was organized in 1957 by the Georgia Voters League as non-political.

1. It was structured with an executive committee and district chairmen.
2. A budget was established; of which NAACP contributed $2,500 the first year, 1958, $1,500 the second year, SCLC and Mr. N. B. Herndon $1,300 the fourth year. There being no state elections in 1961 there was not much registration activity.
3. A program of affiliation with SCLC was established in December, 1961, with me as part-time director of voter-registration for Georgis, Rev. Fred C. Bennette and Rev. Benard Lee as field secretaries.

B. The program of the Statewide Registration Committee, which was adopted by SCLC as follows:

1. A series of Citizenship Clinics for each U. S. Congressional District, teaching:

a. Importance of citizenship, registration and coordination.
b. Seven steps in county-wide organization.
c. Georgia registration laws procedures, canvassing and get out the vote techniques.
d. Suggested youth and church programs.
e. A citizenship clinic manual with law and procedures on registration.

2. Contacts are made thru personal visits, telephone calls and two letters to some 2,000 youth and adult leaders in 100 counties.
3. Pre-clinic and follow-up organization in such counties as funds, time and staff will permit.

C. Results of activities in Georgia for 1962 were obtained mostly prior to May 5, the day the books closed. Books in most counties remained open, but for the September Primaries and General Election they closed in May, six months ahead. Futhermore, August, September, October and November were spent by voters in state and senatorial primaries and the General Election. Registration was mostly incidental. See reports on activities - May 15 and December 15.

D. The period of August 1, to December 31 was spent as follows:

1. August - September - Directing DOVEL in Albany - See reports.
2. First week in October to first week in November on leave without pay.
3. November to December - see separate reports.
   a. Preparing reports on DOVEL.
   b. Planning and arranging for meeting of the Executive Committee of the Statewide Registration Committee December 15.
   c. Staff conferences and SCLC field staff meeting on 1963 program.
   d. Making contacts and arrangements for Citizenship Clinic Series.

IV. Copies of reports, plans, agreement were left with Mr. Minnis, with the following understanding:

A. Detailed reports will be submitted as per VEP requirements.

B. Request will be made to SCLC for field workers conference with Mr. Minnis to secure similar understandings.

J. H. Calhoun

FEBRUARY 17, 1963 - Attended a staff conference at SCLC for two hours, after preparing reports on previous week's activities. In the staff conference were Rev. Andrew Young, Rev. Fred Bennette, Rev. Bernard Lee, Mrs. Ocelia Ellis, Miss Jean Turner and Myself. We read and discussed the VEP criticisms on the reporting of SCLC field workers. After Rev. Young gave his reactions, I explained the understanding that I had gained from conversation with Mr. Jack Minnis of VEP. It was agreed that field workers should prepare detailed reports for January and February as requested by VEP. For the first time Rev. Lee first and Rev. Bennette gained an exact understanding of the nature of the desired reporting. As stated in the conference, the difficulty seemed to have arisen from the fact it was impossible for Mr. Minnis, who is responsible for the detailed work on the Research Project to relay his necessary requirements thru Mr. Branton and Rev. King or Rev. Young, who apparently were not familiar with the actual field work. This was especially a problem for our state since Mr. Minnis was also unfamiliar with the nature of the Georgia Program. I tried again to make it clear that VEP is not attempting to direct our activities but to know exactly what we are doing in detail, as well as, the results obtained for research and record purposes of VEP.

In a previous conference at B. B. Beamon's with Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker and Rev. Young, we had gone over some of this ground work.

Thursday evening at 6:30, Rev. Bennette and I went to Gainesville for a Mass Meeting on voter-registration, sponsored by the Hall County Registration Committee, headed by Mr. Maynard Brown. We arrived at 8:00 P. M. and the meeting started. (See Rev. Bennette's Report) . Because of the lateness of the arrival of Senator Leroy Johnson, who had to attend an affair relating to his Jaycee Award as one of Atlanta's five young men of the year, I had to talk some 45 minutes on the political implications of citizenship and voter-registration. My subject was: "An Idea whose Time has come: Freedom," using a more historical approach than was used in Augusta.

Both Addresses to the audience of nearly 200 citizens from 3 or 4 counties, seemed to be highly inspirational. Sixty-five volunteers were enlisted and the Citizenship School program was emphasized. Hall County registration should improve greatly this year. We returned to Atlanta that night.

FEBRUARY 15, 1963 - Prepared letter for distribution to leaders for Thomasville Clinic after call from Mr. Washington Virgil. Made up report on expenditures at LaGrange Clinic. Conferred with Rev. Andrew Young on report for January - February. Prepared materials for Athens Clinic. Made several unsuccessful efforts to contact Mr. Eli Jackson of Greensboro by telephone. Arranged with Miss Peggy Rutland to get out letters for Thomasville Clinic. Left Atlanta 7:00 P. M. with Mrs. Ocelia Ellis, office secretary-field worker and Miss Emily Poole.

= Delayed by confused highway directions, arrived in Athens, Georgia at 9:15 P. M. and found 15 youth and adults, including Mr. Ray Ware, Rev. M. Tate pastor of Hill Chapel Baptist Church, waiting for pre-clinic session. In the session, we rehearsed only role-playing for canvassing and organizations. Several, including Miss Thelma Terrell and Miss Carol Arnold, volunteered to act Saturday. Had dinners with Mr. Ray Ware as our guest, Rev. Bennette did not attend pre-clinic session inasmuch as he attended an organization meeting in Conyers, Rockdale County. He came up Saturday Morning.

ATHENS, GEORGIA

The meeting was delayed for Principal Edwards of the High School to participate in Memorial Service for the late Grand Master John Wesley Dobbs, but he was unable to come. The services started at 10:15 A. M. in Hill Chapel Baptist Church, site of the Clinic, conducted beautifully by Rev. R. B. Hawk, head of the Athens High School Political Science Department and pastor of Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church in Atlanta.

Movies strips and unrehearsed role-playing demonstrations, from which important points were made thru questions, answers and discussions, made this the most effective clinic of the series. Outstanding participants in the clinic were: Rev. Hawk and Ray Ware of Athens, M. H. Brittian of Washington and H. C. Brooks of Augusta, Because of their experience in handling community problems and securing improved facilities thru political influence. Mrs. Mamie Terrell of Athens was also very effective, as well as youth participants from Athens and Augusta. The youth delegation from Washington was rather quiet, whereas, the Augusta youth showed the effect of having participated in local clinics directed by Mr. Adolph S. Dickson who was present, and very active in the clinic.

A new plan of scheduling was found to be very effective: coffee and cookies were served at noon, with no interruption, and dinner was delayed until 2:45 P. M. instead of 1:00 P. M., which enabled us to continue the workshop to completion and overcame the effect of some delegates not returning after the dinner period.

= The closing, or after dinner, session was then confined to remarks from delegates, final instructions and elections of the officers.

Mr. M. H. Brittian of Washington, Georgia told how they got 300 new registered voters in their past registration program and plan to get 500 more registered voters this year. They worked for 3 months and are ready to start again. He explained how they appreciated the work of the State-wide Registration Committee. When registration first began they had a hard time finding out when the books would be open. He went to the judge, who did not know who the registrars were but promised to find out when books would open and would publicize it in the newspaper. Quite a few people were turned down. The F. B. I. made investigations and cards were sent to all people who had been disqualified telling them that they were qualified. After a while chief Registrar became friendly. Because Mr. Brittain stated he did not know thy the F. B. I. came, Mr. Calhoun explained that last year the District Chairman, Mr. Toombs McLendon, reported these irregularities, as well as, one requiring interpretation of the Constitution. The situation was called to the attention of Rev. Wyatt Tee Walker, of SCLC who contacted Mr. Burt Marshall of the U. S. Department of Justice, in Washington.

Mr. Ray Ware Expressed the importance of seeing the University of Georgia, explaining how tax-payers' money is being spent for the expansion of the University. He urged us to encourage more people to go to the University. He also explained the importance of boycotts and registered voters for more jobs for Negroes.

FEBRUARY 18, 1963 - Attended organization meeting in East Point with Rev. Bennette, serving as principal speaker and emphasizing organization, individual participation as an obligation to secure benefits in employment, education and civic betterment. Mr. M. H. Herd, Co-Chairman, Mrs. Ida M. Dozier, Chairman and Mrs. Catherine Louis, Secretary, as temporary officers and the only ones present at the last meeting were successful in getting 65 people out after announcements and circulation of 2,000 hand bills. After Mr. Herd and Mrs. Louis said they could not serve as officers, pernament officers were elected. Mr. J. L. Jackson, Chairman, Mrs. Ida M. Dozier, Vice Chairman, Mr. Lovett, Secretary, Mrs. Betty Maddox, Assistant Secretary and Mrs. A. M. Walker treasurer. Mr. Calhoun who presided over the election, suggested that they have an installation meeting and serve refreshments. Suggested to Mr. Jackson that he contact Messrs. McLaren, Principal, South Fulton High School and Gilbert, Principal, Fairburn High School, as the former said his 18 year olds would be ready to register but would need transportation. Rev. S. M. Davie, Pastor led devotions and was very helpful, supported all suggestions, commented on speeches and pledged coorporation. The people were urged to get their individual pastor's support. 33 persons signed up as volunteers and a copy of the attached list will be sent to Chairman Jackson.

A large part of the day was spent preparing reports for the VEP January and February, conferences and telephone calls with Rev. Bennette, Rev. Abernathy and Vernon Mitchell of Columbus about funds for Muskogee County.

J. K. Calhoun

FEBRUARY 18, 1963 - Preparing monthly report, off and on between calls, conferences and trips.

Discussed with Vernon Mitchell problems of Muskogee County. 300 registered last week. As chairman of the 3rd Congressional District, he cited reports from Sumpter County, 14 registered, Charles Sherrod of SNNC spoke there last Wednesday. Mr. Evans chairman of Sumpter County Civic League, reported Mr. Sam Weston and others as being active. See Columbus news.

Called Americus; Sheriff Chappell (912) 924-3876 about speeding case in August, 1962 and cleared up procedure on August traffic conviction in Sumpter County by the State Patrol. He agreed to see me when I go to Americus. I think I can get his cooperation on voter-registration.

Conferred with Mrs. Ellis and Rev. Bennette on the program for the week. Arranged for circulating letters to leaders of the 2nd District for the Thomasville Clinic.

Surrendered drivers license for Sumter County speeding conviction; told to return for hearing Thursday. Called Miss Bettye Dunber, Governor Carl Sanders' secretary for help. She referred me to State Patrolman Porter Weaver, who advised me to call him after the hearing, as Sgt. Richardson who interviewed me, is a personal friend.

TO: REV. ANDREW YOUNG, DIRECTOR, VOTER REGISTRATION, S. C. L. C.

FROM: J. H. CALHOUN, GA. DIRECTOR AND CHAIRMAN, STATEWIDE REGISTRATION COMMITTEE

SUBJECT: REPORTS - JANUARY 1, TO FEBRUARY 18, 1963

It is hoped that the attached reports will meet the requirements of the Voter Education Project. I have asked Rev. Fred Bennette and Mrs. Ocelia Ellis to submit separate reports. This will cause some overlapping, I am sure, but they have been prepared independently and one may bring out points and information omitted by the others.

We found it very difficult to furnish detailed information for January but the February section should be better. For your information, programs have been started in the following counties:

1. Muskogee (Columbus)
2. Sumter (Americus)
3. Troup (LaGrange)
4. Rockdale (Conyers)
5. Lowndes (Valdosta)
6. Ware (Waycross)
7. Hall (Gainesville)
8. Telfair (McRae - Jacksonville)
9. Clarke (Athens)
10. Morgan (Madison)

It is planned that programs will have been started in at least all counties charged to us by the VEP not later than March 1.

PRESS RELEASE - STATEWIDE REGISTRATION COMMITTEE - FEBRUARY 19, 1963

Representatives from 7 counties of the 9th and 10th Congressional Districts attended the Citizenship Clinic in Athens, Georgia, February 16 in Hill Chapel Baptist Church, Rev. M. Tate, pastor. This Saturday, February 23, the series moves to Wheat Street Baptist Church, Atlanta, Rev. William H. Borders, pastor. All citizens interested in registration are invited to attend. Registration will begin at 9:00 A. M. and a Memorial Service for the late Grand Master John Wesley Dobbs at 9:30. MARCH 2, 1963 - 2ND CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CLINIC
THOMASVILLE, GEORGIA - CLIFFORD TEMPLE CME CHURCH

Checked out of Imperial Hotel at 8:15 A.M. and had difficulty finding a place to secure breakfast. Clinic opened at 9:45 A.M. with my leading Memorial Service for the late John Wesley Dobbs.

After some explanation of the program and Citizenship Schools, the picture: "Politics is Your Business" was shown and related to citizenship. Calhoun and Bennette did a role playing incident.

Misses Cynthia Rivers and Miss Chestina Mitchell of Thomasville, gave a role-playing demonstration on canvassing. Miss Helen Jackson and Truby Clayton from Bainbridge did a demonstration on ways of getting people to register, as well as, Miss Betty Everette and Lemuel Jackson of Early County. Mrs. Marie Dixon, of Bainbridge gave an interesting dialogue on reasons for registering. These were interpreted by Mr. Calhoun with the assistance of Mr. H. S. Dixon, Bainbridge.

The four county delegations present at the time for planning their respective voter-registration programs in accordance with Bulletin No. 3. (See copies attached) Colquitt, the fifth county represented at the clinic, arrived after this period. The representations were as follows: Colquitt (Moultrie); Decatur, (Bainbridge); Early (Blakeley); Thomas, (Thomasville); Tift (Tifton).

Coffee and cookies were served and the separate youth and adult assemblies were held. In the adult assembly the following points were discussed and questions answered:

1. Importance of bond elections and constitutional amendments.
2. A social action program for churches.
3. Methods of getting out the vote.
4. Door to door canvassing.

District officers were selected.

The youth discussed "A Program for Youth, held a "Pep Session" with good singing, led by Mrs. Marie Dixon of Bainbridge. They also selected youth officers. After selection of officers, Mr. Calhoun gave words of inspiration to newly elected youth officers, afterwhich each officer made statements. Song, "This Little Light of Mine," Benediction by Mr. Roosevelt Allen and narrator Mrs. Marie Dixon of Bainbridge, closed the youth meeting. Photos of both groups were taken at the end of this period.

In the reassembly the film strip "Knock on Every Door" was shown and discussed in the light of the importance of door-to-door canvassing. Mr. Calhoun used the entire group to demonstrate step no. 2 of the Manual as an instance of how to handle a difficult temporary chairman, who did not believe in coordination. The demonstration was preceded by a discussion on coordination.

In the final session the house was opened for questions and discussion. Youth were particularly vocal in this session on lack of equality in technical education, poor adult leadership and indifference of public officials. They were advised of their rights and how to pursue them.

Reverend F. David H. Brooks

A registration program, to begin immediately, was discussed, with the following results:

1. The registration committee is ready, with Dr. Hudson, Chairman
2. The steering committee will meet next week to:
   a. Plan a county-wide meeting for weel of March 18.

We left Tallahassee at 8:00 P. M. and arrived in Atlanta at 3:30 A. M. Sunday.

J. H. Calhoun

March 4, 1963 - Worked on report. Talked with Rev. Bennette concerning Columbus program. Vernon Mitchell had called to say that he had not agreed to work with the committee headed by Rev. Reynolds because of their inability or unwillingness to get things done. I informed him that we were responsible for establishment of the committee and therefore could not desert them. I also advised him that he should not have used the funds advanced by SCLC, $250.00, without clearing with the committee. That was why the check was made out to them. He consistently refused to work with the Muskogee County group but would work with other counties in the 3rd Congressional District. He plans a trip to Sumpter County, Tuesday March 4.

Discussed the Tallahassee trip and financing of county committee with Rev. Young. Made an effort to secure 10,000 Dollars for Freedom envelopes to Hosea Williams, Savannah for the April 27, 1963 District Wide rally. Sent Dr. Hudson, Tallahassee, report blanks.

Mrs. Ellis did not report for work but Rev. Young said she had tried to get him. The Virus infection is still troubling me.

J. H. Calhoun

March 5, 1963 - Talked with Rev. Bennette about Columbus and Atlanta program. Prepared news article for the Atlanta World. Sent out letters for 1st District Clinic, Savannah, March 16. Conferred with Messrs. Wiley Branton and Blackwell on Georgia Counties where most effective voter-registration may be done this year. Made several other recommendations:

1. That NAACP officials be impressed with the necessity for coordination in order to eliminate confusion among county leaders..
2. That extreme care should be exercised in making direct grants to counties, to be sure that the leadership is co-ordinated and representative before funds are released with proper controls.
3. That support be given to the work of District Chairmen of the Statewide Registration Committee.
4. Very few counties are ready for direct grants.

Mrs. Ellis reported to SCLC office, but apparently did no work except stapling and sealing letters for me. In response to my question she said she was sent for. I suggested to her that her work for the last clinic needed to be done.

Visited Dr. Hackney, received another shot and rested a while. Checked stencils and finished report.

March 6, 1963 - Still dizzy, arose at usual time; Miss Poole off in the A. M. because of trip to Thomasville Saturday. Went over the reports an the All-Citizens Registration Committee meeting, results and communication on Thomasville Clinic with Mrs. Ellis who mailed out letters to those who attended confused with Rev. Bennette on:

1. Georgia program as a result of conference with Messrs. Brannon and Blackwell Tuesday. He agreed, but indicated that S. C.L. C. is willing to allow any other agency to take over voter-registration except Albany committment rather than have a contest and misunderstanding. We agreed to reappraise the situation after the clinics.

2. Problems of S. C. L. C. office and field administration and agreed on an outline with some suggested personnell.

3. Results of All Citizens Registration Committee meeting Tuesday ningt, which I could not attend worked on V. E. P. report and contacted Hosea Williams in Savannah on moving Rally date to April 20. He then preferred May 11,18 or 25, which will have to be cleared with Dr. King.

J H Calhoun

March 9, 1963 - 7th Congressional District Clinic Thankful Baptist Church, Rome, Georgia. Arrived at Thankful Baptist Church at 8:45 A.M. People slow in appearing. Rev. Tuggle only person on hand. Rev. Bennette, Mrs. Ellis and Rev. O.L. Scott, Marion, Ala. arrived at 9:00 A.M. Because no persons were remaining after they registered, we began showing the film strips: "Government is Your Business" and Knock on Every Door" to try to interest and assemble them. Rev. Clarence Tuggle, pastor of Thankful Baptist Church, opened the devotional Service at 11:45 A.M. with the singing of: "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross." Prayer was offered by Rev. Hinton, pastor of 1st Methodist Church, Rome. Prior to the opening conversations were being held with such Rome citizens as: Revs. Tuggle and Hinton, the young Wright brothers, who are leaders, with Rev. Hinton of the Sit-In Movement. The following developments were revealed:

1. The Sit-In Movement is making progress, there will be a meeting with white officials Monday at 10:00 A.M. to complete plans on desegregation of lunch counties, etc.
2. Rev. Hinton is working closely with young adults and students.
3. Libraries, trolleys and railroad stations are desegregated
4. Danger of activities being jeopardized by segregation payoffs to Negro leaders.

Mr. Calhoun was called upon for remarks and the Memorial Service was closed with the singing of "Count on Me."

"The actual session was opened with singing "Giveme that Old Time Religion, We Shall Not Be Moved. The first part of "Knock on Every Door" was shown again, and there were questions and discussion on the inspiration, technique and devotion of Grace Felton, the precinct worker. Role playing demonstrations on canvassing were given by Rev. Bennette and Mrs. Ellis; Misses Shirley Dodd, Mammie Dodd, Barbara James and Mrs. M. J. Woods of Cobb County.

The picture "Government is Your Business," was shown and interpreted in the light of individual responsibility. Rev. Tuggle outlined some of the developments in civil rights in Rome including 1750 registered voters in the county. Mrs. Essie Dinsmore, of Cobb County also reported on the increased activity in her county, 50 high school students were registered last year, helping to bring the total to nearly 2,000 for Cobb County. Rev. Hinton spoke on developments, indicating that he had received annoying calls during the past few days, but that integration of lunch counties and other facilities will be effected immediately.

Mrs. Wood reported that there are 849 Negro Voters in the 6th ward, to some 600 white and they plan to run a Negro.

3/9/63 - r

In the election of district officers the following were elected:

Chairman: Rev. Clarence Tuggle, Rome
Vice Chairman: Mrs. M. J. Woods, Marietta
Secretary: H. E. Canty, Cartersville
Asst. Sec.: Mrs. Essie Dinsmore, Marietta
Temporary Youth Chairman: Miss Mannie Dodd
Temporary County Chairman: H. E. Canty
Mrs. Imogene Saunders
Mrs. M. J. Woods

The meeting closed with joined circle singing of "We Shall Overcome.

J. H. Calhoun

March 11, 1963 - Began working on reports for Rome Clinic. Staff conference with Rev. Bennette, Rev. Young and Mrs. Ellis. We must have by April 1st:

1. Reports on all drives that are going and have them going in the 13 counties assigned by VEP.
2. The activities of these counties must be followed up.
3. Vouchers must be submitted on all money paid out.
4. Agreed on Thursday conference with Chattanooga leaders, funds advanced to committees.

Conferred later with Mrs. Ellis and Bennette on activities planned for Camilla, Chattanooga and Tallahasse, he reported funds sent to Greene, Ward and Muskogee Counties, as well as $25.00 to Rev. R. B. Hunter, Chattanooga for a trip to Atlanta, Thursday to discuss Hamilton County, Tenn. program. Dr. King and Rev. Abernathy received a request to visit Columbus to help registration committee.

Contacted Ray Ware, Athens about setting up county-wide meeting for completing organization for Clarke County. Called Rev. W. J. Reynolds, Columbus and set-up conferences tomorrow with Baptist and A. M. E. Ministers, as well as, Committee tomorrow night, sending out letters on Macon and ROme Clinic.

Conferred with Jesse Hill on Atlanta program, especially South Fulton. Mr. Hurd from East Point came by the discuss efforts to get purged names re-registered and possible trip to Savannah.

The Muskogee County problem is serious because the program is lagging. The committee refuses to accept Vernon Mitchell, yet it is doubtful that it will get the best results. Will make an effort to straighten out the matter tomorrow. The committee is made up of a few ministers and older leaders who do not encourage the help of young people.

J. W. Calhoun

March 12, 1963 Still ailing, I worked on reports and talked with Rev. Bennette and Mrs. Ellis concerning Savannah Clinic. Outlined plans for continuing registration program to begin at the close of the Citizenship Clinics on April 23:

1. Prepare a report which would present:

   a. Requested budgets of various counties.

   b. Recommendations as to allotment for each county which has participated in the program, either thru clinics, or other contacts. These allotments would be used only when considered feasible from the standpoint of organization and potential results.

   c. The budget should be based upon attainable goals at 25¢ per registration.

   d. The report would be supported with county by county figures on, total eligibles from 1960 U. S. Census, estimated registrations for 1960 from Margaret Shannon's report in Atlanta Journal Constitution, March 25, 1962, estimated additions in 1962 and 1963, shown separately and total Negro population from 1960 U. S. Census.

2. Recommend $20 - $25 per week expense for district chairmen travel, to be paid from required weekly report.

3. Concentration of staff on counties assigned by VEP.

4. Organization of a finance committee to raise funds.

5. Coordination with citizenship training program.

6. Work with all counties and districts regardless of organizational affiliations.

March 12, 1963 Delayed in trip to Columbus but arrived at First African Baptist Churchwhere Baptist Ministers Union was in session. Rev. W. J. Reynolds was giving current events at the end of which he emphasized voter-registration. Mr. Vernon Mitchell, Third District Chairman of the Statewide Registration Committee was also present and made a plea for cooperation fo the ministers because the courthouse coverage had been abandoned for lack of funds. Rev. T. W. Smith, pastor of First African suggested that I talk, but this was delayed.

After Rev. T. Blue introduced his revivalist from Mississippi, he spoke encourging participation in voter-registration. The minister from Mississippi also emphasized the importance of voting. In my talk I emphasized the following points:

1. Importance of ministerial leadership.

2. Results of the 1962 state and senatorial election.

3. Relationship and interest of S. C. L. C. and V. E. P. in voter- registration.

4. The church participation program.

5. Fund raising at special church rallies where the host church would receive one-half of the contributions.

The speech was well taken and summerized by the reviever, with stress on registration. Seven of the ministers present signed up to establish social action programs in their respective churches.

After the meeting, Rev. T. W. Smith, Mr. Mitchell and I had lunch together, discussing Mr. Mitchells participation in the Muskogee County program. Rev. Smith agreed to work with Mr. Mitchell, but doubted that the established committee would be able to secure the necessary organization and support.

After lunch, we repaired to Rev. Smith home and discussed fund raising which the ministers agreed to be responsible for in his own way to help Mitchell. The three of us discussed and outlined a suggested budget, as follows:

Went to Columbus News office, called Atlanta, talked with Revs. Bennette, Abernathy and Young, as well as, Mrs. Ellis. Called Messrs. Wesley Thomas, Gordon Kitchens, A. J. McClung, urging their support. All of them expressed lack of confidence in the registration group. Atty. Albert Thompson came over for a two-hour conference, in which we went over and he approved the program as Mitchell and I were developing it. Talked for nearly an hour with Mr. G. F. Rivers, who agreed to attend the meeting and finally to support the program, I planned to submit tonight at the weekly meeting of the voter-registration group.

Meeting with the group which organized the Muskogee County Voter-Registration Board. The minutes were read acknowledging receipt of $100.00 from SCLC thru Rev. Ralph Abernathy, and indicating that it had been paid to the ladies working at the Courthouse, who were assigned to duty, two per week instead of 4 per week. A Board of Directors was named at the last meeting which took the form of a re-organization meeting, where a new constitution was adopted and several officers were changed, including the secretary, Mr. Henry Crimes and treasurer, Mr. James Hill, both of whom were present. Others attending the meeting were:

Mr. J. N. Key
Rev. E. D. Bryson
Mr. C. B. Marshall
Mr. Willie Low
Rev. Henry Grimer
Rev. & Mrs. Henry Crimes
Rev. W. J. Reynolds
Mr. Arthur A. Maddox
Mr. Sam Sapp
Mr. B. F. Priester
Mr. Paul Sims
Mr. Quincy E. Logan
Mr. A. J. McClung
Mr. G. F. Rivers, Sr.

Mr. Calhoun outlined a three-point program including:

3/12/63

I Church Activity and Participation
II Grass Roots Organizations
III Budget

After some discussion by Rev. E. D. Bryson, G. F. Rivers, C. B. Marshall, A. J. McClung, Arthur Maddox, Sam Sapp, B. F. Priester and others, it was adopted. Mr. Calhoun also presented a suggested budget which would be considered at the Board meeting. President, W. J. Reynolds announced a meeting of the Board of Directors, Thursday at 12:00 noon. The program and budget were submitted in writing, Revs. Bryson and Key pledged support of their churches.

After the close of the meeting at 10:00 P. M. A. J. McClung, Vernon Mitchell and I had dinner at the Domino Lounge to discuss the plans. During the trip I found Mr. McClung the executive secretary of the 9th Street Branch, YMCA to be the most influential of the younger leaders. His owrk places him in a respectable position with the white "power structure," he is in favor of and supports the Civil Rights Program and has respect of the Negro community. He apparently has worked into the confidence of the so-called "wrecking crew of the Non-Partisan Voters League without becoming a part of it; they seem to fear yet they seek the support of his influence.

He was able to help me with Mr. Mitchell by showing him he should not fight or show anger at the "wrecking crew," but outthink and work around them to get to the grass roots. Having been very effective at tonights meeting, he promised to help Mitchell and Albert Thompson with that program. We agreed to have a meeting of five or six young people like Kitchens, Thompson, Mitchell, McClung and Jackson next Wednesday to plan strategy.

J. H. Calhoun

March 13, 1963 - Feeling exhausted from the trip to Columbus and activities of the previous day, I decided to remain in bed until 11:00 A. M., gave up the trip to Sumpter and Mitchell Counties and remained in Columbus for further contacts. Called Atlanta and talked with Revs. Bennette and Young about plans. Went to Mr. McClungs' office and suggested a conference with him, Mitchell, Thompson, Jackson and Kitchens. We arranged to go to lunch at Walgreen's, downtown, but only McClung and Mitchell got there. In the meantime, I had run into Rev. Reynolds, the chairman, who wanted to convince me that he would be able to produce. I assured him that I had insisted that we work thru him and that Mitchell had been wrong in spending the $250.00 the check for which had been made out to the committee and Mitchell had been advised to handle it thru the group. This was the factor that broke up relationships between Mitchell and the committee and resulted in the reorganization.

In the conference, we went over plans for the community organization and suggested this procedure:

1. Let the Board divide up the churches among themselves, one or two each, get names and addresses of social action committees and send to us.
2. Let Al Thompson ask for responsibility to work with community organizations.
3. Have a meeting with representatives of all organizations next Wednesday as Mitchell had suggested last night.

Called Rev. Smith and thanked him for his willingness to help Mitchell and raise funds thru churches. He does not favor splitting money with churches, because they would hardly raise more than $5.00 or $6.00. I suggested big rallies with outstanding speakers and he asked me to name some. I suggested Rev. Abernathy, Rev. Andrew Young, Rev. H. I. Bearden and M. L. King, Sr. He was impressed, especially with Rev. King.

= Called Mr. Albert Thompson, who agreed to plan for him, as vice-chairman, to ask for responsibility to work with community groups. Both he and Mr. McClung agreed to attend the Board Meeting Thursday.

Left Columbus at 3:15 P. M. and arrived in Atlanta at 5:45. Had conference with Mrs. Ellis and Rev. Bennette, who was leaving for a Madison, Ga. meeting. Worked on reports, contacted Jesse Hill about busses for South Fulton High School and went to bed, exhausted.

Have talked with Mr. McClaren, Principal of South Fulton High School several times about registration of 18 year olds, who suggested the following schedule:

9:15 - 11:30 South Fulton High School - 14th, 15th, 19th of March.

This matter was discussed on several occasions with Mr. Jesse Hill and finally on the night of March 13th he agreed to have three Transit Company busses available at 9:00 A. M. March 14th. In that conversation, he expressed excited conviction over how the masses of people are becoming aroused to the importance of voting and direct action. This phenomenon, about which I have become aware this year, is difficult to get over to the "established" leadership everywhere.

J. K. Calhoun

March 14, 1963 - Called Mr. Jesse Hill to remind him of having three busses at South Fulton High School this morning at 9:00 o'clock to bring 140 students to Fulton County Courthouse to register. Finished reports for Tuesday and Wednesday. Talked with Rev. Bennette about Morgan County meeting, Savannah Clinic, Macon Clinic, Rockdale County program and a proposed rally in Macon in June. Arranged work schedule for Miss Poole on materials for Columbus and reports. Prepared financial report for Rome Clinic.

Conferred with Father R. B. Hunter, and Rev. J. Paul Jones, Rev. Bennette and Rev. Young on Hamilton County (Chattanooga) program with the following results:

1. The best procedure is to revive the Metropolitan Voter-Registration Council of Hamilton County with the idea of projecting Rev. Jones as director.

2. Hold a meeting of the Council March 29 or 30.

3. Rev. Jones will take a group to Dorchester Academy next week.

Completed weekly reports on activities.

J. H. Calhoun

March 15, 1963 - Collected materials and made arrangements to go to Savannah. Left Atlanta at 1:40 P. M. alone, via Covington, Eatonton, Sparta, Sandersville, Wrightsville and Swainsboro, stopped in Sparta to see Mr. Marcellus Roberts, who operates a grocery on Main Street and is one of the leaders. He informed me that Hancock County is still not well organized, that several hundred Negro voters have been purged for failure to vote, but there are still over 1,000 on the list. The county is to vote on a $110,000.00 bond issue Wednesday, March 20 for a gymnasium for the Negro High School and the white citizens seem to favor it. He is willing to work with us on voter-registration and will try to send a delegation to Macon, March 23.

Stopped at Sandersville to see M. C. Smith, undertaker, but he was out; left word with Mrs. Smith that I would see him on my return Saturday night and urged that he send a delegation to Macon, March 23. Called Atlanta to have checks sent and article prepared for the Atlanta World.

Arrived in Savannah at the Crusade office about 8:00 P. M. and Miss Robert, the secretary helped me to locate Mr. Hosea Williams. Later I went over the Saturday program with him.

March 16, 1963 - 1st Congressional District Clinic - Savannah

Arrived at church at 9:00 A. M., Mr. Hosea Williams, Director, Southeast Crusade for Voters arrived at 9:15 A. M., registration began immediately. A group of four Florida A. & M. college students arrived from Tallahassee, Leon County, Florida, Mr. & Mrs. John McDue, Mr. Julius F. Hamilton and Mr. Ruben Rushen Kenan, Jr. with a letter from Dr. Hudson.

In a talk with Mr. Norwood of Tatnall County, it was revealed that he has been deputized by the Board of Registrars and carries the registration cards into the several districts, fills them out and gives the oath. The cards are then turned into the Registrar's office without the registrants having to go to the Courthouse. One weakness is that many of the persons cannot read and write and I'm not sure that this part is strictly in accordance with Georgia law. Mr. Norwood showed lists by districts that he had registered 119 persons this year. These reports were verified by Mr. Hosea Williams, who said that the registrars were elderly and somewhat incapacitated.

The Clinic officially opened at 10:00 A. M., with devotions, led by a young minister from Savannah. After devotions, greetings were extended by Mr. Hosea Williams and myself. He called for reports from the counties.

Liberty County - Mr. William Wortower, reported thay have good workers, need more educational training; he has registered 55 personally and an estimated total of 300. Mr. Williams reported that registration is not a problem in Liberty County, but that citizenship training is much needed in the 17 rural districts.

Emanuel - Mr. N. F. Williams reported four present and 2 other carloads on the way. No problem of 40% of Negroes registered. Difficult to get them to vote, but working thru schools; the most people are share-croppers who have difficulty with their landlords. Hope to get 75% registered this year.

Tatnall - Miss Pearlie Mae Baley reported 125 registered, 5 districts, six persons in each. Mr. Norwood is unofficial registrar for Negroes.

Wheeler - Rev. A. Goram reported that they are "on wheels, even if they are moving slowly. 30 registered since Citizenship School organized. As of last April 444 registered. County-wide Community Club organized; will pay $10.00 today. No trouble with ministers, churches used without charge, more NAACP members from 6 or 7 to 50 people now attend. People express appreciation for Citizenship Schools.

Ware - P. B. McCoy introduced Mrs. Willie Mae Richardson, who reported no problems, the program being a continuous project. The total registration is now 2,900, with about 200 this year. They brought a delegation of young people from Brantley County.

Brantley - Rev. L. Hicks, although a small county, completing registration committee since the Valdosta Clinic. Some who planned to come, sick.

Richmond - Rev. T. R. Morgan reported a remarkable job, 900 registered this year. Goal of 10,000 set. Mr. Dickson reported that at least 300 more registered, for a total of 1200.

Recognizing the presence of Rev. Morgan and other ministers, Mr. Williams complimented them and urged that everyone persuade ministers to work with voter-registration. Mr. Morgan then announced that 4 young Negroes had been admitted to Augusta College, a previously all-white city supported institution.

Chatham - Mr. Hosea Williams, since November 3000 Negroes have registered, more Negroes in jobs than any other county. Integration in public facilities and public buildings. Earned respect of officials and they are afraid to offer money but realize they must deliver. Out of 45 persons offering for office, 37 supported by the Crusade elected. Now 14,000 Negroes registered voters.

The business session was opened and Mr. Williams announced requirements:

1. Must be organized - Turn in names of organization
2. Turn in names of elected officers
3. Pay $10.00 yearly membership fee
4. Turn in a brief summary of activities
5. Two representatives from each county on the Board

Mr. Williams claimed credit for having the best organized district in the South; will send a Negro Congressman to Washington or one that is so liberal that it will be the same.

Mrs. Mable Dawson led singing and explained the Citizenship School program:

1. Attend school for a week.
2. Return to county and explain the program.
3. Secure a free meeting place: church or civic building.
4. Talk in churches and other gatherings, breaking it down to the level of the people.
5. Start off with whatever number comes, even as little as 2 or 3, using calm method of getting others, some are ashamed. Keep trying and talking, reading and writing, then registering and voting. Do a lot of singing, teach writing, not printing; let them trace your writing, with tissue. Treat them as adults. Rode 8 persons in her car last night. Results count and the people are appreciative. She explained techniques of teaching arithmetic and other subjects.

Mrs. Sanders of Augusta spoke of a program for youth and the need for activities to attract young people. Mr. Williams described the methods used in setting up citizenship schools in Chatham County and the First District, teaching government as well as the other subjects. He emphasized the absolute necessity for organization and outlined the chart for Chatham County, using the patronage committee as an example of committee activity. It was organized by asking each civic organization to name a representative and prevail upon the Mayor to withdraw one appointment for the City Recreation Commission and replace it with the committee's choice. He also spoke of the work of the Interview Committee, which investigates the candidates and the political guidance committee, composed of one representative from each civic organization, which acts on data secured by the interview committee and recommends candidates.

Leon County, Florida (Tallahassee) - Mr. John Due, came to learn, so that they may go back and organize a district organization.

Mr. Calhoun spoke on the importance of citizenship, bringing out these points:

1. History of political action in Atlanta.
2. Its influence on the Civil Rights Progress.
3. Forbearance with old politicans who believe in segregation, so long as they get right now.
4. Get together, pray and work for registration.

Mr. Williams outlined the program of the Voter Education Project and its relationship to the Southeast Crusade for Voters. He also explained in detail the forms and instructions of the Voter Education Project.

Rev. P. A. Patterson, pastor of Butler Presbyterian Church, a long time civil rights worker, pledged support of the church and related some experiences in the direct action program of Chatham County, especially his riding a bus with W. W. Law, president of the NAACP, how the whites tried to "countenance" them down. This he showed as evidence of the kind of courage that is needed. He commended, Mr. Hosea Williams, Mr. J. H. Calhoun and Mrs. Mable Dawson. He closed his talk with a plea for getting understanding.

RECESS FOR LUNCH

The closing session was opened with singing led by Mrs. Davison, who also gave a short inspirational talk on loyalty and dedication to registration. Mr. DeLeach, of Emanuel, gave a report on an interview with a white man who asked that both forget who they are and answer the question, what about segregation.? Another raised the question as to what would happen if pigs, dogs, etc. who God created separately, were mixed. He replied that they were already mixed as we are already mixed and nothing can be done about it. He said futher, these mixed people are crying out for freedom and he wanted some of that "mixed" freedom.

Mr. Thomas Allen, director of Adult Citizenship Schools, Emanuel County, reported that the schools have helped the county in that many people who had never thought of registering, then wanted to register. Five schools now are operation, which program started with only 3 persons. One young lady opened the school. In another section the people asked that they not come in because they were afraid. In this Garfield area only 2 persons had registered. He carried two young people and got the ministers behind it and the influence of the school got into nearby Jenkins County.

Rev. A. Goram, director of Wheeler County Citizenship School, reported rapid progress. The program was well received and he secured four students for Dorchester. Quite a few joined the first night. Since schools were organized more people are willing to be active in the NAACP. Some critized, but armed with information from the Courthouse, where they were very hospitable, he was able to get good response from citizens and teachers.

Mr. Williams reported that in Liberty County the population is about equal, but more Negroes are registered than white. There are 17 communities with each having an organization and they voted about 19 out of 2300 in the last election.

The delegation from Tatnall county presented a skit against a background of satisfied citizens, who didn't want to upset their white people. The Civic Worker Prevails is the name of the skit, which portrayed a family group discussion, the older members of which had been advised by their white people not to register and vote, because they are good to them. "The children, however, threatened to go North." The mother called Rev. Clark her pastor, and invited him to dinner, then read a passage of scripture. Rev. and Mrs. Clark came over and he took the position that his job was saving souls, but Mrs. Clark showed him how he could help people to get jobs because the candidate for Mayor was part owner of the factory which would not hire Negroes. All finally agreed to attend the Citizenship school, which would help keep the children from going North. Mrs. Viola Ealey is a top teacher and helps the chairman, Mr. Norwood with citizenship schools and registration.

Rev. Norman of Augusta asked again about Citizenship Schools and Mr. Williams explained and gave the correlation with registration.

1. Each teacher must report on what has happened to each student after he had attended the school, in church, P. T. A. or Civic life.
2. Schedule of courses
   a. Citizenship first
   b. Scholastic subjects
   c. Form of government and how it functions at all levels

I was called upon to describe the program and relationship of the Statewide Registration Committee and outlined it as follows to show difference in functions from the Georgia Voters League.

1. Program and organization of the Georgia Voters League which set up the Statewide Registration Committee - Election of District Chairmen, March 23.
   a. Annual Meeting, October - Semi Annual Meeting March
   b. Officers and district chairmen
   c. Election in Macon - March 23 for District chairmen, who were not elected at October meeting.
2. Organization and program of the Statewide Registration Committee
   a. It was organized in 1957 because organizations will not contribute to political groups and certain persons, like government and public school teachers cannot or will not be active in a political organization.
   b. It is non-political and works only on registration.
   c. There are elected state-wide officers at the annual meeting (Macon Clinic, March 23) and district chairmen at the several clinics.
   d. Its program is to conduct citizenship clinics to inspire county delegations who attend and go back to organize or work with county-wider coordinated registration groups.
   e. Special emphasis is placed on youth activities.
   f. The officers and district chairmen are to follow-up those at the clinics as well as other counties.
   g. The committee is affiliated with SCLC

At a county leaders' conference after the clinic the May 5, 1962 for the M. L. King, Jr. Rally was accepted.

I had a conference with the Leon County (Tallahassee) Florida group and urged them to:

1. Organize a youth group in the city to work with the adult group. Mr. Due was aware of the fact that local leadership is essential.
2. Get Dr. Hudson to:
   a. Send in voter-registration plan.
   b. Transmit the proposed budget.
   c. Advise me as to the date of the county-wide meeting of leaders.

Upon leaving Savannah at 6:00 P. M. I returned via the same route and stopped in Sandersville. Mr. M. C. Smith the undertaker and leader, informed that the county had organized for registration, that they wanted me to come down and speak and that he would bring a group to Macon on March 23.

March 17, 1963 - Arrived in Atlanta at 12:15 A. M. from Savannah. Worked on narrative reports and appraisal of Southeast Crusade for Voters.

Mr. Hosea Williams is an exceptional, energetic and dedicated leader. He works untiringly for political action and has developed quite a program combining citizenship training and voter registration. Although the clinic attendance was small, it is apparent that most of the counties of the 1st Congressional District are organized and conducting the joint program.

In addition to the work of Mr. Williams, these factors appear to make for success:

1. The spirit of dedication he has inspired among the leadership, adult, as well as youth.

2. Large attendance at Dorchester Academy has given them a number of trained workers.

3. The leadership given by Chatham County in bringing about coordinated political action.

4. Support of ministers and churches.

5. Interrelation of Citizenship Education with voter-registration, which has inspired citizens to become interested who would hardly have done so otherwise.

6. An early start and frequent training sessions, in the counties as well as district wide from county to county. The program was initiated in November.

The 1st District Clinic was highly informative, the county delegations showed the result of intensified training, the results indicated the importance of voluntary leadership with some funds available for expenses only and the delegations present from other counties were highly impressed. Threatening weather apparently discouraged some expected delegations from attending. The Tatnall County demonstration was very impressive and we have urged the delegation to come to Macon March 23 and repeat it. There was not time for movie strips.

The following observations are considered relevant:

1. The issuance of so much material at one time raises a question as to whether it will be read.

2. There is need for help from more expressive leaders who can gain the confidence of Mr. Williams that they can relieve him from having to do all of the talking.

3. Audience participation in appraising the role-playing demonstrations would help.

4. There is some question as to the advisability of combining political participation with registration in the same organization: The Crusade for Voters. This is why the Statewide Registration Committee was organized by the Georgia Voters League. Whereas the leadership is largely the same, having them to work as separate groups, eliminates criticism and tends to attract people who don't want to be political to be active in registration.

It may be that the political guidance group, since it is composed of all organizations, might keep its activities separate and thereby permit the Crusades to work in registration and getting out the vote. This is suggested because the political guidance group, against a well-organized background, does not actually require a separate grass roots organization to carry out its recommendations on candidates. This would also require and provide a technique for keeping the expenditure of funds for registration separate from those of the political activity.

Because of the progress that is being made, however, I would follow the usual policy of letting the district and county leadership determine what is best for their respective areas.

It must be said, however, that the Southeast Crusade for Voters is the most effective political action group in the state. It is unfortunate that NAACP has withdrawn its support as indicated by Mr. Williams. The breach should be overcome and certainly the state leadership would be willing to use its influence to resolve the difference. Mr. Williams urged the 1st District delegations to attend the Macon Clinic, as well as, the semi-annual meeting of the Georgia Voters League. This is another reason I consider the Clinic highly successful, not only as a training session but as a much needed step toward coordinated statewide leadership.

A long telephone conversation with Mr. Warren R. Cochrane, of Atlanta today emphasized this as a must; he is very favorably inclined toward Hosea Williams, as well as, Ray Ware of Athens. He also will attend the Macon sessions if his YMCA Membership Campaign is going well.

March 18, 1963 - Continued - Conferred with Rev. Bennette on problems of 1st District and the program for this week. Talked with Mrs. Ellis concerning her work. Prepared reports of finances from Savannah Clinic.

Traveled to Macon with Rev. Bennette to confer with William Randall. The discussion resulted in the following understanding:

1. The Bibb County Coordinating Committee had misunderstood the relationship with SCLC to the extent that they felt it would be impossible or improper to accept funds from the SCLC and get a direct grant from the Voter Education Project. This misunderstanding was cleared with the information that a direct grant from any organization would not interfere with relations of the SCLC or the Statewide Registration Committee which is affiliated with SCLC.

2. SCLC will continue to work with Bibb County furnishing such staff help and financial support as may be possible. The $200.00 check will be returned if possible.

3. The Committee will work in full support of the 6th District Citizenship Clinic, secure press coverage and a photographer.

4. All misunderstanding was cleared as to the use of Steward Chapel AME Church and furnishing dinner for the clinic. Had a telephone conversation with Rev. W. L. Brown, the pastor.

5. The M. L. King rally should be in July or October because of Macon City Primary in June.

6. Rev. Bennette will return Wednesday for the "kick off" of the registration of high school students and the Pleasant Hill section with the use of 4 busses. News and televison coverage will be given.

7. There will be a mass meeting Tuesday night in Pleasant Hill in line with their unique program of a mass meeting followed by a concentrated door-to-door canvass, area by area. We left Macon at 7:00 P. M.

March 19, 1963 - Contacted Mr. Jesse Hill in regard to tonight's meeting of the All-Citizens Registration Committee - Advised him of Macon and 1st. District techniques. Made a call to Mr. A. J. McClung in Columbus, Ga. who advised that at Thursday's meeting:

1. Dr. Robert Wright - 802 - 4th Avenue and Atty. Albert Thompson, were named as Co-Chairmen of Community Organization.

2. The budget was approved and referred to a sub-committee for trasmittal to SCLC.

3. There is still objection from the Board, especially Rev. Reynolds and Mr. G. F. Rivers, to Mr. Vernon Mitchell's having any responsibility. I reminded Mr. McClung that I had announced at Tuesday night's meeting that Mr. Mitchell is 3rd District Chairman of the Statewide Registration Committee and would help in any was he could. Therefore, Mr. Mitchell should be urged to work in the background under Attorney Thompson and Dr. Wright in community organization.

4. I suggested that he remind Mr. Mitchell to get Rev. T. W. Smith to follow up his promise to raise funds for voter-registration among the churches.

5. Mr. McClung is to call me tomorrow morning as to the day and time of the meeting with leaders that was set for tomorrow.

Called Dr. Hudson in Tallahassee about plans for Leon County. He said that Mr. Hunter, coordinator of registration, had been out of the city, but he would get him to work out the registration plan, the budget and date for the meeting.

Worked in the office on reports for last week and detailed activities.

Attended meeting of the All-Citizens Registration Committee and heard reports on reviewing registrants on purge lists. Mr. Jesse Hill, co-chairman, had secured the list of the 3,500 or more by streets. These lists are being cut and distributed to workers and precinct leaders. Only 10 more days remain to complete this work and it is not thoroughly organized. There is still activity at the courthouse, and with the high school registrations, more than 1000 new names have been added. When called upon, I explained the reason why city elections are not counted in preventing purges. Also I explained the registration techniques of Bibb County, Chatham and the 1st Congressional District, especially the feature of combining citizenship training with registration, visual aids and role-playing demonstrations.

March 20, 1963 - Dispatched Rev. Bennette to Macon to observe "kick off." Prepared materials for Macon Clinic. Called Vernon Mitchell, Columbus and A. J. McClung. In the conversation with Mr. McClung, he had been able to get his group together and have me a report by Thursday morning. Mitchell is going ahead on his own in Muskogee County under his 1962 Committee headed by Mr. James Reynolds, Columbus, Ga. whom I have never met. Mr. Mitchell's position is:

1. The Muskogee County Voter-Education Board is ineffective because of the mistrust of the leadership and its failure over the past to produce results.

2. Mitchell's organization is responsible for securing more than 3,000 registered voters last year.

3. More than 500 registered voters were secured this year thru courthouse coverage and other activities under Mr. Mitchell.

4. Since the "break" last month between Mr. Mitchell and leadership of the Board, who have refused to work with him, practically nothing has been done, even the Courthouse has been left uncovered.

5. Mitchell is not willing to work with that leadership.

6. He will not be able to attend the Macon Clinic March 23 because that is the date scheduled for a meeting of his organization to revive its activities beginning Monday, March 25. He did agree, however, to get some representatives to attend since the Board says they will have 4 adults and 1 youth present.

My observations confirm Mr. Mitchell's statements, but since we established the group which organized the Board under Rev. Reynolds we are placed in an unfortunate position by Mr. Mitchell's refusal to cooperate with Mr. McClung's suggestion. Mr. Mitchell outlined his plans as follows:

1. Revive his organization's activities beginning Monday.

2. Work one week and submit a report on:
   a. Names and addresses of committees and workers.
   b. Number of persons registered.
   c. Amount of money raised locally.

Mr. Mitchell was informed that it would be difficult to work with this idea in conflict with the established committee, as weak as it is. He insisted on his position, however and it was agreed that we would "play it by ear, and work out something if his plans are successful. In the meantime, we would have to see what response came from the other group. Since Rev. Smith has promised to help Mr. Mitchell to raise funds, I agreed to call him as I had already promised Mr. McClung.

I called Rev. T. W. Smith, who said he intended to live up his promise to raise funds. He does not have much confidence in the Board either.

I was interviewed by a United Nations group from the Philipines and Czechoslovakia about registration and voting in Georgia at the SCLC office.

Talked with Mr. Jesse Hill on the posibility of using paid workers to contact the remaining persons on the purge list. He was advised to contact Mrs. Ellis to secure some young people and pay them 20 to 25¢ per head, securing telephone numbers so they can be checked. Had Mrs. Ellis to send letters to all who attended the Savannah Clinic.

Attended meeting of the All-Citizens Committee on Better City Planning. Among other things I stressed the importance of registration and the need for weekly mass meetings for citizenship education on such matters as the coming Atlanta - Fulton County Bond issue. I explained the mass meeting techniques used in such places as Savannah, Macon and Albany and the effectiveness of community signing, as well as inspirational speeches. The committee was impressed and authorized the steering committee to proceed at once, after all speakers agreed with the importance of reaching the masses in this way.

March 21, 1963 - There was no report from Mr. McClung of Columbus, but a written report was received from Rev. Reynolds and Mr. Paul Sims the new treasurer. They sent vouchers for $150.00 apparently all made out and signed by the same person for four workers and asked for $50.00 above the $100.00 sent by Rev. Abernathy to match the extra $50.00 they raised as we had promised to match them dollar for dollar. In the first place, the $100.00 was sent for courthouse coverage for two weeks as they had asked. There was nothing to show the extra work, inasmuch as there has been no courthouse coverage for the past two weeks as far as we can learn.

Rev. Bennette and I discussed the matter, then sent them another set of vouchers, asking that they be signed by the individuals who worked. We also enclosed a report blank, since they failed to submit the budget as requested. They were also asked to give a list of contributors.

Attempted to call Mr. William Carroll in Camilla to return Mr. Vernon Mitchell's call both at Talladega and Columbus. All were unsuccessful.

Worked on detailed reports of activities and prepared more materials for the Macon meeting. Continued preparing budget estimates for counties where we expect to work next month.

March 22, 1963 - Left Atlanta at 5:45 P. M. and arrived in Macon at 7:35, after registering for lodging at the SkyLine Motel, Rev. Bennette, Mrs. Edwina Smith, Mis. Ellis, Miss Emily Poole and I went to Steward Chapel A. M. E. Church for a pre-clinic session with 5 adults and 15 youth. The adults were late and the youth were cold, even with attempt at singing. We diverted interest to a discussion of politics and government. The students, all from Ballard Hudson High, became very much interested and debated such questions as the two-party system and its effects on Georgia, the 1960 presidential campaign and the M. L. King, Jr. incident, the 1962 gubernatorial campaign and the value of a large electorate, as well as, "block voting."

The "program for youth" as outlined in the Clinic Manual was read by the students, in sections and discussed. Although only two youth had indicated they could attend the clinic in the beginning, at the end of the discussions, six of them agreed to form a committee to present the program for youth to the youth assembly on Saturday.

We went over a voter-registration plan for Bibb County with the adults, who agreed to help in the County plans Saturday. After the session, Rev. Bennette and I ate dinner with the staff and local volunteers discussed Clinic Plans and the nominating committee.

6TH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CLINIC - MACON, GEORGIA

Arriving at the Steward Chapel A. M.E. Church at 8:45 A.M., registration began at 9:00 A.M. and the Clinic began at 9:25 A.M. with devotions being led by Mr. H. S. Dixon of Bainbridge and Rev. Moore of Valdosta.

Mrs. Marie Dixon of Bainbridge, Ga. who led singing of "Give Me That Old Time Religion." Mrs. Ocelia C. Ellis gave an explanation of the program for the day. Mrs. Edwina Smith, Secretary to Rev. Andrew Young, outlined the citizenship training program, giving the background and history of the project, as well as, its development and relationship to community action. Brochures on the citizenship schools were distributed and questions were answered.

Rev. Bennette presented the movie: "Government is Your Business " and a a pointed question and answer period brought out the important implications of the picture, in which youth participated freely.

A Nominating Committee was appointed: William P. Randall, Macon Chairman.

Macon Clinic - March 23 -

Mrs. Edwina Smith made an excellent contribution in explaining the relationship of Citizenship Schools to registration. Brochures on Citizenship schools were distributed.

The assemblage was then divided into counties to discuss their respective local campaigns. Those delegations which had not attended previous clinics, prepared registration plans using Bulletin No. 3. Blanks for budget requests, reports and instructions were distributed. Upon reassembly the picture: "Knock on Every Door" was shown. In the discussion period which followed, it was interesting to note how the youth delegation grasped the implications of "Grace Felton's" inspiration, courage, determination and persistence, the growing confidence and determination of her son and daughter-in-law in following up her service to the voters in her precinct, as well as, the effects upon the persons canvassed the results obtained in getting out the vote.

In the adult session, emphasis was placed upon the use of the Citizenship Manual, Bond Elections, constitutional Amendments, organization and canvassing and getting out the vote. Mrs. Smith, as secretary to Rev. Andrew Young, led a spirited discussion of the Church Participation Program, as well as, suggested sermons on registration. The 6th District delegations met and elected officers.

The Youth Session was given over to "A Program for Youth," a "pep session" and a hotly contested election, presided over by Mr. Benjamin Clark of Savannah. Mrs. Ocelia Ellis and Mrs. Smith worked with the youth as advisors.

In the reassembly as the Annual Meeting of the Committee, the reports were received by districts as follows:

The nominating committee made its report and photographs were taken. The list of Adult and Youth state officers, as well as, the Sixth District officers is attached hereto.

= The Clinic closed with the Benediction by Rev. Bennette, who had made a tape recording of the entire proceedings.

March 24, 1963 On a trip to Greenville, South Catolina to visit my sick mother I was able to work on reoprts, especially the budget for counties where we propose to work this year and to appraise the Macon Clinic.

I am convinced that group spiritual singing is the key to arousing and interesting people, where mass action is sought. This was first demonstrated to me in Savannah at a mass meeting where I spoke. Later on a visit to McIntosh and Dorchester Academy, I saw how Mrs Dorthy Cotton was able to stir her people to secure spontaneous action, as well as participation. Certainly the Albany mass meeting, which I attended nearly every week while working on the Dowel project during August and September, 1962, is a prime example of this phenomena. The significant drawback was that it was not organized, except for special demonstrations. Futhermore, most of the established leadership was too far removed or failed to partisipate with this mass action.

It is therefore recommended to spiritual singing, inspirational sermons or addresses and citizenship training be combined with the voter-registration program.

The 6th Congressional District Clinic was by far the largest we have held. Youth delegates outnumbered adults and showed all interest by participation that we have not experienced before.

March 25, 1963 - Made an unsuccessful effort to contact Dr. James Hudson in Tallahassee. Had a short conference with Mrs. Ellis and Rev. Bennette. Mr. Jesse Hill contacted me about the Atlanta program, outlining his efforts to distribute the purge list among voluntary workers. He reported that an estimated 60% of those being purged had passed or moved out of the city. He expected some 1200 to 1500 of them to be reinstated out of the 3,500 challenged. He referred to efforts of the Democrats in organizing clubs thruout the city, suggesting that Republicans do likewise. I did not understand the signifiance of this at the time, but told him the Republicans started such a program immediately after the General Election in November, 1962 but had suspended it in order that it not become confused with voter-registration.

Continued working on report on budgets of counties for concentration. Prepared press releases for Atlanta World, Atlanta Journal, Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Inquirer.

March 26, 1963 - Worked on reports. Held a staff conference with Mrs. Ellis and Rev. Bennette on results of the Macon Clinic and plans for the immediate future, instructing Mrs. Ellis on preparation of financial report, minutes and preparation of lists of state and county officers for distribution. The plans are, subject to approval of Rev. Young:

1. Call a conference, April 6, in Atlanta of all state officers, district chairmen and some county leaders. - Suggestion of Rev. Bennette.

   a. To outline the program of organizing in some 70 counties as recommended by me to Rev. Young.
   b. Luncheon at the Hilton Inn, with Dr. King and other administrative staff members in attendance.
   c. Prepare a budget for counties and travel expense of district chairmen for 10 weeks.

2. Each district chairman is to:

   a. Follow-up registration plans as outlined at the Clinic. (Bulletin No. 3)

   b. Contact the remainder of the 70 counties not representated at clinics to work out similar registration plans and initiate drives where not started.
   c. Secure a report from each county on the prepared form as he goes and submit it to the state chairman where not otherwise secured.

3. Submit weekly reports on activities.

4. The state director and field staff will arrange visits to clinics and work with district chairmen, as well as, county committees.

5. Budgets will be allotted as nearly in conformity with requests as possible.

Contacted Mr. Samuel A. Hunter, in Tallahassee, Fla. in regard to April 5 meeting asking if possible it be changed to Thursday, April 4, and if they could pay expense of Mr. William Randall, from Macon, as speaker. We had received a letter, enclosing a proposed budget as had been requested and recommending a meeting for April 5. Mr. Hunter called back, agreeing to the suggestions and indicated that this would be a leadership meeting to organize a drive from April 10 to June 1.

J. H. Calhoun

March 27, 1963 - Prepared letter and arrangements for proposed April 6 conference. Conferred with Rev. Bennette, Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Cotton on use of Mrs. Ellis in the office, plans for the April 6 meeting and trips to Chattanooga, Athens and Tallahassee.

Worked on monthly reports and budget summary. Contacted Mr. William Randall, of Macon in regard to Tallahassee trip and Macon program. He agreed to make the trip. Talked by telephone with Messrs. Branton and Blackwell of VEP, concerning Columbus situation, giving them my appraisal. We agreed that Blackwell and I will try to meet in Columbus Tuesday, April 2.

Discussed Atlanta program with Mr. Jesse Hill, informing him how Democrat leaders, especially Mr. W. H. Aiken, Mrs. Lottie Watkins and Mrs. Johnnie Yancey, with the help of Senator Leroy Johnson had used a meeting, called under the name of the All-Citizens Registration Committee, to sponsor the Democrat Party. Apparently Mr. Hill was aware of this because in our Monday's conversation he had advised me that the Democrats were organizing clubs with the aid of Cope and suggested that Republicans should also be organizing; his interest being a two-party system.

Mr. C. A. Scott, having suggested the publication of the purge list as a newspaper ad. at a cost of some $400.00, I attempted to reach Mr. Jesse Hill again, but was unsuccessful.

Rev. Bennette tried unsuccessfully to talk with Rev. Young in Greenwood, Miss. concerning April 6 program. Miss Mackey informed me that materials for the 1st District rally are now available.

J. H. Calhoun

March 28, 1963 - Conferred with Rev. Bennette and Mrs. Ellis concerning activities and the proposed April 6 conference; arranged an agenda for the meeting.

Mr. Gulliver of the Atlanta Constitution called me for some information concerning voter-registration in Georgia. He proposes to do a feature or a series on the subject, with the idea of contacting county leaders for specific information. I gave him such figures as I had, suggested how he might secure others and sent him copies of my summary reports for 1962, showing estimated increases in Negro registration for certain counties.

Worked on monthly report. Talked over telephone with Mr. Jesse Hill about Mr. Scott's suggestion on publishing the purge list. We agreed that while it is a good idea, it is too late and too expensive at $400.00 or more.

J. N. Calhoun

March 29, 1963 - Completed materials for April 6 conference letter, conferring with Mrs. Ellis and Rev. Bennette. Called Ray Ware in Athens about Clarke County program, who said they had enlisted a number of workers, but that I should contact Rev. Hawk, the chairman. He expressed himself as being opposed to the tacties of of division being practiced by some Democrat leaders, which would seriously affect statewide registration. He said he would continue to work with us, as well as, them, for harmony's sake. Worked on reports.

Left for Chattanooga, Tenn. at 5:30 P. M., arriving there at 8:30 P. M. conferred for one hour with members of the steering committee of the Metropolitan Voter-Registration Council, with whom we worked last year: Father Robert B. Hunter, Dr. Major Jones, Mr. Martin and Dr. Bynes. Father Hunter had already recommended Rev. John Paul Jones as the director, but Dr. Major Jones and Mr. Martin had some reservations as to his ability to attract the top leadership in the community, since he had been there only three years and although he had been successful with his church, as well as, the Holsum Bakery employment program, he had not projected himself before the whole community. All agreed that he should have a strong steering committee headed by a man like Prof. C. D. Robinson. We agreed to contact Mr. Robinson at 10:30 P. M. along with Rev. C. T. Vivian.

In the later conference with Father Hunter, Rev. Vivian and Mr. Robinson, the same sentiments were expressed and although Mr. Robinson did not agree at that time to serve as chairman he said he would work with such a program. It was also agreed that a meeting would be held April 16, after the April 9 Run-Off Election for City Police and Fire Commissioner and I would return.

Mr. Robinson's willingness to cooperate was somewhat surprising in view of his favortism to NAACP and Cope last year, which handicapped the program. I left report blanks and Bulletin No. 3 with Father Hunter for execution and submission to SCLC. Prospects are good for an April-June drive as suggested by the group, with a goal of 3,000 new voters.

Mr. Raleigh Bryans of the Atlanta Journal called me about the bond issue and I informed him about what Gulliver of the Atlanta Journal is doing. He said he would probably do the same thing and asked for similar materials.

Talked with Rev. Wyatt T. Walker about making a professional movie with Negro actors and some visual aids on registration for fund raising rallies. Still waiting to hear from Rev. Young on April 6 conference.

J. N. Calhoun

March 30, 1963 - Returned to Atlanta from Chattanooga at 11:45 A. M. Learned from Rev. Bennette that Rev. Young at first had approved but later held up the proposed conference for April 6. He announced that Dr. King is calling a top staff conference for Tuesday, April 2 to discuss the Georgia program.

Talked with Livingston B. Wallace of Augusta at the Butler Street YMCA. He informed me that the Richmond County program is going forward and that he had stressed the voter-registration program at the statewide Democrat conference which was in session.

Rev. Tuggle of Rome came into the office and promised to have a meeting set up as soon as possible for a workers clinic where we could show one or two of the film strips.

J. H. Calhoun

March 31, 1963 - Worked on reports during a trip to Greenville, S.C. to visit my mother. In a discussion with my nephew, Air Force Lt. Victor Wright, who was formerly stationed at Albany, Ga., where he and his wife, Irene were once active in voter-registration, this became apparent to me:

The SNCC voter-registration program is designed for areas of conflict, where any number of staff workers might go in, work with a few volunteers to "break the ice." Nowhere have I known this to result in a mass registration. The VEP has assigned several of these counties in Georgia to that organization. This is an essential program and vital to full citizenship participation because most of such counties are heavily populated with Negroes, sometimes in the majority.

The program of the Georgia Statewide Registration Committee, which is being supported by SCLC, especially the Citizenship Clinics, has been successful in mass registration by inspiring county leadership in more than 70 counties where co-operation of public officials has been secured.

Whereas we would not avoid conflict and would work closely with any leadership that can be found in such counties, as was case in Randolph County several years ago, the limited time and money we have been able to apply, is used up with organizing and inspiring voluntary adult and youth leadership in counties where Negro registration is not contested. The 5,000 or more Citizenship Manuals in the hands of these leaders all over the state give them information that is pertenant to their efforts.

Futhermore, we have found that co-ordinated programs, organized with local voluntary leadership and workers is effective, though not as spectacular. As Prof. C. D. Robinson brought out in the Chattanooga conference last Friday night: successful voter-registration requires everybody's help. There are not sufficient funds available to pay enough workers for mass registration.

Our experience has shown, since 1957 when we were organized on a non-partisan non-political basis:

1. A few paid workers hinders organization of volunteers.
2. All available organizations: national, state and local must be used.
3. No one organization should attempt to claim the credit; only total results count.
4. A state-wide registration group forms the basis for statewide political action, since the same leadership is used.

We do not claim originality for the idea, it was copied from the North Carolina Political Action program, even the workshops. The projection of the Citizenship Clinic Manual, resulted from contacts and visits with John Brooks, of Richmond, Va., NAACP's Voter-Education director. Now we are injecting the citizenship education techniques and visual aids to improve the program, which will be carried into the counties. If we are able to secure funds for travel expense of district chairmen and field workers, plus some funds for counties, I believe the 100,000 goal can be reached in 1963.

We appreciate the support and financial assistance of SCLC, VEP, NAACP, as well as, other organizations and individuals. Without them the Georgia Negro registration lists could not have been increased from 146,000 to more than 200,000. We do not claim credit for all that has been done and therefore feel free to work with all willing counties and leaders who will cooperate in this important work even if they are financed and supported by other organizations.

On behalf of the Committee I might say, however, that we intend to function as an organization indefinitely, with or without affiliations, except among the counties and their leadership who brought the organization into being. The value of communications thru correspondence state and district meetings, exchange of ideas, fellowship, youth participation and coordinated, non-partisan, non political action, are inestimable in the fight for full citizenship. Georgia's Negro grass-roots leaders know each other, they have worked together for the common welfare and we call upon all who seek the same goals to cooperate.

Already this year our county leaders have reported over 7,000 registered voters. The program is just starting; we can and will succeed. With the assistance of Rev. Fred C. Bennette and Mrs. Ocelia C. Ellis, under direction of Rev. Andrew Young, I am willing to accept the responsibility.

APRIL, 1963 REPORT

ON

VOTER REGISTRATION ACTIVITIES

J. H. CALHOUN

Chairman, Statewide Registration Committee

Georgia Director, Voter-Registration, Southern Christian Leadership Conference

March 1, 1963 - Left Atlanta at 2:45 P. M. with Mrs. Ocelia Ellis and Miss Emily Poole and arrived in Thomasville at 8:30 P. M. going directly to the Educational Building of Clifford Temple CME Church, where Mr. Washington Virgil, his teen-age son and six other adults had gathered for the pre-clinic session. The program and Calendar was explained to them, a voter-registration program for Thomas County was outlined and Mrs. Ellis did a role-playing demonstration with Miss Poole as an example.

Rev. Bennette arrived later and came to the hotel, where each of us had a separate room.

I consider this clinic in Thomasville significant because we had tried for several years to interest the leaders in the co-ordinated program. Rev. Mullins, an Atlantan, pastoring in Thomasville, apparently was able, after our interview on February 8, 1963 in Atlanta, to convince the leadership that SCLC and the Committee wanted to help on a non-partisan basis and there would be no political implications or committments. We were therefore well received.

The object of these Clinics is to train leadership, especially youth, in community organization for registration and voting. The formal discussions are to be confined to the outlines in Bulletins Nos. 1 and 2 and pages noted for the Clinic Manual. Time permits only brief technical questions until the discussion session. Make notes of and hold other questions and comments for that session.

I. Importance of Registration and Voting (Pages 19-23)

A. There is power in the ballot. It gives us the power to put people into office who will see that everyone has his rights.
B. The right man in office will serve all citizens; vote for him.
C. The wrong man should be voted out at the first opportunity.

II. Who may register - Anyone 18 years of age or over, living in Georgia 12 months and in the county six months (Page 23).

III. Where to register - At City Hall, Courthouse, and in Fulton County, at any City Hall except the one in Atlanta.

IV. How to register - Give the Registrar your name, address and family information; read and write a paragraph of the Constitution. If you cannot read, ask for 30 questions to study; attend a citizenship school. (Pages 19-23)

V. When to register - Whenever the books are open - Find out when they close for each election, from the City or County Registrar. (Pages 19-23)

VI. Vote as you please, but vote. Learn about the candidates from those who know, then make up your mind. Help to get out the vote. (Pages 29-30)

VII. MAKE EVERY ELECTION IMPORTANT! Set up a Calendar of Elections. Contact the City Clerk, County Ordinary and County Registrar for dates of: primaries, bond elections, special, city, county, state and national elections. There's a General Election after every primary. CAMPAIGN EVERY TIME!

STATEWIDE REGISTRATION COMMITTEE
CITIZENSHIP CLINIC DISCUSSION ON GOOD CITIZENSHIP
BULLETIN NO. 2 - TEXT - CITIZENSHIP CLINIC MANUAL

IN THE UNITED STATES, "A CITIZEN IS A PERSON WHO HAS THE PRIVILEGE OF VOTING AND EXERCISES THIS RIGHT OR PRIVILEGE." Webster, according to this definition, is saying that a person is not a citizen until he registers and votes.

I. Duties of all Americans (Pages 1-3):

A. To Register and Vote in every election.

B. To obey all laws of his city, state and country.

C. To protect his home and those of others:

1. Cleanliness in the home is a protection against disease and ill health. The yard and sidewalks should be kept clean and attractive. You and I know so many of our people have dirty yards. This is a first step toward good citizenship.

a. Certainly the inside of the home should be clean and comfortable. Clean up, paint up: Spring Cleaning - Clean Up Week.

b. Any good citizen will seek the best for his children. Join and work with the PTA; work in Sunday School and Church.

2. Service to one's country is a prime duty - Modern warfare requires advance training of young men and women, special service from their elders. Enlist in Civilian Defense - Serve well if drafted.

D. Community Goals - Better roads, streets, sidewalks, schools, hospitals clinics, playgrounds, street lights, traffic, police protection, etc.

1. Find out who is the responsible local official and seek his aid.

2. Organize and send committees, not individuals, to him for action.

GETTING PEOPLE TO REGISTER - A GOOD CITIZEN'S OBLIGATION (Pages 5-14) (25-27)

I. Work with your local Voter-Registration Committee, or help to organize one. Steps in Organizing (Pages 5-14).

II. Each person should have every one in his family eighteen years of age and over, to register and vote.

III. You should help to get everyone in your block to register and vote.

IV. Always recheck to see if the people have registered or voted.

V. Youth under eighteen can go from house to house to do this. (Pages 25-27)

CRUSADE FOR THE

TO DOUBLE THE NEGRO VOTE
IN THE SOUTH

SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

". . . to secure these rights to ourselves and our posterity . . ."

THE NEGRO VOTER IN THE SOUTH

THE FACTS

(1) Over 5 million Negroes of voting age live in the South.

(2) Only 25% of adult Negroes vote compared with 60% white adults.

(3) Purges of voters lists, "slowdowns" by registrars, opening the registration office only one or two days a month and at hours that are not helpful for working people; and

(4) Open intimidation by some plantation bosses and many local officials, all play a part in discouraging the Negro Citizen from becoming a registered voter.

As a result, "Government by consent of the governed," upon which our nation was founded in 1776, is a goal still to be made a reality in most of the South today.

Most of the present crop of Southern Senators and Congressmen will oppose and fillibuster all legislation designed to protect the voting rights of citizens of this region.

YOU CAN CHANGE THIS SITUATION

Despite these obstacles Negro citizens are struggling daily to double the number of voters and to obtain representation in government.

Even the most die-hard segregationist in public office can be made to respect voting power. Furthermore, we know there are many liberal white citizens in the South who count on the Negro votes to increase enough for liberal voices to be heard in the government.

The whole nation will benefit from an enlarged Negro vote in the South. This area of our country CAN elect men and women of good will and a sense of justice to Congress and to local state legislatures.

Let all who believe in Freedom and Human Dignity join in this great Crusade For The Ballot Now!!

Young people in Macon, Georgia in line at the County Courthouse to become new registered voters. With S. C. L. C. help, Negroes in Macon doubled their voting power in a ninety-day campaign during 1962.

All over the South, people at the grass-roots level are joining the CRUSADE FOR THE BALLOT.

CRUSADE FOR THE BALLOT

TO DOUBLE THE NEGRO VOTE IN THE SOUTH

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.
President, S. C. L. C.

HOW

✓ To educate and stimulate Negroes to exercise the vote.

✓ To help them obtain the right to vote where in practice it does not exist.

ORGANIZE

✓ SCLC will help your community to organize registration schools, workshops for local leaders, public meetings on voter registration and provide material when requested.

IN UNITY THERE IS STRENGTH

✓ No narrow partisan interest must be allowed to divide us. In reaching a cross section of the Negro community, the Crusade will move across party lines.

✓ It is for the good of the local community that all civic, church, fraternal and other organizations cooperate in this effort.

NONVIOLENCE

✓ The Freedom Movement in the Deep South is a non-violent revolution, giving birth to a new day of progress and human dignity for all Americans, for generations to come.

REGISTER AND VOTE

✓ Remember if you are already registered you must vote in elections in order to keep your name listed on the registration books.

All elections are important for gaining needed improvements in the community and speeding the day of full freedom.

"The goal of the Freedom Movement in the South can be summed up in 3 words:
All, Here, and Now

We want all of our rights as citizens
(not just some rights);
We want them here, in the Deep South, and We want them now---"

Birth of SCLC

On January 10, 1957, more than 100 Southern leaders gathered in Atlanta, Georgia, to share and discuss their mutual problems of the Southern struggle. By unanimous agreement, the body voted to form a permanent organization that would serve as a coordinating agency for local protest centers that were utilizing the technique and philosophy of nonviolence in creative protest. Two months later, close on the heels of the successful Montgomery, Alabama bus boycott, SCLC came into being, in New Orleans, Louisiana. Martin Luther King, Jr., was elected president.

Structure of SCLC

Affiliate organizations all across the South make up the body of the Conference. The making and execution of basic policy is the responsibility of the Executive Board, geographically representative of the entire South. Of the thirty-three board members, twenty-four are elected by the Conference and nine by the Board. Every affiliate may have from one to five voting delegates at any deliberative session of the Conference, depending upon the type of financial affiliation. The annual meeting of the Conference is held in the early fall and the Executive Board meets in the Spring. Policy decisions are handled by an Administrative Committee between meetings of the Conference and the Board. SCLC maintains a modest but versatile staff at its home office in Atlanta, Georgia.

Membership in SCLC

SCLC is not a membership organization per se. As indicated, affiliate groups and organizations constitute the actual membership. In turn, individuals belong to the affiliates (churches, civic organizations, fraternal groups, etc.). The minimum affiliate fee is $25.00 per annum entitling the group represented to one voting delegate in all deliberative sessions. An affiliate may have as many as five (5) voting delegates ($125.00), but regardless of amount given, this is maximum number of delegates allowed. Affiliation requires an application in writing to national office that indicates general structure and purposes of group seeking affiliation. All affiliates are confirmed by the Executive Board or Administrative Committee. Upon confirmation, affiliate certificates and suitable credentials are forwarded to member organization indicating SCLC's services are immediately available. The SCLC Newsletter and other printed material relevant to the social struggle are forwarded to the membership of the affiliate group periodically.

SCLC—A Nonsectarian Agency

From its inception, SCLC has been nonsectarian in character. Conference supporters are people of all faiths, religions and creeds. The word 'Christian' in SCLC's name is natural and unique to the social structure of the Negro community in the South. The Negro church is his only forum, owned, operated and controlled by him; it affords the broadest opportunity for social intercourse; it is generally the headquarters of the Negro's struggle for full citizenship; the pastor has been the community leader and champion of the Negro's civil liberties. Most of the protest centers in the South are clergy-led, thus accounting for the high incidence of ministers who make up the leadership of the Conference. Laymen too, play a significant role, several serving on the Board and holding top offices. SCLC welcomes the good wishes and support of any person or group of persons who have as their ultimate goal actualizing democracy in America through peaceful and nonviolent means.

Aims and Purposes of SCLC

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference has the basic aim of achieving full citizenship rights, equality, and the integration of the Negro in all aspects of American life. SCLC is a service agency to facilitate coordinated action of local community groups within the frame of their indigenous organizations and natural leadership. SCLC activity revolves around two main focal points: the use of nonviolent philosophy as a means of creative protest; and securing the right of the ballot for every citizen.

Philosophy of SCLC

The basic tenents of Hebraic-Christian tradition coupled with the Ghandian concept of satyagraha — truth force — is at the heart of SCLC's philosophy. Christian nonviolence actively resists evil in any form. It never seeks to humiliate the opponent, only to win him. Suffering is accepted without retaliation. Internal violence of the spirit is as much to be rejected as external physical violence. At the center of nonviolence is redemptive love. Creatively used, the philosophy of nonviolence can restore the broken community in America. SCLC is convinced that nonviolence is the most potent force available to an oppressed people in their struggle for freedom and dignity.

SCLC and Nonviolent Mass Direct Action

SCLC believes that the American dilemma in race relations can best and most quickly be resolved through the action of thousands of people, committed to the philosophy of nonviolence, who will physically identify themselves in a just and moral struggle. It is not enough to be intellectually dissatisfied with an evil system. The true nonviolent resister presents his physical body as an instrument to defeat the system. Through nonviolent mass direct action, the evil system is creatively dramatized in order that the conscience of the community may grapple with the rightness or wrongness of the issue at hand.

SCLC and Leadership Training

In its bold new program, SCLC has undertaken one of the difficult tasks so vital to the present-day struggle in the South. The Leadership Training Program is directed at the organization of communities at the 'grass-roots' level. It is believed that the great success of the Negro community's struggle for full citizenship will be determined by the training of this second-line leadership. Leadership Training embraces the work of the Citizenship Schools and the Correspondence Institute. Both include in their course of studies such subjects as: Registration and Voting; Social Protest; Understanding Politics; Use of the Boycott; How to Picket; The Nature of Prejudice, etc.

SCLC's Citizenship Schools

The Citizenship School is the direct result of one phase of the Leadership Training Program. Interested persons, who have a general knowledge of reading and writing, are trained intensively in the skills of adult education using subject matter relevant to the social struggle. They return to their individual communities as instructors and set up a Citizenship School that the 'grass-roots' people may be trained for full participation in civic life. Periodically, the instructors return to the training center for refresher courses to keep them abreast of significant changes and to further develop their skills.

SCLC and Voter-Registration

The right of the ballot is basic to the exercise of full citizenship rights. All across the South, subtle and flagrant obstacles confront the Negro when he seeks to register and vote. Poll taxes, long form questionnaires, harassment, economic reprisal, and sometimes death, meet those who dare to seek this exercise of the ballot. In areas where there is little or no attempt to block the voting attempts of the Negro, apathy generally is deeply etched upon the habits of the community. SCLC with its specialized staff works on both fronts: aiding local communities through every means available to secure the right to vote (e.g. filing complaints with the Civil Rights Commission) and arousing interest through voter-registration workshops to point up the importance of the ballot. Periodically, SCLC, upon invitation conducts a voter-registration drive to enhance a community's opportunity to free itself from economic and political servitude. SCLC believes that the most important step the Negro can take is that short walk to the voting booth.

SCLC and Civil Disobedience

SCLC sees civil disobedience as a natural consequence of nonviolence when the resister is confronted by unjust and immoral laws. This does not imply that SCLC advocates either anarchy or lawlessness. The Conference firmly believes that all people have a moral responsibility to obey laws that are just. It recognizes, however, that there also are unjust laws. From a purely moral point of view, an unjust law is one that is out of harmony with the moral law of the universe, or, as the religionist would say, out of harmony with the Law of God. More concretely, an unjust law is one in which the minority is compelled to observe a code which is not binding on the majority. An unjust law is one in which people are required to obey a code that they had no part in making because they were denied the right to vote. In the face of such obvious inequality, where difference is made legal, the nonviolent resister has no alternative but to disobey the unjust law. In disobeying such a law, he does so peacefully, openly and nonviolently. Most important, he willingly accepts the penalty for breaking the law. This distinguishes SCLC's position on civil disobedience from the 'uncivil disobedience' of the racist opposition in the South. In the face of laws they consider unjust, they seek to defy, evade, and circumvent the law, BUT they are unwilling to accept the penalty for breaking the law. The end result of their defiance is anarchy and disrespect for the law. SCLC, on the other hand, believes that civil disobedience involves the highest respect for the law. He who openly disobeys a law that conscience tells him is unjust and willingly accepts the penalty is giving evidence that he so respects the law that he belongs in jail until it is changed.

Source of SCLC's Funds

SCLC's budget is supported by mass rallies, individual and organizational pledges, direct mailing fund appeals, and affiliate fees. Some portion of the budget is realized through the personal appearances of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and other members of the Conference. Under its bold new program, SCLC launches in 1961 its 'Dollars For Freedom' campaign which is again directed at the 'grass roots' population of America. More recently, special fund-raising projects in the form of benefits featuring outstanding artists of show business, have added to the financial support needed to carry on the work throughout the South.

SCLC and the Sit-ins

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference views the Sit-In Movement of southern college students as the most important development in the southern struggle. The Conference's record evidences that at every opportunity, it has done everything within its power and resources to aid and abet the students in developing their skills in nonviolent protest. The Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), the coordinating organization of the student movement, was born as a result of a conference called by SCLC at Raleigh, North Carolina, in the spring of 1960 at the height of the Sit-Ins. It continues to serve in an advisory capacity through its professional staff and its president, Martin Luther King, Jr., symbol of the students' nonviolent mass attack on segregation. Some of the most significant victories in the Sit-In Movement of southern college students have come as a result of the leadership and guidance of SCLC affiliates, e.g., Nashville Christian Leadership Council, Nashville, Tenn., Petersburg Improvement Association, Petersburg, Va., etc.

SCLC and Segregation

SCLC is firmly opposed to segregation in any form that it takes and pledges itself to work unrelentingly to rid every vestige of its scars from our nation through nonviolent means. Segregation is an evil and its presence in our nation has blighted our larger destiny as a leader in world affairs. Segregation does as much harm to the segregator as it does to the segregated. The segregated develops a false sense of inferiority and the segregator develops a false sense of superiority, both contrary to the American ideal of democracy. America must rid herself of segregation not alone because it is politically expedient, but because it is morally right!

SCLC and Constructive Program

SCLC's basic program fosters nonviolent resistance to all forms of racial injustice, including state and local laws and practices, even when this means going to jail; and imaginative, bold constructive action to end the demoralization caused by the legacy of slavery and segregation—inferior schools, slums, and second-class citizenship. Thus, the Conference works on two fronts. On the one hand, it resists continuously the system of segregation which is the basic cause of lagging standards; on the other hand, it works constructively to improve the standards themselves. There MUST be a balance between attacking the causes and healing the effects of segregation.

SCLC and the Beloved Community

The ultimate aim of SCLC is to foster and create the 'beloved community' in America where brotherhood is a reality. It rejects any doctrine of black supremacy for this merely substitutes one kind of tyranny for another. The Conference does not foster moving the Negro from a position of disadvantage to one of advantage for this would thereby subvert justice. SCLC works for integration. Our ultimate goal is genuine intergroup and interpersonal living — integration. Only through nonviolence can reconciliation and the creation of the beloved community be effected. The international focus on America and her internal problems against the dread prospect of a hot war, demand our seeking this end.

What Makes A First Class Citizen?

Ability to read and write.

Understanding of the responsibilities of voting, taking part in community affairs.

Elementary knowledge of local, state, and federal government.

Knowledge of the rights and privileges of the individual before the law.

Understanding of politics and how it works.

Knowledge of the Constitution of the United States and how it works.

All over the country there are adults who are not registered to vote, and who generally do not participate in their civic affairs. These persons are not full citizens. Many of them have not had an opportunity to learn what is required of first class citizens. These people need Citizenship training.

Teacher Training Class in Session

Citizenship Education Program

The Purpose Of The Citizenship School

The Citizenship Schools are for adults. Their immediate program is teaching reading and writing. They help students to pass literacy tests for voting. But they also give an all-around education in community development which includes housing, recreation, health, and improved home life. Specific subjects include filing income tax forms, understanding of tax-supported resources such as water testing for wells, aid to handicapped children, public health facilities, how government is run, social security, etc.

The Citizenship Schools give people help that is not available through any other private or public program at the present time.

They are open to all people of a community who face problems related to first class citizenship and want to do something about them.

Citizenship Schools & Voter Registration

Persons not registered to vote fall into three classes (1) Those too lazy, (2) Those who need brief instruction in a registration clinic, and (3) Those who need general instruction and encouragement.

The Citizenship School is specifically designed to work with group 3. No voter registration plan is complete without a program for those who need help in the fundamentals of citizenship.

How Do We Prepare For First-Class Citizenship ? ?

Each church and community organization should have a CITIZENSHIP SCHOOL to train its members to be good citizens.

Civic and social organizations may sponsor schools for those who have not had a chance to take this training.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference will train persons from your church or civic organization to become teachers for your community. These teachers will help to prepare everyone in your community to be a first class citizen.

SCLC will provide:

—the cost of travel to Training Center —tuition
—training
—supervision and materials

You will provide:

—a place for schools to meet (church, community bldg., etc.)
—a community coordinator for schools in your area
—qualified persons to be trained as teachers
—continued support of the local schools

COFO is a confederation of civil rights organizations in Mississippi; it includes CORE, SNCC, NAACP, SCLC and some local groups. Nearly all civil rights work done in Mississippi is done under the COFO banner, though under its organization the separate groups do not lose their identity. Projects are, for the most part, jointly staffed, planned and financed.

The main aims of the staff in Canton are to get Negroes to register to vote and to establish a community center to provide various services such as a library (there are no library facilities for Negroes in the County except for those in the Negro schools), a reading hour for small children, typing and reading classes, etc. The community center has not been established because a suitable building cannot be found. There is a center in Meridian which is functioning well. Currently the staff is also working on a selective buying campaign which is in its eighth week.

In the early 1950's a group of about 300 Negroes marched to the courthouse in Canton and demanded to be registered. A few (believed to be about 40) were successful. In the 13 years since then only 200-250 Negroes have been able to register. In the last eight months, since the staff has been in Canton, Negroes have made over 1,000 attempts to register. Only about 30 have been successful. Over 300 signed affidavits complaining of discrimination have been filed with the Justice Department in Washington.

On January 6, 1964, a selective buying campaign was started against 21 stores and 3 products (Mosby's Milk, Barq's Drinks and Hart's Bread, which are also being boycotted statewide). The staff in Canton estimates that the campaign is about 90% effective among Negroes. One local merchant has been so hard hit that in the third week of the boycott he attended a mass meeting of the Negro community and asked forgiveness and the return of their patronage.

Harassment, intimidation and violence are not new in Canton. On July 24, 1963, a local white gas station attendant, Price Lewis, shot five teenagers, who had been involved in civil rights activity, with a shotgun on Peace St. in Canton. Fortunately, none was injured seriously. Lewis was charged with the unlawful discharge of a firearm within city limits and fined $500. He is now free. During the Democratic primaries last August, whites rode around in the rural areas threatening the few registered Negroes that if they showed up at the polls they would be killed.

Since January, however, intimidation and violence have increased. Faced with both a selective buying campaign and increased voter registration activity, the white community has retaliated in a variety of ways.

The Freedom House in Canton (the building in which the staff lives) has been raided twice by police who searched it. George Raymond, CORE Task Force worker, was told by Constable Herbie Evans that every time the Justice Department comes to Canton it will cost the Negro community $5,000. In January, Raymond was pistol-whipped by Evans. After the beating, Raymond was charged withintimidating an officer and resisting arrest. He was never tried and is out on $70 bail.

Mass meetings are usually held twice a week in Canton. Police are always present taking license numbers, taking people's names and addresses, taking photographs of those who attend, stopping cars and asking for drivers' licenses, listening to the proceedings from outside with electronic listening devices, following people after they leave, etc.

Local Negroes are losing their jobs and being arrested for violations which would normally not be punished. Specific information is hard to get because in Most cases these incidents are not reported to the staff because, taken individually, the events aren't seen as part of the general pattern.

On January 21 the Board of Mayor and Aldermen passed a city ordinance making it an offense to distribute leaflets, handbills, or circulars on city streets and sidewalks without permission from the Mayor and Chief of Police. The law specifies that a written request for permission accompanied by a copy of the leaflet must be submitted. It provides penalties of not less than $10 nor more than $100 and jail terms of up to 30 days. To enforce this law and deal with civil rights workers in other ways both the city and county increased thie police forces the week the law was passed.

On January 22 George Washington, a local Negro grocery store owner and property holder, was arrested for "burning trash without a permit" on the sidewalk in front of his store as he had done for a number of years. Washington is in his middle fifties and has lived in Canton since 1935. He was released from jail on $250 bail and on Monday, February 3, was fined $100 (which he paid) and given a 30-day jail sentence suspended pending "good behavior." Also on February 3, his store was shot into by a passing car during the evening, when it was closed. Washington had two gasoline pumps in front of his store, but they were taken out on January 29 by the Pan Am Company (reported to be an affiliate of Amoco). Also, all meat deliveries to his store were cut off that week. He is now getting meat secretly.

On January 23-24 nearly all the staff (all but 3 at the time) and some local people were arrested. Except for C.O. Chinn and Theodis Hewitt, all were arrested for distributing leaflets without a permit. Except for the juveniles, this charge was dropped and others added while they were in jail.

Those arrested:

Pete Hewitt, 17) Milton Esco, 17) Levi Jackson, 15)	Released after 2 days without bail because they are juveniles. Juvenile court hearing February 5. Released on good behavior and told that if they took part in civil rights activity they would be sent to the Oakland Training School.
Bobbi Robinson, 15	Charges against her were dropped because she and her parents signed a statement for the sheriff that Carole Merritt gave her leaflets to distribute, which provided the basis for the contributing to the delinquency of a minor charge against Carole.

The following defendants were tried Monday, February 3, in Canton city court (Mayor's Court) and found guilty by Justice of the Peace L. S. Matthews (who is also Mayor).

James Collier	Altering the inside of a building without a permit. Sentenced: $100 and 15 days in city jail. Released Feb. 22 on $500 appeal bond supplied by the National Council of Churches.

C. O. Chinn Theodis Hewitt	Intimidating Easter Branch; $500 and six months in county prison for both of them. Chinn released about Feb. 6 on $500 appeal bond privately raised. Hewitt released Feb. 21, $500 appeal bond raised by the National Council of Churches.
Carole Merritt	Contributing to the delinquency of a minor and publishing libel, for each count $500 and 6 months. Released February 21 on $1000 appeal bond raised by the National Council of Churches.
Joe Lee Watts, 20	Interfering with a business and publishing libel; Each count $500 and 6 months; released February 10 on $1,000 appeal bond, privately raised.
Richard Jewett) Patricia Meyers, 18) Martha Jones, 21) William Veal, 18) Sylvester Lee) Palmer, 20)	Publishing libel and disturbing the peace; for each count $500 and 6 months. Patricia Meyers released on $1,000 appeal bond, privately raised, about Feb. 5. The other 4 released on $1,000 appeal bond each, on Feb. 21, raised by the NCC.
Alma Bosley	Contributing to the delinquency of a minor, publishing libel, disturbing the peace; $500 and six months on each count; released Feb. 21 on $1500 appeal bond raised by the NCC.

With the exception of Collier, who was in the city jail because he had violated a city ordinance, all the others were in the Madison County jail. During their stay, some were moved to the Jackson jail for six days for an unknown reason.

On Monday, January 27, George Raymond was told to get out of town by plainclothes policeman John Chance. He did not leave. On Wednesday, January 29, about 11:30 p.m., Raymond was driving from Canton to Jackson following a community meeting in the Pleasant Green Church. He was stopped by the state highway patrol on Highway 51 just outside Canton. He was taken behind the patrol car and found Constable Herbie Evans waiting there. Evans challenged Raymond to a fist fight and removed his badge, gun and watch and verbally taunted him to fight. When Raymond remained passive, Evans kicked him several times, knocking him against the back of the patrol car. Evans then let him go. The passengers in Raymond's car could not see the incident; the only possible witness was a highway patrolman who turned his back during the incident.

On February 3, 1964, two local Negro teenagers were beaten by police, some in uniform, some not, after they left a voter registration meeting on Monday, Feb. 3. The police stopped them in front of their truck outside the church, asked for identification, searched them, drew a gun and told them they were under arrest. Willie Galloway, Jr. was taken behind the jail and hit in the head and stomach by officers and Constable Herbie Evans. They asked him a number of questions about his (Galloway's) father and mentioned that they knew that his father had tried to register recently. The beating, with their fists, was mixed with the questioning.

They told Galloway that it would not be good for him if they saw him at any more meetings. They told him to tell his father, a carpenter, that if he went to work the next day, the men on whose property he was working would have an undertaker carry him off the property. They told him not to tell anyone what happened and that if he did, he had better catch the next train for St. Louis. The other young man, Arthur Harris, was taken inside the police station and questioned about what went on at the meetings, what various speakers said. Combined with the questioning they hit him on the head with a rubber siphon hose, broke a nightstick over his head, cut some hair off the top of his head with a razor, fired a bullet near his feet and held a pistol loaded with blanks up to his head and then fired a blank close to his body (he has powder burns on his coat). They told him not to tell anyone what happened or they would put a weight around his neck and drop him in the river. They also told him that if he came into Canton (he lives in the rural area), he had better be home by 9 o'clock. They were not actually arrested, apparently.

On February 7, Claude Weaver and Ed Hollander were arrested for allegedly "intimidating by threats of force and violence" a woman named Charlean Smith and her child. The threats were supposed to have been to keep her from accepting a job at the C & C Store #2, one of the stores on the selective patronage list. Neither Weaver nor Hollander had ever met or heard of Charlean Smith prior to their arrest. They were found guilty on February 10 and sentenced to $500 and six months. Both were released February 21 on $500 appeal bond each, raised by the National Council of Churches. They had been in the Madison County jail.

On February 15, Henry Lee Chinn, 21 (son of CORE Task Force worker, C.O. Chinn) was arrested for speeding and not having his driver's license with him. Plainclothes policeman John Chance and another policeman questioned him about civil rights activity, the whereabouts of his father and beat him on and off for over half an hour. They hit him in the face, head and stomach with open hands, fists and a nightstick. He was confined in a cell briefly afterwards, then released.

On February 23, Richard Jewett was arrested, just two days after he had gotten out of jail, on a charge of reckless driving. He was released later that day after paying a $36 fine.

In January state senator Ed Henry and representative P. L. Hughes, both from Madison County, introduced bills to make it illegal to promote selective buying campaigns (boycotts are already illegal) by the use of leaflets and other means. One of the bills has passed the state senate.

On February 25, the state legislature passed and the governor signed a bill providing for "mutual assistance pacts." The bill provides for cities to loan each other police and equipment to deal with any problems. Though the plan had been in the hopper, it seems to have been rushed through with Canton in mind. Madison County Sheriff Jack S. Cauthen has told newsmen that every city, large and small, is standing by to help Canton.

No one knows what will happen in Canton on Friday, February 28, Freedom Day. Negroes are going to attempt to walk to the courthouse, stand in line and register. Norman Thomas and about 15 ministers from various denominations, under the auspices of the National Council of Churches, will be present as observers. These ministers will be from such places as New York, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Hays and Wichita, Kansas; Chicago, Chapel Hill, N.C. and Westfield, N.J.

Local officials likely to be involved: Sheriff--Jack S. Cauthen, Police Chief--Dan C. Thompson, Assistant Chief--W. R. Cook, Registrar--Foote Campbell, Mayor--L. S. Matthews, Deputy Sheriff--Billy Noble (former sheriff and very powerful), City Attorney, Robert Goza.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO ORANGEBURG, SOUTH CAROLINA, MARCH 4, 1964

I accompanied Randolph Blackwell to Orangeburg to attend a statewide meeting of our contacts from all the congressional districts of South Carolina. My purpose on this field trip was to observe the function of a field representative, to learn the role of VEP and its manner of operation and to assist Mr. Blackwell.

Upon arriving at the Trinity Methodist Church where the meeting was held, it was obvious to me that prior planning had gone into the preparation of the meeting. We arrived when the contacts or representatives were taking a coffee break with doughnuts prepared by the wives and women of the group in Orangeburg. Our contacts therefore, were able to independently begin the meeting in a structured manner without our presence. In my opinion, this was good because this shows that our contacts are developing a statewide community sense which is necessary if VEP is to have a permanent effect in South Carolina.

All of us then went to the meeting room after the coffee break and sat around a table - I, deliberately refraining from sitting next to Blackwell, but on the other side of the table. Dr. C. H. Thomas sat directly across from Blackwell. The seating arrangement was NOT an accident nor totally deliberate, but more or less spontaneous resulting from values implicit in the group sitting. Neither RTB or the South Carolina people desired VEP to be standing and looking down upon them from a position of authority and power. Rather, the South Carolina contacts invited us to sit as equals with mutual interests. Nevertheless, VEP's separate identity was retained wherein Dr. Thomas sat opposite to Blackwell, showing that Dr. Thomas was representing South Carolina as a group, and Blackwell representing VEP as a group. This was necessary in order that it not be forgotten by anyone that VEP and South Carolina contacts do have special interests.

RTB, in his preliminary remarks, indicated the interests of VEP in South Carolina, which is to bring all communities TOGETHER, to give them information of what other national organizations are doing in South Carolina; that VEP requests that each congressional district plan a voter's project and a budget, and give the budget to Dr. Thomas. RTB then stated that South Carolina is moving ahead of the other southern states in forming a permanent structure.

Some of the districts are well organized from a county base whereas others are not, as evident from the latter not having their budgets already prepared. District 6 was not represented, (Dr. Beck, the leader or contact was not present), but RTB already had prior information that their budget is $6,000.

Mr. Fleming, our contact in District 1, was also not present, but there was a Rev. McCollum present at the meeting through whom RTB could make requests. The other representatives were present, but without prepared budgets. Only Dr. Thomas and Mr. McPherson of Orangeburg could present detailed programs for voter registration, planning from the county level, precinct committees, area captains for rural areas, block captains, and street captains - all complete with names and addresses of persons filling all of these capacities. (See RTB report and files).

It was apparent that the South Carolina contacts were not able at that time to give a complete history of Negro registration and the problems of present resistance to us. It seems that no one anticipates actual resistance to Negro registration except in Fairfield County and the mill towns of Cherokee County and Lancaster County, but the problem there may actually be due to ignorance and the attitude of subjection rather than a clear and present danger of overt violence. It appears that the last case of overt violence to Negro registration was in 1947 due to the Klu Klux Klan in Kershaw County. It was therefore determined that we of VEP send each contact in each congressional district a questionaire, that each contact have a mass meeting in their respective congressional districts this coming Sunday, March 8, 1964, at which time the questionnaires should be completed.

It is evident from this meeting for the statewide project there will be "strong districts" and "weak districts," that within the district there will be "strong counties" and "weak counties," and that there will be "strong Negro leadership on a district basis but that in the same district, there will be a strong Negro leader from the same county as the other Negro leader of the district, but there will be no cooperative effort or mutual effort. Nevertheless RTB tells me that splits and bickering in Negro leadership is much less in South Carolina than in other states. If this is to remain the case in South Carolina, it is necessary that VEP quickly involve itself in South Carolina as a force of centralization of authority in order to encourage mutual effort on a cooperative basis.

Field Report

CANTON, MISSISSIPPI

On the evening of Freedom Day (Friday, February 28) Milton Esco, 17, of Canton, was arrested outside the Freedom House at 7:15 PM. By being around the Freedom House he had, apparently, violated a juvenile court order directing him not to be involved in civil rights activities. Esco had been arrested on January 23 for violating an ordinance hastily passed by the city on January 21 requiring a permit to distribute leaflets. Unlike his first arrest when he was not held in jail, this time he was kept in the county jail all week until his juvenile court hearing on Friday, March 6. The staff in Canton thinks he is out but no one has gotten the details of what happened at the hearing. Also, no one has yet verified reports that he was roughed up in jail the night he was arrested.

On the evening of Freedom Day there was a mass meeting of over 200 at Asbury Methodist Church on Cameron Street.

On Saturday, February 29, about 50 people stood in line at the courthouse to register; only two were admitted to take the test. On Saturdays the courthouse closes at noon. During the afternoon a police car cruised through the Negro areas (don't know about the white areas) announcing over a loudspeaker that Canton Mayor L. Stanley Matthews had called a 10 PM curfew for all citizens and that anyone on the streets after that time would be picked up for questioning. During the week leading up to Freedom Day the state legislature passed a bill, among others that seemed related to the Canton situation, authorizing municipalities to restrict the movement of any and all citizens to protect the public safety. It is not known whether the Mayor was acting under the new statute. The curfew has continued through the present (Sunday, March 8, this being written March 9). On Friday, March 6, George Raymond, CORE Task Force worker, called the police station and was told that the curfew was on indefinitely. In its first nine days there are no known arrests for violations.

On Sunday, March 1, between 7:30 and 8:00 PM a young man phoned the Freedom House and said in a slow, almost sing-song voice, "in about an hour we're going to throw a bomb up there." Lenora Thurmond, CORE Task Force worker, who took the call acknowledged the message with something like "Oh yeah" and the caller hung up.

On Monday, March 2, the students at Rogers Junior-Senior High School staged a boycott. Monday's attendance figures for Canton Negro schools, as given by D. M. Allen, Superintendent of Canton Public Schools, were: 2,625 absent and 915 present. At the Rogers school 1,396 were absent and 316 present, these figures obtained by James Anderson, a student there, who called the school. The students, who organized the boycott almost completely by themselves, gave 13 reasons for it.

1. Books in poor repair and not enough of them
2. Not enough chemicals and equipment for the chemistry laboratory
3. Typewriters in poor condition and not enough of them
4. Home economics laboratory poorly equipped
5. No physical education for high school students

6. No foreign languages taught
7. Insufficient first aid equipment
8. Insufficient library
9. Inadequate shop facilities
10. Overcrowded and broken buses
11. Overcrowded classes
12. Building in poor repair
13. No lockers for students

During the boycott about 115 students participated in a Freedom School held at the Pleasant Green Holiness Church. In the morning they discussed nonviolence, what was wrong with their school and why they were participating in the boycott. After lunch they organized themselves, set up committees and discussed plans for the future. Nothing has come of their request to meet with a representative of the Board of Education on Friday, March 6.

On Tuesday, March 3, all the students who were absent were given letters to take home to their parents, addressed to "Negro School Patrons of the Canton Schools," it was signed by parents to explain why their children were absent on Monday. Students unable to provide excused absences would receive zeroes for their work, the letter admonished.

On Monday, March 2, Sheriff Jack S. Cauthen stopped James Collier, SNCC field worker, two white ministers and two other field workers from canvassing in the sawmill quarters. With the Sheriff were about a dozen other men, mostly in pickup trucks, one of whom claimed to be the owner of the land who said he wouldn't let the canvassers on his property. Sheriff Cauthen also told Collier that he "had heard all about" him and that up to now he had been protecting him but now that Collier was playing with dynamite (apparently canvassing with white ministers in Negro areas) he would have to leave town. Cauthen told Collier that something would have happened to him long ago were it not for the protection he had received.

Tuesday about 10 AM the Sheriff stopped Collier as he was going up the steps to the courthouse grounds, leading some people to register. Cauthen told Collier that apparently he hadn't gotten the message the previous day but that he had really meant it. He gave Collier 30 seconds to get off the steps and told him not to come back again. Later in the day Collier talked with city attorney Robert Goza about the possible lifting of the curfew. After that Cauthen told Collier that if it were lifted, he'd see that it was put back on, adding something to the effect that he thought Collier might try something like that.

On Tuesday evening about 7:30 PM Collier was stopped by about 6 white men in two pickup trucks (one red, one blue and white) while he was walking on Hickory Street with Joe Lee Watts, Marcellus Byrd and Henry Lee Chinn. They told him that there were people in the community who would rather kill him that Medgar Evers.

On Tuesday a Negro teacher, Tom Summers was arrested for driving with a revoked license (which is true). He paid his fine and was released on Wednesday.

On Tuesday night there was a mass meeting in the Pleasant Green Church of about 80 people.

At about noon on Monday, March 2, George Raymond was arrested for driving a faulty car (bad brakes). Raymond says that the owner of the car is a mechanic and that he says there was nothing wrong with the brakes. He was released from the city jail on Tuesday, about 12:30 PM after paying a $16 fine and $2 jail costs. In the jail Sheriff Jack Cauthen told Raymond to shave his beard off or he would do it for him. George did it himself.

On Tuesday, March 3, about noon the owner of the car and Matt Suarez, CORE Task Force worker, went to pick up the car which was in the custody of Campbell's Wrecker Service. They went first to his house where the car was parked, but Campbell (Charles E.) was having lunch and told them to go to his place of business. They went there about 1:30 and paid $30. They went back to Campbell's house, got the car keys from his wife and got into the car which was still outside his house. They discovered that the brakes had been removed and that a hole had been punched in the muffler. They had driven about two blocks when stopped by police and given a ticket for improper brakes. Suarez explained that they had turned the motor off before the police had come close enough to have heard the faulty muffler.

On Monday night there was a mass meeting of about 140 people at the Pleasant Green Church.

On Wednesday morning, March 4, at least several hundred students were turned away from Rogers High School because they didn't have their absence excuse slips for Monday. It is also reported that on Wednesday morning James Jones, Jr., principal of Rogers, made a complaint to police as a result of a discussion he had with Scott Smith (identified below).

About 10:30 Wednesday morning nearly the entire city and county police forces raided the Freedom House. Most waited outside while Sheriff Cauthen, Deputy Billy Noble and five or six Canton police came inside. Asked for a warrant, the police said they didn't need one as they walked into the building. They sent the local adults and children who were there at the time home and arrested everyone else for "investigation," a total of 12.

James Collier, SNCC field worker, Negro, 28, from Jackson, Miss.
George Raymond, CORE Task Force, Negro, 21, from New Orleans
Matthew Suarez, CORE Task Force, Negro, 26, from New Orleans
C. O. Chinn, CORE Task Force, Negro, 42, from Canton
Joe Lee Watts, CORE Task Force, Negro, 20, from Canton
Theodis Hewitt, CORE Task Force, Negro, 25, from Canton
Richard Jewett, CORE Task Force, white, 30, from New York City
Andrew Lee Green, SNCC field worker, Negro, 29, from Hattiesburg, Miss.
Marcellus Byrd, Canton volunteer, Negro, c. 21
John Newman, white, 20, from Kalamazoo, Mich., with the National Conference of Methodist Youth Fellowship
Stanford Brown, volunteer from Chicago, Negro, 20 (back in Chi. now)
Scott B. Smith, Jr., volunteer from Chicago, Negro, 29 arrested 5 minutes after the others, at Plsnt. Green Church.

Lenora Thurmond was not at the Freedom House at the time. The rest of the staff were either in the rural areas or outside the county at the time of the arrests.

In the county jail everyone was questioned about whether they had been on school property that morning. They also received lectures on the error of their ways (that the students should be in school, that the higher the school's average daily attendance, the larger their budget, etc.). They were told that they could be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor, aiding and abetting disorderly conduct, and disturbing the peace.

Also at about 10:30 AM Rev. Frank Gibson of Cincinnati was asked to come to the Sheriff's office for questioning which he did.

Between 4 and 5:30 PM all but wo were released. C. O. Chinn was held for disturbing the peace and carrying a concealed weapon and Scott Smith for disturbing the peace. They appeared before Justice of the Peace Milton H. Sandidge on Thursday, March 5. No staff attended and they haven't checked to find out just what happened at the trial. What they think is that Smith was sentenced to $500 and 6 months and that Chinn, for some reason, wasn't tried. Chinn's bond is reportedly $1,000, Smith's, $500, both required to be property or surety bond.

On Wednesday night, March 4, there was a mass meeting at the Pleasant Green Church of about 100 people.

Property was secured in Canton for Chinn's and Smith's bond. James Collier went to the sheriff's office on Friday, March 6, to get the two out. The deputy in the sheriff's office was filling out the papers when Billy Noble came in and asked Collier if he were a lawyer. When Collier said no, Noble told Collier to get out, that they wouldn't give him the time of day. George Raymond went down and was told that he would have to get a lawyer's seal on the papers. On Saturday George went again and this time Noble told him, "You have our registrar in Jackson, we have these niggers in jail. Come back Monday."

On Wednesday afternoon, March 4, three boys were arrested in the town of Madison, Madison County. They are Floyd Bouldin, 19, trespassing and resisting arrest; Ernest Bouldin, 16, trespassing and resisting arrest; and Arthur Lee Bouldin, 18, trespassing, resisting arrest and carrying a concealed weapon. The story which came to us third hand is this. The three, plus a brother Samuel (who was driving) and a sister Benny Lou, were driving in Madison. They pulled out onto a street behind a highway patrol car and in front of the car of Constable Bruno Holley. All three cars happened to stop at a store a little way down the road. Constable Holley gave the Bouldins a hard time, claiming they had pulled out too close in front of him. The highway patrolmen left without saying anything, indicating that they hadn't done anything wrong. The Bouldins and Holley then went to their respective homes, but the Bouldins decided to go to Holley's house and apologize to him (one of them had mowed his lawn and knew him to some degree). When Holley saw them walking toward his house he must have thought he was being attacked for he came out of his house and fired a pistol to the side of them. He had another man hold a rifle on them while he handcuffed the three brothers. Benny Lou and maybe Samuel watched this from their car. The three were taken to the county jail in Canton. Their father was at the sheriff's office arranging to post bond when someone there said that he had been seen on Freedom Day trying to register and they wouldn't let his sons out. The brothers were tried on Friday but no one knows the results yet.

On Thursday, March 5, the US Justice Department filed a suit in US District Court for the Southern District of Mississippi charging Madison County registrar L. F. Campbell with discrimination and asking the Court to issue a preliminary injunction against him and the State of Mississippi, named as a codefendant in the suit. A closed hearing was held Saturday, March 7, in Judge Harold Cox's office. He has asked for briefs to be submitted by Tuesday, March 10. His decision is expected Wednesday.

On Friday night, March 6, about 9 PM Andrew Lee Green was arrested in Sharon, Madison County. He was arrested while sitting in the Pleasant Green Church by Billy Noble at the request of Forrest County (Hattiesburg) Sheriff. The charges against him were speeding, driving without a license (which is true) and an unpaid traffic ticket. He was taken to Hattiesburg on Saturday morning and was being held for $40 or 40 days. The staff in Canton sent money to get him out but they don't know if he is out.

There are not very accurate records of the people going to the courthouse. The staff is trying to improve on this. The best available for last week are:

	Went to Courthouse	Took Test
Monday, March 2	15	5
Tuesday, March 3	12	9
Wednesday, March 4	5	3
Thursday, March 5	11	10
Friday, March 6	12	8
Saturday, March 7	unknown as the staff was in Jackson, hoping to be present (with some Madison Co. locals) at the hearing of the Justice Department's suit

During the week the following incidents were reported to the staff; none has been really checked on.

1. Lank Williams (40, a truck driver) and his family live and work on a plantation owned by Joe Smith and Billy Leadbelly, northeast of Sharon in Madison County. He has lived in Madison County all his life. On February 27 Smith told all his employees that anyone who went to try to register on Friday (Freedom Day) would be fired and would have to leave their homes on the plantation. Lank Williams' two sons had already decided they would go and they did. On the afternoon of the 28th Leadbelly told Lank that he had seen his sons at the courthouse and that they (the sons) would have to get off the place. They did immediately and a week later Lank and his wife (no information about any other members of the family) moved off to keep the family together.

2. Lilly Mae Murphy worked in a clothing store in "downtown" Canton. Her boss told her that if she tried to register she would be fired. She tried to register on Freedom Day and was fired.

3. It is reported that on Friday, February 28, the "boss" of the county maintenance department order space cleared in the large truck shed, saying it was for demonstrators if the jails didn't have enough room. He told his employees that if they tried to register they would be fired. Apparently addressing his employees, he told all of them who were "with me" to come over to the side of the shed where he was standing. It is reported that less than half of the 50-75 employees went over, but as far as is known none tried to register.

The staff has heard that the gasoline pumps of a man named Otto Williams have been taken out, but there are no details at all on this.

Miscellaneous notes:

The front springs on Dave Dennis' car were apparently stolen in Canton. They were discovered missing after the car returned from several days there.

The Madison County Movement (Negro) put out the first issue of a mimeographed newsletter, the Madison County Citizen on Sunday, March 8.

The ministers left on Saturday, February 29, but another group came on Monday, March 2. All of them had left by Thursday morning, March 5.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO MACON, GEORGIA, MARCH 6, 1964

VG.

I accompanied Barbara Whitaker to attend a NAACP meeting of the 5th Region (South-East Conference) which included the states of VEP interest, except Arkansas, Texas, and Louisiana. My purpose was to observe a function of a social researcher in VEP, and to assist Mrs. Whitaker.

Upon arrival, we found directions to the First Baptist Church where the convention was held, at the corner of Forsyth and Bell Streets. The church is located in the midst of a Negro business neighborhood, including a couple of shops obviously owned and managed by whites, but serving Negroes as a purpose of business. In the same area, there was a white barber shop apparently serving whites only as I saw no evidence of any Negroes waiting there to get a haircut.

We entered the basement of the church to get registered ($3.50), and saw Mr. Patton who informed us that his workshop in voter registration was to begin in two hours. I saw Mr. Robert Saunders, NAACP Field Secretary in Florida, who I know personally. After an exchange of greetings, he asked whether my wife (Patricia Due-voter registration worker in Leon and Gaston counties), was there at the convention. I said no, informing him that I was with VEP now. He spoke of his effort in Florida in voter registration and the need of statewide coordination, to which I agreed. He then told me to get in touch with Patricia and have her to write and call him because he would like to put her on his payroll. I probably registered surprise (she being on his payroll is not necessary for statewide coordination), but I said I would and asked and did receive his card. I then was going to introduce him to Barbara Whitaker, but he was called by a woman I later found to be Mrs. Rubh Hurley. Barbara and I then eventually went to lunch.

Upon our return to the church, we spoke again with Mr. Patton and the city of Tallahassee was brought up. He said something about his not knowing whether he is going to Tallahassee or not (March 4, when he was in the VEP office, I invited him to come to Tallahassee from a motive of just being a Floridian supported by a vague notion that he might be able to help the campaign there - but he said at that time he wouldn't invest time and money in Tallahassee unless Dr. Hudson reported what he is doing down there.) At the church, I asked whether they had reported to him and he said yes, that the NAACP or Dr. Hudson's group have already begun. Barbara asked him whether they were cooperating with the other group down there (CORE) and Mr. Patton said no, that they told him that they were not going to work with "children." Barbara then surprised Mr. Patton by telling him Patricia is my wife. Barbara suggested that he wait until VEP studies Tallahassee before he makes a decision which did not seem to be taken seriously. There is a possibility that in Leon County, there will be two separate campaigns: VEP and NAACP.

The workshop began about an hour late, and was presided over by Mrs. Maxine Smith, executive secretary of the Memphis NAACP, rather than a Mrs. Mercedes Wright as indicated in the program. She indicated the program was to be composed of segments, one involving statements by speakers, the other segment to be dealing with a demonstration. She discussed the need of education, along with actual registration, as to issues, persons involved as candidates, structure of political power in thecommunity, and the potential Negro vote. Some speakers, including Jesse Turner of the Memphis branch, NAACP and Charles McClain, North Carolina NAACP field secretary, discussed the techniques of registration and developed the concept of parallel committees to find qualified Negro candidates to run for office. Problems which this may cause in a Negro community were then discussed. For example, if one portion of the community supports a Negro, the other part of the community may become angry and sit on their hands.

Miss Helen Hayes, assistant to Mr. Patton, was in charge of the Demonstration segment. She pointed up the steps which are necessary to registration, beginning with 1) the first house meetings wherein at least a president, treasurer, and a secretary should be elected, then 2) organization, one central place or office, with a phone, and the several committees, including at least a car pool or transportation committee, publicity committee, canvassing committee, financial committee, and a telephone committee. The third step is organizing is citizenship Sundays between 3 and 5 at all the churches in the community, with local dynamic speakers, with furnished canned speeches or sermons, if necessary. The fourth step is to map the area to be canvassed and to darken the areas which are Negro. The fifth step is to get precinct committees, area captains, block workers and street workers, give them their assignments, and get to work with questionnaires and that at each residence, the names of the residents, the names of those of voting age, whether or not such a person is registered, and if not when such person is available to be registered. Of the Publicity Committee, it was said that anhonor roll should be placed in each church with the names of the members who are eligible to register with a gold star for the ones registered. Of the Transportation Committee, it was discussed the importance of having a central place or central phone and the unique idea used in Atlanta of the use of church busses which had routes and bus stops and time schedules.

Miss Hayes then divided all those in the church into canvassing groups and a publicity group. Barbara Whitaker participated in a canvassing group, and I participated in a publicity group. At this point, the program broke down. Miss Hayes failed to instruct anyone about Georgia law with the result, one canvasser telling one person one is too young to register if one is not 21 years old. Also, there was a failure to instruct a canvasser or a worker on the approach and manner one should have, such as introducing oneself. After about two hours of work, everyone returned to church and the group leaders made their reports, and at 6 p. m., the workshop was over, and Barbara and I returned to Atlanta.

Monday, March 10, 1964

Most of the staff went to Jackson to give their account of the mass arrest on Wednesday, Mrch 4. Matt Suarez drove there, and Theodies Hewatt, Marcellus Byrd, Joe Lee Watts, went with him.

Estimate 10 to 15 people went to the courthouse to register. The registrar started taking three at a time.

Had planned staff meeting in the morning, but we arose too late and the FBI appointment in Jackson cancelled the meeting.

Mr. Robert T. Moore, attorney of the Justice Department, came in the morning to discuss the proposed meeting of the Negro leaders in Canton with registrar Foote Campbell. Mr. Moore mentioned that Mr. Guy Rogers, assistant attorney general of the state of Mississippi, might be interested in meeting along with the others. Mr. Moore said Mr. Rogers is the most moderate member of the staff of the attorney general. Moore had spoken the previous day with George Raymond, Matt Suarez, Richard Jewett, and John Newman about the possibility of such a meeting. Evidently in the hearing in Judge Cox's office on Saturday Judge Cox had suggested such a get-together to try to work out arrangements for registering more people.
The proposed meeting would discuss voter registration problems and perhaps work out better ways to get Negroes registered. By Monday ~~when~~ Mr. Moore talked with us the participants were to include registrar Campbell, his attorney Herring, and the assistant state attorney general Rogers. On the Negro side several ministers and one or two community people active in the movement, totalling about four people, were to come. On Sunday there had been a discussion about the meeting place. ~~The Negroes wanted to meet on territory they knew.~~

Monday afternoon the Negro leaders met with Matt Suarez, Dave Dennis, ~~and~~ Richard Jewett, and George Raymond at Rev. McRee's house. After some discussion it was agreed that the Negro community had nothing to gain out of the meeting but much to lose. Registrar Campbell was on the spot and should be kept there. There should be no meeting until after the court order is issued, if even then. It was pointed out that such meetings in the past in Mississippi have led to bargains which have relieved the pressure and failed to result in an increase of Negro voters.

No appreciable work on registration by the staff was done that day.

Mr. Bouldin came in with Ernest and gave a more accurate account of the arrest of the brothers and of the trial on Saturday, March 8, 1964.

A mass meeting at Pleasant Green Church in Canton was attended by about 50 people.
Other mass meetings in the rural were

Tuesday, March 11, 1964

This was the first real day of massive attempt at getting registrants from the Canton A people themselves.

In the morning a workshop was held in the back of Rev. McRee's church, Asbury Methodist. Attemding were Maggie Smith, Sylvester Palmer, Theodies Hewitt, Joe Lee Watts, Richard Jewett, Marcellus Byrd, Landy McNair, and George Raymond. This workshop was a continuation of one started the afternoon before. The participants worked their way through the application form and some of the interpretation of the constitution. About half an hour was devoted to discussing what to say to people when canvassing and how to answer their questions.

Afterwards groups were organized to use the available cars to go to the rural areas. The remaining people, the majority, were used to canvass parts of Canton to set up workshops in homes to go over the application form and the constitution. It was hoped that the workshop leaders in the community would be block captains in the future and would help to organize the community.

The ministers' weekly meeting was held. Approval was given to a letter sent to the mayor, the sheriff, and the chief of police complaining about the treat/accorded the marchers on Freedom Day. Approval was also given ment to the work done on block captain organization, and money was voted to defray expenses of both of these.

Two workshops were held in Canton homes in the evening. One was attended by four community people, the other by about 20 community people.
The mass meeting at Pratt Church in Gluckstadt was attended by only one person, so the three speakers were taken to a bible study meeting at his own church in Madison.
A mass meeting was held at

C. O. Chinn and Scott Smith were still in jail at this point. The movement had managed to raise bond, but the sheriff had now been on a two day disappearing act, so approval of the bonds was not forthcoming. Lack of a lawyer prevented any move from being made, and the people had to remain in jail.

Wednesday, March 11, 1964

Staff workshop in the morning. Discussion of what to tell people when they raise questions about possible consequences of voting. This workshop was one of the first times the Canton staff has had a real dialogue as a group going. More of such things are needed.

Cars were used to get a large nujber of workers out into the rural areas. A continuing problem is transportation inthe rual areas. This alone will probably lead to an imperfect and possibly bad program there.

Workers broke up in a manner similar to Tuesday for the city areas.

Workshops were held in three homes in Canton in the evening. Mass meetings were held at two churches in the rural areas;

The files were reorganized, and all the affadavits and testimonies and legal information were brought up to date.

The phone company called to tell us they were disconnecting the phone on Thursday because we had failed to pay our bill.

Recruitment of citizenship school teachers to be sent to Georgia for SCLC Citizenship School continued. The March session of the school was postponed from Mar 16-20 to March 23-27.

George Washington's store reported a case of economic intimidation.

A local resident reported that she had been asked to take her business elsewhere out of a grocery store because she had worn a SNCC button into the store.

An unverified report came that people in Camden were not getting fuel deliveries in a freeze-out on accouht of movement activities.

Thursday, March 12, 1964

Got started in late morning. Normal process of sending some people out to the rural and others around Canton.

George Raymond went around to different merchants in the community and different people and collected $54 to pay for an outstanding phone bill. The phone had been cut off in the morning, but by noon the service was back on again. Some of the people giving the money asked that their names not be taken, but the response from the community was good.

It was a hot, sunny day, and towards the latter part of the afternoon everyone felt like relaxing, so there was ball playing and laughing around the freedom house.

In the evening there were staff people at four mass meetings and three workshops.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO MISSISSIPPI

Thursday, March 12, 1964, in the morning, I received instructions from WAB for a field trip to Jackson and Canton, Mississippi. My instructions were to 1) In Canton, find the facts and otherwise investigate the case of five people involved in voting assistance now in custody for CORE field secretary Dave Dennis, and otherwise assist Mr. Carsie Hall, NAACP cooperating attorney and 2) To attend and observe the COFO convention in Jackson with the special effort to interview Miss Annell Ponder, Bob Moses, the people in Hattiesburg and Clarksdale, Mississippi.

On the plane to Jackson, Mississippi, I met Mr. Elton Cox, NAACP field secretary for Georgia. He told me that he was on his way to Houston, Texas, but was stopping over in Jackson to be with friends over the weekend.

About 2:30 the same afternoon, I arrived in Jackson, Mississippi, and went on to the COFO office at 1017 Lynch Street, Jackson, Mississippi. Dave Dennis was there. He introduced me to Jessie Morris, the Research Director, and Lois Chaffee, secretary. I reviewed with Dave Dennis what the case was in Canton in relation to the five people who are in jail. As things stood at that time, five people were in jail in Canton. All but one had been convicted. Scott Smith had received six months and fined $1000. C. O. Chinn had not been tried, but was being held over for the Grand Jury. The three Bolden brothers had been tried and given 30 days, except one brother, who has been sentenced to one year and a fine of $1000.

I then proceeded to call and make appointments with Atty. Carsie Hall, who office phone number is 354-3135, and 355-0129 (residence). His office is located at 117 Farish Street. Before I left the office, I met Mr. Mandy Samstein, the director of the summer project of COFO.

I then drove on to Carsie Hall's office for my appointment. Dave Dennis was to subsequently follow. I discussed the facts of the case with Atty. Hall. We then learned that Jack Cauthern was the sheriff of Canton, and that the Justice of the Peace who tried the cases was Leroy Hawkins, who residence phone number was 856-5981.

We discussed the fact that no one was allowed to see or visit with the prisoners, not even parents or spouses, and we also discussed the fact that theproperty owners found by Dave Dennis to be sureties have been in the sheriff's office on three separate occasions, but the sheriff has never been persent to witness the signatures on the bonds. Yet, the sheriff required that he witness the signatures on the appeal bonds and bail bonds. I then asked Carsie Hall what he thought I could do, and he said that at the time, nothing. It was then about 4 p. m. He didn't think I would be able to see the sheriff, and he advised me not to be on the highway between Jackson and Canton at night because the Highway Patrol would surely stop and arrest me. However, I thought I could at least do something, such as seeing the prisoners and finding about the type of property to support the sureties.

Accompanied by Dave Dennis, I arrived in Canton, Mississippi, about 5 p. m. Thursday. The same afternoon, we went to the Freedom House, the general office for the Fourth Congressional District, and here I met the CORE staff, in cluding Matt Saurez of the Fourth Congressional District, George Raymond, in charge of the Canton, Mississippi, area, Richard Jewett, New York CORE, and John Newman, of the National Methodist Youth Fellowship. There were about ten other regular persons who worked on a volunteer basis at the Freedom House. I ate a very simple dinner with the rest of the staff workers, talked to John Newman, who keeps the records of the program and writes reports. He gave me more details about the arrest. (See attached report.)

Dave and I then at about 7 p. m., drove to the county jail. The jail is also a place of residence for the jailers. When the jailer came to the door, I introduced myself as a Florida attorney associated with Carsie Hall, and asked to see the five persons who were in jail. The jailer said I would have to see the sheriff, and the sheriff was nt present, and he did not know where he could be. I then asked what charges and sentences the five persons I named were being held for. The jailer was about to shut the door, but hesitated because of being cut off guard by that question. At that time, a person who looked like a Wyatt Earp cowboy, standing in the shadows, came up to the door, looked at me and said, "I know you." And then the deputy sheriff looked at Dave Dennis and said, "I know you, too, don't I Dave?" After so many words, the deputy said I would have to see the sheriff in the morning and in his office at the courthouse.

I returned to the Freedom House, told George Raymond to tell the persons who were going to be sureties, to be at the courthouse at 8 a. m., explaining to him that I didn't want the sheriff to slip away from us.

I then decided I should see the persons who were putting up their property to be sureties. George Raymond told me that the property owners would be in Canton Friday morning for Freedom Day, which was the first time I had heard about it. The property owners, of course, lived in the county, and it now being night, I was not so disposed to looking for them on the isolated country roads. The reason I was concerned about the property owners was because property is no good for property bonds if the property is encumbered, and also property is generally not valued at its true value, but according to its tax assessment.

I then went over to Mrs. Chinn's house, to see the wife of C. O. Chinn, one of the five persons in jail. C. O. Chinn was charged with carrying a concealed weapon (a pocket knife) and was being held over for the Grand Jury under a $1000 bond, this being his third offense.

Mrs. Chinn has a comfortable house. Their family includes a teen-age daughter. Neither one of them works, and I was aware that their only income was from the rent from the Freedom House - which used to be a beer joint owned by the Chinn's. Mr.Chinn has the reputation of being a fearless Negro in Canton, who has stood up to local whites; consequently, they are afraid of him. On one occasion, a local constable pointed a gun at him and he remarked, "It takes a tough man to pull that trigger."

Every since C. O. Chinn has been involved in the movement in Canton, he has been intimidated by being arrested for carrying a concealed weapon, although he has always had it in relation to operating a beer joint. The local authorities have since taken his beer licenses for the sale of liquor. Mrs. Chinn also accounted to me that she has been down to the sheriff's office and the jail, and she has been refused the privilege of seeing her husband. She then allowed me to keep in my possession, the property bonds which hasve been signed and witnessed by the clerk of the circuit court. She related to me how the Deputy Sheriff refused to taken the bonds, saying that the sheriff instructed him that only he, the sheriff, must witness and handle the bonds, but of course, the sheriff would not be around. I told Mrs. Chinn to be at the courthouse at 8:30 Friday morning.

I then returned to Jackson, went to Stephens Restaurant, a very nice Negro restaurant, with Dave Dennis. While there, Atty. Jess Brown came in. We discussed the case. I offered that I may move for either a Removal Petition, an Injunction, or both. He advised a writ of Habeus Corpus. I expressed the thought that the case is somewhat cloudy, but he pointed out that regardless of all that, these people are being prosecuted and persecuted only because of their participation in the exercise of their civil rights, voting registration, and that the detention of these people are therefore illegal. I told him that I was going to try to seek him sometime Friday, as he offered to help me. Dave and I then went to his home. He said that he and his wife expected me to sleep there, and thus, I turned in.

Friday morning, I drove a rented car to Canton, Mississippi, arriving in Canton about 8:30 a. m. I first went to the Freedom House. The whole staff, of course, was quite busy. Volunteers were running in and out of the office preparing for the Freedom Day march. Whereas I had asked everyone who were to be sureties to be at the courthouse at 8 o'clock, I immediately proceeded to the courthouse.

While driving to the courthouse, going through the downtown area, there were white farmers deputized, standing five to a street side, standing at parade arrest with shotguns and other types of hardware. It appeared to be an armed town, as if there were expecting the Indians to raid. Although somewhat apprehensive, I went on to the courthouse, and went to the sheriff's office. The sheriff was not there. There was a deputy, however, who waited on me, and asked me what I wanted, and I gave him my Florida bar card, and asked to see the sheriff about five people who were in his custody. He said that he expected to see the sheriff shortly. I saw no one, no Negroes who were to be the sureties for the property. After waiting about an hour, four gentlemen came into the office. I not knowing who they were, and they not me. About 11 o'clock, after I had been there about three hours, the sheriff arrived, but rather than go into his office, he stood in the courthouse rotunda, and then deputies started calling people for him to talk to there. There were photographers around, and other people who seemed to be part of the power structure and possibly the White Citizens Council. I tried to walk over to listen to what was going on, but one of the deputies motioned me back to where I had been standing, saying the sheriff would see me shortly.

explained to me that this is allowed in Mississippi law because the sheriff is ultimately responsible for the people who are in custody and for the forfeiture of bonds. From my reading later of the Mississippi statutes, this appeared to be the case.) I then asked the sheriff what the charges were against my clients. He was cooperative and gave me all the charges and their fines. Since the Bolden brothers were juveniles, I went over to see the juvenile officer, and he explained that because they were almost 18 years of age (one of the brothers is 16), it is the policy of the juvenile court to remand the prisoners or the juveniles to the Justice of the Peace Court. I returned to the Freedom House, and while I was explaining to Matt Saurez what happened, the Chief Deputy, Holly Smith, who had been sheriff before, and the sheriff came in, looking for George Raymond. None knew where Raymond was. It seemed that Raymond had crossed the sheriff up. There had not been a Freedom March at 9 o'clock.

The sheriff and his deputy left, and then came the four people who had been waiting with me in the sheriff's office. They were Arthur Thomas, director of the Committee on Race and Religion, National Council of Churches, and other ministers whose names I did not get. They had come to Canton to observe and to see whether or not the National Council of Churches should promote a community center in Canton, and when they got to Canton, the deputies took them to the courthouse where the sheriff lectured them. It appeared to me that this was a false arrest, since they were taken against their will.

I then went to the church where the mass meetings were being held. All around the church were deputized men and deputy sehriffs with rifles and shotguns, and persons from the Citizens Council taking pictures of all those who were entering and leaving the church. When I entered the church, the church was completely packed with people, who seemed quite aware of what was going on in Canton, and who were behind the movement.

Dave Dennis asked me to stay in Canton that afternoon. Rather than having a march, they were taking people in cars to the courthouse. There were two CORE cars in this procession. George Raymond was in the first car. When Raymond brought the six people to the courthouse, the sheriff and his deputies stood in front of the courthouse door, explaining that the registrar was not in town, being subeponed to appear in federal court. (See attached report concerning this.) Raymond said that since that registrar was not there, another registrar should be there. The sheriff then asked Raymond to tell the people to leave three times, but they remained standing. Nothing was done to Raymond or the rest of the persons waiting.

Eventually more carloads came to the courthouse, and soon there were about 150 people standing on the courthouse lawn. The registrar eventually did come, and five people attempted to register. I do not know how many people altogether tried to register on this particular day. When I found that there were no arrests were going to occur, I then drove back to Jackson, this being about 3:30 or 4 o'clock. Before I left Canton, I explained to Mr. Newman and Mr. Juitt that I would try to get some forms for them so that they would know how to handle their own cases in case they were arrested.

Three other people returned with me from Jackson to Canton, their being teenagers. A truckload of farmers followed us all the way from Canton to Jackson. They stopped when we came to the Jackson city limits, and presumably returned to Canton. There were truckloads of farmers on this particular day driving around the courthouse and driving around the Freedom House and otherwise trying to intimidate the people.

I then went to Jess Brown's office and tried to secure Mississippi statutes on this case.

My next report will be on the COFO convention.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO MISSISSIPPI MARCH 12, 1964
Part II - COFO CONVENTION

Friday, March 13, 1964, I returned to the COFO office at about 5 p. m., and noticed that several people had already arrived from the different projects.

I then made a list of the projects in Mississippi of COFO. An asterisk (*) is placed next to the inactive groups. (See attached Exhibit A). I then took some SNCC people to the Tougaloo College campus and remained over at an off-campus restaurant for dinner. This was an opportunity to talk with some young adults who are not directly involved in COFO, and direct action, or voter registration, yet, who do make a contribution to the general movement.

One such young lady is Miss Doris Derby, a Negro graduate of Hunter College, and public relations director of a group called the Free Southern Theater, Box 92, Tougaloo College, Tougaloo, Mississippi. This group presents theater to the Negro community for the purpose of social expression, and also to develop local groups and social awareness. The Free Southern Theater is administered in New York, supported by some foundation money, and, of course, is located on the Tougaloo College campus.

I met Miss Wordell Long, an employee of the National Council of Churches, which is building and developing community centers in the Mississippi Delta under COFO, who explained her job and purpose.

I then returned to the COFO office and learned that COFO had begun its meeting Friday evening rather than Saturday morning, beginning with the reports from the project areas. (See Projected Agenda - Exhibit B).

The meeting was held at a Baptist Church on Pearl Street in Jackson, Mississippi, and the project reports continued from Friday evening until late Friday night and began again early Saturday morning.

The first report was from Donald White and Frank Smith, SNCC workers, from Columbus, Mississippi. Columbus, First Congressional District, has a Negro population of 12,000; only 89 are registered Negroes. At one time, there had been a NAACP Voters League. When the mock election held recently, 1400 voted. There was no police trouble. (However, a local NAACP leader tried to stop the election).

In the nearby area of Tougaloo, the voter registration project by the way of church mass meetings, ran into resistance from four Negro leaders, also, the city was renewing its project of moving all Negroes to the south side of town.

They also have a case of a person who was not allowed to borrow money to buy a house.

In Columbus, the adult citizenship classes have been started, but not followed up. The recent problems since January resulted from the activities of the new sheriff, such as illegal entry and search in March. A man has offered to put up the money to test the illegal searches.

There is also a desperate need for food and clothing for both white and Negro.

Another report was from Meridian, Mississippi, by Mike Schwerner and his wife, Pat Schwerner, CORE staff force workers. These people work the eastern half of the fourth district - the fourth district being "specifically" a CORE project under COFO. 2,000 out of 12,000 eligible Negroes are registered. This project attempts to work with a local human relations group (that is all Negro). The U. S. Justice Department has filed a suit against the registrar on the grounds of finding perfect applications thrown out.

The registrar flunks 60% of all those Negroes who attempt to register. There has been no evidence of direct intimidation. There is no record of one losing one's job.

There has been difficulty in getting cooperation from the local human relations groups because of the prevailing feeling that Meridian is a "pretty good city" - they have some Negro policemen. In general, there is a Jim Crow doctor, and Negro businessmen who do not want to rock the boat.

Mike spoke of a "white sympathizer," who makes an effort to appear as a friend of the project or movement, yet they do not trust this person because of his involvement in "bribery," where he acts as a "go-between" in the registration of Negroes if the registrar is paid off. Three or four church ministers support the project, but the mass meeting technique has not been used so far.

In this same eastern area of the fourth district is Clarke county, where there is a new registrar and new sheriff where the policy is,

"Bring any Negro, and he shall be registered." Whereas, in the same area is Chciashaw county, where there are only nine Negroes who are registered, and all before 1955, and none since.

The approach here will be to contact individual persons of leadership ability and then encourage them to meet in Meridian.

Also, in the same area is Kosciosko, which is only in a lesser degree, not as bad as Chicashaw county.

The names of the local Negro leaders in Meridian are as follows (who support COFO): Mr. Albert Jones, a realtor, Democratic Committee. (In 1960, his delegation was recognized at the National Democratic convention, not the segregationist group.); Rev. R. S. Porter, minister of the First Union Baptist Church, who will allow the first mass meeting to be held in his church; Dr. Kornegay, a dentist, who is on the executive committee of the Human Relations Council in Meridian; Mr. James Bishop, who owns a funeral parlor, and is executive secretary of the Human Relations Council.

The white "liberals" or "moderates" in the area are: Judge Nevile, Rev. McKeown of the St. Paul Episcopal Church, and Mr. Rosenbaum, all from Meridian, Mississippi.

In summary, of the six counties which compose the eastern half of the fourth district, Clarke county is the most liberal, Neshoha is the most reactionary (comprising the town of Philadelphia), but in Lauderdale, it is practicable to register 3-4,000,5,000 Negroes.

Who is saying this?

Forrest

Saturday Morning - March 14; Hattiesburg, Mississippi (Fulton County)

Lawrence Guyot is the director of the project here in the first district, which appears on the SRC map as about the "whitest" congressional district. Lawrence is a SNCC worker who seems to be one of the most dynamic, charistic of those I have met, yet also seeming to have much organizational ability.

Rev. Ponder and Rev. Bond are some of the most native local leaders who are behind the movement, but it was Rev. Ponder who allowed his church to be used for mass meetings. After one demonstration, the whole community was polarized, and mass meetings were held at all the churches.

Guyot makes extensive use of a pastor's list of whom he keeps the pressure on. A lot of them live in the city, but have rural churches. Guyot also runs Freedom Schools, and workshops.

One interesting technique used in getting the Friendship Baptist Church, which was in a strategic place in the Negro community, to open its doors to mass meetings, was for the SNCC people to join the church and then present a petition to the church to open its doors. The minister formerly opposed this action.

The other general technique has been for the demonstrations and boycotts to be active on Freedom Day. The brunt of the canvassing and the picketing was being carried out by teenagers and children; canvassin g from 3:30 to 7 every day.

The organization which carries out the picketing and canvassing is the Student Union (a national organization). The local president is Douglas Smith.

Several teachers have attempted to register and have not lost their jobs. Some principals are on the books, but not the teachers.

SNCC worker Moncure Fortner explained in detail their work here, such such as getting carloads of persons and carrying them down to the courthouse so that they can attempt to register. Also, there would be a constant picket line around the courthouse, the pickets being in the hundreds, walking single file, backward and forward. These types of demonstrations have not been interfered with by the local authorities.

This report, as it now developes, seems inconsistent with information I received Friday that an injunction exists against Bob Moses and COFO by the city.

I then, from subsequent hours, insert here, my interview with Lawrence Guyot on Sunday afternoon after the conference.

He told me that one of his immediate concerns flows from the fact that the local newspaper gives the names and addresses of all those who attempt to register. He finds it difficult to overcome the idea that this list shows the persons who are registered. He will then have to encourage the people, who have attempted to register already, to go down to the courthouse, beginning on March 23, to see whether they are registered.

Lawrence Guyot, being a project director, has no staff, but depends upon two groups. A regular group, comprised of 12 persons and the group of block captains, composes of 60 persons, who also demonstrate as well as canvass. He states that he needs a full time person to work with the adults.

In responding to my question about the type and extent of reaction from the racist power structure, he mentioned also the fact that they have been under a court order since August 13, 1963, regardless of the Lynd decision.

Guyot also discussed the story of Charles Phillips, who kept a white minister in his home and expected no violence, but his face was shotgunned away. He also related how a SNCC worker, Stoner, has been in jail since the 27th of January, 1963, for the charge of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, although no one has signed an affidavit against the person.

In regard to my question about support from the Negro community, he stated that they are behind the movement, without class, without caste.

Of the local Negro leaders, he named: Victoria Gray, a housewife, who works with SCLC and Rev. L. P. Ponder; Charles Glenn, a local 26 year old who works volunarily full time with Guyot, and is expected to be hired as a SNCC staff worker in Hattiesburg; and then Rev. Cameron, who has a fair potential for leadership, but the question is, how much will he be willing to go?

We then returned to the facts of the Peter Stoner case. Pete came to visit a worker at the county jail a few minutes after 4 p. m. (visiting hours are over at 4 p. m.) Along with the charge of contributing to the deliquency of a minor, he was charged with profanity, resisting arrest, and disturbing the peace. He was held on a $600 bond on the 1st of February.

Carsie Hall was asked to file a pauper's plea. Jack Pratt of the National Council of Churches was to handle the case, but he "forgot." The bond has to be filed tomorrow (March 16, 1964). Atty. Crockett (from Detroit Lawyer's Guild) went to see Crockett to see whether he would want them to file a federal Habeas Corpus.

who [illegible]

As far as the summer project is concerned, he said that Hattiesburg is ready. Mr. Theron Lynd is the local registrar, and a Mr. M. M. Robert controls Hattiesburg, who is an attorney who owns a great amount of local real estate. Francis Zachrey is the chairman of the local Democratic Committee, and is the manipulator.

Ruleville, Mississippi, the Second Congressional District, is directed by Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer, who is in her late 40's. And, in her appearance at the convention, she was assisted by another lady, who has had 20 children, and is also working as a SNCC worker.

Both of these women have had dramatic experiences which are effective in drawing financial support from "shocked" northerners to SNCC. (I first met Mrs. Hamer at a fund-raising party given for SNCC in Newark last January, and she accounted her experiences there. The folk music crowd gave the appropriate groans and gasps, as if they were being entertained by horror movie.)

Mrs. Hammer doesn't seem to have too much education, but she can relate effectively to the people she want to persuade and educate. She was recently fired from her job of chopping cotton on the plantation she had held for the past 18 years. The only quality Mrs. Hamer has is that element in the viscera called "guts." This may be the only thing important to have in the violent area in and around Rushville and Greenwood. Although she is short and dumpy, about 5'2", she scares me when she says that she is staying right there in Rushville even if they kill her, continuing to fight for Negro registration.

She is no organizer, such as planning for area captains, precinct captains, or block workers. She is a martinet, does everything by herself, except she is assisted by some men who help by furnishing transportation.

In this area, we found that food and clothing distribution has been cut off. SNCC has been able to funnel food and clothing from the north and east.

She recounted how the mayor inadvertently has helped the voter registration drive. The mayor, on the radio, said that all persons who want food and clothing to see Mrs. Fannie Hamer. Of course, about 20 to 50 people would come a day to her house. Mrs. Hamer would first talk with them about the mayor and his purpose, and then talk about citizenship; lead them by the hand, walking or riding if cars were available, to the courthouse, where they would attempt to register. Upon return to her home, she would then distribute food and clothing.

Legal Workshop - During the discussions from the reports given, it appeared from the many questions which were being raised that a legal workshop should be interposed within the program. I also thought that there was a need for a workshop because of all the questions thrown at me ever since I had been in Mississippi. I volunteered to conduct one after the noon break Saturday afternoon.

I planned a more or less general discussion, not having time to distribute any papers, or having access to any blackboards. The two general points which the discussion was to be revolved around was 1)the "entity" of COFO, and 2) the rights of the individual and his remedies.

As regards to the "entity" of COFO, I was going to discuss the problem of who was going to reporesent COFO people, and how. I was then going to discuss the operation of several legal organizations, such as 1) the NAACP, 2) the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and their cooperating attorneys, 3) the American Civil Liberties Union, 4) CORE's general counsel, and 5) Lawyer's Guild.

In relation to rights, the first eight Amendments, the 14th Amendment, and the civil rights statutes were going to be discussed.

In relation to procedure, we were going to discuss the rights a person has upon arrest and subsequent rights and what a person can do with or without an attorney.

Also to be discussed was the necessity of investigation and fact findings, including signed statements and affidavits; the question of the "signed" retainer, and its importance in order to protect the counsel. Then, to be discussed in general terms was 1) conduct of a proceeding at the trial level; 2) matter of appeal, and the question of bonds; 3) removal 4) Habeus Corpus, and 5) injunctive relief.

After the noon recess, Attorney William Kuntsler appeared, and I learned that Attorneys George Downing, Ben Smith and Crockett were coming.

Bill was on his way to New Orleans to file a petition to the Fifth Circuit to remove Judge Harold Cox on the grounds of his remarks he made describing Negroes attempting to register as "pickaninnies," "niggers," and a "black cloud." He needed the signatures of Bob Moses and David Dennis.

Bob Moses, William Kuntsler and I thought that we should wait until all the attorney would get there so we could discuss what legal aids could be provided.

I also thought that we should wait because I, being a novice in the practice of law, should wait for these constituional lawyers to participate in the legal workshop.

In the meanwhile, I was worried about drawing up a writ of Habeus Corpus, and finally was able to reach Carl Rachlin by telephone in New York. He said not to worry about a writ of Habeus Corpus, but draw up a complaint using the Lois Chaffee case which was going to be filed next week. He said that I should return to Atlanta and he would send the Lois Chaffee case to me as soon as he could. He also told me to tell David Dennis that Bill Kuntsler is coming down there, and that Dave is not to sign a thing. I told him that Dave has already signed the petition, and Carl nearly had a heart attack. He told me to find Dave immediately. The main issue about the Kuntsler suit was that there was a feeling on Carl's part that "we" should never "provoke" or "antagonize" the judge. Kuntsler's position is that 79 out of 80 cases before Judge Cox involving civil rights cases have been reversed by the Fifth Circuit in favor of civil rights, which shows prejudice on the part of Judge Cox.

While Mandy Samstein, assistant to Bob Moses, was giving his report on the contemplated summer project, and the discussion thereto, the attorneys came, and then retired to the church basement along with Bob Moses, Dave Dennis and Lawrence Guyot. (The Mandy Samstein projected summer program is attached to this report - Exhibit A.)

When we went downstairs, I moved that we introduce ourselves. William Huntsler represented the American Civil Liberties Union, on the cases which he is filing in New Orleans Fifth Circuit, but is also a general and special counsel to the Ghandi Foundation and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Ben Smith represented the Louisiana and New Orleans chapters of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Lawyer's Guild. George Downing, 2800 Cadillac Tower, Detroit, Michigan, and Atty. Crockett (the ~~only other Negro attorney~~), represented the power structure of the Lawyer's Guild.

OMIT

~~I represented that I am an employee of the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council, and my presence there was due to the fact that Mr. Wiley Branton, the director of VEP, loaned me to the use of Carl Rachlin and CORE in regards to five workers who were held in Canton, and that I had been directed to assist Dave Dennis, Atty. Carsie Hall, and to report on the COFO convention.~~

Did anyone question your participation

I then said that I could sit with them because this relationship as a representative of Mr. Carl Rachlin, to whom I would report our discussions, and also report our concerns to Mr. Branton. However, I also indicated that I am a member of the Florida Civil Liberties Union, and would also relate our discussion to Atty. Herbert Heiken, my partner, the president, and to Tobias Simon, the director of the legal panel.

The first problem we discussed was the constitutional right to assistance by counsel, this, of course, involving the problem of the out-of-state attorney. There is a difficulty in finding acceptable local counsel who would willingly introduce an out-of-state attorney to the court. The question of the signature of the out-of-state attorney came up which was not resolved, and the question of some federal judges who require bond for every removal of a criminal case.

Begin Bill Kuntsler then presented a proposal that for every congressional district, complying with the five areas which COFO has, there should always be an attorney who is present, as long as the summer project is being conducted. This would be five attorneys for 18 weeks, therefore, at least 80 attorneys should be made available with each only needing to stay for one week for their vacation.

Bill Kintsler then said that the burden for COFO is that each person who is coming south should at least bring $25 with him to put in the legal defense kitty. The purpose is to finance the transporation of the attorneys to and from Mississippi. They would practice either with or without local counsel, representing themselves as the parties "by his next friend."

There seemed to be a vague consensus about these ideas, except that Crockett and Downing stated the position of the Guild. The Guild would furnish their own traveling expenses; it is necessary only for COFO to take care of the attorneys' living expenses.

I raised the point that with lawyers running in and out of the state, there is a necessity for a coordinator. The response was that each attorney, as he comes in, will be "briefed" by the out-going attorney. The general consensus was that in a set-up such as this, there was bound to be some flaws. This did not satisfy me because one could envision cases being messed up, or failed to be prosecuted or appealed after the summer project. Therefore, it was agreed that the volunteers would work with the Legal Defense Fund, and that the volunteers would incorporate themselves.

I then raised the question about bonds and property bonds, but this was not discussed or proceeded with,with any substantial effort.

After dinner, we had our legal workshop, and the above points were reiterated from a general discussion and a question and answer period. Bill made a significant point that an attorney can only advise one what to expect under the law, but that in Mississippi, a worker must presume that the law will not be followed, even in federal courts.

The workshop then ended at a reasonable hour. (10 p. m.)

Voter Registration - (see Prospectus for the Summer attached. Saturday evening, March 14.)

This prospectus, along with the attached materials, fully explain what is to occur in the summer. However, to reiterate the comments of Bob Moses, the purpose of the summer registration program is 1) to elect electors for Mississippi and to 2) elect delegates to the National Convention, through the means of public and open precinct meetings.

Sunday, the COFO organization would resolve itself into a convention, the purpose being to find five persons to run in the five congressional districts and a person to run for the senate.

It will be attempted to urge upon the National Convention not to seat the regular convention, but to seat the free Mississippi delegation. Also, the congressional delegation from Mississippi shall be challenged in Congress.

Sunday Convention - Sunday, March 15: The meeting was presided over by Mr. Aaron Henry, after an opening by prayer by Dr. Thomas of the National Council of Churches. Again, project directors gave their report. Mr. Patton of the NAACP and Mr. Forman of SNCC were introduced.

Mr. MacArthur Colton, a person who I have not seen before, gave the Third District report, which includes Vicksburg, Natchez, and McComb. He reported three recent deaths, such as Mr. Hugh Allen, who was killed for testifying in a voter registration case. Negro registration here is 5%.

Mr. Aaron Henry made the comment that COFO is shooting for 78,000 Negroes to be registered. However, if the 6th grade provision in the civil rights law prevails, this will add 150,000 votes to the list.

George Raymond presented two local people who gave the Canton report, which was inspiring, but whose comments are not necessarily in order to be added here.

Al Downing was presentd. He gave a report representing the Lawyer's Guild. He reported that George Crockett had gone to Clarksdale, Mississippi, to make a move about out-of-state attorneys. The Lawyer's Guild is also initiating a suit against the state of Mississippi on the grounds that Mississippi is not a republican form of government.

The convention then broke down into five groups representing the congressional districts, each district to "nominate" a candidate for the House, and everyone together to nominate a senator.

It is sorry to say, but only two persons were nominated - Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer from the Second District, and Rev. Cameron from the Fifth. Because no one else was decided upon, a call meeting was planned for March 22, 1964. (They have had their meeting, and the only additional candidate is Mr. Houston from the Third District, Vicksburg. Only Mrs. Hamer reportedly has filed as yet. No one has put up the $500 registration fee at this time. This I learned from a telephone conversation with Dave Dennis on March 23, 1964.)

Mr. Patton urged that a meeting of the national organizations take place after the convention, which did take place. At this meeting was Dave Dennis, James Forman, W. C. Patton, Andrew Young, representing SCLC, Bob Moses, Richard Haley, representing CORE, Aaron Henry, and myself, representing VEP.

At this meeting, Mr. Patton raised the question, "What kind of financial support will each national organization give to the summer project?" One person asked, "What would be included in this financial support?" To which Mr. Patton answered, "The NAACP will match what the organizations will do."

Mr. Richard Haley, associate director of CORE, now to be in charge of CORE's new southern region, stated the position of CORE's contribution - that CORE will continue to give $500 a month to COFO's office in Jackson, and will support and pay for all the expenses in the Fourth District - that CORE is not in the position to pay anything special for a special project.

James Forman gave the position of SNCC, which is to assume all the work, furnish all the workers, and to pay all that which CORE does not pay for or do in the state of Mississippi.

Aaron Henry stated that the Mississippi NAACP will work, contribute, and furnish workers and money, regardless of what the national NAACP will do or will not do, to the COFO effort, whatever it is.

Mr. Patton wanted to know what each organization could do and suggested that each organization put money in a common kitty, and asked for a proposed budget.

Bob Moses indicated that it was impractical to present a proposed budget overall, because of individual organizations who are assuming certain parts of the expenses, whatever they might come to. Example, CORE and the National Council of Churches with the community centers.

(Bob Moses)
The only area where he/could reasonably calculate a budget was for the Freedom Schools, $120,000 for a six-week period for 20 schools. Bob stated that he hoped some of the expenses would be defrayed by the students as they bring at least a hundred dollars with them, each. Foundations shall be solicited for the remainder.

Mr. Patton's only concern was the special effort for the summer project because Mr. Wilkins supports the summer project.

Rev. Andrew Young stated that he could not set policy for the SCLC, but indicated that SCLC probably will not make a special effort in Mississippi, and will only continue the "citizenship" schools, based on the fact that SCLC, by itself, is going to carry on a somewhat similar summer program in Alabama.

However, he suggested that both Bob and Aaron Henry call upon the SCLC Atlanta power to carry on a special benefit for the COFO summer project, that at least $25,000 can be raised at one program, easily and quickly.

However, he did state that SCLC will go hand in hand with COFO as regards to their operational expenses, only requesting a specific demand. Andrew says that SCLC will and shall assume/all the SNCC printing (SNCC had difficulty in getting the pamphlets ready for the meeting) and will print ballots, registration books, and all other necessary propaganda.

Mr. Patton said that all releases from COFO should indicate the cooperating agencies, that the NAACP has not been mentioned in some press releases, such as those coming out of Canton, Mississippi.

Someone mentioned the NAACP image in Jackson via Charles Evers, and Mr. Patton responded that the movement in Jackson is nothing BUT NAACP.

Bob Moses quickly steered the discussion from this impasse by directing the growing feelings toward me. I told them that I am an observer, that VEP is proud of COFO (But I didn't say that we consider it our baby.) However, I stated that I was carefully directed by Mr. Wiley Branton, not to suggest a promise or a possibility that VEP is going to contribute any more to COFO in Mississippi. I reminded them that about $50,000 had been invested in Mississippi, more than any other state except Georgia, and that Mississippi has received its fair share.

At least I helped Bob in quieting the growing bad feelings between the "cooperating agencies" - they were now angry at VEP. The meeting then was closed.

After the meeting, I picked up the remainder of my clothes at Dave Dennis', picked up Richard Haley at the COFO office, and got lost driving to the airport. I was late, so I turned the car in. The Hertz people said they would send the bill to me and just barely caught the plane.

I sat with Mr. Patton on the way to Birmingham. We generally discussed the policy of NAACP in voter registration, which is to register a lot of Negroes as easily as possible, at no more than the rate of 25¢ a head. He indicated his disatisfaction with COFO because of no adequate planning or having a proposed budget.

Re: SECOND FIELD TRIP TO MISSISSIPPI - MARCH 17-20, 1964

While at the offices of Attorney Howard Moore, developing legal papers for the Canton case, I received a phone call from Carl Rachlin and Miss Lois Chaffee. I called WAB, and he stated that he gave permission for me to go to Mississippi.

The purpose of this trip to Mississippi was to assist Miss Lois Chaffe to file a case in the federal court in her own name, rather than my signing any pleadings. Tuesday morning, March 17, I had a conference with WAB. He suggested that I should be very careful and concerned about the reasons why Attorneys Jack Young, Carsie Hall, and Jess Brown would not handle this case.

I reached Jackson at about 1:30 p. m., and no one was there to meet me at the airport. I went on to rent a Hertz car. I reached Jackson about 2:30 p. m., and Miss Louis Chaffee was waiting.

Instructions given to me by Carl Rachlin the night before included directions to cross out all the references to Jack Young, file the complaint and order Tuesday, and have Judge Harold Cox set a hearing on the cause Wednesday or Thursday. The action had to be taken in order to forestall the criminal action which was to have taken place Monday morning in the state court on the perjury charge.

Upon my arrival, we carefully counted the complaints to see whether we had thirteen. We made corrections, erasing that which indicated Lois Chaffee was a member of CORE at the time she witnessed the events. We then went to see a Notary so that her signatures would be notorized on the order to show cause, the affidavit thereto, and on the summons, and the affidavit thereto.

After all of this was done, it was about 4 p. m. On impulse, I went to Judge Cox's office before going to the clerk's office. Cox's secretary said I would have to file the action first and that I should be able to see the judge at about 5 p. m., which was what I wanted.

At the clerk's office, I told the clerk that Lois Chaffee was filing this action, and that I was only assisting her. She believed that the rules required a member of the Mississippi bar to file the action, but she called Judge Cox and found that she could file the action in her own behalf.

At 5 p. m., Lois and I returned to Judge Cox's office and the secretary said that we should see him in court. Lois and I then went to sit in the courtroom. It was very warm. All the time I had been in downtown Jackson, I felt very self-conscious in walking around with Lois (who is white), and I had perspired freely while sitting in Lois' office. ?

Sitting in the courtoom with Lois, I sat at least a briefcase away from her, and then assumed an air of being greatly interested in the proceedings. Lois seemed bent on destroying this posture because she promptly went to sleep. I nudged her several times, but she would only shake her head. I proceeded to attempt to establish eye contact with Judge Cox, who seemed to look at us rather than at the parties involved in a contract action. When he became peeved at one of the litigants, I would frown. When he would insult one of them, I would smile. I did notice that Judge Cox enjoys himself on the bench with his attempts at witticisms and insults.

When he terminated the case for the day, he quickly returned to his offices, so Lois and I returned there, also. It was then 6 p. m. Cox's secretary asked me to return at 8:30 in the morning because he was tired, and probably would not consider my cause then as reasonably as he otherwise would. I was reluctant, but at that time, I could see no real difference in his signing the order then or the next morning.

We ate dinner, and returned to the COFO office. I then determined what our next course would be - which was to determine the persons to be placed on the subpoena list.

I tried to call Carl Rachlin, but he was not available. I received a phone call from Attorney Brewer from New York (he drew up the complaint). He told me that Carl said for me to subpoena Jack Young, Jess Brown, and Carsie Hall, along with three other Jackson attorneys who practice criminal law. I asked him to tell Carl to call me so that I would know what to tell WAB.

I then called Jack Young for the names of persons who could be subpoenaed and he ran three names off. I informed him that I would see Carsie Hall Wednesday morning because some of the people from Canton told me that the FBI wanted to see the prisoners, but the sheriff refused to let them see those in custody until he saw me (and of course, I was supposed to see the sheriff on Monday, March 16.)

- I then went home to bed.

Wednesday morning, Lois and I were at Judge Harold Cox's office at 8:30 a. m. Although others came wanting to see the judge, when he arrived, he motioned us in. (He was acting as a "father" - motioning us to sit down.)

I told the judge that I was from Atlanta, and a member of the Florida bar and the U. S. District Court, Miami division. I explained why I was there - that we wanted to request that he sign the Order to Show Cause. I told him I understood that cases were assigned according to the last number, but I explained that Judge Sidney C. Mize, being in Hattiesburg, or Meridian, even though assigned this case, could not sign the order, and we could not wait for him to return because the hearing must be held that week, or it would be too late; Lois Chaffee's federal rights would be in jeopardy Monday. He said that those who seek equity must do equity, and that one cannot come to court to undo a harm that one has put on one's own head. I agreed with him that it was late, but told him that Messrs. Young and Brown just resigned from the case Monday, and that I was there as a friend, seeking that he sign the order. Also, I told him that it would seem that he had the authority to sign the order rather than my waiting to see Mize, because the rule as to the assignment of cases was his own rule.

He agreed, but on grounds of being "polite" and because of his policy of not making exceptions, he would call Mize. He then called Mize, and Mize gave Cox "permission" to sign the order. He also said that Mize mentioned that Lois had better have an attorney who was qualified Friday morning, implying an in-state attorney. I asked whether it would be sufficient for an in-state attorney to just "introduce" an out-of-state attorney, and Cox said that would be all right.

Cox read the order, didn't like it, and wrote another order entitled, "Fiat." and signed it and the copies therewith for all of the complaints to be served. The marshall received the "fiats" and summons, and Lois and I had breakfast.

I called Brewer (not being able to call Rachlin anywhere), and told him that the legal costs of the subpeonas would be over $300, and that COFO just did not have it in its treasury. He told me to serve them ourselves, and just pay for the per diem, and travel expenses of the witnesses who were not parties.

I then called the clerk, and she gave me more than 50 certified and signed subpoenas. The rest of the day on Wednesday and Thursday, several others over 18 years of age, and myself, served subpoenas on about 14 persons.

We were not able to find the mayor. I was assigned to the governor, and I was almost arrested by the state police (I assume they were his guards.) They ordered me from the State Capitol building. I did not want to tell them what I was there for, except to "see the governor." They told me his office was closed (it was after 5 p. m.), which I knew already, but I knew he was still in the building because his official car was parked in the driveway.

Lois and I walked to our car, crossing the Capitol grounds, followed by the stares of the state cops who gathered at the door. As we came to the street which we had to cross, a city cop was directing traffic. I was wondering whether he was going to stop traffic as he did for other pedestrians, but he did not. Instead, he just went off duty and entered his car. As soon as we drove off, he went back on duty.

One little girl waited in Attorney General Patterson's office, and after she served it, Patterson ordered her not to ever come back.

When another little girl served Rayfield, the Chief of Police, he saw only that he received something in an envelope marked, "Aaron Henry for Governor," which he promptly tore up. Deputy Chief Ray, according to a Jackson radio station, ran into the chief's office and said, "I have just been subpoened." The chief then went into his waste basket and laboriously put his subpeona back together.

I spent Thursday morning talking to Carsie Hall, and he said that he would go to Canton. He called the sheriff, and the sheriff told Carsie that he would release three people Thursday at 2:30 p. m. Jack Young said that he would voluntarily go down to Biloxi; all he desired was a subpoena.

I then spent two hours with Jess Brown, who finally agreed to go to Biloxi for free. Jack Young and Jess Brown were going to testify from their experience in handling criminal cases, had any witness been charged with perjury when a policeman's testimony contradicted that of the witness.

Thursday evening, I went to Canton to be available if the people were not released, but I stayed at the Freedom House, letting Carsie Hall handle it all. The Boldens were released, and the others were to be released Froday morning, so I returned to Jackson.

I called Brewer, and he said that Rachlin would want me in Biloxi. I asked him what could I do. He said to make sure that the witnesses get to Biloxi and to brief both Carl Rachlin and O'Dwyer about the witnesses and the parties as regards to the proof. He said that Carl would call WAB. I told Brewer that Carl had not called me for two days - that I had a duty to call WAB, but what could I say unless Carl called me? So I told him to tell Carl to call me or leave a number by midnight Thursday. No one called, so I went on to Dave's house. Dave Dennis, one of the witnesses went to a dance, and I knew that I would have to drive to Biloxi.

We planned to leave Jackson at 4:30 so as to be in Biloxi at 8 o'clock - the hearing to be at 10. Dave's electric alarm clock didn't ring, or Dave turned it off unconsciously, so I woke up automatically at 5:30 a. m. Dave, Lois, and I left Jackson by 6 a. m., and reached Biloxi at 8:30 a. m.

O'Dwyer and Carl came to the funeral home where we were, and we went through our case.

At 10 o'clock, only the defendants, Jack Travis, the Jackson prosecutor, and the Attorney General were present.

At the hearing, the state agreed that there would be no prosecution Monday, March 23, 1964, therefore, we have attained a stipulation which was better than a temporary restraining order. It gives us more time. The hearing for the preliminary injunction is set for April 16, 1964. After the order was indicated, Jess Brown and Jack Young gave reasons why they dropped out of the case. They said that they did not have an opportunity to participate in the drawing up of the complaint, so they should not sign the complaint - that they were not "afraid" as might have been suggested by O'Dwyer.

After the hearing, I called WAB and went to Florida to see my wife, returning Monday to the VEP office.

LOUISIANA SUMMER PROJECT

I. Pre-summer-project activity:

The Louisiana delegation to the National Democratic Party Convention will be chosen by the Democratic State Central Committee in early May. It is important to protest the fact that both the State Central Committee and the delegation will be all-white, and will therefore not represent a sizeable minority of Louisiana's population. As part of the freedom registration and elections, we plan to organize a freedom delegation from the Sixth Congressional District which will challenge the seating of the Louisiana delegation at the National Convention.

On April 25, 1964 there will be a meeting of the Capital Voters' League in St. Francisville, La. The Sixth Congressional District CORE task force will make sure that there are at least the following minimum representations from these parishes of the Sixth Congressional District: 6 persons from East Baton Rouge Parish, 3 persons from Tangipahoa Parish, and 2 persons from each of the other parishes.

The Capital Voters League will elect a 17 member delegation to represent the people of the Sixth Congressional District on the Democratic State Central Committee. The persons will request to be seated in place of members of the State Central Committee already elected from the Sixth Congressional District. When the State Central Committee convenes in early May in Baton Rouge, it will have to face the challenge of the freedom delegation and if it refuses to seat the Negro delegation, the latter will meet separately and elect 3 to 6 delegates to the National Democratic Convention (i.e., 1/8 of the 24 to 48 delegates usually selected by the State Central Committee to the National Convention . The exact number of delegates from the State Central Committee will be decided at their meeting in early May; either 24, each with a whole vote or 48, each with a half vote, will be elected.) We hope to send the delegates representing one Congressional District in Louisiana jointly with the Mississippi delegation, which will represent the whole state.

II. Freedom Registration:

The first state-wide law suit against Louisiana voter registration procedures filed by the United States Department of Justice attacked the constitutionality of the registration application form. The basic contention was that the application form is valid only as an application form and cannot be used as a test. Additional law suits against individual registrars clearly point out that the constitutional tests, old and new, are unconstitutional.

Therefore, we contend that all potential registrants meeting the following qualifications be registered: 21 years of age, American citizen, and residency requirements as outlined in the laws of Louisiana. Moreover, they must fill out in their own handwriting (with or without the assistance of the freedom registrars) a regular application form. In the case of those who are unable to do so (illiterate, disabled, etc.), and who are able to give the information to the registrar, they should provide the registrar with the requested information.

The application suit is now pending before the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans. We plan to get every potential Negro voter who can fill out the application form in the manner described earlier to do so, sealing it in a blank envelope before a freedom registrar who will present it to the parish registrar for acceptance. If the application is denied, then it will be held in a central and protected place later to be presented with approximately 100,000 others to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. The presentation at the Fifth Circuit will be as follows: 5 to 10 freedom registrars from each parish will carry all of the applications to the chambers of the five judges of the Court asking that the Court declare the applicants registered as a part of the lawsuit filed by the U.S. Department of Justice. If the judges order the freedom registrars (numbering approximately 12- to 240) to leave, taking the applications with them, they will refuse to do so, risking contempt of court.

In each of the parishes of the Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts we plan to send in teams of voter registration workers who will serve and/or recruit local people to serve as freedom registrars, commencing a freedom registration campaign. This will involve setting up freedom registration posts in churches, grocery stores, club houses, Masonic Halls, etc. Each registrar will sign notorized statements that they will carry out registration procedures in the above manner, and will appoint local people to serve as deputy registrars. The registrars and their deputies will carry out the general objective of reaching every unregistered Negro and getting him to fill out an application form which will go through the channels described above.

In the freedom registration campaign we plan to reach 24 parishes, 48 to 56 communities, and two Congressional Districts which geographically cover 1/3 of the state. It is clear that this will be the most progressive organizational step by CORE toward setting up a state-wide program in Louisiana for the future.

III. Stand-ins:

In several communities of the Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts we plan to have lines of Negroes flooding the registrars' offices on the three days when the registration books are open between the first and second Democratic primaries. This endeavor may result in a few more names being added to the registration rolls.

IV. Freedom Elections:

With the total concentration of this summer project focused upon protesting for the right to vote, it will be a logical step to hold mock elections. The summer project as presented here will be a pretty complete reproduction of the whole democratic electoral process as practiced in the United States. This will start with the attempt to seat delegates at the Democratic National Convention in July, continue with Freedom Registration in July and August, and conclude, as the actual process concludes, with mock elections.

In July and August of 1964, Louisiana Democrats will choose their representatives for the U.S. Congress. Since the Louisiana voter registration system is systematically designed to exclude Negroes from the voting rolls, these representatives will represent only a part of the state's population. Approximately 1/6 of the over 600,000 voting-age Negroes in the state of Louisiana are registered to vote in official elections. Therefore, 5/6 or over 400,000 Negro citizens of the state have no voice in the electoral process. To dramatize and protest this situation, we plan to sponsor two Negro candidates who will run for Congress from the Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts in a mock election.

All persons who have been freedom registered will be eligible to vote in this election, which will be held on Aug. 29. We anticipate that over 50,000 votes will be cast, which will be proof that not only do Negroes here want to vote, but that had these votes been cast in a real election, they would have been able to determine that election.

At the time of the general election in November, we will urge all Negro voters registered within the official Louisiana registration system to write in the name of the freedom candidate instead of voting for one of the party candidates.

IV. We plan to urge Negroes to seek public office including congressional seats in the Democratic primaries.

V. Mechanics of the Project:

Dates: ~~July 12 - August 30, 1964~~ June 10, 1964 — August 14, 1964

~~July 12 - 16~~ June 10 - 15: Training in Plaquemine for freedom registration and vote campaign.

~~July 14 - 20~~ June 16 - 25 Regular Registration: Preparation for voter registration stand-ins at registrars offices in Monroe (Ouachita Parish), St. Francisville (West Feliciana Parish), Clinton (East Feliciana Parish), Greensberg (St. Helena Parish), Plaquemine (Iberville Parish), and New Roads (Pointe Coupee Parish)

June 26 - July 26 Freedom Registration

July 27, 28, 29: Stand-ins at registrars offices. These are the only three days the registration books are open between the two Democratic primaries (July 25 and Aug. 29)

July 30 - Aug. 12: Freedom registration campaign

Aug. 13 - Presentation of application forms to parish registrars.

Aug. 14: Presentation of application forms to Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

~~Aug. 15 - 29: Mock election~~

~~Aug. 30 - Project evaluation and conclusion.~~

Manpower and transportation: We need 48 workers, two to each parish, plus the present staff. We also request that an official of National CORE take up permanent residence in Louisiana for the summer project like last year. The purpose of this is that this will be an independent CORE endeavor and we will need additional professional know-how in community relations and organization.

We need at least 12 cars plus the cars now in operation, one car to every two parishes. We hope that with 12 cars and a staff of 48 we will be able to secure additional transportation and volunteers from local communities.

VI. Practical aspects:

Although the plan for a summer project may be interesting and dramatic, we are concerned about several practical aspects.

Community interest in such a project cannot be overlooked. And we have problems in this regard in both the Fifth and Sixth Congressional Districts, particularly in North Louisiana. With present staff we have been unable to fully scout North Louisiana and our work has been limited to a couple of parishes. Resistance on the part of the whites in this area will be especially stubborn and work will be dangerous, recall Mike's being run out of Tallulah. Thus, reaching and inspiring the Negro communities will be an arduous task and we can only be hopeful of success.

Before freedom registration could begin and little if any work could be done on the freedom election, workers could most probably be arrested, intimidated, and even severely injured by members and associates of the White Citizens Council and the KKK.

VII. Follow up Program and Staff:

We hope to have a staff of at least 18 persons left in Louisiana for follow-up purposes.

Plan:

September - Voter registration in the 24 parishes of the 5th and 6th Congressional Districts.
IMPORTANT - last month for registration before the presidential election.

October - Voter registration, chapter development, and direct action in same parishes. Preparation for write-in vote.

Nov. 3, 1964 - Write-in election for freedom candidates on the date of the general election.

Nov. 4 - Dec. 31 - Voter registration, direct action to implement civil rights bill, and chapter development. Rallying communities to file suit to desegregate all public facilities.

RE: Field trip to Fourth Congressional District of South Carolina including the Counties of Greenville, Spartanburg, and Laurens, April 22, 23, and 24.

RTB and I arrived in Greenville April 22 from Huntsville about 11:00 P.M. and obtained accommodations at the Negro Ghana Hotel. The next morning, after eating breakfast, we went to the Greenville County Political Action Committee's office which seemed to accommodate most of the town's business and professional services and some social organizations.

We were very graciously received by Mrs. Walker who already knew RTB and who called most of the important people in the community who figured in the recent registration drive which produced 3600 Negro registrants.

Soon arrived at the Greenville County Political Action Committee's office (125½ Fall Street, in the Benevolent Building) were Mr. Harrison Rearden, who is a Pilgrim Health and Life Insurance man at 409 E. McBee Avenue, Greenville, South Carolina; Reverend Brockman, who is a ministerial teacher and is active in the local NAACP; Atty. Sampson, who is the Negro candidate for the House in the South Carolina Legislature; Dr. Givson, who is treasurer of the local organization, and Reverend C. Francis.

RTB then proceeded to explain why we were there. Dr. Givson was at first a little hostile, which I shall later explain, but he warmed up after we finished making our statements. RTB, before Rearden arrived, explained the history of the congressional district concept and that the other districts have begun to function except that of the Fourth Congressional District.

We then learned that there had been meetings of the Fourth Congressional District; leaders had been chosen two months ago and a recent meeting had been held two weeks ago.

RTB informed the group that he had received no response from his letters. Dr. Givson stated that he had received no information about the Fourth Congressional District's set-up. Further discussion was halted until Rearden appeared. After Rearden came, the lack of communication was explained by Rearden's being busy in Sampson's campaign and that his information about the Fourth Congressional District probably was attached to NAACP reports for Greenville County and RTB speculated that the information went into our files unnoticed.

Everyone agreed to the congressional district method but RTB insisted that VEP does not think in sums of money but programs, and that there must be a proposed itemized budget for a program which VEP must consider before approval, that VEP funds cannot be involved in politicing in any manner, that there must be separate accounts, separate offices, and copies of all checks sent to the VEP as evidence to show that the money is not spent unlawfully or in support of a candidate or party. There was a general discussion about the above points which everyone agreed upon the need of the separation of the two activities. It was now after 1:00 P.M. and RTB took his leave. I remained in order to organize a call meeting of the Fourth Congressional District organization. Many of the persons there would not be able to be present for a meeting if it wase on a Saturday morning; so it was decided that it would be held sometime on Friday Evening. Accompanied by Dr. Brockman, I then left Greenville by Rented Car to go to Spartanburg, Laurens and Union Counties.

Rev. Brockman, as a teacher and administrator of a Baptist Mission, has much free time which he has devoted to registration and work on behalf of Dr. Gibson's candidacy. It was explained to me how Greenville is more liberal than most of the Southern counties of South Carolina, which he thinks is due to a lower percentage of Negroes as against whites. It is my opinion that the answer is too simple in light of the fact that in the past a high percentage of Negroes had been there which did aid producement of discrimination against Negroes, and it has been shown that although the Negro population may have decreased substantially, the anti-Negro feeling remained. Therefore, the "liberal" attitude in Greenville may be due to the "New Image" which many Southern communities are producing in order to attract Northern industry. His examples of the liberal attitude there is a bi-racial committee which has integrated the theaters and will soon completely integrate the hotels (for the Omega Phi Psi Convention). The present civil rights concern is school integration suit. Rev. Brockman feels that efforts in integration is mere "tokenism" achieved by the fact that the president of the local NAACP is a member of the Bi-Racial Board and therefore is effectively blocked and controlled, and that the Negro community is beginning to resent his membership.

Rev. Brockman also illustrated the "liberal" attitude of the Greenville community by the fact that his group was allowed to set up a table outside the registration office and fill out the blanks of people who came to register. Whites also came to their table to register who were registered. Brockman said however that he angered the registrar whereby mistake he instructed a white person to indicate that he was a Negro, which he did.

~~the registrar~~

We arrived in Spartanburg and went to the office of Mr. J. E. Williams, Manager of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance. I stated my purpose, including the history of the Congressional District Method. He informed me that he is not presently active in voter registration, that he would not be able to attend the Friday Evening meeting, but that he would be very happy to allow us to use the Insurance office as a place of meeting. He was busy having a district meeting, but he gave us his wife's address so that she could give us further information.

At Mrs. Williams, she gave us the telephone numbers and addresses of Rev. Harold Cox, Rev. Thornton, and Rev. Johnson. These are persons who have been busy in voter registration. Both Rev. Thornton and Rev. Johnson were out of town. We were able to reach Rev. Harold Cox who we planned to meet for lunch at a drug store. Mrs. Williams indicated that she had been active in voter registration until three or four years ago. She then showed me her books. For a period of three years from 1957 to 1960, she had gone to the registrar's office and copied the names in the book of every Negro who was registered. She indicated that it is against the law in South Carolina to keep records of registrants according to race, yet at the same time, there is a little "c" by every Negro registrant. By 1960, the book showed that there were about 1100 Negroes registered.

We then ate lunch with Rev. Harold Cox. He was one of the local persons (the only one I am sure) who aided Frank Robinson and Brown of CORE in the recent drive in a specific part of the town. I explained to him our program to which he was quite agreeable. He was a young adult and seemed acknowledgeable. He said that there was going to be a play at the high school, which everyone who is active in registration probably would attend. So it was determined that the meeting be at 9:30 P.M. We took Cox home on our way to Laurens.

We arrived in Laurens and first to the home of Rev. E. W. Wright, 720 Settlement Street, after 6:00 P.M. Soon came Rev. James N. Whitmore. We had a general discussion about registration activities in Laurens. They were all proud of having a "Laurens County Citizen's Progressive Improvement Club" which they say the "white folks" respect and is like having an NAACP. They all worked in registration but they could not tell me how many Negroes were registered. They could not come to the Friday meeting but they directed me to Mr. C. E. Beasley, who is directly in charge of registration.

Mr. Beasley owns a funeral home, a service station, and a barber shop where he was waiting to cut a customer's hair when we arrived there. After our discussion, he indicated interest in our program. He said that he would try to come but told us to see also Mr. Pusely next door, owner of the drug store, and to see Rev. L. C. Butler of Clinton, who is President of the "Laurens County Citizen's Progressive Improvement Club." Mr. Beasley could not tell me how many Negroes were registered, but said that he paid his son to register and that he should know.

It was now getting late and we decided to return to Greenville. We finally realized that my rented car was on fire--the back seat. Probably Rev. Cox had allowed a hot ash from his pipe to get into the seat. We drove to the fire station and a fireman and I took the back seat out and the fire was put out. He said that not many people bring a fire to the fire station. We then left for the Ghana Hotel.

Because the Ghana Hotel was out of town, I decided that it would be better to ~~obtain~~ obtain accommodations within the town. Rev. Brockman suggested the Hotel Poinset, which may be integrated now because its restaurant may be open. After two hours of discussion with the Hotel Manager, and after about an hour of driving trying to find the Ghana Hotel, I reached it and turned in.

On Friday, April 24, I returned to Greenville and called by phone Rev. Cox and Rev. Thornton of Spartanburg and Rev. Butler of Laurens. They all said that they would be at the Friday Evening meeting.

I went to the Greenville Registrar to see whether she could inform me as to how many Negroes were registered. I identified myself, but she became somewhat suspicious or hostile when she saw that I was from out of town, even asking me whether I was a member of the FBI. She told me that it was impossible to know how many Negroes were registered until after May 9, and even then, the information will not be in her hands because her office would be closed. She did say "yes" to the question as to whether the Secretary of State may know then.

After some time in the Greenville Office, I drove to Laurens on the way to Spartanburg in order to talk to the young Beasley who was paid to do registration. His method was to knock on doors, ask whether the person was registered, and then drive the person down to the courthouse. He said that the registrar's attitude is good, and only a very few Negroes have been turned down, and this is because of being convicted of a felony or because the person could not read. He said that he would be at the Friday meeting if his father could not be there.

I arrived in Spartanburg about 6:00 and finally reached Rev. Johnson. He strikes me as being a very intelligent person and is in his early 40's. At his home, we had a discussion and he appeared to be quite concerned about voter registration. Rev. Johnson is the Chairman for the Fourth Congressional District. His address is 199 W. Park Ave., Spartanburg, South Carolina; telephone: 583-6569. He was concerned about the political activity in Greenville and thought more emphasis should be on voter education.

Rev. Thornton was the first to arrive for the Friday Evening meeting. We had a conversation about registration activities in Spartanburg. He indicated that there was no problem about registration, and that the registrar will give them pads of registration application blanks which they can take around from house to house.

Approximately a few minutes of 10:00 P.M., Rev. Givson, Mr. Rearden, Mrs. Cobbs of the Citizenship School, Miss Walker, the Secretary of the Greenville organization, Rev. Francis, Rev. Brockman--all from Greenville, and Rev. Johnson and Rev. Thornton from Spartanburg were all present. No one from Laurens was present.

Mr. Rearden presided. After being so introduced, I immediately went into why I was there. I informed them that from our experience in South Carolina, it was best to work there with the Congressional District Method in order to reach all the counties and to develop programs benefitting all the counties. I pointed out, however, that we insisted that they develop their own program and that they itemize a proposed budget which should be sent to us immediately so that we can approve it. There was an understanding that there should be a full-time secretary, two part-time secretaries, and a coordinator to work with all three counties. There was a feeling that there should not be a central office for the coordinator except for his mailing materials, but that he should at least spend equal time among the these counties. There was also an understanding that the coordinator should be outside the area because no one within the area is experienced in voter registration as it should be done, and that it would be agreeable that VEP may suggest a coordinator. Because no one from Laurens was in attendance, Rearden was to send a proposed budget and program immediately after a meeting in Laurens this Thursday, April 30. Rearden also at that time will resign from chairmanship of the Fourth Congressional District because of his identity with the Sampson Campaign, and another chairman wil be elected.

In summary, the people from these counties want to have their own local community organizations to carry out the program of voter registration, and the coordinator not to do the work except to stimulate and to assist. Rev. Brockman and Dr. Givson from Greenville, Rev. Thornton and Rev. Johnson from Spartanburg, and the young Beasley from Laurens all seemed that they will be active if a registration campaign is properly organized.

RE: Field Trip to Louisiana, April 29, 1964

My purpose in making the field trip to Louisiana was to determine CORE registration activity in Louisiana, particularly the 21 parishes covered by a federal injunction order which disposes of Louisiana's Constitutional Provision, to effect better reporting on the part of Ronnie Moore, and also to determine whether the Parish assignments of present workers are carried out as per letter, April 17, 1964, (Attached to this report).

I arrived in New Orleans at about 2:00 PM, April 29, rented a Hertz Car (after some difficulty because of my possessing RTB's card rather than that of Authorized Representative). I first had a discussion with Richard Haley, Director, Southern Region of CORE, 2211 Dryades Street, New Orleans. I regard Richard Haley as a personal friend, first meeting him in 1960 as an ex-music teacher at Florida A & M University, who was even then active in CORE together with my wife.

Richard has not assumed any personal direction of voter registration in Louisiana or New Orleans, mainly because of his responsibility with the whole Southern Region but also because his presence in Louisiana has been a short time and he is still determining his role and capacities. Ronnie Moore, therefore, still has been reporting directly to the national office and Richard, along with VEP, has not been receiving any written reports, also to Richard Haley's consternation.

As to my inquiry about registration activities in New Orleans area, he informed me on "hear say" about four groups which are and have been recently carrying on registration activities in the area, which are: (1) Coordinating Council of New Orleans, (2) Women's League for Good Government--which he is sure is the Negro branch, although the other group is integrated, and (3) the NAACP, which has or is carrying on a registration drive in the "Desire Housing Project," an 1800 Negro family unit housing project.

The CORE chapter in New Orleans is hardly active, due to lack of student Negro participation (only 8 from Dillard), resulting from restrictive policies of the administrations of all the Negro colleges in the area, and presently does not have a program.

Richard Haley was able to give some information about the CORE summer project of which Ronnie Moore is to give me more of. The pre-summer activity shall begin in June with training of the workers who shall participate in the project for Louisiana at Berea College, Kentucky. Beginning early in July, at least 50 new workers shall work the 21 parishes covered by the Court Order and other parishes in Northern Louisiana which are not covered by the order. The function of the summer program is (1) Voter registration and (2) Freedom Election. At this point, I interjected that the Freedom Election, although a probable stimulant or gimmick for registration, must be separated from the VEP assisted registration program. Richard then explained the Freedom Election as Ronnie Moore conceives it, which is to set up "freedom registrars" in the hard-core areas by which to (1) present "deputy" registrars to the registrars, (2) register the people with the deputies , and take the "lists" to court as duly registered.

We then sought to find Ronnie Moore. Although an office remains still in Plaquemine, 303 Ivy Street, MU7-9131, more probable than not, Ronnie would be at his home, 10185 Avenue "B", Scotlandview, Baton Rouge, either phone 775-3872 or 775-1715. Mike Lesser is in charge of the Fifth Congressional District, Monroe, Louisiana, 103 North 10th St., 322-9103; and Mimi Feingold in charge of the Sixth Congressional District, 683-5401. Not being able then to reach Ronnie anywhere, I then planned to visit the Sixth Congressional District office at 6:00 PM and later seek to find Ronnie that evening.

After checking in for a room at Dillard University, I was caught by the afternoon rush traffic, got lost, and completely went out of the way by taking Lake Pontchartrain Causeway in order to reach Clinton. From U.S. 51, I had to take highway 10 to Clinton, which I later learned lies only a few miles from Amite, Pike, and Wilkinson Counties in Southwest Mississippi, such counties I was later to become involved in next week. There were "Beware Cattle" signs along highway 10, but at 8:00 and pitch darkness I did not believe there would be any problem until I came around a curve and was confronted by two cows silently standing in the middle of the highway. Not wishing to disturb them, or their owners, I went around them. I happened to remember a story about a Negro whose car hit a pig in Perry, Florida. They could not catch the Negro, so they hung the car. When I heard the joke, I did not think it was so funny. I surely did not think it was funny that night.

Negro

When I arrived in Clinton, I was immediately impressed how still and dark this little farm center is. Clinton is in East Feliciana, one of the white parishes covered by the above U.S. Court Order. Mimi Feingold and Spiver Gordon ~~are two white youths~~. I called the CORE office and Howard Messing came to where I was in order to direct me to their office. The office is made up from the living room of the home of Mrs. Charles, a Negro widow. Mimi Feingold, the other CORE worker, was typing up a report which was to be ready for Ronnie's staff meeting the next night. Of the other staff workers, Spiver Gordon was in Plaquemine for a visit, and Loria Davis was on her way back from New York City.

Mimi and Howard indicated to me that in East and West Feliciana, the registrars in these parishes have closed the books. The Justice Department has acted but Judge West has required the Justice Department to file briefs within 10 days and the other side to respond in 10 days. Mimi and Howard feel that it shall be one or two months before they can attempt to do effective registration work.

They told me that

In St. Helena Parish, there has been registration since the order without the "test" but Negroes have still been denied on technical grounds, through Form LR 1. In other words, technical mistakes disqualify. The Justice Department still has this in the Courts.

As to my question about their techniques in this parish, they told me that in the St. Helena Parish, there is an active NAACP group which has been canvassing the area. The CORE staff here conducted for them the NAACP voter registration workshop, and carries on an ongoing assistance in the voter education clinics with the involvement by the youth in the area. In charge of the clinics is Mr. Ellis Howard of the local NAACP, a farmer, who actually started the clinics on his own personal initiative. People are not marched down in a group but go by themselves. The clinics are held every night. The staff have trained the NAACP youth with each "teacher" teaching two or three persons at a time. In this area, my notes seem to indicate that 50 have been registered but 100 have been denied on technical grounds.

St. Helena has been of the parishes the staff has been most active with since the order, but they said that also, much of their time has been to visit every parish in the Sixth Congressional District to make an assessment of the potential for the present activities of the CORE staff and for the summer project.

They indicated to me that the "6th" staff shall leave the St. Helena Parish for the present time in order to concentrate the present energies in Eastern Area of the "6th", including Livingston, Tangipahoa, Washington, and St. Tammany Parishes, containing the relative large towns of Bogalusa, Covington, Slidell, and Hammond to work from, beginning May 4.

They told me that they expect success in Bogalusa, and Washington Parishes. In Bogalusa, they said that there are two groups, a Voter's League and the United Paper Makers and Paper Workers, local 189 A who expressed that they would be "anxious" for CORE to come in to give assistance. Mimi and Howard told me that CORE has not been in this area heretofore, but they believe that there is a good potential, where 200-300 persons out of 7000 possibles are registered.

For Hammond, they said that they would be in a sense be returning to this town, their being in this town from last year's activities a CORE chapter composed of young people. The staff's main contribution will be to assist an active Voter's League, the "Peoples Defense League". In the same parish of Tangipahoa, they have local persons to contact to stimulate activity there.

For Livingston Parish, they expect an easy place to work. There is an interested community, two local leaders, a high school leader, the president of the local voters league, the "Livingston Defense" League, Mrs. Loise Lockhart and Mr. Edward Taylor. Here, of a possible 1,818, (according to 1960) by 1964, more than 1,165 have been registered. Their goal is to get the other 700.

On Friday, May 1, a staff worker shall return to Pointe Coupee to reassess the potential for registration work there for the present and for the Summer Project. It was here, they said, that as a result from the CORE Summer Project, 500 applied and 170 passed the registration test. It is here that there is only a dormant CORE group, but strong leaders do exist in the area.

Of the 21 parishes covered by the order which the "6th" staff workers are responsible for are East and West Feliciana, St. Helena, and part of La-Salle Parish.

I then called Ronnie Moore, found that he was in Baton Rouge and took leave of Clinton, Louisiana.

At around 10:30 PM I found Ronnie Moore at his home and with him enjoyed a repast of raw crabs, oysters, and shrimps, along with other refreshments. Eventually I put on my VEP hat and found that the books will be closed from June 25 until July 25, and that there would be 10 days of registration beginning June 10. He said that of the 21 parishes covered by the injunctive order, after the staff conference which he shall hold tomorrow, (April 30), the CORE staff shall carry on an immediate registration effort in 11. Of the 11 not already pointed up to be in the 6th, he named East Carroll, Franklin, Jackson, Morehouse, Quachita, Union, and West Carroll. All of these parishes center around Monroe towards the Mississippi River (Northeast Louisiana) and are in the Fifth Congressional District, being handled by CORE worker Mike Lesser with his staff.

I asked him about his not answering BW letters. He had no real excuse, but did indicate that his reports have been going to the national office. As Richard indicated, he said that he requires reports from the areas and he sends a summary to the national office. I advised him to do what Patricia does, which is to send directly to BW a copy of his reports. He indicated that he was glad to get a good decision in Jackson Parish where the registrar is required to give monthly reports, and he said that 400 Negroes have already registered, resulting from Mike Lesser working with the local people.
Ronnie Moore said that
In Monroe, there is a group organized since 1958 called the United Crusade Voters League, which is presently a paper organization. The CORE office there is the former NAACP office. Since January, his staff workers have been working in East Parish, West Parish, and Madison, but these areas are such "hard core" areas, only a 150 were registered in January.

Ronnie stated that he was interested in setting up a state-wide organization. I pointed out to him what serious defects the Mississippi COFO program has in relation to VEP, such as the failure to distinguish registration activity from other activities. When he complained that it is hard to separate one activity from the other, I reminded him that as to the policy of VEP in other areas, it is sufficient that there is evidence of separation or appearance of separation, such as to personnel, offices, names, etc. I also said that is my personal belief that local people should run their own politics anyway, not CORE or SNCC. He seemed to agree to this, he at least took notes.

I left Ronnie Moore and arrived back in Dillard, Louisiana at about 3:00 AM. On May 1, I was fortunate to meet up with Mike Lesser, had lunch with him, and during that period, was able to discuss his responsibilities in the fifth CONG. DIST. and the seven parishes covered by the court order.

He said that in East Carroll and Lake Providence, they made a mistake last year in coming in full blast, conducting clinics and canvassing without consulting the local leaders. On May 2, they shall return to re-coup, hoping to cultivate the local community.

In Lincoln, from their recent assessment, they shall send a staff person to work with the students and some of the professors at Grambling College rather than acting initially in the parish seat.

In Jackson Parish, Lesser said that he had been invited by Rev. Hester for a registration program for the parish. Hester was from Chatham. However, unfriendliness resulted from the other two Negro leaders in the area, Messrs. Francis and Dade of Jonesboro. They indicated to him that "they were not having any problems" and suggested that if they would need any help or assistance, they would call him. They also indicated that 1200 were registered; so he put it on a low priority. Hester had recently died. Mike said that he has subsequently found that only 200 Negroes are registered and that there are a 1000 potential more voters. Mike said that he has consulted with the Justice Department (Frank Dunbar?) and they have given him a couple of adults and some high school and college kids to contact. The latter he hopes to organize into voter registration activities before the Summer Project begins.*

In Richland Parish, his staff will, on May 2, contact local people in order to assist to form a parish-wide committee for registration.

In Tensas Parish and St. Joseph, since January, only 35 people have been registered. Here, they have been assisting the local leaders, Rev. Durham, a professor at Jackson State, and Mr. T. H. Ellis, a local barber. Here, they have run into intimidation.

* NOTICE THAT MIKE LESSER CONTRADICTS RONNIE MOORE. RONNIE'S INFORMATION WAS APPARENTLY "TOO OLD".

In Madison Parish, Mike said that he was arrested as soon as he checked into the P.P. Negro Hotel in Tallulah (19 miles from Vicksberg) and was run out of that town.

In the other parishes covered by the order which Ronnie said that Mike is to be responsible for,Mike and his staff have yet to complete their study; so on May 2, part of his staff shall work to complete the evaluation in one week.

Because of the lack of community organizations in his areas, 25 workers shall be sent to him to assist him to carry on a registration program from June 10 until June 18.

In summation, it seems that a few CORE workers have been effective in stimulating and assisting voter registration in the Sixth Congressional District, but not so effective in the Fifth. The Fifth's success seems to result from already present organizations with capable persons who only need a catalyst to act. Whereas in the Fifth, the forces have been spread too thin because of no effective community organizations already existing, or at least the persons who could be capable have been intimidated by the Klu Klux Klan.* It is in the Fifth Congressional District that CORE has found it necessary to put as many workers as soon as possible in order to carry on effective registration for this year.

* It is Mr. Mike Lesser's opinion that the Klu Klux Klan has re-activated itself in North-East Lousiana, with resultant intimidation of the Negro community.

MEMORANDUM

TO: WAB

FROM: JD June 1, 1964

This is a field report to Birmingham, Alabama in relation to the Miles College Citizenship Project.

On May 25, 1964, I arrived in the Birmingham office of the Alabama State Association for Registration and Voting at approximately 1:00 PM.

I introduced myself to the secretary and phoned the Atlanta office for further instructions. WAB indicated that I should find someone in the Birmingham Community who would give an objective opinion about the Miles College group as to their effectiveness. He then said that it was of the utmost importance to see Mrs. John Drew for this information.

BW, from her check lists, requested that I ascertain how the college group works, such as their canvassing, block workers, and cooperation by volunteers. She also requested that I attempt to ascertain the reaction of the community, and find also how Mrs. Johnson feels about their work. BW also wanted to know how they teach political education. She then requested that I find out what kind of reporting they do, what they are going to do with all of their information, and what kind of social research.

From being in Birmingham until the evening of May 26, 1964, I have found the following:

(1) In relation to canvassing, the Miles Group is very busy currently in Bessemer, a town in the Birmingham metropolitan area.

Other than the director, they have nine students who give a full day's work in registration activities, and of these nine, six persons work in the field. Those who work in the field canvass, but this work includes education. Education includes exploration (See attached Exhibit #3) of registration, and also going through with the potential registrant the application (See attached Exhibit #6). They will fill out one for the person and leave a blank one, asking the person to fill out the application without looking at the one already filled out.

On June 3, the Miles College Bus and their car will return to the Bessemer area and pick up more than 200 persons who claim that they have not registered.

Each worker is able to see between 25 and 35 persons a day. So far, about 25% of the persons they interviewed have stated they have not registered and will be ready to be transported to Birmingham to register.

JD Field Report

(2) Other than the six field workers, there is a person who is assigned to the courthouse. He is Mr. William Taylor.

When I was in Birmingham, the registration office was closed, therefore, he was working in the office.

His assignment in the courthouse is Courthouse Researcher. His job is to give moral support to any person seeking to register and to give assistance. When the person is finished, he will ask the person what did the registrar say and what was his attitude.

Already, he has found that when a person makes a technical error, the registrar tells the person to return next year.

(3) The other two persons would work in the office and process the Canvass Cards. The cards are processed at this point only to effect immediate registration rather than making a study, such as 1) the non-registered, and 2) who needs help, (See attached Exhibit #7).

(4) In relation to Reports, because each person receives for the first semester credit in Adult Education, and for the second semester, Social Research, each person must give a report to Rev. Woods, describing his experiences and conclusions. Then these reports are given to Dr. Pitt.

From the wealth of information collected from the Canvass Cards (See attached Exhibit #4), Mr. Douglas Price will make a study and give a report which will be available to the public.

(5) Community Reaction: After wasting four hours trying to see Mrs. John Drew, and wherein she was incommunicable because of sudden sickness, I discussed the effect of the group with these persons:

Mrs. Lou B. Ard - 225 56th St., Fairchild
Mrs. Johnson - VEP Office, Birmingham
Mr. Emory Jackson - Birmingham World.

Mrs. Ard is a volunteer in voter registration and said that she helps both groups, the Miles Group and the Johnson Group. She stated that the Miles Group has made an impression and that the community is aware of their presence. However, she had no information about any claims they allegedly may have made, nor could she give an opinion that the Miles Group works as hard as it can.

Mrs. Johnson indicated that she and the Miles Group seem to have difficulty in coordinating their activities. She was unaware that the student group was in Bessemer.

What concerned her was their claim to the number of registered voters resulting from the court order and how Rev. Wood supported some other candidate.

Mr. Jackson said that his paper accepts without comment the press releases by the Wood's, and he did not investigate whether their claims were valid (See attached Press clippings).

As did Mrs. Johnson, he indicated that he was an early supporter of the Miles program and participated in their preliminary crash program last September.

He said that he did not "know" whether the group is as effective as they claim to be, but in further conversation, he said that he was disappointed because they did not follow his suggestion and concentrate in one small area and make a thorough study of it rather than hitting every place.

(6) As to coordination between the Miles program and Mrs. Johnson, Wood indicated that she keeps them informed about the questions which will be asked, and on June 3, 1964, will furnish them the new questions.

As to duplication of effort in canvassing, the Miles Group is not at all worried about that because Mrs. Johnson's group never has done any canvassing, and if it does, the students feel that duplication should help keep the climate aroused about the need for voter registration.

Rev. Wood is concerned about functional coordination because he is concerned about identity of the Miles Group for fund purposes, and for that reason, does not desire the group to be subsumed under Mrs. Johnson's coordinated effort.

He complains about the fact that his church committee and her church committee are suppose to be working together as to the church contest in getting votes.

However, A. D. King, in charge of Mrs. Johnson's church committee, has not called his committee together because he is always out of town.

Mrs. Johnson expressed great concern about the fact that there is no coordination of effort. She expressed that she knows not where nor what the students are doing. They do not work.

She indicated that she was one of the first ones to propose the student group. The problem, she says, is that Rev. Wood is concerned about seeking publicity, although the students are doing a good job. She said that A. D. King is worried about the tendency of Rev. Wood. She was also concerned about the fact that they do not work through or contact the leadership in the communities they are working.

(7) Demonstration:
Rev. Wood and others of his group feel that demonstration, which shall immediately occur, will have a direct effect of assisting registration, in that it will be a stimulus to registration activity. This will result from consequent unity of the people.

He hopes to poll some of the young kids also who want to demonstrate and put forms in their hands so they can canvass.

Mrs. Johnson has no opinion about the effect of demonstrations, but she hopes that children will join her "Johnson Crusade" if they don't want to register.

(8) Conclusion:
I asked Rev. Wood the direct question: "How many people can your group claim to have registered?"

He said that he really could not do that, even if his group transported the people down to the courthouse; it would not be fair. He feels that his group has been the most effective, but nevertheless, he feels that the reason people register is due to many stimuli and his group cannot claim to be the only stimulus.

This response caught me off guard because Wood's brother's demeanor of giving all the answers on the right answers. I expected them to claim at least the number resulting from the court order, but face to face, they didn't.

The bad characteristics of the Wood brother's personality may be true. The fact that they do not work through the "established leadership" is true.

Nevertheless, although it appears that the group may be stamping on the feet of the "established leadership" of the Negro community, the fact remains that when I was in Birmingham, the student group was out in the streets, canvassing and seeing a Hundred people a day. When the books open, they shall begin to bus the people to the courthouse. No other group was doing that when I was in Birmingham.

MEMORANDUM

TO: WAB
FROM: JD
RE: Field Trip through South Carolina, July 28-29

I returned from Florida on July 27 and had a conference with Wiley Branton. It seemed that we had some questions that were rising out of the Fourth Congressional District which could be answered only by a field trip to the area.

On Tuesday, July 28, at another conference with WAB, it was determined that I should leave that day. He had contacted leaders of the Third and Fourth Congressional Districts, Rev. S. L. McCain and Mr. Harrison Rearden respectively, and, therefore, they would be expecting me. My My route was planned and it appeared to be convenient that I arrive in Augusta after leaving the office after 5 P.M. and arriving in Augusta around 9 P.M, checking into a motel and then seeing S. L. McCain, who lived a few miles near Edgefield, South Carolina, or about a half hour by car from Augusta.

I was instructed that I should seek to find the answers to the following questions. From the Fourth District, I should find out why we have not received any financial reports from Harrison Rearden since we began supporting their program beginning July 3, and incident to that, are all the county organizations functioning? Also, in what manner are VEP funds being used? Why is there a misunderstanding between the county organizations? From the Third District where also there have been no reports received by the office, WAB wanted to know the names and addresses of the county leaders and the manner of deciding how and who to assist financially, what bills are paid, and how the money is divided.

I arrived in Augusta, Georgia, and checked into the motel at about 10 P.M. After calling Mr. McCain in South Carolina, it was determined that it would be better that I see him Wednesday. I told him I would see him on my way back to Atlanta from Greenville, South Carolina.

Wednesday Morning, on my way to Greenville, I stopped in Anderson hoping to see Rev. Joe Rich, the director of the Anderson County Program in the Third District. I had been instructed by WAB to find out from him and the local common ~~people~~ person what is being done in voter registration in the county. I was told also to call Miss Betty Ann Johnson who, at a prior time, was part of a VEP assisted NAACP program in Anderson. I could not find Rev. Rich but was told that he may be available that same day in the evening.

John Doar
Field Trips
Blue

Arriving in the Greenville Political Action Committee's Office in Greenville early Wednesday Afternoon, I talked to Mrs. Cobb, who was in the office with the secretary. Mrs. Cobb was an SCLC Citizenship school teacher who was now a field secretary of the Greenville County organization as I learned, along with Mr. Debow and Rev. Wittenburg, all receiving $25 a week for their expenses. The secretary, Miss Bernice Reeder, receives $35 a week. Rev. Brockman, County Director, receives $25 a week plus $15 a week as Congressional Director.

While waiting for Rev. Brockman to return to the office, I talked with Mrs. Cobb to understand what she was doing. As a field worker in the county, she was director of the lower six wards of the county of Greenville, as well as chairlady of two precincts. Her mode of operation was to hold township meetings and precinct meetings in order to develop a core of reliable "box" workers--box workers are volunteers who, on registration days, will be ultimately responsible in getting the people in the vicinity of their places of voting (boxes) registered.

There will be only 10 days for registration in August. Because of this, one of her complaints was that she was not satisfied with the County Committee only giving $.25 for those who need funds to pay expenses of their transportation to the place of registration. The areas in which she works include rural areas which are as much as 30 miles away from the place of registration.

I also called Dr. Gibson, who is treasurer of the Fourth Congressional District, and asked him about why VEP has not received any financial information. I found out that that very day, they were sending by airmail special delivery this information--I saw copies of their checks. Dr. Gibson explained also that they have not received any bill for the checks purchased by VEP and therefore did not know they were obligated to pay.

Rev. Brockman did arrive and we both left the office and joined Mr. Rearden, President of the Fourth Congressional District, who had just returned from a business trip. It was then that I learned of the difficulty Rearden and Brockman were having with the other counties in the Fourth District. In Spartanburg, there has been no activity, and Brockman has not been able to contact Rev. Johnson, who is president of the Spartanburg County Committee. In Laurens, the officers of the committee there are upset because they feel they are not receiving a fair share and that Greenville is receiving the lion's share. Mr. Rearden, in saying this, also said that at the meeting in Laurens of the Fourth District meeting, there was an understanding and even a motion by a person of Laurens that money be distributed on a per-capita basis (i.e. the number of unregistered Negroes in each county). But they soon became dissatisfied with this arrangement and called Rearden to distribute the funds on an equal basis, which Mr. Rearden refused on the advice of the South Carolina VEP Chairman, Mr. Thomas, who said that in practice, this arrangement is insufficient because one county can spend all of its funds and have need for more but cannot get more because of another county having its share remaining; and of course, VEP will not send more when the Congressional District Treasury shows a balance. Also, as explained to the Laurens people by Rearden, this "equal share" distribution will mitigate the whole purpose of the unity idea of the VEP support of the program on a congressional district basis. Brockman and Rearden, however, felt that it was important that I explain this to the Laurens people and they set a meeting up for 6 P.M. This was allright, but I realized that held in jeopardy were the prospects that I may be able to see Rev. Rich in Anderson and McCain in Edgewood at a reasonable hour. Rev. Brockman and I then left Greenville for Spartanburg to see whether we could find Rev. Johnson and Rev. Thornton, the leaders of the program there.

We arrived in Spartanburg, and the parties we wanted to see were not to be found. I suggested to Rev. Brockman that as director, it would seem that it was up to him to find persons in the county who are willing to work, and although Johnson is the "elected" head of the county group, it would not be going over Johnson's head--these workers would be subject to Johnson's control and only would assist him. Brockman then asked whether he has our go-ahead and I said yes. We then went to see Mrs. Williams, the wife of Mr. Samuel Williams, the Southeast Director of Pilgrim Insurance. I was impressed with the records and work of Mrs. Williams of 15 years, 1945-1960, and where she had personally copied the names and addresses of Negroes who have registered. This impressed me in light of the fact that the Greenville organization is paying several persons $5.00 or so to copy names.

When we arrived, Mrs. Williams was busy and was not available but Mr. Williams was very gracious at our very forward intrusion. We had a long talk and I received a very good education about the Negro in South Carolina politics and Mr. Williams' role as connected with the present influence he has in the community. He is on the Spartanburg Human Relations Council and Mayor's Council, and it was his influence that Johnson is the president of the local organization. Althoug impressed, I was inclined to be cautious in my estimate of him as this seemed to suggest some self-praise. ~~However~~, On the whole, I was disappointed about my purpose being fulfilled. Mr. Williams was "too busy" at the present time or in August to be primarily concerned about registration. His personal plans are to put his whole effort, influence, and time in "getting out the vote" (to beat Goldwater), although he seemed to suggest that he was, at the present time, a Republican. Although he was sympathetic with our program, it was his problem of priorities which interfered with present efforts for registration.

Mr. Williams, although seemingly the most important Negro in the community, could not refer us to people who could work in voter registration other than Rev. Johnson. He admitted that most people he knew were busy in their own personal affairs. He admits a community apathy. When we left Williams' house, it began to dawn upon me why, after studying RTB's reports, CORE workers, Frank Robinson and Brown, assume the primary role of registration in a community and tend to do most of the work.

Last April, on my field trip to Spartanburg, everyone I spoke to said that Frank Robinson and Brown did a wonderful job, but in my own mind, I was critical because the way it was said--they did a good job of registration--not we, not even they did a good job of ~~assigning~~ assisting us. I was inclined to put fault on Robinson and Brown for not working through the community organizations and community leaders. I remember now that when they left, they took their records and organization with them.

But now, I begin to suspect that I was wrong about faulting Robinson and Brown. Apathy, from the mouths of Williams and Brockman, seems to be the problem in Spartanburg. But the problem is compounded by that organization forms do exist to the extent that there are appointed leaders who do not lead, or in another way of saying it, leaders without people to lead; yet these same persons are jealous of their prerogatives and must be gingerly treated. I know not of Robinson's program in Spartanburg last year other than that he used college students and a few local young adults to do an intensive effort in low registration areas. Johnson's group seemed to be not involved other than to give advice to Robinson.

One of the local people who did assist Frank Robinson was Rev. Frank Cox, a young 26 year old minister, who helped me to set up a Fourth Congressional Meeting in Spartanburg last April. He just recently married and was honeymooning away from Spartanburg. He and Brockman have worked together before and know each other well. I told Brockman that Cox seemed to be one of the few people he and I know who has the energy and time to do anything in this area, and suggested that he contact him immmediately. Brockman again said that he was reluctant in doing anything without Johnson's say-so. I told him that what was important is voter registration, that Cox will only be assisting Johnson, and that Johnson and his organization will receive the credit for the registration and will receive the benefit from the registration since this group represents the "Negro Community" in Spartanburg.

We then talked to Mrs. Cox, Rev. Cox's mother, who is a very pleasant lady with a neat home. Rev. Brockman determined how to get in touch with Cox, and then we left going to Laurens.

We arrived in Laurens at the proper time for the meeting. There were about six persons already there, and so it seemed that they had a chance to talk among themselves before we arrived. We waited for about three other important persons, such as Mr. Beasley's son who is the secretary. About 12 of us sat under the shade tree of Mr. Beasley's funeral home, and after a short while of small talk and comments about the Republican Convention, we settled down to business. I first asked them what their program was and Rev. Wright, the presiding officer of the Laurens group, said that they have had two prior meetings and have had area meetings. From these meetings, they have come up with 25 volunteer workers. In rough hand, they have taken tablets and ruled them off in order to use them as canvass sheets. They have used church mimeo copies for announcements, etc. They have not spent any VEP funds.

And that was what the meeting was about--how to spend VEP funds. Actually, Rearden's communication with them that same day after he had talked with WAB was sufficient to explain the problem, but they wanted me to say it and I said it. I told them that experience has taught VEP not to support a program on a county basis but on a Congressional District basis. VEP support is financial, and therefore there is to be one central treasury in the district and that funds are to be disbursed on a district basis rather than a county basis, and on a basis of need rather than on a county basis. I then said that if you are concerned about Greenville spending funds, the fault is the fault of the people in Laurens because they have the obligation of developing a program and the need for funds, and then upon that basis, they can spend funds just as easy and as well as Greenville is spending funds. (I said this with tongue in cheek because I had reservations about Greenville spending so much for "field workers" and for people to copy names in the registrar's office. Nevertheless, this was a policy question which I had to discuss with WAB when I returned; otherwise, I would be put in a contradictory position of saying, "you have the right to spend as Greenville,yet you do not have the right to spend as Greenville is spending because Greenville is spending too much)."

I then informed them what Greenville County was doing but with caveat that I was not suggesting that they spend as Greenville is doing--emphasizing that it is the local community who is to carry out the program, that it is the local community who must determine their program and their needs, not VEP nor the Fourth Congressional District's Director or Rev. Brockman. I did point out that the Greenville field workers were full-time workers and if they are to pay anyone as Greenville, that the people be also full-time workers--suggesting that the 25 volunteers may not be full-time workers or deserve each, $25 a week. Rev. Wright said that his group will have another meeting about staff needs, and expenditures will always be in the terms of being reasonable. Rev. Brockman promised to bring checks right on over for their needs. The meeting adjourned with everyone seeming to be satisfied. Rev. Brockman and I left Laurens.

After taking Rev. Brockman home, I then drove on to Anderson, and again, no one was at Rev. Rice's home. I did go across the street and talked to one of his friends who said that she had been active in voter registration last year but was not familiar with a program being active this year. It was after 10 P.M. and I apologized for waking the lady.

I had called Rev. McCain when I was in Greenville that it may be midnight when I arrived, but he said that it would be allright. When I arrived, after 1 A.M., he gave me the reports from the counties, and from these, WAB and VEP could determine the county leaders. Abbeville, Pickens, and Okone have no county representatives, but there in Pickens is a Dr. Hill who is a contact. Rev. McCain's field agent, Mr. Charles Daniels, Rte. 1, Box 140, is working the latter area and the other areas where there are no county representatives. He said that he had not received a report as of yet from his representative at Salude, Rev. R. A. Mathis.

He indicated that on the second Sunday of each month, there is a district meeting and the representatives and the workers present their bills, which McCain suggested to be primarily gasoline bills. McCain's just-finished task was visiting the areas which have not submitted their VEP reports to him. He warned them that they were not to receive any more funds unless they send their reports. I was under the impression that financial reports had been sent to VEP, and I failed to make further inquiry or to ask to see some of their bills. I did ask about the Anderson situation and he said that Rev. Rice did make the meeting, "meeting before last," and because of their past expenses, he gave him a hundred dollars. Therefore, this was a general discussion during the early morning which had the unfortunate result of avoiding the specific needs I needed to know. About 3 A.M., I left Rev. McCain and by 4 A.M., I decided to stay in Augusta before returning to Atlanta.

Dear President/Pastor:

We the members of the Orange County Branch NAACP are calling on every Club President/your members to participate in our Voter's Registration Campaign. We ask of you if we may have a speaker to come to speak with your group at your convenience.

We must begin at once to get more negroes registered before the general election in November. The registration books will close October 3.

We need everyone to help us in this drive. It is very important that we reach every person that is not a registered voter, so in this important election they may have a voice in the affairs that govern them.

Can we count on you? If so, please contact our Campaign Office at this number 424-6394.

Thank you.

Very truly yours,

File: John Doe Field Trip Reports

8/17/64

TO: WAB
FROM: JT & JD
RE: Field Trip to South Carolina, August 10-12, 1964

(JT) INTRODUCTION

WAB first decided to send me alone on this field trip, then later decided to send JD also. In a conference prior to the trip with us, WAB stated specific questions and situations he wanted us to seek answers to. He stated his thoughts and suggestions that we, if possible, make to the various county chairmen concerning the operation of VEP programs under their guidance. [redacted]

NOT SO Note

(SEE insert)

We were asked to seek specific answers to the following questions in:

First Congressional District:

WAB asked us to visit in Charleston, S. C., with Mr. Esau Jenkins, a county leader in this district. Here, we wanted to know whether the program was working; how many people were registered; number of volunteer workers; take a look at his records; and make this a routine visit.

Second Congressional District:

1. Visit with the students at the Summer Project sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee; see what they are doing; and inquire as to the results of their program and how effective is it.
2. In Columbia, S. C., talk with Dr. I. DeQuincy Newman, district chairman. Nothing special, how are voter registration programs doing; what are their results; and ask for questions, complaints, etc.

Third Congressional District:

1. Talk with Rev. S. R. McCain, North Augusta, S. C., about the general VEP program in his district.
2. Ask Rev. Rich did he ever work out a budget.
3. Check Rev. McCain's records, nothing special, just a routine check.
4. Use your (JT & JD) own judgment in talking with Rev. McCain about the VEP project in the third district.

Fourth Congressional District:

1. Have there been any changes in the programs?
2. Are all counties working effectively under VEP?
3. Pass on to the fourth district chairman that the VEP office will send them $1,300 sometime this week.
4. Check with Rev. Brockman in Greenville.
5. Call Mr. Haile and get names of county leaders.

5th Dist

Insert to Field Report

WAB suggested we mention to Mr. Rearden that it might be easier for County Chairman in the Fourth dictrict to keep at least $50.00 petty cash on hand to pay small expenses rather than submit them to Mr. Reardens office which would take a larger period of time to be executed.

JT

Fifth Congressional District:

1. Check and see what voter registration activity is going on in the various counties.
2. Check with county leaders; how is the VEP program working or moving?
3. Point out to them (the county chairmen) that they are due some money. If they are working in their respective counties, we will send them more financial assistance.
4. See what's going on in voter registration at Rock Hill, S. C.
5. Find out just how are the counties working with the other counties in the Fifth Congressional District.
6. Get a list of county leaders and their addresses.

WAB asked that we bring back to him a general picture of voter registration programs in South Carolina so that he may determine whether additional financial assistance is needed. The registration books will be open again in September for the state of South Carolina.

Athens, Georgia - Monday Afternoon

Joe Tucker and I arrived in Athens, Georgia approximately 5 P.M. Whereas our purpose was at first to determine who was sending us the reports, and during our last few moments in the office, we found that the person who was sending the reports was Mr. E. C. Gardner, we decided that to only pay a courtesy call to Mr. Gardner and then continue on to S. C. in order to meet with Rev. Joseph Rich, the Anderson County director.

Mr. E. C. Gardner's address is 1495 E. Broad St., Athens, and his phone number is 67001. When we arrived, we introduced ourselves and were cordially welcomed. He offered that the registration effort in Athens is an NAACP operation by its political action committee. Expenses and income for voter registration are not kept in a separate account. Their manner of operation is to pay Negro taxis for taking people to be registered. A taxi driver will present a list of the persons who they have taken, including information such as the person's place of residence, and they charge a reasonable price. Mr. Gardner said that the taxis do not charge as much as the regular rate because they, too, say that they are part of the movement. Nevertheless, I concluded that since there is no standard rate, such as $.25 a head, this way of making a profit stimulates the Negro taxis to cooperate in the registration campaign, working with the Negro barbershops and beauty parlors.

Mr. Gardner has no "title," and he says that he just works in registration, but agreeing that he is a coordinator, if not so designated. He informed us that the president of the NAACP is Rev. W. Hudson.

Anderson, S. C. - Monday Night:

We arrived in Anderson around 7:30 P.M. Monday. We tried to reach Rev. Rich from Athens, but he was not available. Joe and I remained in Athens to eat dinner, hoping to catch him later, but by 9 P.M., he never appeared. Nevertheless, we met an acknowledgeable young man who knew the names of the local leaders. Before we left Anderson, we contacted the president of the local chapter of the NAACP and gave him the information about our concern in relation to Rev. Rich drawing up a budget for which we could support. The president indicated that Rev. Rich had been out of town and he did not know when he would return.

JT and I then left Anderson and arrived at the Ghana Motel, a Negro motel in Greenville. Because of the inferior accommodations there and because the newly integrated motels either "have no accommodations" or "desire not to desegregate," JT and I strongly advise one who is a Negro working in the field to phone ahead and make reservations.

Fourth Congressional District - Greenville, Spartanburg, and Laurens
Tuesday A.M. & P.M.

After remaining in the office of the Greenville Voter Registration and Education Committee until about 11 A.M., Rev. Brockman, having taken a carload of people to be registered, came to the office. We gave him WAB's message concerning the second allotment. Because we were mainly interested in the other two counties, Laurens and Spartanburg, we did not remain in Greenville long. Rev. Brockman indicated that he never had been able to get in contact with Rev. Johnson, the president of the Spartanburg registration committee. Rev. Brockman then said that in almost despair, he finally told his troubles to Atty. Thompson in Spartanburg. Atty. Thompson expressed great surprise and had no knowledge of any role Spartanburg could play in voter registration. He set up a meeting with himself, Brockman attending, along with Mr. Williams of North Carolina Mutual, (see previous report) and Dr. Bulldale, a Negro. This meeting was held during the first of August.

Rev. Brockman said that Mr. Williams surprisingly expressed reluctance that Spartanburg be involved in the program, fearing that VEP and Non-Spartanburg people would control the community. Rev. Brockman insisted that he or no one else would control their community and that it was they who are to organize and direct the program. Mr. Williams then was persuaded and the Spartanburg people became enthusiastic about the program. Mrs. Hattie G. Barksdale, a middle aged housewife, was hired as county director who hired Mrs. Moke as a secretary. The Spartanburg office was set up on 267 N. Converse, in the Silver Hill Methodist Church, phone number: 585-2039. Mrs. Barksdale's residential phone number is 833-1836.

Rev. Brockman said that Laurens County is performing quite nicely and is directed by Prof. J. T. W. Mims, 232 S. Livingston St., Clinton, S. C. Therefore, JT and I decided to visit Clinton and Spartanburg before going through the Fifth District and then stopping in Columbia for the night. From the Greenville office, I called Prof. Mims and Mrs. Barksdale and made appointments to see them that afternoon. I also tried to contact Frank Robinson, W. Brown, and Mr. Haile, the latter being the Fifth District President, but was told that he was attending an undertaker's meeting in Kingstree and may be back in Camden late that night.

Approximately 12:30 P.M., we arrived at the home office of Laurens County. Rev. Mims had not as of yet arrived from the post office, but there to meet us was Mrs. Emma Hunter, the Laurens County secretary. The office was equipped with a telephone, mimeograph machine, and other necessary incidents. We looked at their records and forms. A typical example of their finances includes $25 a week for Rev. Aureton, a daily supervisor, whose job it is to be at the registration office and assist and observe; $25 a week for Prof. Mims, an education director; $35 a week for Mrs. Emma Hunter as secretary; $.08 per mile for the transportation pool; and $.10 per family that is contacted.

We learned from Prof. Mims that he is a retired school principal and is president of the Negro Teachers Association, the party which sued for equal pay several years ago which influenced him to resign.

He indicated that the registrar told him that more than 500 persons have registered and that 90% were Negro, since August 3. We indicated to him that we planned to visit Spartanburg and then take a quick trip through the Fifth Congressional District and stopping briefly in Gaffney, Rockhill, Chester, Lancaster, and Camden before going to Columbia. Prof. Mims, because of being a principal in Rockhill several years, was able to give the names of local leaders there, which include Rev. R. G. Totely, Rev. W. B. Knox, president of the NAACP, Dr. Dewey Duckett, who is on the board of the South Carolina Human Relations Council, and Rev. Lloyd Morris. For Chester, he told me to see the Farm Demonstration Agent.

Prof. Mims then invited me to speak at a meeting to be held in Laurens County sometime in early September, which is to be both a worship of voter education series and a celebration for their efforts in voter registration. After an enjoyable discussion, we took our leave and then drove on to Spartanburg and made our appointment with Mrs. Barksdale for 3 P.M.

Mrs. Barksdale and her secretary were waiting for us. It was soon apparent that she had no prior experience in voter registration nor was being directly assisted by anyone who had prior experience. However, she was working and sincerely trying. She has a quite sufficient office in the Silver Hill Methodist Church and has the right to use any of the utilities of the church. She told me the manner in which she was appointed. She attended the meeting which Rev. Brockman had set up, which I mentioned earlier in this report. After the meeting, she said out loud that she was going to work and register anybody she sees, and Dr. Bulldale overheard her, and through him, she was appointed. Her records were very scant. She said that everything was in her head, but then asked me whether it would be allright for everyone to not report until after the books close.

I told her that as far as reporting, etc., Rev. Brockman is responsible to VEP. Therefore, she should try to report the way he wanted her to report. However, there should be some manner of daily reporting to her so that she could determine who is working and who is not working so that she can know of anybody who is actually being registered, (which she did not know), so that she can make some changes if necessary. We then left Spartanburg around 4 P.M. on our way to Chester, S. C. Because it was so late at this time, we decided to skip going through Gaffney. When we arrived in Chester, it was nearly 6 P.M.

Fifth Congressional District - Chester, S. C.--Tuesday Afternoon
After arriving in Chester, we found the name of the Farm Demonstration Agent and went to his home, but he was not there. His name is M. M. Sitton, 40 Jetter Street, home phone number: 385-3804, and 385-5592 is his office number which is located at 121½ Gadsden Street. We then drove arount to a Negro business district and found that the president of the NAACP in Chester is Rev. H. B. Brewer, who was active in taking people to be registered. We called his number, but there was no answer. His address is 130 Bailey and his phone number is 385-3698. We then left Chester, going to Rockhill, S. C.

Rockhill (5th District) - Tuesday Night
When we arrived in Rockhill, we noticed that this was a fair-sized town with a well-defined Negro business street of several blocks. We found the addresses and phone numbers of Rev. Totely, 927 Crawford Road, phone number, 327-4222; and Rev. W. B. Knox, 307 W. Moore, phone number, 327-7339. We went to both homes. We were only able to talk to the 18 year old son of Rev. Knox. He said he knew of no voter registration activity.

JT and I were about to conclude that there was no voter registration activity going on in Rockhill and had almost decided to drive on to Camden before it would be too late. But still not remaining assured that voter registration activity was not going on, we felt that we had to support this finding from the Negro on the streets on the Negro block.

We stopped at a Negro barbershop and asked a young barber whether there was being conducted a voter registration drive. He said that some man with a college age youth had been going around all week asking people whether or not they were registered and taking them downtown. This sounded like Frank Robinson or William Brown of CORE. He was able to find out that Brown was in town and find where he was.

It was now after 7 P.M. when Joe and I passed a parked car that fitted the description we were given. We met Rev. Lloyd Morris, with whom Brown was having dinner. Rev. Morris is a young minister who is the local person in charge of the voter registration drive in Rockhill. His address is 442 Ray Street, phone number, 327-3916. The youthswho are involved in voter registration and canvassing were associated with those who, several years ago, were involved in sit-ins and demonstrations under Rev. Morris' predecessor. The work in Rockhill is of a low-gear quality, the workers being only about ten youth and being handicapped by a shortage of cars. It seems that Brown got to Rockhill too late to organize for the 10-day registration with the results similar to his and Robinson's results in Spartanburg.

I told him that we were trying to visit the counties in the Fifth Congressional District and found the names of the county leaders and directors in this district. Brown happened to have a list with them which Mr. Haile gave him which I indicate below:

Gaffney

There was no organization, but the contacts there were:

Rev. A. W. Goforthly
S. Johnson St.
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: I.V. 9-5669

Rev. M. L. Roberts
619 Borad Street
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: I.V. 9-8953

Rev. J. W. Saunders
330 W. Meadow St.
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: 9-2180

Chester

Brown stated that he knew of no Sitton or Brewer, but that the inspired person who is working hard in that area and had just registered 300 people without VEP support (He had just returned from there.) is Mrs. Jean D. Hynson, 146 Loomis Street.

Lancaster

This is an area which Brown is going to visit this week,(August 3-7), and which is of interest to him because of the leader there who ran for council. His name is Reddick L. Martin, office phone: AL 3-4018, residence phone: AL 3-1439. Other contacts are Mrs. F. Funderburke, Funderburke Funeral Home, and Rev. C. M. Smith.

Chesterfield
Brown says that this area is where there is an active group in existence, but it is not receiving funds from VEP. The contact there is Mr. Joe Morris, 284 Second Street, Cherow, S. C. Brown did not know the name of the person who is a contact in York County except that the person there is a minister; and in Union County, the contact person there is Dr. Long (See VEP files for address).

Brown said that there are only three counties which receive direct assistance from VEP funds, which are Kershaw, Winnsboro and [redacted] Chesterfield?

Dr. C. H. Thomas, State Director
It now being late, we cancelled out the trip to Camden and other counties, driving to Columbia for the night and then arriving in Orangeburg on Wednesday. We had a chat with Dr. Thomas. He was concerned about the continuance of the statewide registration program after it went out of existence, and that it would all be a wasted effort if they had no support for having a continuing existence. He showed us the plans for assessing each county on a Negro population basis which would result in $.15 for each Negro for a $15,000 budget. They have been promised $4,000 from the Presbyterian Church, but this would be insufficient because of their needing an office and a staff. He therefore hoped that VEP would assist in supporting their effort. I asked him about who they were going to get as a field secretary and how. He said that they are establishing qualifications, but that they are still bothered about the questions--whether to get a Negro, and about the sex of the person. (One of the persons from the Friends group has offered his services.)

American Friends Group - Wednesday Afternoon
Dr. Thomas then directed us to the "Freedom House" where the American Friends student group was located. The house was located in a Negro neighborhood, but there remained in this same neighborhood homes occupied by white families, which is typical in many areas in the South. The house itself was a non-new prewar two-story house which was clean and neat. It was rented for the period of the AFS work in Orangeburg County for their use. They use it both as a place of residence and as an office.

As an office, they have space in the corner of the dining room which is used for the card file records, other file records and a table for holding their publicity matter. What I thought was quite unique is that use of their personnel for office use is very low priority. They do not have a phone although they have the right to use their close-by neighbor's phone. Therefore, a phone plays an insignificant part in their operation, and this frees their people to work in the field rather than to answer a phone. This suggests that a phone may not be absolutely or even practically necessary for a voter education project.

The AFS group consists of nine youth and young adults integrated sexually and racially (one Negro girl), a dietician and a chaperon. Their director is a white young adult in his middle or late twenties by the name of Pickens Moore. Assisting from the community are 15 college age youth from South Carolina State Teachers College, a Negro institution. This total of 24 persons is broken down into four teams, each team assigned to one of four areas into which the county is broken. For their use, they have five cars, four of which were donated to the community for their use and one belonging to Mr. Pickens Moore.

I interviewed six workers from various teams and Mr. Moore. A team's typical day during the August registration period is to fan out to their particular area at 8 A.M. and organize the Negroes for immediate transportation to the registration office. When the registration day terminates, they then begin a period of canvassing around 8 or 9 P.M. After it finishes canvassing for the day, the team then conducts a voter education workshop-mass meeting or attends a revival meeting in the area, the latter taking priority in order to avoid conflict. After the meeting, the teams return to the Freedom House tired (sometimes after midnight).

Their procedure of canvassing is unique. Each worker has a set of 5 x 3 cards which he takes with him which he or she identifies by ward and precinct, etc. Again, this puts more workers in the field rather than in the office. I have observed other groups who have forms for their canvass workers which they fill out and then return to the office. Office personnel is then needed to transcribe the information on the cards. AFS workers eliminate this necessity for office overhead.

Before a team hits a part of their area, they are in contact and communication with the local precinct chairman who gives them the "key" to the particular area by introducing the team to other local leaders and contacts, and who briefs them upon their expected behavior and about the reaction of the local white power structure. Accessibility in the area is a success because of Orangeburg being highly organized voter education wise due to prior VEP support, Mr. Thomas, State VEP Director, and Mr. McPherson, director for Orangeburg. After the initial contact, they have an interview with the local enforcement officials whereby they introduce themselves and indicate their purpose and frankly ask for protection. The response has varied from the promise of protection to the moderately negative response, "I don't like you people being here, but I can't stop you from being here." Assistance, as I gather from their talk, from the local area leaders varies from vocal support and assistance at workshops to actual accompaniment on canvassing missions. They have had no transportation problems or needs in getting community support in this manner.

On their door-to-door canvassing ventures, they work on a sexually integrated basis but not on a racial basis (such as Black boy-White girl patrols). When a resident answers their knocks, they introduce themselves as volunteer workers assisting the Mr. _____or Mrs._____, (the local resident voter registration leader). Their purpose is to identify with the local community as much as possible to establish rapport. They will not voluntarily offer to the local resident the American Friends organization, yet they willnot avoid discussion if the resident or other persons request discussion. They relate exactly why they are in their area--"We are here to register Negroes." They briefly explain South Carolina Laws about voter registration--"You can register in August only between now and August 15, this coming Saturday at noon." But time is not spent so much on education as it on establishing a desire or curiosity on the part of the resident. So the team or patrol will explain why the local resident must register--from a bacon-and-grits basis to relating them to Goldwater and Johnson, (or local political contests).

Because little steps are easier to take than giant steps (going down to the Courthouse to register), the team will request the local resident to attend a local mass meeting. The mass meeting is a workshop to educate the local residents about the techniques of registration and voting, and the issues and the personalities. If the resident is in a true rural area distant from other residents and not able to attend the mass meeting, a personal workshop is given to the resident right there, but the resident is encouraged to attend the mass meeting for obvious reasons.

At a typical mass meeting, (A team holds several in a week in an area, and if there is a revival meeting being held, a meeting may be held right at the end of the revival meeting or be incorporated as a part of the revival meeting.) the service is opened by the presiding or local minister by prayer and followed by hymns. Then they have an inspiring speaker from the Orangeburg area who is an expert in the use of emotion. Sample registration forms are then passed out and everyone is instructed on the use of the forms. Then the candidates from the various parties give their speeches, i.e., President Johnson, Senator Barry Goldwater, and the local candidates, etc. (Team workers are trained in the personalities and the issues and have studied all the pertinent speeches of the candidates.) The team worker will either give one of the already published speeches or give an improvised speech based on the philosophies and speech technique of the candidate. The people are then educated about the techniques of marking a ballot. Sample ballots are distributed. An election is then held, using all the products of a regular election such as poll watchers, etc. The count is totaled and results are given, and the meeting is terminated by prayer.

The mass meetings have varied from 6 to 120. The AFS unique use of the mass meeting technique for a workshop cannot help but stimulate the participants to register and then vote and provide the little step which makes the step to true voter participation by the Negro easier.

The results of the program seem to average about 150 per day. A total of 169 persons were registered the previous day.

Charleston, S. C. - Wednesday Afternoon

After we left the Friends group, we then went to Charleston. We decided that there was no need for us to split up after it was determined that I would not be able to see McCain in the Third Congressional District until late in the evening.

In Charleston, we found the office of the Citizens Committee and Registration Committee and waited for Mr. Esau Jenkins, who was busy transporting people to be registered in his bus (VW). He indicated that he had received $600 from VEP which is the account held for him by Mr. Fleming, and has received a direct grant from SCLC and assistance from the Highlander Folk School, the latter being used in his Adult Education in Citizenship series which was held last month on the island. He indicated that three teachers are responsible to him who receive $3.00 per hour. His coordinator receives $25 per week, as does himself.

JT's Personal Conclusion to S. C. Field Trip

The trip proved to be very interesting and informative. It was an awakening experience to meet and see in action other people interested in voter registration. They all seemed sincere and interested in their work and moved about their duties with a great amount of dedication and tenacity.

The VEP car was used as our mode of travel. It performed exceedingly well. The mileage meter showed that we covered a total of 958 miles. When we returned, the condition of the car mechanically wise was good. After making the field trip, I am even more so impressed with the Voter Education Project, its goals, its operation, and its leaders.

Third Congressional District

We arrived at Rev. McCain's house at the designated time, 11P.M. McCain told us about the Voter Registration program in his district. How they get people to the polls and how he gets his volunteer workers organized and working. He told us how the program is working and how it was organized.

Rev. McCain said he had not seen Rev. Rich about the budget, but plans to as soon as possible. Rev. McCain said he didn't have any records we could look at, they were all with Dorothy Franklin, the SCLC Secretary in McCormick County.

Rev. McCain sent a voided check, N. 0013 by us to the VEP office. He had received correspondence requesting this numbered check and some more. He only sent one check back by us.

McCain said he had no problems, things were going pretty well. He couldn't tell or show us anything else do to the absence of records.

TO: WAB
FROM: JD
RE: Field Trip Throughout Georgia, August 17-21, 1964

On Monday, August 17, I received a phone call from WAB, who was on a field trip, and was requested to take the VEP car with Texaco Card and take a field trip through Georgia. I was asked to take a trip through South Georgia, see Bill Randall of Macon, and Atty. Jackson, and find out whether they would be interested in a program before September 15. I was to then see Mr. Appling of Ft. Valley and check to see whether he would want a direct grant immediately, along with budget and voucher checks.

I was then to go into Southwest Georgia and visit the SNCC projects in the various counties, explain to Don Harris about VEP's policy, and seek explanation about reports to JBM which state, "I took (a certain number) of people to be registered," but do not state how many people were actually registered.

From there, I was to go to Savannah, see Hosea Williams and meet the county leaders in their program (SCLC, Southeast Crusade for Voters). Also, I was to see P. B. McCoy of Waycross, who is conducting a voter registration campaign in Waycross under the name of the "Negro Political Action Committee."

Macon - Monday P.M.

When I arrived in Macon, Mr. Randall had been out of town, but I was able to catch him at his residence just before he went to a revival meeting. He stated that he is doing voter registration work, using his newspaper staff and local volunteers. Prior to the books closing in June, he estimates that of of 4,500 newly registered persons, about 2,200 were Negroes, bringing the total to about 6,000 total registered Negroes. He estimates that at the present time, there is a potential of 13,000 Negroes who could be registered, and about 6,000 from the hard core (the practically unregisterable). He requests VEP assistance, stating that he would use the same people that he used before the books were closed--at least six NAACP youth members who are affiliated with SCLC who will also furnish Citizenship teachers. One of the persons he believes will assist him is Bernice Turner, a youth staff worker who at the present time is in Monroe, Ga.

He said that he will dictate a budget to his secretary in the morning who will send it on to WAB, but he asked me whether I thought that VEP would support a district-wide program in voter registration with him as the director. He also expressed interest in the Third Congressional District. I admitted that VEP may be amenable to a district-wide program rather than supporting separate counties, based upon experience in South Carolina.

I asked him whether he thought Mr. Appling would be the best person to direct the program in the Third Congressional District, and Mr. Randall answered that Mr. Appling is the best person for Ft. Valley.

I received wonderful accommodations at the Holiday Inn, and while there, ate dinner with Atty. Jackson, a young attorney who in the recent past had been assisting C. B. King but is now establishing a practice of law in Macon.

Ft. Valley - Tuesday A.M.

The phone number of Mr. Appling is TA 5-5319. He stated that Mr. Patton "messed them up" in the operation of the Middle Georgia Voter Registration Project, which covered the counties of Peach, Houston, Taylor, Crawford, and Macon. He stated that "they" set up an organization in Dudley County and registered over 400 in the last registration period.

In the Congressional Races, (3rd), the main contenders are Charlie Byrd and Earl Cox, and both are vieing for the Negro vote at this time so as to make the runoffs and freeze out the other candidates. Also, states Appling, Randall is a supporter of Byrd and suggests this is why Randall is so interested in voter registration. Appling says that his group has sent questionnaires to both Cox and Byrd with typical questions concerning race relations, etc., and that Cox is the only one who has answered.

Appling stated that he has worked with the Georgia Voter Registration League, but he feels that it has been all talk and no work.

From Appling I learned that the name of the local group which participated within the Middle Georgia Voter Registration Project is the Peach County Political Action Committee. The name of the vice chairman is Ruben Jones, and the secretary is Daisy Wooten.

Americus - Tuesday P.M.

After leaving Appling, I drove down to Americus. While driving, I heard on the radio that there was a warrant out for the arrest of Don Harris, the SNCC Coordinator for the SW Georgia VEP, and that Rev. Herman Wells had already been arrested. The arrests, according to the radio newscaster, were in connection with the riots the previous weekend. As I drove into Americus, I felt that I should go to Koinia Farm in order to find out where the local SNCC project was.

Koinia Farm is a farm enterprise managed and more or less owned by the Jourdans. At first, it was his dream of an inter-racial co-operative farm of 20-30 families, and so it was for a while. Mr. Jourdan and the others had been shot at many times, even as late as the Fall of 1962, (but the reason then was housing SNCC workers); yet the real squeeze has been the economic boycott, not able to buy supplies or sell produce and now having to rely on things that can be sold on a public auction such as cattle, etc.

This may not have so much to do with voter registration except to indicate that the Jourdans have always shown a dedication to the cause of civil rights. I knew that I would be able to find from them the address of the SNCC office and learn about the the community.

I was graciously received by Mrs. Jourdan as always, and we first talked about mutual interests and friends. I learned that Zev Aelony, a former CORE worker who stayed with Patricia and me in Tallahassee, was somewhere in the 1000 Acres working and recuperating from a heart attack resulting from his experience in the Americus jails, (being accused of sedition and insurrection last summer), but the talk soon led into voter registration.

John Perdue and Bobby Mance traditionally have been the SNCC workers for Americus. But at the present time, John is situated in Albany. The two main workers in Americus are Sam Mahone and Sam Rushin. Mrs. Jourdan considers Mahone quite effective, who is only 18 years old and is registered. I believe that he is the new type of people SNCC seeks to recruit as workers, young Negroes from the community.

I learned from the Jourdans that the SNCC office is on Jefferson St. near the Barnhill Funeral Home. ~~I learned about the Jourdans~~. It seems that there is no real Negro leadership in the community except, of course, the "Uncle Toms." Therefore, there has been no real support of Negro voter registration. An exception is Grandma Barnhill. It may be an error to type her as a leader--she is a militant individual who has demanded and received respect and human dignity--an attitude which has been transplanted to her grandson who is now working for SNCC. Housing and other accommodations for SNCC workers are due to Mrs. Barnhill, but she seems to stand alone. Although, just last week, the Jourdans were able to invite to their home white persons and Negroes from the community. There is some promise of a better community, but the process is hard for true reconciliation.

Joyce, the Jourdan's daughter, was taking one of the Farm's employees into town; so she was glad to show me the way to the SNCC house. She introduced me to Sam Mahone, a quite self-possessed young adult. He and the other SNCC workers, when the car is running, have been taking people off the street and taking them to apply to the registrar. Unfortunately, it has been represented to them that the office is closed (closed the week before) until the November election. Sam says that during the first week, 85 persons took the test who applied the year before! Sam stated however, that last year, he applied and in only three weeks, received a notice to take the test and he took it and passed. He concludes that many of the people are now applying to take the test and will not be able to take it until next month.

From him, I found that Don Harris' address was 536 E. Jefferson, and phone number is 924-5863.

Cordele, Christ County - Tuesday P.M.
While at the SNCC office in Americus, it was my good fortune to meet Rev. Ulysses Fullwood, a citizen of Cordele and the SNCC Voter Education Director there. His address is 605 23rd St., Apt. F, Cordele; phone number: 273-3220. The main problem there is a lack of transportation. He said that he has succeeded in registering 29 Negroes. He also said that the Young Adult Movement in Cordele is assisting him in door-to-door canvassing. One of them is assisting him in the rural areas. Rev. Fullwood stated that in the first of next week, he is going to attempt to either get permission to bring some Negroes to learn how to use the new voting machine which is at the courthouse.

Albany - Tuesday P.M.
While driving into Albany from Americus, I half-way expected to see policemen patroling as a result of the riots, but the town seemed peaceful in the dusk of the day, as seemed the town should have been because of the easy and peaceful desegregation of public accommodations there in early July. Filling at a Texaco gasoline station, even the white station manager didn't seem hostile, although the Negro seemed suspiciously curious...."I have people in Atlanta (looking at my license plate)....Are you a school teacher?"

When I came to the SNCC office, I was quite surprised! Painted over were the SNCC signs, and in their place was a sign saying, "Charles Sherrod Library." I was more suprised to see that the place was deserted--only New York Times newspapers being on its doorstep. I then decided to call Allen Clark, a law schoolmate of mine, and find from him where everyone was. Wile walking to what I thought was the nearest phone, a car came by and stopped, and a white girl with a bunch of Negro youth asked me whether I was looking for them. I said yes and followed them to where they were going. She had recognized me from seeing me in the Atlanta SNCC office, and introduced herself as Joyce Barrett.

The Harris Family's residence (It seems that the whole family is militant. Don's sister has traveled a year as a SNCC Freedom Singer.) is located at 623 Whitney Ave., and the phone number is HE 6-1997. Joyce Barrett is the defacto person in charge of the Voter Education Project in Southwest Georgia. She may be reached either at the Harris' residence, or at HE 5-9811.

She sends the VEP reports to Atlanta SNCC office and the VEP office, and she supervised the SNCC-VEP workers in the field. She is the one who pays them but requires them to report to her before they are paid.

Joyce said that Don Harris attended a staff meeting in Mississippi but is due to return. She then said too that both Rev. Wells and Don Harris have been charged with insurrection. Rev. Wells has been arrested and charged in the warrant for: (1) distribution of materials preaching insurrection, and (2) attempting insurrection. The bond for Wells has been set at $2,500.

She was quite excited and angry and stated things which had more to do with illegal search and seizure than with VEP, but after a while, we were able to discuss voter registration.

She stated that the office in Albany is the coordinating office and she spends a portion of her time in this effort. She then asked me whether VEP would be opposed to her working in KING FOR CONGRESS HEADQUARTERS. She said that her job there is record keeping and she spends some time there. (The phone number there is HE 6-5184.) She said that she understood that VEP cannot be engaged in partisan political activities. I told her that was correct, and that if a SNCC worker is paid full-time by VEP, his full-time should be engaged only in those things which are not partisan political activities. But, of course, persons' personal time or time after work is his own time, unless it reflected upon his VEP activity. This then is why I believed that WAB, I told her, explained to Don Harris that VEP has a policy of not being in a position of appearing to be supporting demonstrations that have a likelihood of arrest.

Joyce stated that in Albany, the number of Negroes registered is near the "hard core" of unregisterable (60%), and that other local organizations have taken up to register the remainder. These groups are the Deltas, other fraternities and sororities, and civic groups.

It is her opinion that SNCC over the last few years has done such an intensive effort in registration and canvassing that she feels that it is necessary that the local community take over this effort and that they are doing it.

She then gave me the names, etc. of the other projects in Southwest Georgia as follows:

Thomasville
Gwendolyn Brown
312 Festus Street
226-1245

Moultrie
Herman Kitchens
323 Northwest 3rd Avenue

Tifton
Isaac Simpson
c/o Solomon Nixon Funeral Home
P. O. Box 143
382-1825

Joyce asked me whether we (VEP) had any sample voting machines. I told her that I would talk to WAB about this.

Wednesday A. M.
Because of a flat tire with the VEP car, I drove into Tallahassee from Quincy and had it repaired.

Wednesday P. M. - Thomasville, Ga.
Here, I saw an example of how Joyce Barrett and Don Harris are separating SNCC VEP efforts from other SNCC efforts.

Gwendolyn Brown, (the wife of Rev. Thomas Brown whose father was a fellow NAACP worker in Indianapolis), and another girl are the SNCC VEP workers here and do not engage in any other activity. Their office and home is at 608 Alexander St., Thomasville, around the corner from the SNCC office at 312 Festus St., and it is here they have the phone: 226-1245. On Festus Street, it seems that our boys stay. On reflection, it seems that the boys work on SNCC's "King for Congress" group and the girls here work for VEP.

Gwendolyn says that the local NAACP Chapter has promised to give financial assistance for arrests, but has not given any other support or effort, "Uncle Toms" and "Fear" being the main problem. She says that the local leader seems to be Rev. I. L. Mullins of the 1st African Baptist Church, and is giving his full support, both in registration and distributing leaflets. While I was talking to her, it was raining, and because of the rain, no one seemed too busy plus the fact it was lunch time.

The girls explained to me that their car had broken down, and that tomorrow they would start again. They said they have been doing door-to-door canvassing, that they are local girls from the community, and that they are now working on a block worker system.

Regarding the white community's attitude, they stated that they have been followed by both police and local white citizens, but no one has been arrested when involved in voter registration. (Late last week, one of the KING FOR CONGRESS SNCC kids was arrested for distribution of advertising matter without a license.) Gwendolyn also stated that the attitude of the registrar towards their activity is that he does his duty, not going out of his way, but also not deliberately "slowing down."

Wednesday P.M. Moultrie
Relative to voter registration here, there are two enthusiastic young men: Mo Lamar, a Negro, and Herman Kitchens, a white adult. It seems that here is the potential for danger. They have been promised by the local police that they would not get any protection. They have been followed back to their office, and while in the downtown area recently to talk to Negroes on the street, an ugly white mob gathered, armed with "Maddox Drum Sticks"; but at the last moment, the police intervened and cut the lynch-type air with jokes and finally the two workers were able to get back into their areas.

There is a local Negro voter registration committee carried on by John Robertson and Mr. Williams. The workers state that they pass Robertson because he is clearly an "Uncle Tom." This group, they said, has been active only in the registration of Negroes in the city and not in the county.

They have found from the deputy registrar, Crosby, that 1,167 Negroes are registered in the county to vote, but 1,447 Negroes are registered in the city. It has been shown, they said, that during city elections, Negroes are shipped in on trucks to vote to keep the "Power Structure" and keep out reform movements.

They said that the attitude of the registrar is unpredictable, (or, I should add, his deputy, the registrar, they said, is never there).

The workers said that the registrar is still using the old-now illegal test wherein 10 out of 20 must be answered correctly. They feel that everything is allright at the registrar's office and there is no tension until they begin to mass about 20 Negroes at his office. They feel that the deputy registrar is apprehensive of them. He has told them that the FBI had been through there, and he has told them that everything will be allright as long as they (SNCC) won't have there in Moultrie a "Freedom Day." Otherwise, the pressure will be on him and he will have to slow down.

The potential Negroes who may soon become supporters of their effort are Rev. Hopkins, whose home is in Thomasville, but who preaches in Moultrie; Bishop Gardner of the A.M.E. Church, and Mr. Robert Burke, who ran for City Commissioner last spring but who is now still frightened from the white reaction, and also, Mr. Edward Starkly.

Regarding the youth, the VEP workers had no contact with them until last week when, on their own, they began testing public facilities. It seemed that Mo and Herman have been briefed well on that because they understood that VEP supported no activity in that type of effort. Herman said that the testing seemed to be under the direction of a girl leader, Joyce Harrington, now planning to return to Atlanta University. He said that Mo has given them general advice and feels that they will work in voter registration in September. They feel that they should register 3,500 at least.

From the City Directory and the voters list, they have compiled the following information:

Voters List

County
White Voters	11,693
Negro Voters	1,167
City Wide (May 26, 1964)
White Voters	3,817
Negro Voters	1,447

Population

City	16,500	(estimate 1964)
County	35,000

Census

City	15,764
White	10,080
Negro	5,684
County	34,048
White	26,043
Negro	8,005

The workers claim that they need transportation. They have registered 40 people. If the person cannot read, the deputy registrar will ask them oral questions, and usually spends about three minutes for each person.

Wednesday P.M. - Tifton

I talked to Mrs. Nixon but was not able to get any information about any SNCC effort there.

Savannah

On Wednesday, I arrived in the office of the VEP Southeast Crusade for Voters. The new address is 416 Park Avenue and the phone number is EL 5-5924. Ben Clark, as could be expected, was there. He introduced me to a gentlemen who was a local official of the Smelting Workers' Union, whose offices were on the same floor as the SECV. I then remembered that from reading BW's field reports, WAB did not approve of this arrangement.

When I arrived, it was difficult to present my business. Everyone was excited. The owner of the building leases office space to the VEP office of Hosea Williams upstairs in this building, and the owner also owns a clothing store on the street floor of the building. A group of hoodlums, or one hoodlum had taken a key to the stairway door and used it to enter the building, went upstairs, broke into the door of Hosea's office, made a hole in the floor, dropped down into the clothing store, broke open the man's safe, stole the money, and tookaway lots of clothes. The owner was suggesting that volunteer workers (youth) of Hosea were involved and when Hosea arrived, he was suggesting Ben was too lax, etc. However, I was sure that reactions were because of being excited and the effects would soon pass.

Before Hosea had arrived, I interviewed Ben Clark. Regarding the Chatham County effort, there are 20 paid workers, three of whom are assigned to the office. Also, the Chatham County Crusade for Voters has 75-80 volunteers upon whom they can depend upon, including a transportation committee of 10 persons. They also have three full-time cars, and available for their use is a sound truck. In the last big effort, they used the sound truck for two and a half weeks.

I learned from Hosea that through him, VEP is supporting only Scriven, Liberty, McIntosh, Burke, Tattnall, and Wheeler Counties. He said that he has set aside for them $1,000 from VEP funds, and to be allotted as follows:

Burke	$200
Scriven	200
Liberty	200
McIntosh	200
Tattnall	100
Wheeler	100

I also learned from him that the NAACP is involved in Brunswick, and Mr. J. M. Atkinson does not want SECV support. He stated that he is not supporting any effort in Waycross because it is in another congressional district.

The addresses of county leaders or contacts in the counties supported by VEP in the Southeast area are as follows:

Scriven
Rev. J. W. H. Thomas
Newington, Ga.
857-4462

Liberty
Miss Beverly Lewis

We then made long distance phone calls on the VEP Credit Card to find out when the people would be home.

Hosea assigned to me a worker ordinarily assigned to the office, Charles ~~Strongbeds~~. He would accompany me for the remainder of the day. He was taking with him, also, SCLC registration kits which included VEP forms for reporting and making financial statements.

Thursday - Liberty County

Approximately 4 p.m., we arrived in Liberty County. After stopping to Dorchester Academy and speaking with the director, we went on to the home of Miss Beverly Lewis. We had found no activity at Dorchester.

From Beverly, I learned that the REGISTRAR'S office is opened one day a week only. The registrar is an old lady who works out of her home and has it opened any day of the week she pleases, and she closes any day she pleases, also.

In two weeks, they have registered 20 persons each week, and for the coming Friday, they (the youth working with Beverly) shall carry 30 persons. Unfortunately, Beverly has found that the books are closed on August 25--closing all the books, because of county elections which shall be held on September 25.

The name of the registrar is Mrs. Lucille Woods, whose office and residence is located at 323 North Main St. Beverly says that there are no signs to show that this is the place for registration. She says, however, that other than the registrar administrating the old law rather than the new law, registration is easy. Mrs. Woods has allowed the youth to administer the tests while she, Mrs. Woods, would do the typing. At one time, Beverly said that Mrs. Woods got tired and left the office to them.

The name of the youth group which Beverly is a part of and which is doing the work of voter registration is the Junior Liberty County Citizenship Council. They hope to open up six citizenship schools in September.

Unfortunately, Liberty County seems to have a dearth of Negro adults who should be active in voter registration. Beverly mentioned only one person, Earl Boggs, who is [redacted] "scared" but is a potential leader. He receives his mail at Route 1, and his phone number is 884-5845.

Beverly showed from her records how her group canvassed 479 families Monday. Their group has the use of one car. She says she needs more money for gas and oil. They have been existing on contributions, and of this to date, they have spent about $25. Some of their contributions come from anonymous Negro donors in Riceboro.

Beverly seems optimistic about her program succeeding, especially when school begins. She feels that when the youths collect, she can organize them to assist her. I asked her whether Hosea had sent her any money and she said no. She also said no when I asked her whether Hosea had asked her to send him any receipts for her expenses.

Thursday - McIntosh County

When we arrived in Darien, it was 6 p.m., about two hours behind my time schedule, but it was allright anyway because after calling Chester Devillas, he, too, had just arrived. Strangelock and I were quite surprised to see Mr. Devillas was a high school teacher. We waited for him to finish his supper, and then we were doubly surprised that Mr. Devillas serves on the Board of Registrars.

He indicated to us that there is no problem of registration. He stated that since he has been Principal of Todd High School, he has demanded that each student, if 18, must register before graduating. Also, he stated that the Senior Class and his teachers, along with the PTA, carry on a voter registration program. Consequently, he said, there are more Negroes registered than white persons. All and all, he believes that about 1,765 Negroes are registered in the county.

He said that the books are opened once a month, every second Saturday, between the hours of 9 and 5. This is the time one must register and answer five questions. When an applicant cannot read or write, he can designate a person to help him. Although an applicant can appear before the Board of Registrars only once a month, a person can apply any weekday before 5 p.m. with the Tax Collector.

I asked him how Mr. Williams has him listed as a county leader. Mr. Devillas stated that he was surprised also. He had not attended any congressional level meetings nor had otherwide been involved with the SECV. He did say that Hosea's office did inquire for some statistical information about the county, and he responded. This was the only communication he has had with Hosea.

After a while, after feeling him out, we quickly understood that he does have a position with the white community, although still related to the Southern tradition, and he did not want to do anything which would compromise his position. He was equivocal to the direct question, "Would you direct a voter registration program among Negroes?" He did say that he would give all the support he could indirectly and he invited Strangelock to speak to the School Assembly when school begins Monday, August 31. This was about as much as could be asked for! Strangelock then took a registration kit designated for the county and explained it so that if a local person could be found to lead the registration, Mr. Devillas could explain it to him. There was one person Devillas suggested, Mr. Leon Rogers, and his phone number is 437-4618.

Thursday - Wheeler County

We then left Darien driving into the setting sun, going in a northeasterly direction. We drove into Glynwood, made a phone call, and found that Mr. B. R. Williams had left for a Masonic Meeting in Alamo at the "Old Negro School." He had waited for us until 9 p.m.

We found the Old Negro School, a victim of school consolidation, Negro school consolidation, that is. It was just off a near washed-out but dried-out dirt road. The moon was not out, and nothing showed that people were present except for cars, including new Lincolns and Cadillacs, and trucks being parked around. I kept the car lights on, and soon a Negro, presumbably wearing the Masonic costume, came and cheerfully asked if he could help us. Strangelock reminded me later that he was the guard in that he was carrying a long saber. After what I thought was a long while and many mosquito bites, Mr. Williams, the Wheeler County Leader, came.

I learned from him that he was just elected the president of the Wheeler County-Wide Club. His address is P.O. Box 367, and phone number is 3-2651. I found that he had not attended the district-wide meeting held by Hosea, and that he did not know that the SECV was in the position to assist his group in voter registration. He welcomed such support and would appreciate it if Strangelock would come and assist him. Strangelock promised to come on the next meeting night if transportation was available. He also explained the SCLC kit to Mr. Williams. Williams is a "contractor" (carpenter, etc.) and works most of the daylight hours. I conclude that a full-time worker is needed in the county in order to get the community started.

Tattnall and Evans Counties - Midnight (Thursday)

Mr. Norwood was expecting us and was ready to show records and statistical information which he was going to send to Hosea. Trusting that Hosea was going to send VEP (Atlanta) the information, I cared not to copy anything. He carries on a direct constant relationship with Hosea and constantly brought up Fred Bennett. I realized that Norwood, being president of the local "Christian League," was operating an SCLC affiliate. Therefore, there was no worry as to his county receiving SECV VEP funds. I was contented to show the VEP flag and leave, allowing Strangelock to drive back to Savannah. (Mr. Norwood had no complaints.)

Scriven County - Friday A.M.

Friday Morning, I drove to the home of Ben Clark, picked him up, took him to the SECV office, received from Ben more SCLC kits which Hosea wanted me to distribute to the counties, and took off towards Atlanta. But first, I wanted to visit ~~two~~ the county leaders one in Newington and others in Sylvania--Scrivens County and Burke County.

As Wheeler County seemed to be full of Williams, so does Scriven County seem to be full of the Thomases. The Thomas I was looking for and finally found is J. W. H. Thomas, who lives east from Newington, turning right at the first road before the radio tower. Then you go for a mile down the county road and ask anyone where the Thomases live. His address is Rt. 1, Box 121, or South Elementary School.

He said that he personally had been taking Negroes down town to register but not recently. He had not attended any district-wide meetings of the SECV, nor has he or any other persons or organizations been working in voter registration in Newington. He indicated that he had no time to direct a voter registration drive, but he gave me the names of persons who would be interested in voter registration as follows:

Wilbert Maynor (a former County Agent)
Phone: 564-2414

Mr. E. Blampkin (Present County Agent)
Rt. 4, Box 238
Sylvania (near Oliver)
857-4782

Rev. A. L. Thomas
1009 S. Main St.
Sylvania, Ga.
564-7987

J. S. Morgan
Oliver, Ga.
857-4720

Mr. Thomas assured me that the above named persons would be interested in directing a voter registration drive in Scriven County. He suggested, however, if I saw Rev. Thomas, (his brother), be sure to see also Mr. Blampkin, and vice-versa. Both of them are leaders of opposing factions, or cliques, resulting from Mr. Blampkin's charge that the existing civic group in Screvens is not doing anything, etc.

It was after mid-day when I arrived in Sylvania. I was not able to reach Rev. Thomas of Sylvania, but was able to find Mr. Blampkin at the consolidated Negro school. He was quite glad to see me, as he was quite interested in a voter registration effort in his county. When I arrived at the school, I noticed SCLC stickers Register to vote on his car, and he had some SCLC literature and voter registration aids.

Both from him and Mr. Thomas of Newington, I learned that the registrar is easy on Negro applicants, although tending to be "snobbish." Beginning four years ago, however, he began to refuse to register illiterates.

Mr. Blampkin told me that the local group which would carry on the registration drive is the Sylvania-Scriven County Progressive Council. (This is the group mentioned earlier by Mr. Thomas of Newington.) Mr. Blampkin indicated that last week, he registered 15 people. He said that the voters lists are available, which show that 3,530 whites are registered, and 863 Negroes are registered. Both figures seemed to be low. Sylvania seemed to be a fairly large town of 5,000 to 10,000. (Constitution of the group attached)

Mr. Blampkin indicated that he desired to attend the district-wide meeting, but was unable to. He said that he and Scriven County would appreciate any assistance SECV could give.

Burke County - Friday P.M.

Rev. Robinson met me at Mrs. Evans' home in Waynesboro. He had been in the rural areas of the county, and that was the reason I was not able to contact him the day before. He is president of the Burke County Civic Group. He had attended the district-wide meeting which had been held on Saturday before the 3rd Sunday in July (18th). They have received no VEP funds nor have they turned in receipts, but at the moment, they seem to be a self-operating almost self-sufficient group. They have raised almost $1,000 from $.25 membership fees and donations. He has 14 workers who are paid $4.00 a day or $.07 a mile. To be paid, workers must submit a report indicating who they canvassed or who they brought down to the registrar's office. He said that VEP funds will not be made in surveying, (or canvassing), only in the actual registration.

The registrar's office is opened Monday through Saturday where one can apply, and then he receives a card telling him to appear before the Board of Registrars to take the test. Then Robinson told me that he heard of no one being turned down. He showed me the copy of the local newspaper and the editorial which spoke of the dangers of "block voting," and then indicated the 20 questions that have to be answered correctly in order to pass. I agreed with Robinson that this was to intimidate Negroes from registering. I told Robinson that Georgia has a new registration law whereby only five questions are to be administered, and that he should find out whether the registrar is to administer the old law or the new law. He then immediately phoned the registrar's office, found out where he was, and left to see him. About a half an hour later, Robinson returned and told me that the registrar, H. D. Stone, assured him that the newspaper should be disregarded because he, as registrar, is going to abide by the law of Georgia and the United States and administer only five questions.

Rev. Robinson had "in the rough" statistical information showing that 5,000 Negroes are registered, that 200 on the average are registered per week. He hopes to double this 5,000 figure by September 15.

CONCLUSION

It was quite noticeable the difference between the SNCC VEP registration in Southwest Georgia and the SCLC voter registration in Southeast Georgia. The SE Georgia SCLC VEP registration depends upon the figure of one personality, Hosea Williams. He makes, decides, and executes policies and decisions. Ben Clark administers these decisions. This is a very effective team in Savannah, but in Savannah and not in the remainder of the SECV region. Savannah Crusade for Voters is effectively organized down to block workers and street campaigns, and on a horizontal basis as regards to program. But the SECV seems to be no more than a treasury or a payment agency, and a poor one at that. SECV has insufficient contact and communication with its counties who are allowed to operate independently. Most of them are not able to operate a voter registration drive or make financial reports. Liberty County is operating a voter registration drive but needs desperately SECV financial assistance. One county, Burke, is independent, knows what to do, and may not need SECV assistance. But, as a whole, because SECV depends upon the one-personality figure, Hosea, at the time of the trip, had not allowed any of his staff to serve the counties. He seems afraid to delegate responsibility or to allow any of his staff workers to exercise discretion. He wants to control and operate everything, and because he is only human, he can operate effectively only in Savannah.

Whereas SW Georgia and the SNCC operation is the opposite. Their operation is a staff operation with each person responsible for himself for individual decisions. Or if two or more are working the county, they decide among themselves, but decisions are voluntary decisions which exist at the will of each person. If two or more SNCC workers are working a county, no one had been designated as coordinator, director, or the one in charge from Albany. Therefore, Don Harris can be in Mississippi, or a fugitive from Georgia justice, and the SNCC operation can go on without a miss in the motor. If Hosea and Ben Clark go to jail, their whole project would collapse. Here in SW Georgia, the effort is spread throughout the counties with no effort concentrated in the county where the office is situated, Albany. It is the coordinating office only. Effort is concentrated in Savannah but the office there does no real coordinating. Yet, the Albany office allows so much discretion in the staff that the office, too, has insufficient information about what is going on in the counties. I was not able to find the SNCC workers in Tifton, and Joyce Barrett, when I told her about this a week later, was surprised and did not know where they were.

Re: Field Trip Throughout Florida, September 1 - September 4, 1964

On August 28, WAB decided that we should investigate VEP activities in the state of Florida, being particularly interested in the NAACP program in Miami but not interested in the Sunshine Coast Areas such as Tampa, St. Petersburg, etc. In Miami, VEP had given a grant of $4,000.

Lake City - September 1

I arrived in Lake City where there had been "riots" early in July right after the passage of the Civil Rights Law. Lake City is the county seat of Columbia County and the apex of two national interstate highway systems. In a state of "small cities," Lake City can be categorized as a medium-sized town which is moving. People seem to be moving faster there.

I had called Mr. Patton earlier and he gave me the name of the person who he is working through in Lake City, a Mr. David Jenkins. Jenkins is a young unmarried school teacher who teaches in the adjoining county of Union. He is popular with the local youth and is an advisor to the local NAACP Youth Council which is without a parent body. His address is 1068 Jefferson, phone number: FR 2-6333. Upon entering his home, five or six young people where about, some, later I learned, were canvassers or block workers there to report. One was a former Florida A & M University student who had been active in CORE in Tallahassee.

After I introduced myself, and my purpose there, Mr. Jenkins called a Mr. Powell who was a G.S.5 at the local VA Hospital and who was a hard worker in the youth NAACP activities. We then discussed voter registration. Voter registration is a new project which they have assumed. They have completed a massive testing program, with cases now resting in the Federal Courts, and now have just finished in enrolling a Negro at the formerly all white Lake City Junior College. The latter took the energies of Mr. Powell and Mr. Jenkins. So, voter registration had just begun as a project. They have the local NAACP youth broken down as canvassers and block workers. From among the adults of the community, they were able to organize the Car Pool and to hire a coordinator, a young housewife by the name of Mrs. Carolyn Aaron, at the salary of $25 monthly.

Figures were produced which show that only 2,309 Negroes were registered, which seemed to me to be only about 20% of the maximum. Their goal is 3,000 more voters, which is conservative.

Their immediate task is to attempt to get the "books" into the neighborhoods. In many places in Florida, it is practiced that deputy registrars will register voters in their precincts, etc. Jenkins discussed with me his problems in getting the books into the "Negro" neighborhoods. Jenkins said that he asked the Registrar, Mr. Greene and he replied that this is done only by the request of the local Chamber of Commerce or a "white" organization. Jenkins said that he had learned that the books had been, in the past, moved to "white" areas, and Greene, the registrar, told him to check with the Chamber of Commerce. He told me that he became quite angry with the registrar, suggesting to him that he was discriminating against Negroes. Anyway, Jenkins said that he did check with the Chamber of Commerce who responded with, "We don't plan to take the books into the neighborhoods." Jenkins said then that he is to see the registrar.

This was their second week of operation, but the number of people they registered was not available.

It is hard to predict whether the local project will reach its goal of 3,000 new voters, but odds seem to be against it. It is a common belief that the white community is organized as a "Democrats of Goldwater" area. Mallory Horne, the Speaker of the Florida House of Representatives, is a power and is the chairman of the movement.

Because spring levels of people registered in North Florida were able to defeat a liberal candidate for Governor in the primaries, their effort seems to be not to increase any registration, therefore, keeping Negro participation in registration at a low level. It seems that the local group of the Youth NAACP has the spirit and zeal, but it remains to be proved that they have the endurance in an effort without excitement and unlike "testing." It remains to be proved that the youth group will be able to stimulate the Negro community to organize through its adults who the youths do not have today as a support.

At present, Jenkins had not received any funds from Patton in which their coordinator can be made. He was to call Patton about this, and also about whether they can expand into Union County, the twin county to Columbia County, where a low percentage of Negroes are registered. I gave him the VEP address and phone number and suggested that he call or write if he has problems, or whether we could assist him.

Gainesville - Wednesday A.M.

Gainesville, Florida is the home of the University of Florida. The University has no real forces to compete with it, with the consequence that it is the dominant force in the community, thereby moderating what would otherwise be a segregationist North Florida area. The University has been a force which has contributed to an enlightened city and county government and peaceful desegregation of most places of public accommodation. The University has had no policy of punishing faculty and students who have been demonstrating in civil rights movements, to the consequence that intra-rivalry between groups, an unaffiliated chapter of CORE and University of Florida Movement for Civil Rights. Students and faculty members have also integrated the local NAACP and Youth Council, but have not vied with Negroes for leadership of the latter group. They just do almost all the work.

When I arrived in Gainesville, it was registration day at the University of Florida. Consequently, no voter registration work was apparent. I was able to easily find Rev. Wright, the president of the local NAACP. His address is 503 N.W. 4th St., and phone number is FR 6-6516. (Wright is Patton's worker.)

When I came upon him, he was reading. I introduced myself, was warmly received, and I spoke of my purpose. I learned from him that Hugh Love was still in town. Wright said that 60 persons were registered Monday through him, Love, and another person. The effort was casual, just picking up Negroes off porches or sidewalks while they were loitering or standing around. Wright said that for the remainder of the week, the groups that were working with him will finish canvassing the town, and next week they will assist him in the nearby towns.

I had discussed Gainesville with CORE's Judith Benninger over the last few months at her home, and she told me that the city of Gainesville should be close to 60% of the Negro potential, she being able to speak on this subject because of being active in voter registration in Gainesville with the Women's League for Voters and the other groups. She felt that the need is to get out into the county because a great portion of the Negroes live in the county and are not registered.

I asked Wright about whether more unregistered Negroes are outside of the city. He, too, had the same opinion as Judy. It is for this reason that he plans to begin canvassing in the nearby areas in the county, Hawthorne, Alachua, and High Springs. He has no full-time workers but he has the support of Youth NAACP, the adult branch, and the "Voters League."

For picking up people, he claims he has a "pool" of 10 cars, including his own. (But the day I was there, people scheduled to be picked up were not being picked up by any car pool or even Rev. Wright who was otherwise busy.)

It was interesting to learn from him that Dr. Andrews ran for one of the offices of City Commissioner and lost only by 40 votes.

Wright said that the local registrar, Mrs. Barthe, has been quite cooperative in allowing the books to go into the Negro areas and appointing Negro deputy registrars. However, the heat is on her office resulting from the accusation that people have been improperly registered. Consequently, she is not appointing any "Negro" deputies, nor any for that matter because the Commission has not furnished any compensation for white registrars. (Negro deputies have worked on a voluntary basis.)

I then found Hugh Love. Six precincts have been scheduled to be worked, three already completed and three to be finished this week. He spoke highly of a Mr. Cambridge, a postal employee, who has been a fanatic about voter registration over the past several years. Both Love and Wright feel that the man could be no coordinator or director, but rather, is nothing but a hard worker. An example is that he has registered 300 persons himself.

It seems that Gainesville has a probably substantial structure for a voter registration effort but depends too much upon the undeliberate effort of Rev. Wright who has other roles to play in that he has a large church. It also depends, it seems, too much upon the insecure effort of voluntary groups. Voter registration is not exciting in moderate Gainesville, nor was I able to see during my short stay that the liberals from the University had assumed Negro voter registration as a Cause Celebre. Rev. Wright is sensitive in bias towards the name of the NAACP which may be unjustified if dependent upon physical participation of other groups and associations. I know that two years ago, there was disunity between the NAACP Youth Council and the Adult Branch. The main participants still remain, the fact of which may complicate a united and full effort in voter registration. It is too bad Hugh Love left with me because they need a full-time worker, innocent of past arguments and conflicts.

Ocala - Wednesday P.M.

Hugh Love decided that he would accompany me as far as Ft. Pierce, which I appreciated. Before leaving Gainesville, I called Rev. Pinkston, President of Ocala NAACP and a friend of Patricia and mine. I learned that they were kicking off their drive Thursday Night at a mass meeting at Broadway Baptist Church, and they asked if I would be the main speaker. I consented and said that I would discuss voter registration with their people then.

Orlando - Wednesday P.M.

Here, I met the dynamic Mrs. Mabel Richardson, 39 N. Parramore, in and next to the Central Life Insurance Building, which I believe her husband is an agent of. She is chairlady of the Political Action Committee of the NAACP, and the name of the group carrying on the voter registration in a separate financial reporting identity is the NAACP Crusade for Voters. She is biased in favor of the NAACP cheerfully, "NAACP" being in a word in every sentence, which is justifiable because it is the only real group, and depends upon no other group except the local Florida Voters League which has been absorbed into the NAACP Crusade for Voters.

She has the League, regular NAACP and youth support and has a register of 176 volunteer workers from these groups and the community assuming leadership positions as precinct workers and as block workers.

She stated that the CRUSADE organized during the week of August 3, and beginning August 10 began intensive canvassing. Up to date, she has registered 300 persons. She begged me to participate in a "Demonstration" beginning Thursday. I jokingly stated that VEP cannot support demonstrations like those in Rochelle, N. Y. and Harlem. She said that for September, she has planned "Task Force Demonstrations" to last throughout the month.

As it was explained by her, it seemed that the Task Force will be like a Russian Assault--use of massive forces in a small area. All of her forces Thursday will assault a precinct and mop up all the unregistered in all all day attack, lasting until 9 P.M. This technique will be used until all the Negro precincts are secure, and then hop into the surrounding towns, mopping up all the islands of unregistered Negro voters. I told her that VEP approves of this kind of demonstration.

She stated that she is the only paid worker other than the secretary. But he discussion of this, she wanted low. Officials of the local NAACP were in the adjoing office and she did not want them to know that Patton was paying her. It seemed that she did not want them to know that she could be independent of them and their control, and that she is in fact responsible to Mr. Patton rather than to the local chapter. Her pay is $40 weekly and the pay of the secretary is $25 weekly.

I asked her whether the registrar has called a "moratorium" on her type of demonstrations, and she said that there is cooperation to a great degree, although books are not in the neighborhood nor does the registrar give them weekly breakdowns as was done previously. But the books are open every day, until 9 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, and until 12 N on Saturday and this continues until October 3.

It seems that the effort there in Orlando is a purely NAACP effort. Other than those already named, no other civic clubs and groups have given their support. Mrs. Richardson said that of 79 letters she mailed seeking assistance, there were only two replies.

Winterhaven - Wednesday P.M.

It is the time of year that Monsoonic rains occur every late afternoon and Wednesday was no exception, the rain being so heavy that it appeared unsafe to continue to drive. But with the dusk, the rain ceased and it was at dusk when we drove into Winterhaven and waited for Mrs. Althea Hill. She is Patton's VEP local worker. Her VEP address is 1900 N. 1st Drive, and phone is CY 4-4816 (or CY 4-1816?), and her home address, where she is staying with her mother, is CY 3-3987.

She is also working part-time as an insurance agent, and it was from this capacity that we awaited her. She said that she registered 162 persons the previous week, assisted by 30 members of the NAACP Youth Council. She said that her main problem around Winterhaven has been the fact that there are a great many migratory workers who have not satisfied the residence requirement. There had been no arrests in connection with voter registration, even in testing the new Civil Rights Bill.

She stated that she is seeking to extend her activities into Bartow and Lakeland, and is quite disappointed in the apathy, disunity, and lack of motivation to vote. She has found that the Adult Chapter of the NAACP is weak and the Youth Council has disbanded in Lakeland. She feels that the group to work through in Lakeland is the Ministerial Alliance.

She understands how the Florida communities are "community conscious" which tend to resent more the "outsiders" from another community although they can be from the same county than outsiders from outside the state. She is proceeding carefully and is waiting until she can see the president of the Lakeland Ministerial Alliance, work through him and have him name a person who she can suggest to Patton to hire in Lakeland.

I was impressed with Mrs. Hill, a powerful woman, powerful in the sense as Mrs. Constance Motley of the NAACP is. If local groups are weak, she seems to be the strong individual and personality who can take their place to lead a voter registration activity.

Ft. Pierce - Wednesday Night

The rain assumed and we drove into the rain, but just as suddenly, the rain ceased when we drove into Ft. Pierce.

It was 10 p.m. I hardly believed Hugh Love that I would be able to speak to some about voter registration, it being so late. Soon we were at 1530 Avenue D, the address of the Crusade for Voters of St. Lucie County office, constituting a small wooden-framed building. Inside was the chairman, Leroy Bennett, busy under a naked light registering two Negro women.

This was the NAACP project in Florida that Hugh was proud of. A total of 315 persons had been registered during the week. Bennett is by profession an architect and as such is employed by the city. He is also a member of the Florida Voters League. He invited me to attend the Statewide Convention of the Florida Voters League which is to be held in Miami on September 26-27.

I learned that the director of the project is Mr. Verdell Floyd. Bennett's phone number is 461-5461 and Floyd's phone number is 464-0908, the latter's residence being 1002 N. 25th St. Floyd is paid $25 a week and his secretary receives $25 a week. Bennett also told me that the project is starting into its second week and is getting a good effort out of at least 26 workers. While I was there, two of the, young ladies and school teachers, entered the office with their canvassing reports.

Mr. Bennett had a large blown-up map of St. Lucie County with the appropriate pins, etc. He explained how the county was broken down into 26 areas. Each area is assigned to one of the 26 workers who canvass, bring the unregistered persons to register, and report to the director. They are registered here at the CVSLC office, although they can also go downtown.

The convenience of the CVSLC office is that it is open late, past 10 p.m. (I was there after 11 p.m. and people were still coming.) It is also open on both Saturday and Sunday, (but must be post-dated or pre-dated to comply with Florida Law). Also, each worker is responsible in procuring his assistants.

They seem to be satisfied with the cooperation which they have received from the official registrar. Bennett said that they have received such cooperation because they (the Negroes) got him elected.

I left the CVSLC office, Bennett and Love in Ft. Pierce. I could well understand Love's enthusiasm about the program there and why he was glad to be part of an ongoing success, but I was concerned that he might be needed where NAACP-VEP programs were not such a success.

Miami - Thursday A.M.

It was a sun-bright day in the 90's in Miami still showing the kiss of "Cleo." I called Mrs. Myer Range and an appointment was made for Noon. I then decided to see Mr. Al Moore, President of Miami CORE. He is also representative of Central Life Insurance for South Florida. I had learned in Atlanta that NAACP, CORE, and the Urban League were working in a joint effort in Miami. The NAACP was receiving VEP assistance and I had learned that the NUL was giving assistance to the local UL. I knew that National CORE was not contributing to the local CORE group. I then decided that Moore, being a community leader, could explain to me what was going on which I could weigh against Mrs. Range who was directing the NAACP-VEP effort.

When I arrived at the office of Mr. Moore, I saw that rooms were being used as a registration sub-station. As soon as I entered, a secretary asked me, "Have you come to register?" I introduced myself and said that I came to talk about registration. I was told that Moore was due to return; so, I went into the big room where registration was being conducted.

Mmes. Stephens and Hall were friendly but were reluctant to talk to me, saying I had to talk to Mr. Moore first. On all my field trips, I finally met someone who was suspicious as to who I was. But I did learn something from Mrs. Stephens. The group she is affiliated with is the "BIG VOTE," the chairman of which being Mr. Charles Hadley, who is an elected Constable in Dade County and is active in local politics. She claimed that "Big Vote" was formerly the "Crusade for Voters" (1960). I asked her whether Weldon Rougeau worked through this group, the Crusade for Voters, and she replied no. She then asserted that WR worked only with CORE. I knew the latter information was not true.

She said that the deputy registrars and their clerks are employed by the county, and that sub-stations are set up in every precinct and are open every day until 9 p.m. She then stated that the rest of the workers, the canvassers and the ones bringing people to the sub-stations are volunteers. I observed her persuade people that they wre "Democrats" for registration purposes, and then I left because it was about noon and almost time for my appointment with Mrs. Range.

Mrs. Range owns a large funeral home which she directs, assisted by a son in his early 20's. While waiting for a seemingly long time, I was called into her office. I introduced myself and explained my purpose. She told me that she is the chairlady of the Crusade for Voters and reports to Mr. Patton of the NAACP. She has two coordinators, Mr. Milton Hardreck who is paid $50 a week and works out of St. John Baptist Church at 1328 N.W. 3rd Ave, and Mr. Sam Hutchinson, who Love says is a friend of Patton. Hutchinson works out of his real estate office. The organization is also broken down into 13 areas with area captains, and under them are precinct captains. She said that two areas have been worked and they are moving into the other areas. She said that Hurricane Cleo cut down registration completely for two days and has had an effect for a week. Consequently, she is going to see that the county have the books remain in the neighborhoods for another week. I learned that three registration sub-stations are at the regular polling stations (76) plus an additional 10 places manned by their CV volunteers.

I asked her how many people have been registered and she estimated only about 6,000 so far. After the books close on October 3 or when neighborhood registration ends, (It was scheduled to end September 5.) she plans to have the CV embark on an educational program to explain the use of voting machines and to teach them whether they are "Democrats" or "Republicans," etc. She said that she needed more materials and money. She was to call Patton about this that day, and also about getting assistance if the books are allowed to remain in the areas.

I asked her how the Crusade for Voters originated. She said that people of goodwill got together informally in June and determined that they were going to carry on Negro voter registration. They established a budget and then were concerned about fund raising and were met by the specter of being overly busy in raising funds rather than in voter registration until Mr. Patton came. He agreed that his office would assist them financially. The civil rights groups, CORE, NAACP, and the UL came to the big meeting in July and each chose an area.

I asked her about canvassing, and she stated that this was done through the SNCC workers, white and colored mixed groups, and the youth groups of the NAACP. I then took my leave planning to see the two coordinators at work.

When I went to Hutchinson's office, he went immediately on the defensive, explaining why he was not doing anything. In a back room, he did have tables set up with typewriters, and his wife was there. He stated that $40 or $50 per week that he is receiving is certainly no "salary," not for him for this is about what he pays his secretary. He said that he helped organize the Dade County Democratic Organization and that he is also an elected precinct committeeman, and also a volunteer deputy registrar.

It was now 2 p.m. Rather than be late for my speaking engagement in Ocala, or see activities in Riviera Beach, I decided to forego trying to meet with Mr. Milton Hardreck and leave Miami. (See supplementary report on Miami as per phone conversation.)

I left Miami satisfied that voter registration was being carried on. Mrs. Range seemed to be a sincere business woman with little tolerance for foolishness. But, too, I feld that she treated me like an "outsider" to a degree. (Did she tell all!) Mr. Hardreck seemed to be held responsible to her more so than Mr. Hutchinson. She had to forego her business to be involved in the minutiae of the program, and this made me uncomfortable. I did not feel right in leaving Miami feeling that I did not have all the information. Yet, I did not feel I could learn all in two days.

Riviera Beach - Thursday P.M.

I had discussed my trip schedule with Hugh Love and he told me that Broward County's books were closed, and the county included Pompano Beach and Ft. Lauderdale communities. I therefore decided not to visit communities but rather see Riviera Beach before going to Ocala. It is a community of West Palm Beach in Palm Beach County.

The NAACP-VEP worker here is Mrs. M. L. Jones. Her address is 849 George St., and her phone number is 844-7887. This is a project I would imagine Mr. Patton is proud of like Ft. Pierce. Mrs. Jones is a housewife, otherwise unemployed, with only school-age children. She invited me to attend a rally in the Glades, (a community in Palm Beach County). Mass meetings and rallies are an important indispensable method for her, for she has 24 deputy registrars who are volunteers to come to these mass meetings and register Negroes right there. They also come to the homes of the unregistered.

She does not work through any organization and it seems that it is not necessary for registration purposes. She does not seem to be concerned about "canvassing" because she has registration and voters lists by street. So, it is easy to know who is not registered without canvassing. She stated that 500 were registered last week; her goal is 2500 and she says that she is only 300 away. She is working all the areas in Palm Beach County and has deputy registrars from each. They have been working out of a cash box of $50. The only fund she wants is $17.31 to pay for workers' gas and oil.

Registration in Palm Beach County seemed to be quite easy with door-to-door registration (rather than door-to-door canvassing). The only thing that is needed now is to make it a misdemeanor for failure to register to vote. With that thought, I left towards Ocala and Marion County where it is almost a crime to register.

Ocala (Marion County) - Thursday P.M.
I arrived in Ocala at 7:30 p.m., a half hour before the time of the mass meeting and the time for me to speak.

Voter registration in Ocala could not be discussed without discussing the Civil Rights Movement in Ocala. The community is as tight and as effected as St. Augustine or Savannah, but probably without the national publicity, and therefore, it should be discussed because of my firsthand knowledge.

The demonstrations in Tallahassee in late Spring, 1963, taxed my time, (I was studying for the Florida Bar--I was not yet a member of VEP), and my wife's time, (She was chairlady of Tallahassee CORE and was trying to prepare for her exams). National CORE sent to us Zev Aelony who had been in Americus. Later in June, he went down to Marion County to observe Dunnellon CORE conduct a picketing line. He was immediately arrested and taken to the Marion County Jail in Ocala and beaten by two other white prisoners in the presence of a deputy sheriff.

My wife and Ruben Keenon immediately went to Ocala to see Zev. Rev. E. G. Pinkston had just recently graduated from Divinity School and had organized an NAACP Youth Council. The 60 members went with Patricia and Keenon and were immediately arrested. It was two weeks before they were released. The arrests of the youth of Ocala killed the apathy of the community and sparked a massive civil rights movement with complete unity.

As in St. Augustine, this late Spring and Summer, there were mass meetings with overflowing crowds. So much money was collected that I know that Ocala was the main support for R. B. Hayling in St. Augustine before his movement became an affiliate of SCLC. (I was counsel in the Fall of 1963)

Also, after the massive arrests, the Youth Council of the NAACP began two programs, employment and voter registration. About this time, white students of goodwill from the University of Florida in Gainesville came to give support and assistance--Gainesville being only 35 miles away from Ocala. One of these students was Judith Benninger who stayed in Ocala all Summer and who helped in voter registration efforts and wrote a mimeographed newsletter. She later worked for CORE-VEP in Leon and Gadsden Counties during Spring, 1964.

When I arrived in Ocala at the church to speak at the mass meeting which was an institution in Ocala, my ego was massaged, knowing that I was following the personalities of Martin Luther King, Jr., Rev. Fred Shuttleworth, and recently, Jackie Robinson. But when time came for me to speak, the turnout was poor. Rev. Pinston said that this was due to the changes in the days of the week. I hope that was the reason.

My talk was a short history of the Civil Rights Movement 1954-1960 and the birth of the Voter Education Project. I then brought everything up to date concerning national issues, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party, and ended with a point about the Northern Riots and James Bevel's statement, "I come here not to tell you not to fight, I come here to tell you how to fight well."

While I was in Ocala, I learned that Mr. Riley Preston is president of the Marion County Voters League and I met him. The young activist in the NAACP Youth Council is Mr. Marcellius Gaines, his address is 1654 S.W. 2nd St., and his phone number is 622-6172. National NAACP, CORE, SCLC, SNCC, and for that matter also VEP should watch him. He is both a good organizer and has that quality of charisma that moves masses of people. He would make a good field worker.

The drive begins Saturday. There are two coordinators, Mr. Eugene Poole who is responsible to Mr. Patton, and a special director, Mr. Leon Miller. The office is to be in the Greater Hopewell Baptist Church, near the corner of Chestnut and Van Buren.

They have organized an effective and successful boycott (selective buting campaign) and registration program in the past, increasing registration of Negroes from 3000 to 6000 (so stated Mr. Poole), and could still double the figure. There is a big billboard picture of Mr. Goldwater on a tall building saying, "Deep in your heart, you know that he is right." This may be certainly the image which is uniting the community for voter registration.

St. Augustine - Friday P.M.

Driving into St. Augustine from the southwest through Union County, I remembered how last June it would have been most foolhardy to take a state road through this Klan territory. Although then, U.S. 1 was not safe, several friends having been stopped and assaulted.

I renewed acquaintances and finally was able to catch Fred Martin, the SCLC-VEP Director in voter registration. His address in St. Augustine is 64 Washington St., and phone number is 829-6406. He feels that there is an easy potential of 4000 new Negro registrants. Upon reflection, (Most of these unregistered are in the county.) I know that this is correct. Miss Patricia Neely, then of the St. Augustine NAACP Youth Council, dis such a good job in voter registration that Mr. Patton hired her to direct the registration effort in Ft. Lauderdale.

Mr. Fred Martin, in order to get to the unregistered Negroes, states that he needs more cars. He has only one assistant, Funderbick, a Negro youth from St. Augustine, who receives $25 a week plus $.05 a mile for the use of his private car. Miss Plummer, the secretary for SCLC, mans the office.

On Saturday, he is planning to use 12 Negro students from Florida Normal and 12 others to hit one precinct where 2000 Negroes are unregistered. The Negro Quarterback Club is going to furnish cars. He had only begun organizing this week. He had already prepared research. He had large blownup maps of both the city and the county with precincts marked off, indicating the number of Negroes and whites.

Martin says that his main problem is getting enough permanent workers who would work. He claims that he needs five cars full-time that could be paid $.15 a mile, and workers who would be paid according to people the register, such as $.50 a head.

It seems that the project in St. Augustine could be a success if there were more financial investment or material investment because the unregistered Negroes do amount to about 13,000 (claims Martin). With so little capitalization because of needs, there may well be a loss rather than any profit. Since September, he has registered only 20.

Jacksonville - Friday P.M.

Jacksonville, of all the towns in Florida, was most disappointing to me. Mr. Hugh Love stated that he was coming to Jacksonville Saturday. I hope that he does after what I saw Friday when I arrived. I talked to Mr. Torrence.

Mr. Herbert Torrence is the NAACP-VEP Director. His address is 411½ Broad Street, and is chairman of the Crusade for Voters. He is paid by Mr. Patton at the rate of $25 per week, but he does not work full time. He spends his time there and at his cleaners. NAACP-VEP has a beautiful office with a secretary by the name of Loretta Oliver. But in four weeks of registration, only 300 Negroes did they claim they registered. They have no organization broken down into precinct workers and block workers. They do have a voters list which can assist them, but it is not broken down into streets.

The registrar in the past had placed the registration books into the neighborhoods, but the registrar will not this time, the County Commission claiming that response was poor, said Mr. Torrence.

The checks are mailed from Memphis, and they have in their kitty $150 allocated and have received $100. Mr. Torrence said that canvassing is to be done by the Youth Council. He went to their meeting and asked for some volunteers to commit themselves and several did. This is to begin Saturday.

I also talked to Prince McIntosh. He was returning to Florida A & M after being suspended because of CORE activities in 1963. During the past year, he had acted as Public Relations Director for Jacksonville

NAACP. He seems to feel that Mr. Torrence is a hard worker but a poor organizer. It was Mr. Patton who appointed him, and Torrence is sincere. But when I was there, the effort was poorly organized.

Mr. Torrence claims that the Negro does not have an issue to organize behind like in the past, such as Sit-Ins. His goal is 7000, but with 400 new registrants in four weeks, it will do well if he attains a tenth of that number. The potential in Jacksonville justifies a greater effort there.

(Phone calls to Miami)
Wednesday and Friday, September 9 and 11, I have been concerned about Miami. When I was there, I was not able to talk to anyone of CORE who I thought was important because it and its leaders, Mr. Almoore, the President, and Mr. John Brown are viable forces in that community. Brown is also an executive on the Miami Community Relations Board.

I talked to two persons, an ordinary worker member, Miss Dorothy Pierson, Almoore, and Dr. John Brown. It seems that last July when the Crusade for Voters called the meeting in July, CORE attended. It was determined that each group would choose an area or section. CORE chose the area which could be described as "Downtown Negro Miami." This area runs from N.W. 4th St. to 28th St., and from 7th Avenue to the ever present railroad. They claim that their 28-30 reliable active members have registered 3400 new Negro registrants, bringing the people on foot and in cars; and that in this area, no other effort has been made. They do not know whether any effort is presently being made by any other group. They like Mrs. Range and Father Gibson, but Mrs. Range has not been able to direct it as she should and Father Gibson lacks follow-through. They claim that Mr. Milton Hardreck is a "shyster" along with Mr. Sam Hutchinson, and that they know that money has come into Miami which has attracted their likes. Mr. Moore claims that Miami CORE has done the work but is not getting any of their expenses paid, such as gasoline, etc. He claims that CORE could double the 3000 figure if their workers could be compensated, such as $10 or $15 a week which would really just pay their expenses.

I also called SNCC's office to find out whether they have any workers down in Miami. They said that if there are any, they are not suppose to be down there. Mrs. Range's "SNCC" workers, therefore, must be just CORE members with SNCC buttons or students home from the Mississippi Summer Project.

Re: Field Trip to Fort Valley, Georgia - September 11, 1964

On Friday, it was desired that I would leave with my car to go to Jones County to see Rev. Charles Wells, to Bibbs County to see Bill Randall, and to Peach County to see Mr. Appling.

Car Problem: It being afternoon when I left the office, I determined to first have the automobile greased and oiled. Fueling up in the city of Griffin at a Texaco Station, the car would not start and the only diagnosis they gave me was that a brush was burned out and had to be replaced. Finding also that with a "push" the car would start, I decided that I would see only Mr. Appling.

He stated that his group, the Peach County Political Action Committee, has registered about 247 persons during the last three weeks. He stated that money received from VEP has been deposited but has not been used. He therefore promised to return it Monday.

He said that he expected that his group could have registered at least 2000 more people, but as he puts it, the people were just not there (in the city). This number and more that could be registered are in the county, but he said that there just was not enough time for them to organize.

He indicated that their method of operation is to hold meetings every night in the Episcopal Church (except last Tuesday when the Primary Eve Meeting was held in a Baptist Church). Mr. Appling has a voter's list broken down into streets; so, at the meeting, people appoint themselves as volunteers to work the streets to register the unregistered people.

I then tried to find out whether there are any other people supporting Appling in voter registration. He told me that his secretary of the Peach County Political Action Committee is Mrs. Daisy Wooten, and the treasurer is Mr. Ruben Jones, the owner of a Pure Oil Station. He stated that one of the programs of the Peach County Political Action Committee is that it has a committee which is an advisory to the Bi-Racial Committee of Ft. Valley.

Before I left Ft. Valley, I stopped at a Sinclair Station and store owned by a Mr. Hightower, a Negro. He was unaware of any groups working in voter registration presently, although a group had been so involved last Spring. I did not ask him about Mr. Appling, nor did he know that I knew Mr. Appling.

Conclusion:

I understood that in the past, Mr. Appling has conducted voter registration and has demonstrated that he could be effective. I, therefore, cannot accept as a full reason for no VEP effort in Peach County and the surrounding area because "there was so little time to organize." It follows then that either he is not effective, or that he did not want to put out the effort. It can be both.

RE: Field Trip to South Alabama-Sept 21, 1964.

Prior to making the field trip , I had a meeting with the director to plan the trip. It was determined that I see Mrs. Idessa Williams, Montgomery Improvement Association, in Montgomery; Mrs. Boynton, or Rev. Gildersleeve, of the Dallas County Voter Project, Selma; Mr. T.Y. Rogers, of the Tuscalossa Citizens for Action, x and, if possible, Mr. W.P. Mitchell, of the Tuskegge Citizens for Action.

Coming into Tuscaloosa at about 10 A.M., I went by Mr. T.Y. Rodger s office. The door was locked. Icalled his home and no one answered. (758-2833). After waiting for a while, I went by the Court House and met a person by the name of Junior Wilson, a citizenship school teacher. He wasthere to vouch for residence of Negro applicants. I learned from him that Friday was to have been the last day for registration.(I assumed from this the last day fro registration before November). But a local judge died and registration was extended for another day, Monday.

I talked to two Citizenship shool teahchers, who each had about 60 pupils, and were responsible for them to apply for registration. 16 of these classes have been set up. Mr. Ross Bonner 752-8877 isthe director of the Tuscaloosa Citizens for Action registrationp program.

Hx I was finally able to catch T.Y. Rodgers. It had been a problem to communicate tothe Negro community the fact of extension of registration for one day, despite the efforts of the teacher s telephone committee. He had been out and was ready to go out again with Wilson, each going in dirfferent direction, to Negro areas inorder to get more Negro response. When I had been at the Court house, only 4 Negroes out of a line of 20 were standing.

It seems that the registrar has been "friendly". But the registrar had been reading October questions for the month of September, thereby confusing the efforts of the Citizenship School teachers. Also, the registrar has recently been taking a book, opan any page, and ask the applicnat the question, thereby effectively turning back both white and Negro applicants.

In general they feel that 550 have been registered out of their program. They have sent a report to Edwina of SCLC .

In Selma, I went by the Court House. Two Negroes along with 4 Whites were standing in line, no activity because it was the lunch hour. The registrar opened his office at about 10:00 A.M. , closed at Noon untill 2:00 and then remain open untill about 4:00. I went by the office of the Dallas County Voter's League, and no one was the e except Mrs. Boynton s secretary for her insurance business. She called Mrs Boynton who came by along w ith her daugher-in- law who acted as the League s secretary. Mrs. Boynton then shortly returned to the Court House to vouch for residence of the Negro applicants.

I learned that the registrar has been unfair, disqualifying applicants for frivoulous reasons. Boynton has the affidavit of Miss Beard Moorer - to whom the registrar read a section of the Constitution, made her sit for five minutes in another room, and then asked her to repeat word by word what he had read to her.

Also, she feelsthat the injunction of last July restraining her from holding Mass Meetings destroys her effectiveness in communicating to the Negro Community. She said that 17 Negroes were in line that morning, whcih is about the average. As to how many have registered, she has asked John Doar of the Justice Dept to find this out for her. She is also hoping that the Justice Department will find out whehher the bookds will be open in October. It is this kind of information she can not get out of the Justice Department.

They hope to conduct mass meetings thfough other people in September if there is dny days in October. Ogherwise, they feel that is hard to get results because of real fear and intimidation. I learned thatthey have not received any assistance from SNCC in canvassing or community organization. I taldked to John Love of SNCC, the new director. He said that they have been busy in organizang a library and the yOuth. But they intedn to continue an ongoing programon voter education and voter registration.

I then went by the Court House in Montgonery. There were no more registration days in September, but the days in October will be the 6th,7th, 8th, 9th, and 13th. I called the Montgomery Improvement Association and found that the person in charge of the office, Mrs. Durgee, was leaving and could not wait for me. I then was aboe to get in touch with Mrs. Idesssa Williams, who was at home, 1010 Bragg Street. Her secretary, she said, was in the hospital. She stated that she has found that the most part of the Negro community which is unregistered is in the slum areas and in the County. She is busy organizing the people in these areas, as the "books" wull come into these precincts in October.

Nevertheless, she feels that she needs more SCLC assistance, at least two other cars, and Mr. James Orange and Aaron Arms, the SCLC staff people were so affective during the Summer. She feels thatthe transportaion pool on a volunbary basis was not reliable, and so was the people they were willing to oay, the undertaker and the cab-drivers. If what she says is true, VEP shall not have much to show for its investment unless more investement is made in human resources, particulary SCLC staff people.

Having to go through Tuskegee, I stopped there to talk to Mr. W.P. Mitchell, the office being open at the late hour of 8 P.M. They have been quite satisfied with the results of Negro Political Action in concert with White Community Conservationists. I learned from him that registration will continue from October 1 through December; and that one may register for the Fall Elections lo days before the Elections. As in Montgomery, he stated that the large unregistered Negroes are in the slum and rural areas. He too, indiaated that he needs mofe assistance, but only financial, like a supplementary grant. They have not planned a budget or a program which justify a supplementary grant but they plan todo so immediatley. Since they have demonstrated competnece- a supplementary grant may should be approved.

RE: FIELD TRIP -VIRGINIA
Sept 26-Oct 1, L964.

Arriving in Richmand, I called WAB. He asked me to see Mr. Lester Banks , Executive Secretary of the Va. State Conference of tne NAACP. I was to ask him about his financial reporting and his VEP program in 21 areas. I was to ask him for the names and addressees of the people in charge . I was to also explain to him that no VEP money should be used in any Court litigation.

I was directed to see Dr. Thorton to investigate the projects in Richmond and also inquire from him also about the financial reports. Later, I was to to research the so-called "White" VEP project, and Dr. Larsen, and to see Atty. Herman Benn of the Va. Voter's League.

I arrived in Mr. Bank's office and he had time to discuss with me generally Vifginia politics and voter registration=problems , although he said that I was lucky to catch him in the office becaue generally he is in the field. I l

I learned from him that the Conferecne budget for Voter registration is $10,000 and for Legal work, $15,000. He indicated that his secretary worked late Friday Evening to finish the financial rep ort and probably sent the report then. He aslo said that most assuredly, no funds were used in legal activity.

VEP I asked for the names and addresses of his project directors , stating that I needed them for informational purposes and he provided them. (See attachment).

I asked him whther he and any of the projects have received any support from any other group such as COPE. He said that a Mr. Ernie Davis had been involved personnally in Richmand, but as a volonteer, and COPE has not been involved officially.

He was very happy in receiving a favorable Court decision Saturday, requiring an uniform registration form whichdad been adopted by the Federal Court for use. He said that he had run off 10,000 o of these forms and have sent them to his project directors. Each applicant is to be instructed to attempt to use themse these forms in the presence of the registrar and if refused, to proceed to fill out the form offer the completed form and retain the duplicate.

Mr. Banks also indicated that a direct mailing had been sent t o each Mason and member of Negro PTA's. The PTA form was interesting because it too included the registration form.

JD Field trip Reports

Possibly anticipating my conveying WAB's criticism of his supporting an Alexandria Va project becaue VEP is supporting a CORE project in the same area, he explained that the NAACP has had an on-going active program which the Conference was bound to support. He said that CORE just started last week and were local people coming from D.C., and came only after the D.C. books closed. I saw a copy of the Alexandria report which indicated student and wide-community support.

::::::::::::::::::::::::::::::::::::

I then had an appointment with Dr. Thornton.

The local projects in the Richmond area are in the two Counties and in the City of Richmand . (Richmond is without a County governemtn by statute). Dr. Thornton, on lunch hour, accompanied me to visit th precinct registration places, described as the "Moss" buildin , the "East-side Sub P.O2", Main Post Office, and Forrest Place. (I later learned that one can retister in any precinct).

He stated that he uses 7 cars, with each driver being paid $10 a day(one car is a volkswagen bus which holds 10 persons). On occasion, the "Crusdade for Voters" uses a City-wide Bus, using it last Monday and plans to use it this coming Friday. The rent of the Bus has been paid by Mr. Reynolds of the Reynodd Aluminum Company. It was said that he is a Johnson rsupporter.

At the East-side P.O., there were about 50 persons in double linsw- all NEGRO!. The branch station was incredibly crowded and Dr. Thornton and I did not crowd inside because we would be inconveniencing. Nor did we stand around auside because it was raining- which didnt prevent the large number of Negro applicants to appear. There were at least 4 registrants and an extra typist. While observing - one of the transportation cars had dropped a load and passed us. The rate of retistration seemed to be about the same tempo as in Atlanta last Spring.

We then went to the Main Post Office - were "just" 15 or so applicants only including just 7 Negroes. Here there were 3 registrars and one secretary. Nothing seemed to be out of order. we then went to the "Moss" building. This is the office of the chief registrar, with whom Mr. Thornton has had dialogue and problems. (See attachments). About 80 persons were crowded in the hall way. Only about 5 or six were White- standing near the end of the line.(Is this reverse submissiveness?) Eveyone was stopped at a door to another room,the registration room, were only a few that could sit down befors the table to be allowed in. When Dr. Thornton and I entered this room by another door. The registrars shooed us out- telling us us that we must come by another door. We had no way to determine whether there was a deliberate slow-down.

At the "Forrest Place", only a few white applicants were there; althogh there were hree registrars.

Thornton said that the registrar has be n cooperative.(See enclosed newspaper clipping). On the first day of the program, 200 Negros were registered.Thornton held that then the Election Board held a meeting and decided that too many were being registered. By slow down tactics only 119 were registered and more than 400 were turned away. After complaints to the Justice Department and the F.B. I., the registrar again "Speeded Up". Thornton indicated th t he was appreciative in going around with me because the registrars knew him and probably knew that I was from out of town and therefore xx speculated that I was from the Justice Department.

Later that Evening, I met Mr. Pannell over at the home of Dr. Thornton. Mr. Pannell is the day by day director of the Crusade's program. We had a long discusssion which was enlighting xxx personally. It seemed that Richmond xxxxxxxxxxxx no longer fit the image I had of it when I used to xx wait in their bus stations -waiting for the Bus to Washington D.C. Richmand seemed to be similar to Atlanta in the directiono of desegregation.

Pannell indicated that in the adjoining counties the Crusade Program covers, the potential is 2000 Negroes in Henrico and 4000 Negroes in Chesterfield.

Earlier that same day, I had an appointment with Atty. Benn. He said that he thought that Rev. Winbush, the President, sent the xx VEP financial reports to WAB. He indicated that the "Voters League" was doing little other than Educative and Informative methods in encouraging Negroes to register.

He xxxxxxxxxxxx admitted that Voter Leagues have declined in general- especially the Virginia Voters League, al hough independent Leagues seemed to carry on effectively. He said that th s coming week-end, there was to be a State Wide meeting in Richmond of the Formal Voter League affiliates and the independent leagues, with Riddick of Suffolk to preside. The discussion is to be on the subject of whther a state-wide xxxxxx Voters League could be effective today.

The next morning, I called Dr. W. Larsen , President of the Virginia xxxxx Voters and Registration League. I x communicated to him about WAB's desires for a financial report . He stated that he would attempt to complete it this weekend. He did indicate that they have rented 4 buses and used much xxxxx space in the newspaper and on the radio on the question of registration. Unfortunatley, he was to be busy untill about 4:00 P.M.

I then went to their office which is on Broad St., a main street of Richmand. I had hoped to meet Jim Scott- the active which WAB had heard about. He was not there. x two white xxxxx workers were there- a Mrs. Betty xxxx slean who was apparently in charge and another young man. She indicated that Jim comes in late in the afternoon and stays late at night.

Unfortunatley, our communication levels(Mine with Mrs. Slaan) were at variance. Her evasiveness and ther fore frustration of my efforts began to cause impatience on my part(and anger), and therefore I had to make a conscious effort not to allow this to show and to ask more innocuous questions or those questions which she had pre-determined to respond to.

I still was unalbe to underatand why they worked so late at night when the books closed at 5 P.M. For research purposes, I had hoped to investigate the program as to white registration problems. All I was able to learn is that they have been provided a list of white persons, including telephone numbers, from a mystical (mystical to me!) Reverend Heslup Lee. It seemed that this list contained about several thousand names. In a manner that seemed to be like boasting, she stated that not one of these names is a name of a person that made less than $10,000 a year. This statement expained to me why she was unalbe to respond to my interest of learning their program or registration low-income whites.

By more specific questions, I was able to find that the source of this list is the Third District Democratic Association , and its White leader, Mr. Harry Cohn. I had also learned that Betty Sloan was an active worker on behalf of the election President Kennedy. But a wall between us prevented more effective communication. From apparant indications, they seem to serve as an information center. While I was there an hour, at least 12 persons, all Negroes, would come there and aske whether they could regeister. Miss Sloan would tell them No, but would ask their address, tell them where they could register that is nearest their address and give them a few materials which indicated that for Good Citizenship, one should register. None of these materials seemed tobe partisan. She explaimed to me that they inform both Negroes and "hites. She said that If a person calling them asking for transportation, they would send their one car to pick the person up. The other part of their program isthat they calling aevery person on the list to find out whether the party is registered and offer them to assist by transportation if necessary. She is also keeping count of the persons who come in askeing whether this is the place to register. She is claiming credit for registering each person who does this.

It bothered why this group seemed, (by The list) to be concerned only with upper middle-class white persons, but I didn't raise the point because the question was hostile and the answer seemed to be obvious. It is my opinion that the answer is obvious because this group had no real program in registering low- income white persons because the "back lash" issue would motivate "poor whites" to vote for the Republican Senator Goldwater; It is my opinion that this group is a defacto loyalist Democratic group seeking to capitalize on the "Front Lash" theory- assuming that secure economic classes would be concerned about the more supposedly "radical" Goldwater.

Because "On its Face", this is a non-partisan group, the only problem is that the names of persons not making less than $10,000 are generally more "registered" than not.

This same morning, I had called WAB. He indicated the areas I was to visit, which were #8, #3, #5, #4, #7 , #7a, and #9, in that order. These were xxx of the 21 areas of the VEP-NAACP Mr. Banks program.

WAB indicated that I should find the following:

(1) The Program of each co-ordinator and what he or she is doing;
(2) The areas covered by the program;
(3) What funds they have recxed;
(4) From whom;
(5) Is there anybody elese to xxxx work with?(groups)or, xxxxis there any other groups active in voter registration.

.....

Ashland.

The town of Ashland is in Area "#8, the xxxxxx County of Hanover. I found from the twon clerk the address of the regis- trar . It seemed xxx that her telephone was unlisted in that she works out of her home rather htan at the Court House.

I was able to find Mr. Anderson , the co-ordinator of the area, at home. I told me that the main r gistrar, Mrs. Campbell, is available each evening, between 7 P.M. and 9 P.M., and all day this coming Saturday. Also, there is a registrar in each precinct, these being 11 precincts, who are xxxx also open between 7P.M. and 9 P.M. on Wednesdays and Thursday.

Here is a strictly an NAACP program; there being 3 districts xxxx (voting districts), the Committee on registration is constituted of 3 district chairman. The general chairman being Mr. Anderson. He xxx told me that he can depend upon at least 14 district workers. He said that more than 17 Negroes were registered a week before last, 46 last week and 80 should be registered this week.

He stated xxxxx that he has received the $105, but that every body who has been working will not be paid out of this money, just gas and oil receipts of those who will turn theirs in for re-imbursement.

Mr. Anderson said that he did not know of anyother groups or persons working in voter registration .

He said that some young college students during the summer came from Maryland State, including a Mr. Tallifero, but left because they were not really needed in the area.

Mr. Anderson stated that the Registrarsxx are not as liberal as before because of the large number of Negroes appearing but the Women remain liberal .

Mr. Anderson xxx stated that they have received no other funds from any source. It appeared to me that they could really do without the funds they did receive.

Fredericksburg

The town of Fredericksburg ia in area #3. Mr. B.T. Johnson isthe co-ordinator in the area. He is an insurance man by profession in the field. Therefore he is difficult to to catch. His office is in Fredericksburg, and his home is in King George, a community no more than 20 miles away.

I learned from his secretary , Citizens United for Action, was the group that was active in voter registration last Summer. The chairman of this group is Rev. Laurence Davies, whose phone number is E.S. 7-6226 or E.S. 3-8701, 1207 Cardwell St., or 801 Sophia St. She said that this group worked with some Negro College Students from MOrgan State. She said that she understood that this group had a meeting with local White Democrats on how to push N egro registration, but heard of no other meetings. I was not able of catch Rev. Davies who was out of town.

I then went to King George to Mr. Johnson's home. Again, I was unsuccessful in catching him, but I was able to meet an assistant of his in the King George area. He did not know anything about Fredericksburg except that groups other than the NAACP were working in the City of Ffedericksburg.

I understood that in Area #3, there is a registrar in each precinct and one may register anytime, as long it is "reasonable hour". Mr. Johnson's assistant, Mr. Stubb, said that in the rural area, in response to my question, that there is no real need for transportation. with about 8 workers, they suse a door to door approach and speak in churches. He said that they can not rely upon the ministers because they are not too enthusiastic.

Early the next morning, when I was in Charlottesville, I called Johnson at his home . I learned of no new information other than that one of the most effiective students that worked in the area from Morgan State was named McDougal- he worked with 3 others. He said that the Citizesn United For Action originally organized to support a Negro for election and organized in each Block , and the NAACPiks working through his group inorder to work on the grass-roots level. It seems that no other funds have been reveived other than the $105.00, which has not yet been decided how to be spent.

Charlottesville

This College town seemed to be a Metropolis compared to he small towns I had just left.It is in area #5. Mrs. Drewy Brown is listed as the co-ordiantor, but the real day to day worker is Miss Ann Dolson, 413 Ridtw Road and whose phone number is 296-6997, chaim an of all the workds, the Committee of the Local NAACP in political action being brokend down to ward chairmn.

Mr. Brown is past chairman of the Politica Action Committee of the local NAACP and an officer of the local branch. Actually, he h d more to say than Mrs. Drewry. I learned from them that the program motor-caravans, which they have had la t Thursday, Friday, and Saturday which are going to be resumed Thursday. It was interesting to find that registration in the Wards can also be on Sundays. The program also includees Ward Meetings and Street Block parties.

She spoke very highly of a Mr. Taliaferro and a Hugo Scott who represented themselves as members of CORE and helped them organize last August. They were also very effective in voter education-seeming to know all the political fordes and persons in the State.

They also stated that the registrars have been very cooperative, even allowing the workers to assist the applicants or to allow the applicnats to take their forms home. She stated 200 were registered in one day.

She said that in the SLums and on the street of lost dreams, she has hired a WINO Captain, who isto be paid for registering by a jug of $1.69 wine. They also a telephone Committee and and a Transportation Committee.

The area covered is Albermarle County.

It seems that they too have difficulty to find what to do with the $105.00 They do intend to spend it for their past expenses, gas, oil, and entertainment, but they do not yet know how to distribute among the other workers- about 12 have just donated their cars and expenses to the movement. Each Ward Captain, for example, has at least 12 workers.

Other goups who are asssiting them in voter registration is the League for Women's Voters and the Charlotte Council of Human Relations. The League is integrated on a joint basis. They have had one mass meeting, and are assisting them on a door to door canvassing. hey aslo provide poll watchers to encourage Negroes and provide cookies and donunts, nd coffee. The Council has loaned cars, including a Volkswagen Bus, are attending Negro churches, and are integrating the teams which engage in Door to door canvassing. The Student Groups which have been assisting them also isthe Virginia Young Democrats and the Thomas Jefferson Chapter Society of the Council. She estimates that more than 600 have already b en registered in the short campaign and 2000 will be on the books by Sunday.

The next morning, I visted one of he registration places. It was a very wet day. In the office, I saw 3 Negroes(it being about 9 A.M.) waiting to be be registered and a white person wanting an absentee application).

City of Staunton

Mrs. Bertie Huggard is the coodinator of Area # 4 which includes this town. Not only is she a young wife, she is also a traffic Cop(at the Negro school) and a switch board operator at the "white" college. She was very gracious. in receiving me.

She is working in Harrisburg Staunton, and Waynesboro in the counties of Augusta and Rockingham. She has received $105 plus expenses, therefore the is for her compensation. No other funds have been received by her.

She is chairlady of the Political Action Committee of the local NAACP. Her Program really began around August 14. Her Main helpers were a Mr. Shue, a white person, who was very effective in The County, but is now attending School, and a White woman(I failed to get her name) who is her co-worker at the Police Station and is co-chairman of the telephone Committee. There technique is to go into an area after Church annoucments and word of mouth annoucements to conduct a work-shop, appoint a chaiman form the meeting who are then responsible in getting more workers. She has 3 in Stanton and 7 in the rest of the County.

Here, also, the registrars are cooperative. The Rockingham registrar even took her form which Mr. Banks provided her and had it printed as the official form of the County.

She stated that no other groups are in the area, and the #105 is the only funds she has received from any other source.

When I went to the Court House, I saw no Negroes in line-but did see 3 white persons. It was still a wet day.

Buckingham

This is area #7a and Mr. Allen Gooden is the coordinator. He is principal of the Dillegan Elementary School and school had just let out when I found him. Before arriving , I had stopped at the Court House and saw that the Registrar is in the Court House ev ry econd Monday only, b t for the conveneince of people who desired to register before the Fall elections, she was riding "cicuit" , being in a precinct each day before October 3, befofe 5 at an address. The schedule was posted on the Court House door

After talking to Mr. Gooden, it was too late to vist the place where registration was occuring.

I learned that Mr. Frank Harris, President of ghe local NAACP is also principal of the adjoining Negro High school, and Mr. Gooden is chaimmand of the polstical action committee. Mr. Gooden said tha t he has 8 workers , eac in charge of a precinct. He also uses the shcool bus for transportaiton purposes, along with the transportation committee(3 cars). Also the Seniors are required to canvass.

Mr. Gooden explained that the registration program is really not a program of the NAACP but that the local NAAXCP is assisting the local "Buckingham Improvement Association". He said that the Association haa other goals, such as health and neighborhood improvement etc. But it has a committee in each precinte. The presidnet of the Association is Mr. Stanley Jeffrey, the County Agent.

He contends that the act of registration is not hard, and all though the hours are inconveneint, the registrar will also work out her home at 8:30 P.M.

Other groups in registration is the Buckingham Voters League-which do only "informative" things, the Masonic Lodges and the chuches, which afe working with the Association and the NAACP.

He said that ~~more than~~ 50% of the County is Negro and out of 12,000 potential, 634 Negroes are registered . He belives that the program shall double this amount and approach ½ of the 3000 Whites who are registered.

~~Buckingham County~~

~~When I arrived in Cunningham~~

CUMBERALAND COUNTY

"hen I arrived in this area, area #7, I learned ~~that~~ from the Co-ordiantor, Mrs. Bernetta West, a haridresser and owner of a beauty parlor, that in fact, Mr. R. L. Scales was the director of voter registration, chairman of the committee of the NAACP. here. Mrs. Goodsden isthe President.

Mr. Scales is a a highschool vocational teacher and serves the Negro New Farmers of America. Hde was busy directing the setting up the structure for the Negro Carnival that was going to be held the coming weekend.

We went back to his office at the school, and he explained to me how the program is set up in his county. He has a church chairman in eqach of the 16 Negro churches in the County. Each meber has a geal of getting two other members registered. Each of the chairman or chairlady reports to him.

There is unfortunatley only one registrar who is open only on Thursday. There had been 4 but this was done away with since the May Supreme Court decision. However, the registrar has promised Scales that he wo ld be open Saturday andto use the new official forms sent by Mr. Banks. Scales has ah appointment with the Commonwealth Atty who the Negroes helped put in in order to to procure his influence in getting the books open late in the evenings in the remainder of the week. Scales says that 700 have been registered, and at their present rate, should have anothe 100 registered by Sunday. There are 1647 Adult Negroes and 1700 adult whites. Scales said that 1200 whites voted at the last time.

Scales says that he about knows every one in the Area, which includees ~~xx~~ just Cumberland County. However, he has been going into a district to a home he knows very well, sit down with the person and ~~xix xixkx~~ write the names of every one they know in th area. He would then assign the names to one of his leaders or workers in the area.

He, too, seems to be lost for what to do with the 4$105 but vaguely believes that the NAACP will decide what to with the moeny. They have raised more than ~~$7~~ $600 on behalf of Tucker. I was quick to explain to him that the present NAACP program on behalf ~~of~~ registration must be on a non-partisan basis.

Field Trip to Nortg Carolina-Part I.
-NAACP-VEP 20 County Areas:

I arrived into the Durham-Raleigh Airport fromx fromna flight from Atlanta and was met there by Rev. Charles Ward, our coordinator for the VEP-NAACP project. He was quite distraought becase of illness in the family.

His wife had been acting as his secretary, voluntarily, for his xxR VEP work xxdx but was now seriousily ill. He therefore intends to to hire a part-time secretary to be in the offic e, as he is in the field most of the time.

REv. Ward last week visited about ten areas.He and John Edwards had divided xxx up the 20 County VEP-NAACP project, JOhn taking the We stern Portion and Ward the Eastern portion. It was his eastern part Ward had visited. From the results of his trip, he was able to provide us the list of his co=ordinators.(See attacment I).

I then called John Edwards in Durham and he provided both me and R v. W ard the list of his cooridnators xd and contacts.(See attacmentII). John admitted that he had not yet made his tour as was done by Rev. Ward but planned to do so after the NAACP convention this coming week-end. As a general rule Rev. Ward had established his coordianators only after contacting community leaders in the County. Basically, xxrhe preferred the local NAACP organization and its people if it was active and effective in community organization, but if said REv. Ward, if the local NAACL was not effedtive, or, if other people are more effeective, gh these other people would be used. He said that forcMartincandcPittsçchecisccakcc Martin and Pitts Counties, he is calling upon Mr. "Goldie " Frinks(an officer of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference) to work in these areas. His list of names he indicates as coordinators includes people that are not active with the LOCAL Naacp. Bxyh Both WARD and EDWARDS use a State-wide NAACP xxxt list of NAACp officers , but it seems that John Edware, from his own admissions xxx had not yet composed his lis t of co-ordda tors from personal investigation.

After disposing of the xx 20 County-VEP NAACP problem, Rev. Ward tpok time to discussxxxxpax the program in Wake(Raleigh) County. Here, he has three co-oridanators : Mr. James Shepherd, 424 Bloodworth, TE xxxxxxxxx 2-8777; Bartel W. Lane, Rock Quarry Rodd, 833-6967; Ruth Morgan, Windel, North Carolina, 365 - 7117. The latter two are the xxxth County co-ordianatora. They work through the Negro schools in the area, their local PTA's. xxxh with students, compete ing with each other. In the city, Mr. Shepherd, the Presddent of the local NAACP, Mr. Campbell and Bloodworth, have been working through h the bfanch and the Yo uth Gxp Chapter In both areas, the procedure is for their workers to go door to door to make contacts, make appointments , and to bring to the xxxxx people the retistrars.

The Hallifax movement

I arrived here , Enfield N.C., later than I planned, Havind had problems in finding a place to stay, eating etc.

VEP 4-14

Behind the Colfield Funeral Homes I found the office of the Hallifax movement. Mr. Reed Johnson, the treasuerer, and a Miss Smith was there , talking to another man about the organization of a precinct A Mrs. Deloris Ward then came into the office to report about a road and bridge that had been washed out from the rain of the week before.

Mr. Johsnon explained that the county-wide registration program had been set back a week because of the rain and wetness- and now everyone was frantically playing "catch up".

He admitted that his last report was sent Sept 12 , 1964. I explained to him the seriousness of the need for him to send in current reports-or weekly reports. He answered that the last check was written September 11, 1964, and therefore he thought there was no need to send into Atlanta empty reports. I replied that it made no difference- VEP obligations in its own files is to show current financil responses as long as a grant is remaining active. I asked him howmuch he had in the VEP account, and he said, $140.93, the amount he had already indicated to WAB, but was already charged out.

He then indicated the disperate need for more VEP funds. We had a long discussion about this. But in essence, I explained that for VEP funds, there must be a promise and fulfillment of financil reporting, which VEP goes unsatisfied, concerning the Hallifax movemnt. Johnson then indicated that he would make the sufficdnt reporting. As for supplementary grants, I told him he should submit a budget as for a supplementary grant, but then explained to him VEP's separate account which VEP may decide to apply in his case. I did n ot promise VEP would satisfy their expenditures, but indicated that only with making and application and making a report, could this be quid pro quo for VEP.

We had been so busy talking about the finances, that I had no real opportunity to talk about the Hallifax Movement relationship with SCEF before John Saltedr entered the building. But Idid learn thazt there are two accounts. One is in the name of the Hallifax VEP which VEP account. The other account is in the name of the " Hallifax County Voter Registration Movement".In this account is only $18. Only the Community supports this(collections from Negro churches etc., althyough at times, they may receive in the mail some checks. He told me that the Hallifax Movement had not ever received any money from SCEF. He said that the Hallifax Movement, on response to my inquiry,is not associated with SCEF; rather, it is an affiliate of the SCLC.

(Earlier I had stopped by a Negro Cleaners. The Negro business owner, a young man in his late 30's, indicated that he had been and is active with the Hallifax movemnt, such as providing transportation and some contributions. I introduced my self as as a person intereseted in voter registration. From his information and belief, he feels that the program has been very active dispite the hostility in the area towards Negroes, and has been effective in voter registration. Becausd of the movement, there are now Negro children attending The White schools. He alwayss said "Our" organization etc. I then asked him about JOhn Salter and SCEF. He knew that JOhn Salther did work for SCEF. He said that he understood that SCEF is supposed to be or have been Communist controlled-but that he didn't believe it. He said that he thought that "they" believed in fighting to take over the governement or infiltraating good organizations and taking them over. He felt however that John Salther is a nice boy- who has been working with them, telling them how is the best way of doing things, but not what to do. He felt that Hohn Salter never told them about unchristian ways etc.(While talking to him, I almost began to believe that John Salter was a Negro because of the lack of deferential attitude towwrds him because of his being white.)

Not having been able to bring SCEF involvement with the Hallifax movement as I wanted to before John Salter arrived, when he did come, we had a tense disussion aboit SCef vis-a-vis the Voter Educat90n Project.

I was the first to raise the question. I indicated that VEP, being a research organization, must be able to measure results of VEP activity in a given area. With SCEf in the area, it is difficult to determine results due to VEP activity and results due to SCEF activity. John Salter took the position that VEP is against SCEF because of its alledged "Redness" etc. I responded that VEP would be concerned regardless of the other organization, whether the other organization is NAACP in Savannah, Urban League in Miami , or what have you. VEP possibly find that "its" activity registered 10,000 and the other organizations will alos claim to have registered the same number. It is necessa ry for VEP to determine who did what.

John Salter then said that we should stop "pussy footing around", the real issue is the red-baiting issue, by the Southe rn REgional Council. He said that he is not responsible for what individuals in SCEF may have done 20 years ago, that he is only responsible for him self to the people in Hallifax Connty. He said thazt he is not a Communist nor ever was one. Johnson then said, concurred with by Mrs. Smith, that they almost did not accept the grant and brought the quwestion before the County Organizstion. They all claime tha t the letters that they have received from WAB have been offensive to them in relation to JOhn Salter.

I answered them tha t I can not claim to know the present position of VEP in relation to SCEFas they asserted. I told them that I have been instructed to find the manner of involvement of any group in Hallifax County, oyher than VEP, so that we can measure our results. JOhn Salter then daid that SCEF had spent several times more than the chicken feed VEP has sent them.I indicated thazt I am aware of the fund raising by SCEF for the Hallifax movement. John Salter said that expenditures to be used in the area comes out of the general operations fund of SCEF. There is no separate Hallifax fund. He said that SCEF, rather than giving a"grant", has no special budgett for Hallifax . SCEF expenditures in the area, have been the payment of his salary, milage, and printing costs, other than assuming the legal costs .(I know from mh own personal information hta legal costs can r un quite jigh).

John ~~Salter Salter tehn left for the Meeting of the district chairman in the Funeral Parlor. But before he left, I indicated that VEP is concerned wither~~

I indicated thazt VEP is concerned whether the local movemtn is a viable independent local movement. Every one hastened to tell that it was and re-invited me to attend the meeting of all the local preceinct chairman. I said that I had planned to go to Warrenton and Durham this evening-but I would stay to see how viable the movement is. I then asked that if this was an independent local movement, should not SCEF in its publicity point this up that this was an independent movement rather than as a SCEF movemnt. Again John Sather thought that this raising tbe "Red-baiting" point, and said that SCEF is now ready to fight VEP or anybody else over the issue. I quickly replied that I thought SCEF , like VEP, is interested in developing indigenlus local leddership and community orgainization. I said thazt Mississippi COFO is an example of Civil Rights Groups subsiding their publicity identity to this concept. I believe that John Salter was over-responsive towards VEP negatively in relation to the "Red" issue, but understood.

After John left, I discussed with Johnson agbout what he should do again about receiving more assistance from VEP. We then went to the meeting. There were about 50 people sitting there, including 15 County Precinct chairmen. Wehn I was there, the President had given the floor to JOhn Salter who explainedwhat was to happen next weekend. At the prewsent time, the books afe open on the 10th, 17th, and 24th.But they anticiapate some form of "slow down", which in such a case, they will immediately go the very liberal U.S. Distt Court JUdge, and will get the books open during the week. IN order to effect this, they shall have attorneys and law students at each precinct(which shall be imported by John Salter into the area). Also, as in the last massive registration when 2200 were put on the books, they shall have a Poll Watcher and a poll watcher assistant at each Poll. In key precincts, John reported that he has organized 8 cars. There was a fine, well paticipated discussion about their proceudures. One person, who ReV. Dunlap, a person assoceated with SCLC and assisted H.Colton in Danville Va, during the demonstrations and voting registraztion, asked one quewstion, about what to do with the wek precincts. REv. Dunlap suggested that experienced people from the other strong precincts should assist the wek precincts. Salter suggested that no precinct has achieved more 30% , and therefore each precinct should be responsible for its own. (Later, in my few remakes, I indicated that I believed that John was right that in developing a grass roots organization, one must build from the lowest kevel- but that in Daytone BEach, I saw the director effectively use a "task Force" to clean up precincts). Another person asked a question about those who ask the workers whether to register "REpublican" or "Democrat". Salter indicated that since the group is non=partisan, it can not suggest to peopoe with which party to register. However, he believed that the people should be informed hthat the present president is a Democrat and that Goldwater is a REp8blican.

Here, John Salter has the trust of the Negro People in the community. Again, not because of "defefence". At the meeting, strong Negro leader types would not be dominated or allowed to be dominated. The Hallifax Movement was strong before Salter arrived, I understand. He has been useful because his facilities with techniques. They are using him in that sense. Is a community organization with local leaders.

Johnson, is only the treasurer. Dunlap seems to be as equally strong, although he is only the City leader. They all seem to be aware of difficulty withn VEP. But at the same time, theyb wuld like to use more assistance and use VEP as they are using JOHN Salter. From the information and experience I had , I would conlude that this group should be supported.

MEMORANDUM

- Preliminary Report

Field Trip to Gadsden, Alabama October 15, 1964.

WAB insturcted me to visit the two areas inorder to investigate activities in voter registration. In the latter, I was to consider, particularaly, whtether the inflow of more VEP assistance wouod change the character of voter registration . lso, in that same area, I was to insist upon the receipt of research data resulting from VEP assistance last Septemeber. Because f bad driving weather and the entailment of driving in the hours of darkness, I procured a companaion that was of great assistacne to my research but who proved to be an expense by ingesting dsome quantities of food.

I arrived in Gadsden , Alabama at abo t 1:45 and went to the modernized Court House. There was a well placed sign indicating where the registrar's office was. I observed 3 persons who appeared to be the officials register applicants. They were sitting behind a tabae facing the public. In the matter of 10 to 15 minutes, I obsrved no public, either Negro or white, interested ih applying to register. Remaining there longer for research purposes did not present any value better than the alternative of arousing official suspicion and an arrest for loitering. Tehefore, I chose to leave in order to interview Mr. Quincy Adams, the VEP-coordianator for Gadsden.

I conveyed to Mr. Adams in the setting of his cleaning establishment, greetings vrom WAB and WAB inquiry as to why M . Adams had not conveyed to WAB a report of registration research. I was later to determkne, with assistance of Mr. Adams Secretary, that there was sent to WAB financial information which included research information. Posssession of all this is now acknowledged by WAB.

I saw WAS well equipped office which is supported by VEP funds. From information provided by Mr. Adams, it is used as a community center or meetingplace for the "Citizens Improvement League", which he admits is a "front" for the NAACP(Mrs. Johnson and Mr, Patton etc.), or the Gadsden Citizen's Committee, which is an aff liate of the S.C.L.C. and to which Mr. Adams is chairman of the registration committee. Also the Etowah County Democratic Club meets there , to which Mr. Adams has notitle. By the available literature and displays, the meeting hall shows no political parfisanship. I am satisified that VEP in Gadsden is not engaged in any partisan politics.

I and Mr. Admas then had a long discusssion about low registration in Gadsden County and abo t a role for VEP in order to effect the factor. I pointed up the fact that for September, Gadsden County received $200.00 and the result is, that for the September program, only 110 applied, 48 passed and 62 failed. I stated that this is very poor when only 3300 Negroes are registered out a potential based upon of being 19.6% of the 58,000 total population, which he himself estimates to be about 8,000 to 10,000 . I then said that 1000 to 2000 should have applied and asked why this had not beendone and what could he do to effect this.

He then discussed violence and terror- which even he had suffered and I rejoined that this happens many other places in South. He also said thag the $200.00 alloted was too little to motivate workers and was sufficient to pay only rent and office help. I answered that it woh,d seem that money should be spent knocking on doors and transporting people because his office didn't do the registering, tnat was doen ine the Court house.(I felt it a big too harsh to ask him that if the community can raise $25,000 for legal fees, as he had said, why could it not at least match VEP funds -$200.00; I neglected to indicate to him that it was he who drew up a low budget of $200.00). He also indicated that it was amost impossible to get people to apply because it entailed personal sacrifices and the shame of having flunked the test. I discussed then with him why negroes have been flunking which seem to result from thd absurd so-called "constitutional " questions which are pulled from a loose-leaf book; such as " how many representatives were there to the first Legislarure?"

I re plied that he alre dy indicated the interest of the Justice Department and the F.B.I. and that they just might get an order which will effect registration of all those who have been standing in line to register, and if this is a possiblity, they should get people down there to apply.

He then indicated to me that he can trust 10 people who are willing wrkers and who are not to be intimidated by the psyche of fear. We arrived at a consensus that the main expenses of the personnel would be the payment of gas and oil expenses. He estimeates that this wo ld be about $50 at the minimum. He wojld also like to use a "G t out and register which costs $98.00 for 35 times. (ON October 16, he called the VEP Atlanta office- and while tlaking with me indicated that a Sound Truck at about $35.00 a day wo ld be more efficient thant the radio time spots because the radio spots might be at a time of low listener levels I think that both could be used).

We then discussed the matter of research. I indicated that the summary report- so-many applied, soOmany registered, so-many failed was insufficeint. I then discussed the whole purpose and background VEP which I find, more and mofe in my field activities, that all our project directors believe that VEP exists to incr ase Negro registration, this belief has been so intense that even I began to believe this despite my other information(See September Staff Conference). I expalined to him that VEP interest is to find the cause of low voter registration in the South and the factors which may effect the cause of low voter registration. I indicated that to say "racial discfimination" as a cause of low voter registration is a mere conclusion or opinion. He must indicate in the research report the particular acts which result in the low voter registration. I gave examples, such as how many stand in line, how long, how long does it take for me to apply, and etc.

At the VEP supported office, I met Bennie Luchion(Little john), a S.C.L.C. worker who was answering the phone and phoneing people to find wheher people are registe ed. He is now no longer assisting in the registration program, saying that the SCLC staff is to concentrate on the "Freedom Ballot", He was to leave for Montgon ry, Ala. Frday. Ihshall explain more about this in the Anniston report.

Although there issome hesitancy which is personal rather than valid, I recommend that VEP through the Southth rn Voter Project Account give support to a three day effortO- Oct. 19, 20, and 21st, specifying approved items, Sound truck, Radio Annoucements for 35 times, and transportation exepenses for 10 workers. I believe that the potential for VEP effectiveness istoo great - ~~if~~ if only by getting people to present themselves. Therefore this should be the condition of the grant - that the Coordinator be able to state who did present themselves to the registrar.

MEMORANDUM 11/2/64

To: WAB

From: JD

Re: Field Trip: East North Carolina "Little Mississippi"
October 20-21, 1964

East North Carolina, comprised of the First, Second, and Third Congressional Districts, can be described as the Black Belt of North Carolina. It is a low-land lying in front of the foot hills (Piedmont) of Smoky Mountain. It formerly was a rich area suitable for cotton but only tobacco remains to be its principal crop. It is an area that is 40% or more Negro whose value is primarily as an unskilled farm laborer and also an area which could be classified as "poverty stricken" because the average income is less than $3,000.

Because of the rough, general principle that in areas of high Negro population vis-a-vis white population, there is white resistance to Negro participation in political activity, one would expect low Negro voter registration. Indeed, one county, Halifax, has been described as "Little Mississippi". Yet, at the same time, the North Carolina Fund, a state-wide agency with nine million dollars in the business of stimulating community development of all the people, in order to increase economic opportunity and to fight poverty, has been able to stimulate two multi-county communities to break the "racial barrier" so as to receive assistance from the Fund. One of these non-racial community-action organizations include Halifax County.

VEP, during its existence, has been particularly interested in this area. For the last registration period in North Carolina, VEP approved a grant to the State Conference of the North Carolina NAACP in order to conduct registration among Negroes in 20 counties. Ten of these counties lie in the Piedmont and the mountain area where the Negro population is comparatively low except in the urbanized areas.

Mr. Joe Tucker, representative of VEP, studied these 10 areas and his findings are in a separate report. The remaining 10 counties lie in East North Carolina as already described, the subject of this report.

This report is operating under the following premises. Low voter registration among Negroes in North Carolina in the past has been caused by state action which has the effect of denial of the Negro of the opportunity to register to vote. Recent court decisions and the U.S. Civil Rights Law now give the Negro a greater opportunity to register to vote. All he needs to prove is his ability to read and write.

I therefore hope to answer two questions in this report. Is there remaining in East North Carolina official local action which effects denial of the opportunity to register by the Negro? Is there private action which effects denial of the opportunity to register by the Negro? Has the state-wide NAACP through Rev. Charles Ward been able to cause Negroes to take advantage of a greater opportunity to vote by VEP assistance? How?

I left Atlanta and arrived in Durham Tuesday Morning at 10:00 a.m., planning to spend two days for the field trip. I was surprised to meet there Rev. Charles Ward, our co-ordinator. I had not planned to request that he accompany me on my trip because I anticipated that to do so would interfere with his role in our research experiment, and I wanted to be assured of objectiveness on both his and my part. I hesitated when he requested that we should make the trip together for the aforesaid reasons and because he had a speaking engagement in Pollacksville at a mass meeting in Jones County, Southeast North Carolina, at 8:00 p.m., which was not included in the areas I had planned to visit. But I decided that this should be good for our resource purposes because the engagement was for a three-county area which Rev. Ward may decide to give VEP assistance in voter registration, and because the trip would be much easier in that he knew the way of travel and it would be less of a hardship on both of us.

Onslow, Jones, and Craven County Area

After a repast with Rev. Brown in Trenton, Jones County, we went to the mass meeting held in Pollacksville, Jones County, North Carolina. There was concern that the mass meeting would not really be "mass" because of a competing meeting of the local Parent Teacher Association. But at the proper time, it seemed to be at least 40 people there in attendance distributed equally from the three counties.

After the proper speeches and introduction, Rev. Ward spoke. His talk was a combination of voter registration and sermon which proved to be quite effective. He lauded the role of the Voter Education Project and was so extreme in praise that it embarassed me. I was given an opportunity to speak and I explained the function of the Voter Education Project as a research group and its mode of operation. I lauded the role of the Negro ministry in North Carolina, explaining how today their leadership contradicts John Dollard's class and caste in Southerntown. I threw the floor open for questioning, and we were swamped with questions. There was quite an intense inter-action which both Rev. Ward and I appreciated.

In this area, there are three viable NAACP chapters and voters league whose leaders were present at the meeting. There has been no official or private interference with present registration efforts; it is that a history of intimidation has produced a fearful apathy.

But the enthusiastic response of these people made everyone know that because VEP as an outside group is interested in them, because the state conference of the NAACP is interested in them, because white people of "good will" and money are interested in them, there shall be a new positive attitude. For the remaining week of registration, Rev. Ward instructed the leaders about the manner of reporting to him and VEP. Their questions seemed to show that they understood. Rev. Ward and I left with a good feeling. We both felt that we saw the rebirth of community spirit, which, if not in one week, some day, show up in qualitatively high registration figures.

The names of the leaders are as follows:

Additional information about this area:

(A guide merely to be used for research purposes from the County and City Data Book, U.S. Bureau of the Census)

Onslow is a county which in 1960 had a total population of 82,706, which is 13.3% non-white. The total vote out of this area in 1960 for the presidency was 8,376, 66.4% going Democratic.

Jones County is a county with a total population of 11,005, which is 47.0% non-white. The total vote for the presidency in 1960 was 2,505, 76.6% going Democratic.

Craven County is a county with a total population of 58,773, which is 28.9% non-white. The total vote for the presidency in 1960 was 10,838, 66% of which went Democratic.

Therefore, in numbers, the Negro population in Onslow County is roughly 10,750. In the county is the city of Jacksonville with a population of 13,491, 6640 white and the remainder non-white (6,241 Negro). Also in the county is the city of Swansboro with a total population of 1,104 with no Negroes recorded.

In Jones County, the principal city is Morehead, with a total population of 5,583 of which 4,615 being Negro. There are several other small towns in this county, including Pollacksville which has a total population of 2,708, with 1,284 being white and 1,423 being Negro; and Trenton which has a total population of 2,060, with 962 being white and 1,098 being Negro.

In Craven County, the principal city is Newbern, which has a total population of 15,717 of which 6,481 are Negro. But in the adjoining city of James, the total population is 1,474 of which 874 are Negro. Para. Thus, in this area, the white population approximates a little more than 100,000, and the Negro population approximates 30,000, but holds a potential controlling influence in the principal towns in the area.

Greenville, Pitt County

Greenville is a town of about 22,860, of which about 7,642 are non-white. The population of the county is 69,942 and is 43.6% non-white.

We visited the coordinator, Rev. James O'Rook, whose principal occupation is that of being a tailor. He is a personable man in his early 50's who lives simply and as a bachelor. He was personally appointed by Rev. Ward and has worked with NAACP Field Secretary, McCain. The latter was just there recently in order to deliver some NAACP materials pertaining to voter registration. In the current effort, he has been busy speaking at social clubs, such as the local "Good News Club" and the "Progressive Council", the local defacto NAACP group here. He has been saving his speaking for night time, and in the day time, he furnishes transportation to the registrar's office, assisted by three other persons, a Mr. Nofleet, an insurance man, and an owner of a taxi-cab.

There is only one registrar but whose office is open every day until 5 p.m., but the books close Saturday, October 24. Rev. O'Rook says that people can go to the home of the registrar after 5 p.m., but it is not necessary because most of the Negro labor has staggered hours and can register during the day.

He has no idea as to how many Negroes have registered since the drive, but before the drive, 2,200 Negroes were registered in the city before October. An interesting point Rev. O'Rook stated is that in the last election for City Council, a Negro attorney ran for office, where 750 Negroes voted and 900 whites voted. Rev. O'Rook stated that the Negro, Atty. Richard Powell, lost by nine votes.

Rev. O'Rook said that his mode of operation was to reach and put into action the various clubs, and through his personal contact, stimulate volunteer activity as was done when Powell ran for office.

He had no plans to coordinate door-to-door canvassing efforts, which I advised as what I believed was a flaw because canvassing seems indispensable to me in order to build a grass-root organization. I asked whether local youth are available and he answered yes, who in the recent past have been active. But we both considered it impracticable to change or re-direct his program at this late date. I advised that for the last few days, announcements on TV and radio could be done. Rev. Ward and he thought it was a good idea and they both planned how this was to be accomplished.

On leaving Greenville, I told Ward that it was my belief that one person, no matter how good he is, should have a group to which he is responsible to in order to develop an effective registration program. I suggested that he contact Atty. Powell in the future merely on the information we had, for one interested in politics should also be interested in voter registration.

Martin, Washington, and Tyrell County Areas

The principal town in this area is Williamstown, which has a total population of 6,924, situated in Martin County which has a total population of 27,139. Both town and county are at least 50% Negro. Rev. Ward explained to me that the NAACP-VEP has no project there. He had contacted Rev. Golden Frinks, the young, militant minister who is an SCLC representative, to direct a drive but learned that SCLC was already conducting an effort there.

We thus proceeded from Williamston to the town of Plymouth in the county of Washington, and Columbia in Tyrell County. It is in Plymouth that I had a let-down because the effort there was certainly of low quality. The director here is Rev. A. R. Winborne. He has a large church and parsonage. Rev. Ward and I were both uncomfortable because it was a cold night and the parsonage was unheated.

From Rev. Winborne, I learned about the problem of voter registration in this county. He is not actively involved, although he is the named county coordinator, except urging other Negro ministers (there are five in the city) to announce from their pulpits urging their congregations to register. Physically, it seems that he would be incapable to exert much effort. He has appointed as a volunteer assistant, Mrs. Bertha Spurwill, who is working the city section by section and doing door-to-door canvasssing.

Surprisingly, in this last registration period, whites are conducting a registration campaign among both whites and Negroes, but with special emphasis on Negroes because of the State School Bond Issue which is on the ballot in November. They have paid-Negro workers in this drive. Unfortunately, Rev. Winborne had no other information about this white group and about their sponsors.

There is no longer an active NAACP chapter, there having been no meetings for two years, although Rev. Winborne stated that he has been conducting "citizenship classes" on his own with no assistance from SCLC, which is effective in this area, (although I doubted whether he requested it).

Other than tobacco, there is a large North Carolina Pulp Company which hires many Negro women but few Negro men. Social organization here seems to be slight with only five churches. He also stated that the local Masons and Elks are also sluggish. Consequently, I was not too surprised when he said that as of last May, 600 Negroes were registered and he hopes to increase it to 1,200. Of course, this is a very low figure to shoot for because according to the U.S. Census Reports, the total population of the county is 13,488, which is 45.1% non-white. Therefore, a figure of 1200 total Negro registration would be only about 20% of the potential. This low figure is not excused if there is no state or local denial right to vote, and rather than there being private interference, there was white private support! It was my opinion that VEP was not having its presence felt here in any efficient manner and I expressed this opinion to Rev. Ward.

On my previous trip to North Carolina in Rev. Ward's office, Rev. Ward had identified Rev. Winborne as very active. Yet, if he is a leader, he has failed to form a group on a community basis interested in voter registration.

We next visited Tyrell County. In all of these counties, Rev. Ward was asking whether his county coordinators knew their duty in reporting and explaining the way to make financial reports. Tyrell County, which is mostly a swamp, has a total population of 4,520, 43.7% non-white. Rev. Ward designated Rev. Dallis Spruill as county coordinator, and it was he who we went to see. He stated that the county is divided into four districts and that he has 11 to 15 workers upon which he depends to work. There is no resistance either private or local to Negro registration, the problem here being fearful apathy. There is also a dearth of local leadership, even the ministers, other than himself, reside outside the county. Spruill believes that the total registration at the present time is 500. He has no idea what the final effort will result to.

Chowan, Pequimans, and Pasquotank County Areas (Elizabeth City)
Chowan County has a population of 11,729 and is 46.6% non-white. The principal town is Edenton, and it is here that Rev. Ward and I visited Mr. Norman Brinkley, 207 East Third Street, the local coordinator. He is also president of the local NAACP. He calls himself a retired carpenter, but with WWI pension. He still remains quite active. He was available to see us and it was about 11 a.m. He stated that he had been working both the county and town, but he does not do the actual working because his ~~the~~ working coordinator. Here, in this county, the books are opened only on Saturday, and the coming Saturday, October 25, is the last Saturday. But there shall be six persons working in registration, three in the courthouse and three in the Memorial Building and both places will be opened from sunrise to sunset.

Mr. Brinkley said to me that most Negroes in the city are registered; so the effort has to be made in the county. The official attitude towards voter registration seems to be sympathetic. No Negro applicant has been disqualified, although according to Brinkley, one had to apply again for the second time. It seemed that one of the registrars felt that the Negro applicant was not "reading right", but after Mr. Brinkley called the chairman of the Board of Elections, it seemed that everything was made "allright"! Brinkley had information that the registrar has been giving the Negro applicants the hardest section of the Constitution to copy, but they have no information to suggest the white applicants have been treated easier. In fact, with my pressing of this point, Brinkley and Rev. Griffin, a man assisting Brinkley in the county and who had just stopped by to plan a meeting for that night, insist that the chairman of the Board of Elections "bends over backward" to be helpful so that therw will be Negro support behind the school bond issue.

Rev. Griffin said that SCLC and Rev. Goldie Frinks started the basic structure of the voter registration movement which is broken down to the block and precinct level, and is presently assisting (the NAACP) them. SCLC itself in this joint effort is assisting in the county, providing citizenship classes and is working at a "get-out-the-vote" campaign.

Mr. Brinkley said that only about 500 Negroes are registered but he wants to double this figure this coming weekend.

From Chowan County, we arrived in Hertford, Perquimans County. This is another small county with a total population of 9,178 which is 46.9% non-white. There, we arrived at the home of Rev. F. L. Andrews, a young minister. From his air and certain way about him, he didn't show much militancy, which reminded me that we were in the area that has been described as "Little Mississippi". But the way he described the attitude of the registrars, this seemed to be an area also easier in giving the Negro an opportunity to register, except that the books are opened only on Saturdays from 9 to 5.

Although the group which is working in voter registration is nothing but the officers and members of the local NAACP, they call themselves the "Citizens Group", avoiding use of the name NAACP. The reason as explained to me is that otherwise the community would be reluctant to cooperate because Negroes have lost jobs for being members of the NAACP in the last membership drive. Rev. Andrews told me that the over-all chairman is Mr. Joseph Spruil, who owns a community store, but that he, (Rev. Andrews) is the assigned coordinator.

An interesting manner in the way they have been working is through a community structured school and Block-Captain basis. At the only Negro school, each pupil is given a card to be filled out and returned which must indicate whether his parents are registered or not. With this part of the effort coordinated by the principal, these names are placed on the bulletin board and a gold star for the registered. On a block-captain basis, there are co-block captains, set up this way because no one can work full-time. Each of the block captains has six volunteers, and this effort is to canvass. The block captains are responsible to the section leaders. He stated that he feels that 500 are registered out of the Negro adult population which he guesses to be about 1,500.

Here, the registrar just gives an applicant one line to read and requires the applicant to copy the line. Rev. Andrews feels that there is no discrimination in the rejection.

Elizabeth City has a total population of 14,062, of which 5,197 being non-white, and is situated in Pasquotank County which has a total population of 25,030 and is 39.5% Negro.

Here in Elizabeth City, I found two young militant leaders who have organized a formidable organization. These leaders are the young Rev. John Trotman, president of the local NAACP, (a Baptist), and the young Rev. Carroll M. Felton, Jr., 325 Culpper St., (AME Zion minister), and a Nashville and Atlanta civil rights jail veteran. The effort is coordinated out of the three offices of Rev. Felton in his very large and impressive church. But unfortunately, one can register only on Saturdays, but despite the handicap, Trotman stated that the PAC of which he is chairman, has registered more than 1,235 Negroes. At least there is a registrar in each precinct, open officially from 6 to 6, but in their homes will work any time. As a general rule, they said that the registrars are quite cooperative, some not even administering any tests.

In total, organized on the precinct level (14 precinct chairmen), they have an organization of 100 or more active workers. Further broken down into groups, they also have "cruisers", a worker with a car every two blocks to transport. I saw schedules posted and he explained to me that at 5:30, the workers convene at the church, are assigned streets, go to their tasks, and then return at 10:00 p.m. for a critique. There is a special force at Elizabeth College comprised of students who are assigned "special tasks", such as follow-up and initial contacting. He said that their group is inter-racial and this has proven to be successful because "Negroes tend to obey white folks".

Currituck County

Currituck County, the most extreme northeast county in North Carolina, is a few miles from Norfolk, Virginia, but it certainly does not share an "urbanness". It is a small county of 6,601 of which 31.6% is non-white. We visited here Mrs. Jennie L. Ferebee, the local coordinator, who was at her home.

Here, the books are open only on Saturdays from 8 a.m to 5 p.m. Only she and her husband do any voter registration work, people otherwise "promising" but not carrying through. She believes that she has registered 18 but no more. During the week, she and her husband make appointments by going door to door. But this way, they only see each about four people a day. They have one car, and her husband, although on staggered shifts, works at the Norfolk ship yards during the daytime many days, as the day of the visit.

Rev. Ward lost his patience with her because she seemed quite uncooperative when he indicated the need for her to report. She said that she has been working on her own in voter registration since 1943 without any money, but if anybody else is getting it, she wants her share.

There is a local NAACP of a few members with which she is active, but meets only once a week and the meeting in October was before the grant to her. But it was apparent to Rev. Ward and me that the effort here was being poorly conducted and did not need any VEP assistance at the present level of activity. Here, there seems to be no problem concerning voter registration, etc., as effected by the local registrars, etc.

Gates, Hertford, and Bertie County Areas

Towards evening, we visited Gates County. The total population of the county is 9,254 and is 54.3% non-white. The effort here is coordinated by Mrs. Elsie T. Mitchell, with whom and with her husband we visited. She stated that only about 1,000 whites are registered and 400 Negroes are registered. She also said that the official time for registration is all day Saturday, and then anytime at the registrar's home if it is "convenient". Rev. Ward advised her that under the law that the registrars must register anytime if caught at their homes or residences.

The name of the group conducting the registration work is the Gates County Citizens Improvement League which is nothing but a defacto NAACP using the same officers. There have been no reports of interference, and in fact, the registrars have been most helpful, not even applying the reading and writing part of the test.

Her method is to hold a mass meeting every Sunday. At the meetings, the program consists of a known speaker, business registration clinic (for the benefit of those who are timid), and then a separate meeting with the volunteers. Volunteers are on the district level. At the separate meeting, separate reporting sheets are passed out. Publicity sheets and materials and reports are received including mileage; then they are paid $.07 per mile. She said that they have been assisted by the white students at Albemarle College in the Adult Education classes. There has been no intimidation although she is an employee at the library and her husband is a county agent.

We then visited Hertford County and visited Rev. John L. Scott, NAACP president in Ahoskie. This is a large county compared with the others and has a total population of 22,718 of which 59% is non-white. We also were to meet there Rev. Petteway of Bertie County, but we were behind four hours and he had to return to Bertie for his registration work in the county.

The name of the group working in registration is the Better Citizens of Hertford, another name for the local NAACP. It seems that there has been a past history of discrimination, but at the present time, there is none. There are eight registrars.

The organization here is broken into communities, Scott's job being that of coordinating 12 county chairmen. Each chairman has a co-chairman, and then each community, corresponding as a general rule to the townships, is further sub-divided to precinct level. Each division is keyed to a local church. The community division is autonomous from the central coordinator. But hereto, registration occurs only on Saturdays where official hours are from 9 to 6.

It seems that in this community there is a Negro middle class which dampens open militancy. He has found it difficult to organize the youth because of this.

I concluded that the free autonomity prevents his directing, his role being merely that of a report receiver, but local Negro politics probably will allow no other or more central control. He is an "outsider" and probably has to engrain himself into the community fabric.

CONCLUSION

My impression from my trip in North Carolina is that anti-Negro violence seems to be controlled and hidden. There seemed to be no active fear among Negroes, nor does there seem to be any active white fear or concern. The local newspapers do not belabor the "Negro question" or "civil rights" as do the Mississippi papers. Therefore, there is no intimidation by white persons on a private basis to discourage registration.

Also, it seems that registration officials intend to obey the present construction of the U.S. Civil Rights Bill.

Therefore, what does this mean in light of the general principle?: There is a high Negro population vis-a-bis white population. There shall be white resistance to Negro participation in political activity.

I do not believe that the principle is destroyed. East North Carolina is a depressed and poverty-stricken area, as far as the Negro is concerned. It might be assumed that the white power structure has determined that the Negro vote is no longer the threat as it was during the 1890's and 1930's when it could combine with the poor white vote, (Populist Movement). Also, statistics show that poor people of any race tend not to register or be involved in political activity. Also, the power structure may have determined that because of being deprived for centuries of developing organization skills, the Negro may produce "self-appointed" leaders, but no group consciousness or organization technique.

If VEP, after assistance, fails to make a dent in the level of Negroes registered, their conclusions may be right. Information gathered from this trip shows that in some areas, there are indeed "self-appointed" leaders, and in others, "community organizations". There is a strong possibility that a new bi-racial Populist Movement might evolve again.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: John Due, Jr.

Re: Field Trip to Panola County, Mississippi, December 18, 1964

Mr. Beittel let me out in front of the COFO office on Friday, December 18. It was a cold, cloudy day, or seemed cloudy because of the sun's short rays. But the office even looked more unattractive than last summer, with its plywood boarded windows, indicating that the landlord could no longer afford to repair windows always being broken by hoodlums assaulting the place with bricks as when I was there. Even the office and its occupants were dirtier, as if wearing coal soot.

I saw Lawrence Guyot and one of his workers, and was able to obtain information and materials about the Mississippi Freedom Party for Leslie Dunbar. That very night, Guyot was having a meeting near Tougaloo College, and plans were going to be explained about the challenge of the Mississippi Congressional delegation. He said that he needed financial assistance to organize voter educational workshops. I told him that VEP has terminated all grants, but suggested SCLC Citizenship schools might be able to adopt this as a project.

I talked with Jesse Morris, who ostensibly is in charge of the COFO central office, but it seemed that no one was actually in charge. He was then on his way towards South of Jackson, Mississippi, to start on a federalkfarm program project.

But here, there was no real excitement. No envision yet of a new summer project. The former "Awake America" ideas are old. Even the MFDP Congressional challenge is too similar to the MFDP challenge in Atlantic City. So, the people in the COFO office were frantic, not because of a purpose as like last Spring's, but because of fear of becoming nothing but history.

I was quite surprised when we found the COFO office in Panola County Friday evening. It was a massive one-story brick building. In front of the building were two COFO cars, one, a new Plymouth. It just didn't fit the image created by Maggie Long and Howard Zinn about SNCC. It seems that the revolutionary army of SNCC no longer fighting a guerilla war, but a conventional war with sufficient resources, and with power vis a vis the power of their enemy.

Louis Grant, project director, is a husky Negro about 5'11" of tan complexion. He has completed his masters at the New School of Social Research in New York. I met Grant at the Freedom Center, and from there, we went to Mr. Robert Miles' home. Miles is the defacto president of the Panola County Voters League, and there are nine members in the league.

Rev. Will Middleton is the dejure president of the Panola County Voters League. His address is Route 5, Box 13, but surely, Rev. Miles is the articulate one, and the younger one. Rev. Middleton, although probably only in his 60's, looked feeble already from the southern diet of corn pone and pork.

I was told that after the court decision _____ v. _____, eight COFO workers had begun to work in voter registration. During the summer, between 4 to 7 volunteers were present. Until the fall, Claude Weaver was the county director. They had contacted 90% of the Negro people by door-to-door canvassing. A total of 900 registered since the court order. Without having to answer sections 18 and 19 of the application to register, only 1 out of 10 of those who applied didn't pass. (372 registered since the court order, but before VEP assistance. See VEP 4-34.)

With over a 7,000 potential, I asked their opinion as to why only one-eighth of the potential have been registered in 6 months. From the discussion, I learned that they have met with many problems. For one thing, a substantial number of adult Negroes live on plantations owned by hostile whites. At least 10 times, the workers have been physically run off the plantation. When the workers are not run off, they either have the doors slammed in their faces, or are treated in an obsequious manner, invited in, sympathetically listened to, and when the worker goes through his bit about "his duty as an American citizen," they are promised faithfully they would register. But, it should be obvious that 6 months is not sufficient time to overcome a fear of a hundred years.

Then, the registrar is not cooperative, although he is under a court order. The registrar, Ike Shinkle, expresses publicly that he is under a "court order." Louis Grant stated that it seems that his strategy is to obey Judge Clayton, but slow down the rate of registration, but, he does have an abiding fear of Judge Clayton. Grant articulated the prevailing view that Judge Clayton is a segregationist, but when the law is clear and unmistakable, he will do his duty as a federal judge, and he is used to having his orders obeyed in the spirit he gives them. I have no way to check this out, but Grant claims that Clayton is commander of the Mississippi National Guard, and is a major general.

So, Ike Shinkle has been a problem. His policy, with one eye looking back over his shoulder at Judge Clayton, is to slow down the rate of registration. He used to have two places of voter registration, but since the court order, the other court has been closed, leaving only the one in Batesville. Of course, he has not appointed any deputy registrars, and when requested to do so by Mr. Miles, his answer has been that he can't because he is afraid that the deputy will be "messing up" and he (Shinkle) is under a $28,000 bond.

Shinkle has official hours of 8 to 4 ~~and will take~~ three applicants at a time, then officially close from 12 to 1. This is regardless of whether 20 to 25 people are standing in line. When the line seems to get constant and heavier, the deputy will take off on mysterious "vacations" that last three to four days, or close the courthouse on account of "court." Because of this indeterminate opening and closing of the office, this effectively crimps the COFO workers' plans. They and the Voters League have complained to John Doar, but they said he claimed that he couldn't do anything about it.

Another problem is that ~~by~~ the law enforcement officers, Sheriff Hubbard and his deputies, and the town marshall. At every large mass meeting, where sometimes they have as many as 700 people, Sheriff Hubbard and his men will also be gathered at each road crossing, to check driver's licenses and checking for improper mufflers. Yet, despite the motive for their presence, very few have been arrested for violations.

Then, at the courthouse, Claude Weaver and the white volunteer Graham have been involved in a couple of indidents at the courthouse where they have been ordered off the grounds, and they have refused. They were, of course, arrested.

The COFO workers have not been able to keep track of the people who have been run off, although they say many have been, because of voter registration activities. But Rev. Miles, the defacto chairman of the Panola County Voters League, has had a recent problem. It seems that he has been late in making his payments on a loan from the Batesville Security Bank, and because of his being late, he will not be able to procure another loan for the next year so that he can put in his crop. The point is, that it is customary for one to be late until after November, after the cotton is picked, and one normally only has to pay a late charge.

Results of the Election - In Panola County, the total vote for Goldwater was 3,987. Louis Grant, and others, from the breakdown in the newspapers by sections have determined that all of these votes were white votes; Johnson received 403 votes, and of this number, 150 were Negro. Since the books closed for registration for voting in the November elections on July 1, 1964, this means 150 out of approximately 372, or no more than 372 were eligible to vote in the general elections. In the unofficial Freedom Democratic Party ballot, all the votes went for Johnson, 3,500 Negro votes and 4 white votes (Panola residents who became friends with COFO workers in jail.) If the Freedom Democratic ballot was official, Goldwater would have only only by 84 rather than by 3584 votes out of 3987 cast.

As of December, the Panola project staff consisted of Louis Grant, Penny Patch, of the SNCC staff, the white Buz Graham, who was leaving for school in January, Chris Williams, who needed subsistence; Joe Jackson, who was self supporting; Sylvia Jacques, who was there for one month only and leaving December 17, and Aretha Henderson, who also needed subsistence. The cars of the project were a 1964 white Plymouth, mentioned above, and a 1954 Pontiac.

The election is over, Goldwater defeated; the Civil Rights Bill has passed. Now the funds have dried up, and SNCC is struggling to carry on. While everyone's eyes are on the Great Society, the same old problems are remaining in Mississippi.

MISSISSIPPI FACES HARD RIGHTS PUSH

2,000 Workers to Conduct South's Widest Program

By CLAUDE SITTON
Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss., March 15 —The most extensive program of Negro education and political action seen in the South was outlined for Mississippi today by civil rights organizations.

Plans for the program, named the Mississippi Freedom Summer, call for an effort by 2,000 full-time workers, including 1,000 white and Negro college students from both the North and the South.

Detailed proposals for the campaign, which is expected to reach into every corner of this Deep South state, were approved at a conference of the Council of Federated Organizations in the Masonic Building.

The council has been pressing a voter registration drive in Mississippi since the spring of 1962. It is made up of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the Congress of Racial Equality and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

2 to Direct Program

The Freedom Summer program will be headed by Robert P. Moses, a student committee field secretary who will be the project director, and David Dennis, a CORE field representative, who will be assistant project director. It provides for the following:

¶Freedom schools that will offer intensive instruction in a broad curriculum ranging from remedial reading to political science.

¶Community centers that will provide job retraining, instruction in prenatal care, nutrition and other health problems, recreation facilities, art and craft classes and drama groups, organized sports and folk festivals.

¶A "freedom registration" designed to place 400,000 Negroes on mock voter lists and thus demonstrate their desire to obtain the franchise.

¶A "freedom election" to be held during the regular Mississippi Democratic primary on June 2.

¶Campaigns supporting two Negro "freedom party" Congressional candidates.

¶Challenges on the floor of the House of Representatives to the right of Mississippi's delegation to hold seats on the ground that many Negroes in the state are denied the franchise.

Civil rights leaders who described the program at a news conference said considerable preparatory work had already been done.

Mississippi Negroes Plan To Enter 2 in House Races

By United Press International

Negro leaders announced Sunday night they will put up two congressional candidates in Mississippi this year and that they will bring in 1,000 Northern college students to work in a "peace corps" for voter registration this summer.

The announcement was made at Jackson by the "Council of Federated Organizations" COFO — a group of various major civil rights organizations.

COFO said Mrs. Fannie Lou Hamer of Ruleville plans to run for Congress in the 2nd District and Rev. John Cameron of Hattiesburg in the 5th District. Spokesmen said the two would seek to get their names on the June Democratic primary ballot.

Aaron Henry, Mississippi president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said if Mrs. Hamer and Cameron lost, they would go to Washington anyway and try to unseat the winning white candidates.

"We intend to challenge these congressmen for their seats on the floor of Congress because they cannot be legally elected where so many Negroes are deprived of voting," Henry said.

¶Challenges on the floor of the House of Representatives to the right of Mississippi's delegation to hold seats on the ground that many Negroes in the state are denied the franchise.

Civil rights leaders who described the program at a news conference said considerable preparatory work had already been done.

Seven "freedom centers" are recruiting white and Negro college students. The volunteers will be asked to pay the cost of their transportation to and from Mississippi and their expenses, expected to range from $180 to $200, for the summer. Local Negro families will provide housing for them.

The college centers are at the University of Oregon, Oberlin College, Stanford University, the University of Illinois, the University of North Carolina, Harvard University and Yale University. Thirteen off-campus recruiting centers are operating in other areas.

2 Community Centers

Two of the community centers are already in operation in Meridian and Greenwood, according to council spokesmen. And the National Council of Churches has promised to set up 15 others in the Mississippi River Delta.

In reply to questions, Aaron Henry, a Clarksdale druggist who is state president of the N.A.A.C.P., said the association and the three other civil rights groups that belong to the council would finance the Freedom Summer campaign.

The Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council has provided funds for the voter registration drive in Mississippi since 1962. But it withdrew its support recently, after spending more than $50,000, on the ground that white resistance to registration at this point made further effort almost futile.

Mr. Moses said much of the campaign would be keyed to political action. He said the "freedom registration" drive would be designed to show that white resistance rather than apathy was responsible for the fact that only 20,000 to 28,000 Negroes, according to varying estimates, are registered.

The voting provisions of the civil rights bill now being debated in the Senate will do little to change the situation if they remain in their present form, the project director asserted.

MISSISSIPPI FREEDOM SUMMER

Freedom Schools

FREEDOM SCHOOLS will be during the summer. They are schools where high school students will be able to talk about things they can't talk about in regular school. They will learn about civil rights.

There will be classes for students who:

1. have trouble with their lessons in regular school and want to do better,

2. like to read and want to learn more than they are taught in regular school.

There will be singing, dancing, sports, hikes and many other things for all students.

Some of the FREEDOM SCHOOLS will be for people who spend 6 weeks away from home to live at them.

ALL OF THE FREEDOM SCHOOLS WILL BE FREE.

Voter Registration

ARE YOU A REGISTERED VOTER?

If we were all voting then things would be better in Mississippi.

We would have:

- enough food
- more jobs
- better schools
- better houses
- paved sidewalks

People coming here this summer can work with you on VOTER REGISTRATION. They can knock on doors, teach the registration forms and drive people to the courthouse. They can help in any way you want them to.

Community Centers

A COMMUNITY CENTER is a place where everyone can do many different things. It will be mostly for adults and will offer many chances for them to learn things to help them live better.

COMMUNITY CENTERS will have:

- job training programs
- classes for people who cannot read or write
- classes on child care
- health programs
- adult education and Negro history classes
- music, drama, and arts and crafts workshops

If you have small children, they will be taken care of while you enjoy the COMMUNITY CENTER.

EVERYTHING AT THE COMMUNITY CENTER WILL BE FREE.

What You Can Do:

This is your FREEDOM SUMMER. It will not work without your help.

COFO is asking you to:
- provide housing for the people who are coming to work here.
- look for buildings which can be used for Freedom Schools and Community Centers.
- get names of students who want to go to Freedom Schools.
- let us know when you have meetings or arrange meetings so we can come answer questions about the FREEDOM SUMMER.

Many people are coming here to work during our FREEDOM SUMMER. They want to learn about Mississippi. They feel that the problems here are the problems of people all over the country. Most of them will be college students, both Negro and white.

COFO is your organization. The things it is trying to do should be done by the state. The people who have been elected to run the state say that they do not have to do things for Negroes.

IT IS THE FAULT OF THE STATE that you cannot:
- find work
- read and write
- send your children to better schools.

If you work with COFO you will be working to get yourself the better conditions you deserve.

What Is COFO?

COFO is an organization made up of all the civil rights and local citizenship groups in Mississippi which decided they must work together to improve conditions in Mississippi.

Meridian Community Center--Later Report

I. Programs in operation

1. The library, from which children, teenagers, and adults have all drawn books. There are about 10,000 volumes now up, and additional shelving is being put up for more books not yet received. Shelves were built by local young men: Marshall and David Sims, and James Chaney. The books have been catalogued on a simple basis, and books are therefore checked out in a systematic way. No fines are charged for overdue books, yet books have been coming back on time. The reasons for not fining are that if children especially, have overdue books we do not want to discourage their coming to the center by having a fine due. Some people, too, have never owned a book, and if they want a book that badly (not many, of course), it is felt that it would help them more than it would hurt the library. All books but the reference works may be taken out.

2. Story hour, held every Saturday afternoon for children five-ten years old. At this time children have stories read to them, songs are sung, refreshments served, and time is given for them to wander around and pick out their own books to take out. Children are given transportation to and from the center where necessary. Growth of this program has been due to leaflet distribution and word of mouth.

3. For those people who need voter registration instruction, evening classes have been set up twice a week. The center will also serve as a training location for those who wish to teach others to fill out registration forms. Publicity due to posters, leaflet distribution and word of mouth.

4. Teen room: One of the rooms in the center has been set aside for teens and young adults. A ping-pong table has been constructed by the boys previously mentioned. A phonograph is in the room and records are being collected. Games and other activities for teens will be provided We now have a movie projector and are in the process of obtaining films. Aside from the recreational and social activities, we hope to involve teens in educational and civil rights participation. Publicity through leaflets distributed at high school basketball game, and largel word of mouth.

4. Reading and remedial help for all that want it. Although this is primarily aimed at the child still in school, anyone can use the service. After numbers of people become involved, regular classes will be set up on a more formal basis.

II. Projected Programs

1. Sewing classes for girls who would like to make their own clothes are now being set up. Material will be obtained through national CORE from the ILGWU, and a machine is being solicited from various sources. The need for this is apparent and can probably expand into a highly successful program. If patterns are needed, the girls will be asked to purchase that and everything else will be available free.

2. Because of high infant mortality rates, a prenatal class for expectant mothers and mothers of infants will be given by a trained nurse. General health problems will also be discussed.

3. Films will be shown once a week--discussed above.

4. Other programs which are projected for the future would include arts and crafts programs with good materials and trained instructors, work corps to assist people in repairing their homes, job retraining and training programs which might be handled by interested unions. Many of these ideas fall into the realm of summer programs, depending upon how much staff is assigned to us here in Meridian. We might also have use for someone trained in teaching foreign language, as none is taught at the local high school and we have had several requests; no one on the present staff can give such lessons.

Because of the utter lack of almost all social services within the city, one could go on and on. As for expansion into churches and other facilities, more research will have to be done.

IV. Publicity has been carried out by several means:

1. Ministers were contacted by letter, and attempts made to speak with as many as possible personally.
2. Church services have been attended.
3. NAACP youth council has been involved in door-to-door canvassing for voter registration.
4. Leaflets have been distributed on the street and at a local high school basketball game.
5. Posters have been placed in store windows.
6. Our greatest publicity has come from people who have come up to see the center and then told their friends about it.

Psychologically the center is filling a need among the people for recognition, for a place to come and talk, for something that is for them. At first there was some suspicion of us as whites, but we believe that most of this has passed. Before we came there had been other workers in and out of Meridian, and the people are anxious to know that we intend to stay. They feel important to have workers assigned to their city. We believe that the Negroes will accept more white workers in the summer program, though the white community is already jumpy--but this is to be expected, and does not bother us.

IV. Sketch of the physical layout of the center:

PROSPECTUS FOR SUMMER FREEDOM SCHOOL PROGRAM IN MISSISSIPPI

The Proposal

It is, I think, just about universally recognized that Mississippi education, for black or white, is grossly inadequate in comparison with education around the country. Negro education in Mississippi is the most inadequate and inferior in the state. Mississippi's impoverished educational system is also burdened with virtually a complete absence of academic freedom, and students forced to live in an environment that is geared to squash intellectual curiosity, and differe thinking. University of Mississippi Professor James Silver, in a recent speech, talked of "social paralysis....where nonconformity is forbidden, where the white man is not free, where he does not dare express a deviating opinion without looking over his shoulder." This "social paralysis" is not limited to the white community, however. Ther are Negro students who have been thrown out of classes for asking about voting, or the freedom rides. Negro teachers have been fired for saying the wrong thing. The State of Mississippi destroys "smart niggers" and its classrooms remain intellectual wastelands.

In our work, we have several concerns oriented around Mississippi Negro students:
1. The need to get into the schools around the state and organize the students, with the possibility of a statewide coordinated student movement developing.
2. A student force to work with us in our efforts around the state and
3. the responsibility to fill an intellectual and creative vacum in the lives of young Negro Mississippians, and to get them to articulate their own desires, demands and questions. More students need to stand up in classrooms around the state, and ask their teachers a real question.

As the summer program for Mississippi now shapes up, it seems as if hundreds of students as well as professional educators from some of the best universities and colleges in the North will be coming to Mississippi to lend themselves to the movement. These are some of the best minds in the country, and their academic value ought to be recognized, and taken advantage of.

I would like to propose summer Freedom Schools during the months of July and August, for tenth and eleventh-grade high school students, in order to:
1. supplement what they aren't learning in high schools around the state,
2. give them a broad intellectual and academic experience during the summer to bring back to fellow students in classrooms in the state, and,
3. form the basis for statewide student action such as school boycotts, based on their increased awareness.

I emphasize tenth and eleventh-grade students, because of the need to be assured of having a working force that remains in the state high schools putting to use what it has learned.

The curriculum of this school would fall into several groupings:
1. supplementary education, such as basic grammar, reading, math, typing, history, etc. The use of some of the already-developed programmed educational materials might be used experimentally.
2. cultural programs such as art and music appreciation, dance (both folk and modern), music (both folk and classical), drama, possibly creative writing workshops, for it is important that the art of effective communication through the written word be developed in Mississipp students,
3. political and social science, relating their studies to their society. This should be a prominent part of the curriculum.
4. literature
5. film programs.

Special projects, such as a student newspaper, voicing student opinion, or the laying of plans for a statewide student conference, could play a vital role in the program. Special attention should be given to the development of a close student-teacher relationship. Four or five students to one teacher might be good, as it offers the chance of dialogue. The overall theme of the school would be the student as a force for social change in Mississippi.

The Freedom Schools should have a special for many of the students planning to come to Mississippi this summer, as this would be a project they could follow through from the beginning to the end - watch develop and would have some definition. Some of the newer ideas, now circulating in educational circles, whatever they are, might be incorporated into this program.

If we are concerned about breaking the power structure, then we have to be concerned about building our own institutions to replace the old, unjust, decadent ones which mak up the existing power structure. Education in Mississippi is an institution which can be validly replaced, s most of the educational institutions in the state are not recognized around the country anyway.

The Program

The Freedom School concenpt will be carried out on two levels:

1. a boarding school concenpt involving 150 to 250 students selected from a statewide student population. The students will come together in a campus-dormitory type of situation where they will live with the staff.

Preferably the boarding schools will be held in the state , tho gh it may be necessary to take the students to a site in some nearby state. The boarding school will start July 12 and continue straight through until August 22.

The following sites are being considered as possibilities:

a. Mary Holmes College
Presbyterian Church School
West Point, Mississippi

c. Gulfside Methodist Church Conference Site Waveland, Mississippi

d. All Saints College
Holmes County, Mississippi

2. A number of smaller, less intensive day schools will be held in the communities listed below. The day Freedom Schools will operate on a 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM schedule. These schools will run in two sessions, the first session from July 8-30 and the second session from August 8-31.

In the areas where the facilities are available on a long-term basis and local citizens are interested in the project, the day school should be thought of as a first step toward a community center.

Day School Sites (by Congressional District)

1. Columbus
2. Ruleville
   Greenville
   Greenwood
   Holmes County Mound Bayou
   Clarksdale
3. Jackson

The Freedom School Curriculum

It is considered that the curriculum should cover the material listed in the following outline as thoroughly as possible.

1. Leadership Development

   a. to give students the perspective of being in a long line of protest and pressure for social and economic justice (i.e. to teach Negro history and the history of the movement).
   b. to educate students in the general goals of the movement, give them wider perspectives (enlarged social objectives, nonviolence, etc.).
   c. to train students in specific organizational skills that they need to develop Southern Negro communities.
      1. public speaking
      2. handling of press and publicity
      3. getting other people to work
      4. organizing mass meetings and workshops, getting speakers, etc.

5. keeping financial records, affidavits, reports, etc.
6. developing skill in dealing with people in the community
7. canvassing
8. duplicating techniques, typing, etc.

d. to plan with each other future action of the student movement.

11. Remedial Academic Work

a. to improve comprehension in reading, fluency and expressiveness in writing.
b. to improve mathematical skill (general arithmetic and basic algebra and geometry).
c. to fill the gaps in knowledge of basic history and sociology, especially American.
d. to give a general picture of the American economic and politic system.
e. to introduce students to art, music and literature of various classical periods, emphasizing distinctive features of each style, and
f. to add to knowledge of and ability to use the scientific method

111. contemporary Issues

a. to give students more sophisticated views of some current issues
b. to introduce students to thinking of local difficulties in a context of national problems, and
c. to acquaint students with procedures of investigating a problem - rudimentary research.

1V. Non-academic Curriculum

a. to allow students to meet each other as completely as possible- to form a network of student leaders who know each other. (i.e. Recreation - sports, dances, etc., besides academic side)
b. to give students experience in organization and leadership
   1. field - voter registration
   2. student publications
   3. student government
c. to improve their ability to express themselves informally (through creative writing, drama, talent shows, semi-spontaneous discussions, etc.)

Conference on the Curriculum

On the third week-end in March (March 21-22) a working conference wil be held in New York City under the sponsorship of the Natioanl Council of Churches for the purpose of defining specific curriculum for the Freedom Schools and the educational program of the Community Centers for these target populations:

1. The usual high school student, who reads and writes poorly, has trouble even with basic arithmetic, and whose general knowledge of science, social studies and humanities is sketchy.

2. The poor student who may be intelligent , but whose verbal and mathematical skills are rudimentary, and who has very little knowledge of "cultural" subjects taught in school.

3. The student with adequate verbal and mathematical skills who usually does well in Mississippi schools, but who has gaps in his general cultural knowledge, and who has had no opportunity to take his education farther than basic skills and subjects, or to discuss controversial subjects in an investigative and honest spirit.

4. The functionally illiterate adult

5. The school-age child presently attending elementary school, but not learning the basic reading, writing and mathematical skills. These children come, often, from homes where their parents are uneducated and cannot teach them what they miss in school.

From the curricula developed at this conference, specific, detailed lists of necessary equipment will be made for purposes of solicitation.

Staff of the Freedom Schools

A high student-teacher ratio is sought in the summer educational program, on the assumption that this will facilitate the overall program. Both professionals and non-professionals will participate as staff in the program. Professional staff will come from the professional teachers associations, the National Council of Churches, the Presbyterian Church and various other institutions with educational resources. The non-professional staff will be selected from among the applications for the summer project.

The boarding school staff and staff for the first session of the day schools will go through a general orientation program with the community centers staff. This orientation program will run July8-12. On July 13, the boarding school and first session of the day schools will receive students. Orientations for the teaching staff of the second session of the day schools will be held August 5-9. On August 10, the second session of the day schools will start receiving classes.

Students

Students for these projects will be recruited through established contacts with ministers, educators, and other organizational contacts in the state. Several applications have already been returned. A statewide student organization, the Mississippi Student Union, is now being developed and will be important in the recruitment of students.

Prospectus for the Summer

"It can be argued that in the history of the United States democracy has produced great leaders in great crises. Sad as it may be, the opposite has been true in Mississippi. As yet there is little evidence that the society of the closed mind will ever possess the moral resources to reform itself, or the capacity for self-examination, or even the tolerance of self-examination."

from Mississippi: The Closed Society
by James W. Silver

It has become evident to the civil rights groups involved in the struggle for freedom in Mississippi that political and social justice cannot be won without massive aid from the country as a whole, backed by the power and authority of the federal government. Almost no hope exists that the political leaders of Mississippi will steer even a moderate course in the near future; in fact, the contrary seems true: as the winds of change grow stronger, the threatened political elite of Mississippi become more intransigent and fanatical in their support of the status quo. The closed society of Mississippi is as Professor Silver asserts, without the moral resources to reform itself. And Negro efforts to win the right to vote cannot succeed agains the extensive legal weapons and police powers of local and state officials without a nationwide mobilization of support.

Therefore, a program is being planned for this summer which will involve the massive participation of Americans dedicated to the elimination of racial oppression. Scores of students, teachers, professors, ministers, technicians, artists and legal advisors are now being recruited from all over the country to work in Mississippi this summer. Within the state intensive preparations have been underway since mid-January to develop structured programs which will put to creative use the talents and energies of the hundreds of expected summer volunteers These programs can be divided generally into four main areas: Freedom Schools, Community Centers, voter registration and special projects.

Freedom Schools: Plans are being made to set up as many Freedom Schools as can be realistically made to work. The number will ultimately vary according to the amount of housing that can be found in an area, the presence of facilities, and the recruitment of qualified staff personnel. Recent projections call for roughly ten day Freedom Schools and two or three away-from-home schools. The day Freedom Schools will for the most part draw 10th, 11th and 12th grade students from the locale. Each school will have a high student-teacher ratio, perhaps one teacher for every four students, so that instruction can be as individual as possible. It can be estimated that day Freedom Schools will have approximately fifty students and fifteen teachers each. Curriculum for these schools will cover a wide area: remedial work in reading, math, and basic grammar; seminars in politica science and the humanities, journalism and creative writing; recreational programs such as dramatics, music appreciation, arts and crafts, organized athletics, and movies; and voter registration field work. In addition, students will be encouraged to develop a school newspaper and organize a student government. Whenever possible, studies will be related to the society in which the students live. Away-from-home Freedom Schools will draw particular students from around the state. At present, two such schools are planned: one for high school drop-outs with a curriculum especially designed to prepare them for the State's high school equivalency test, the other for advanced high school students, possibly college students also, emphasizing political science and economics.

The Freedom Schools represent an integral part of COFO's voter registration activities. They will provide politically emerging communities with new young leadership, and will constitute a real attack on the present stifling system of education existing in the State. By the end of the summer, it is hoped that the basis will have been laid throughout the state of Mississippi for a cadre of student leadership committed to critical thought and social action.

Community Centers: The Community Centers program projects a network of educational and recreational centers across the State. Conceived as a long-range project, the Centers will provide a variety of programs geared to serve the basic needs of the Negro communities presently ignored by the State's racist political structure. In addition, a dynamic focus for the development of community organization will be formed. The educational features of the Centers will include job training programs for the unskilled and unemployed, literacy and remedial programs for adults and young people, public health program such as prenatal and infant care, basic nutrition, etc. to attempt to alleviate some of the serious health problems of Negro Mississippians. (For example, the Negro infant mortality rate in some counties is so high as to invite comparison with "underdeveloped nations".) Centers would also provide adult education workshops which would offer seminars on such topics as family relations, federal service programs, home improvement, and other information vital to the needs of Negro communities. Extracurricular programs for grade and high school students,which will supplement educational deficiencies as well as provide opportunity for critical thought and creative expression, are to be offered. Each Center will provide a well-rounded library -- to which Negroes in many communities have no access at the present time.

Though the Community Center program is primarily educational, some of each Center's resources will be used to provide much needed recreational facilities for the Negro community. Other than taverns, movies are the only recreational facility in most Mississippi communities, and for the Negro, this means segregated movies. If there is a movie theater in the Negro section of the community, it is inevitably old, run-down, and generally features out-of-date, third-rate Hollywood films. The film program of the Centers will provide a more agreeable atmosphere for movies, and will offer films of serious content, which are rarely shown in Mississippi, where ideas are rigily controlled. Other recreational programming will be music appreciation workshops. arts and crafts classes, drama groups, discussion sessions on current events, literature, Negro history and achievement, etc., pen pal clubs, organized sports (where equipment permits), and occasional special performances by outside entertainers, folk festivals, jazz concerts, etc. Organized story telling for young children will be offered as entertainment, and will introduce them to the resources of the library and to pleasure reading.

Voter Registration: Workers will mobilize the Negro communities and assist in developing local leadership and organization. They will be involved in an effort to encourage as many Negroes as possible to attempt to register on the county books and will assist in a campaign, launched in February, to register over 400,000 Negroes on Freedom registration books. The Freedom registration campaign will involve establishing local registrars in every precinct in Mississippi with registration books resembling as much as possible the official books of the state. The Freedom registration books will serve as the basis for challenging the official books of the state and the validity of "official" elections this fall. Finally, voter registration workers will assist in the summer campaigns of Freedom candidates who will be running for congress.

The voter registration workers will be deployed around the state in a number of ways: 1) every rural county will have a four man team. Wherever possible, attempts will be made to find housing in the county, but if housing cannot be found, the four man team could work the county while based in a nearby urban area; 2) there will be large numbers of students working in each fair-sized city; 3) saturation areas: there will be two, or possibly three, cities where a massive number of students, roughly 100 will be concentrated. Three possible areas would be Jackson, Meridian, and Greenville; 4) mobile units of four men and a car would fill gaps in the state political program and would move into crisis areas if the need develops.

Special Projects:

a. Research Project: A number of summer workers will devote themselves entirely to research on the economic and political life of Mississippi. Some of this work will be done from out of the state, but much will need resources which can only be found in Mississippi. In addition, a number of people will be asked to live in white communities to survey attitudes and record reactions to summer happenings.

b. Legal Project: A team of lawyers and at least 100 law students are expected to come to Mississippi to launch a massive legal offensive against the official tyranny of the state of Mississippi. Law students will be dispersed to projects around the state to serve as legal advisors to voter registration workers and to local people. Others will be concentrated in key areas where they will engage in legal research and begin to prepare suits against the state and local Officials and to challenge every law that deprives Negroes of their freedom.

c. White Communities: Until now there has been no systematic attempt by people interested in the elimination of hate and bigotry to work within the white communities of the deep South. It is the intention of the Mississippi Summer Project to do just that. In the past year, a significant number of Southern white students have been drawn to the Movement. Using students from upper Southern states like Tennessee, and occasionally native Mississippians, SNCC hopes to develop programs within Mississippi's white community. These programs will deal directly with the problems of the white people. While almost all Negroes in Mississippi are denied the right to vote, statistics clearly indicate that a majority of whites are excluded as well. On addition, poverty and illiteracy can be found in abundance among Mississippi whites. There is in fact a clear area for Southern white students to work in, for in many ways Mississippi has imprisoned her white people along with her blacks. This project will be pilot and experimental and the results are unpredictable. But the effort to organize and educate whites in the direction of democracy and decency can no longer be delayed.

d. The Theater Project: Sponsored by the Tougaloo Drama Department. This summer will also mark the beginning of a repertory theater in Jackson, Mississippi. The actors will be Negro Mississippians; the plays will dramatize the experience of the Negro in Mississippi and in America; the stage will be the churches, community centers and fields of rural Mississippi.

Using the theater as an instrument of education as well as a source of entertainment, a new area of protest will be opened.

MISSISSIPPI SUMMER PROJECT

VOTER REGISTRATION

The struggle for freedom in Mississippi can only be won by a combination of action within the state and a heightened awareness throughout the country of the need for massive federal intervention to ensure the voting rights of Negroes. This summer's program will work toward both objectives.

Voter registration workers will operate in every rural county and important urban area in the state. These workers will be involved in a summer-long drive to mobilize the Negro community of Mississippi and assist in developing local leadership and organization.

Forty thousand dollars must be raised for a Freedom Registration campaign. The registration campaign which was launched in February will be implemented by summer workers. Freedom Registrars will be established in every precinct, with registration books closely resembling the official books of the state. The Freedom Registration books will serve as a basis for challenging the official books and the validity of "official" federal elections this fall.

Finally, voter registration workers will assist in the summer campaigns of Freedom Candidates who will be running for congressional office.

FREEDOM SCHOOLS

An integral part of SNCC's voter registration work is the development of leadership for politically emerging communities. Freedom Schools will begin to supply the political education which the existing system does not provide for Negroes in Mississippi.

The summer project will establish ten daytime Freedom Schools and three resident schools. The daytime schools will be attended by 10th, 11th, and 12th grade pupils; the schools will operate five days a week in the students' home towns. Instruction will be highly individualized—each school will have about fifteen teachers and fifty students. The program will include remedial work in reading, math and basic grammar, as well as seminars in political science, the humanities, journalism and creative writing. Wherever possible, studies will be related to problems in the students' own society.

The three resident schools will be attended by more advance students from throughout the state. The program will be essentially the same as that of the day schools, with emphasis on political studies.

The students who attend the schools will provide Mississippi with a nucleus of leadership committed to critical thought and social action.

COMMUNITY CENTERS

In addition to the Freedom Schools, Community Centers will provide services normally denied the Negro community in Mississippi. Staffed by experienced social workers, nurses, librarians and teachers in the arts and crafts, the centers will provide educational and cultural programs for the community. Instruction will be given in pre-natal and infant care, and general hygiene; programs will provide adult literacy and vocational training. The thirty thousand books now in SNCC's Greenwood office library will be distributed to these centers, and others will be obtained. The centers will serve as places of political education and organization, and will provide a structure to channel a wide range of programs into the Negro community in the future.

RESEARCH PROJECT

The program of voter registration and political organization will attempt to change the fundamental structure of political and economic activity in Mississippi. In order to accurately picture this structure, extensive research must be done into Mississippi's suppressive political and economic life. Skilled personnel are needed to carry out this program both from within and outside the state.

WHITE COMMUNITY PROJECT

The effort to organize and educate Mississippi whites in the direction of democracy and decency can no longer be delayed. About thirty students, Southern whites who have recently joined the civil rights movement, will begin pilot projects in white communities. An attempt will be made to organize poor white areas to make steps toward eliminating bigotry, poverty and ignorance.

LAW STUDENT PROJECT

A large number of law students will come to Mississippi to launch a massive legal offensive against the official tyranny of the state. The time has come to challenge every Mississippi law which deprives Negroes of their rights, and to bring suit against every state and local official who commits crimes in the name of his office.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE MISSISSIPPI PROJECT

Although the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee has active projects in thirteen Southern states, it has achieved its most dynamic success in the state of Mississippi. A state where individual political life is nonexistant, where the economic condition of a vast majority of the population is appalling, the home of white supremacy, Mississippi has become the main target of SNCC's staff and resources.

In August, 1961, SNCC went into Mississippi under the leadership of Project Director Robert Moses. Overcoming violence and hardship, SNCC workers have been able to expand their activity into all five of Mississippi's congressional districts. By fall, 1963, SNCC had joined with CORE, SCLC, the NAACP and many voting and civic groups in forming a statewide organization, the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO), and through COFO conducted a Freedom Vote campaign in which 80,000 disenfranchised Negroes cast ballots for Aaron Henry for Governor.

Preparation for real democracy calls for additional programs in the state. Literacy projects have been instituted, and food and clothing drives. But much more comprehensive programs are needed to combat the terrible cultural and economic deprivation of Negro communities in Mississippi.

This summer, SNCC, in cooperation with COFO, is launching a massive Peace Corps-type operation in Mississippi. Students, teachers, technicians, nurses, artists and legal advisors will be recruited to come to Mississippi to staff a wide range of programs that include voter registration, freedom schools, community centers and special projects.

PROGRESS IN MISSISSIPPI DEPENDS ON YOU

The Mississippi Summer Project needs money now to establish and support the activities described in this pamphlet. We are asking the people of America—individuals as well as institutions—to contribute now to assist SNCC in its commitment to the struggle for justice in the state of Mississippi.

A contribution in any amount will be of help. For example:

$5 will supply school materials for one day-student for the entire summer.

$25 will pay the utility bills for one Freedom School for the summer.

$50 will buy office materials for one voter registration field office.

$100 will buy materials for a home nursing and baby care class for one Community Center.

$125 will buy one tape recorder for a Freedom School.

$400 will provide scholarship money for one Southern Negro college student, enabling him to return to school after working in Mississippi for the summer.

$2000 will rent and remodel a building for one Community Center.

$3000 will buy one used bus for transporting vote workers and registrants.

REPORT OF THE CITIZENS COMMITTEE ON UNITY

We, the members of the Citizens Committee, in an attempt to maintain human dignity in the gigantic struggle for human rights and civil liberties as prescribed in the United States Constitution, present the following report:

This report is the results of a meeting of community citizens who met at Butler Presbyterian Church in November and discussed ways and means of unifying factional civil rights groups in Savannah. A Committee of seven citizens was formed to work out a possible solution to our immediate community problems. The need for some degree of cooperation between the various civil rights groups is exemplified by the holding of two civil rights meetings at the same time on Sundays, by one organization encouraging the citizens to invoke a selective boycott and another organization telling the citizens it has nothing to do with a boycott. It is alsc exemplified by the operation of two separate Negotiation committees each justifiably proud of its accomplishment; but you can easily see the problem when the same individual is contacted by two separate groups. It is further exemplified by one group asking public support in demonstrations, while another group has nothing to do with it. Now we have reached the point where one organization publicly demonstrates against the other. We, the Committee on Unity, feel that no individual or group of individuals representing the Negroes of Savannah should do or say anything that does not represent the opinion of the masses or is for the betterment of the community.

The following proposals from the Citizens Committee on Unity are what we feel will be for the good of all in this comminity:

1. That joint weekly meetings of the N.A.A.C.P. and Crusade For Voters be held, presided over alternately. Proceeds from these meetings are to be divided equally. If they do not decide to hold joint meetings, then they will hold individual meetings every other Sunday.
2. To enhance public support and confidence we request a public financial statement every three to six months from each organization.
3. That each organization operate within its charter and that neither will engage in any controversial activities (boycotts, sit-ins, wade-ins, etc.) in the community without the majority vote by secret ballot of the respective board of directors. In the event of a deadlock the Citizens Committee would cast the deciding vote.

4. That the parent body of each organization be held responsible for the actions of their youth groups.

5. That each organization cease and desist as of now from making public statements that will be construded as against the other. That they refrain from alienating Negroes against each other on the basis of differences in economic or social status.

6. That this Committee be maintained as a permanent group to see that the adopted proposals are adhered to and serve as a grievance committee and nediation body.

7. That these recommendations must be accepted or rejected by the N.A.A.C.P., Crusade For Voters, The various Ministerial Alliances, labor groups, The Mid-Town Chamber of Commerce, and other civic groups within thirty days. In the event it is ratified by all groups mentioned except the first two mentioned, it would become binding on the first two.

8. That all previous negotiations made in good faith by representative groups become binding on the part of all concerned.

9. That joint committees representing the N.A.A.C.P., Crusade For Voters, Ministerial Alliance, Mid-Town Chamber of Commerce, and Organized Labor be maintained for negotation. job placement, and training opportunities.

10. That in the event the N.A.A.C.P. or the Crusade For Voters refuse to accept and abide by the adopted proposals on unity, without satisfying this committee and the community at large with a valid reason, then these proposals will be made public in the News media and the community will be asked to with-hold their support from the group or groups not accepting them, until such a time that a workable, acceptable agreement can be reached that will do justice to the community and citizens at large. WE, will further ask the pastors and members of the various churches not to open their doors to that group or groups which will not abide by the adopted proposals.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton and Randolph T. Blackwell

From: Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.

RE: Field Trip to Savannah, Georgia, on December 15-17

The Savannah situation can hardly be reported without some history and background of the civil rights movement there. Historically, Savannah has been an NAACP town. This was the case prior to the sit-in movement and subsequent thereto, except for the division that has presently come to a head between the NAACP and the Crusade for Voters.

The Savannah branch, under the leadership of W. W. Law, president, and Hosea L. Williams, vice-president, followed up sit-ins by the Savannah State College Chapter, and the Youth Council with an intensive, successful 15-month boycott that resulted in the desegregation of the downtown lunch counters. During this period, the entire Negro community was united behind Law as the leader, and Williams as Law's right-hand man. According to reliable persons in the community, Williams was also considered as Law's "hatchet man."

The Crusade for Voters was organized to engage in political activity and voter registration. The organization in its early stages, was considered a subsidiary of the NAACP. Williams was elected president and many of the NAACP board members served on the Crusade for Voters board. A monthly budget item for the NAACP was $100 for the Crusade. It is reported that much of the present difficulty was precipitated when Law, through committee action, cut off the support. The reason for the cutting off of funds is not clearly understood, but the speculation is that Williams and Law had come to a parting of the ways about other matters involving the two groups, and the personal ambitions of both.

Law, for a long time, has been well aware of Williams' ambitions to be in the spotlight. Actually, Williams planned to contest Law for the NAACP state presidency at Columbus, Georgia, in 1961. Williams decided later that because of Law's nationwide publicity, resulting from his suspension by the U. S. Post Office, the time was not ripe to run against him. Williams was right because at that time, Law was the Georgia NAACP's hero.

The differences between Law and Williams were accentuated during the NAACP's national convention inAtlanta during 1962. Williams maneuvered his name into nomination as a candidate for the National Board of Directors from Georgia to represent the southeast region. Williams was pitted against Jesse Turner, Memphis, Tennessee; Floyd McKissick, Durham, North Carolina; and Theodore Gibson, of Miami, Florida.

The unit rule was voted by the various delegations. Under the unit rule, the state president generally speaks for his state, and does the "horse trading" and political maneuvering. Law has some political weight at NAACP conventions in the southeastern region. Said weight is derived from control of a unit vote and the ability to influence other state prexys to block vote with him on certain issues.

As a result, and much to the anger of Williams, Law threw his weight behind Gibson of Florida and thereby Georgia failed to support Williams, even as a favorite son. Two reasons might be cited for Law's action: (1) His feeling that Williams had not been faithfully active on the state NAACP level, and (2) There was no board member from Florida. Indirectly involved was a North Carolina move to stop McKissick who was stronger with delegations than his own.

Williams took the course of events here to be a personal renunciation of him by Law as well as the Georgia State Conference. I venture an opinion here that Williams has never forgiven Law for this. Law said to me at the airport Sunday that he believes Williams has wanted to be president of the Savannah NAACP for some time, and still does. Law did not respond to my inquiry, "Can you blame him?"

There is no question but that much of their difficulty stems from the fact that they are very much alike. What they learned about the movement, motivating people, direct action, and getting the job done, they learned together and from each other. Both are fighters from within and without. Both can be cruel and ruthless if that's what it takes to get the job done. Both have tremendous pride and boundless ego with Williams' probably taking the lead in the latter.

When working for the NAACP, I was in Savannah to attempt to reconcile some minor differences between them. Somewhere in the process, they forgot differences, and I was the target, and there's no experience like having the joint venom of Law and Williams spewed on you, especially when you are trying to help. One gets the feeling that they teamed up on the arbitrator (me) in order to get a new lease on disagreeing with each other.

Sunday, December 15, Law and Mr. E. H. Gadsden, attorney, met me at the airport and took me immediately to the Desoto Hotel, Savannah's oldest and largest. They said they wanted me to go there rather than the Manger Hotel because the Desoto, though desegregated, needed the presence of Negroes to better facilitate the transition. I was cordially received at the Desota.

I addressed the NAACP mass meeting at 4 p. m. The church, medium in size, was filled to its downstairs capacity with approximately 250 persons. The audience consisted primarily of senior citizens. There were, however, some young people present. This came as somewhat a surprise, because heretofore, the branch mass meetings have been fairly evenly balanced.

During the course of my rantings and ravings about freedom and voter registration, I paused long enough to make the following points without referring directly to the factional fight. (1) Freedom is everyone's business, and no one person or organization has all the answers or techniques; (2) It takes more energy than we have to fight the white people, therefore we should not waste time fighting each other; (3) That leaders have to recognize that their primary responsibility is to the people rather than vindication of personal grievances. The response to these points came loud and fervent - "Amen!" - "Preach the Word!" - "Now, that's the truth!"

Also at 4 p. m., the Crusade was holding its weekly mass meeting where Andy Young of SCLC held forth. I understand from Williams that his crowd was larger than Westley's and had more young people. The public collection at each meeting was between $80 and $85.

Immediately after the meeting, Law confronted Curtis Cooper, chairman of the branch public relations committee, and gave him hell for not being up front and taking notes on my speech. Cooper took Law's remarks jokingly at first, and said that he had recorded certain pertinent facts in his head. Law persisted to the point that Cooper cursed him and said, "Leave me alone, man. Leave me alone." The implication was that Law was a chronic complainer. Cooper has remained faithful to Law throughout the NAACP-Crusade confusion, but his expression, his anger, and hasty departure might have led him either away from the movement altogether or directly to the Crusade office to volunteer his services.

Law told me later that he had called Cooper several times and had gone to his home to get things straight. I never felt, however, that Law was going to apologize, but rather convince Cooper that he should have been up front.

Mercedes Wright, the sweetheart of the NAACP, and an excellent leader of women during the long Savannah boycott, was quite disturbed by the Law-Cooper incident. She expressed more concern about the possibility of Law alienating good people from the branch than about the Law-Williams feud. She is, however, gravely concerned about the latter because of her loyalty and cooperation over the years with both. She indicated that Williams was no doubt engaging tactics similar to the Law-Cooper incident. Mrs. Wright has pledged to chair the NAACP Freedom Fund dinner scheduled for early next year. She may well, at a later date, do a similar project for the Crusade with the same degree of success. Mrs. Wright, who works part-time for the NAACP national office in Jackson, Mississippi, is soundly convinced that Law and Williams have a personal feud, that both have psychiatric problems, and that the wounds will never be healed, nor will peace ever prevail.

I visited the Crusade office shortly after the mass meeting. Williams was not in. Ben Clarke greeted me cordially and indicated that Williams and Andy Young were out looking for me. There were several clean-cut, well dressed youths sitting around the office, all sporting a foot long blue and white freedom streamer with Crusade for Voters written thereon. Later in the evening, Williams called, and we made a breakfast date for 8:30 the following morning.

Williams assured me that the Crusade for Voters registration program had started. I inquired about a kick-off meeting and publicity, and was assured that both were in the mill. He expressed hopes of having Martin King to officially kick-off the campaign.

Williams said he is getting 2000 block workers, each of whom would be asked to take one person to the courthouse to register once a week. His theory was that if only half of the 2000 block workers were successful, 1000 persons would be registered each week. The block workers are recruited at weekly mass meetings.

Overseeing these 2000 block workers are 10 area chairmen who are to be paid not more than $25 per week. Block workers are volunteers. In addition to the 10 area chairmen and 2000 block workers, there are seven committee chairmen of the following committees: (1) Non-Baptist churches, Rev. A. S. Richards; (2) Baptist churches, Rev. F. Grant; (3) Schools, Mrs. Henrietta Santos (Mrs. Santos is a past president of the PTA Council); (4) Low Rent Housing Projects, Mrs. Lillian Robinson; (5) Civic Organizations, Mrs. Ida Mack; (6) Organized Labor, Mr. James Tyson or his wife; (7) Negro Businesses, no chairman as yet. Williams had these names on the tip of his tongue and rattled them off with ease. I kind of got the feeling that these were anticipated appointments rather than personal commitments.

Committee chairmen are not paid, but they get expenses for dinners, cokes, and other expenses incurred in the performance of their duties.

Social action committees have been set up in seven churches and registration activities are in process through church organizations, according to Williams.

The Crusade has an automobile and a transportation chairman on duty daily to transport prospective registrants. Paid office personnel totals three, and beginning January 1, one person will be on full-time duty at the courthouse for $25 per week.

Williams reported that 10 citizenship schools are presently operating.

After Williams' long discussion of the foregoing, I raised the question of the boycott. Williams stated that he and Law had a private meeting at the former's insistence wherein the pros and cons of the proposed boycott were discussed, in addition to the feud between them. Williams said he suggested a Williams-Law letter calling for a summit meeting. Law, I gathered, never assented or dissented, but failed to attend the summit meeting. The joint meeting failed.

Negotiations were in process with downtown merchants on the employment issue and progress was evident. Williams, however, raised the point of Christmas employment. When Christmas employment appeared unlikely through negotiations, Williams threatened a boycott. Law took the position that the negotiations were geared to permanent employment which, to him, was more important than seasonal employment.

The Crusade for Voters thereupon announced a Christmas boycott and immediately thereafter, the NAACP executive committee issued a statement saying that the NAACP was not supporting a downtown boycott.

I suggested to Williams that the boycott constituted action which was contra to the conditions of the VEP grants. He denied that the Crusade was involved in action by saying that they merely announced the boycott and thereby took no action. I would not argue the point and proceeded to inquire as to the success of the boycott. He said 62 jobs had resulted directly from their efforts. Attached hereto are leaflets put out by the Chatham County Crusade for Voters.

Williams informed me that the Crusade was moving into the Guaranty Builcing at 458½ West Broad Street where it will share offices and expenses with Mrs. Hosea Williams, who operates a collection and bookkeeping agency. The entire setup includes two rather small offices with considerable equipment of every description, and is much smaller than the old Crusade office on West Park Avenue. The old office has not yet been closed, the equipment moved, nor the telephone cut off.

The boycott leaflet lists the old and the new address.

Williams and I finished our discussions and he was to have departed for Albany, Georgia, to fill a speaking engagement. Later, however, he called me at Atty. E. H. Gadsden's office and invited me upstairs to see the new Crusade office.

I talked later in the day with Dr. Phillip W. Cooper, as suggested by Williams. Cooper received me cordially. When I told him who I was, who I represented, and what I wanted to talk about, he immediately pulled the needle out of his patient's gum and said, "Man, let's talk!" He then spent 30 minutes with me to the detriment of his patient who, I'm sure by that time, needed more novacaine.

Phillips explained that he had respect for both Williams and Law, had worked with them through the years, and that both had done commendable jobs in the community. He indicated that the feud was making both ineffective because they spent more time fighting each other than the cause. Phillips and others have organized a Citizens Committee on Unity. They met and drafted the attached report making recommendations for settling factional differences.

I failed to mention above that the NAACP conducted a voter registration drive from August through November. Less than 300 persons were registered, according to Williams. Law admits that the branch made a poor showing which he attributes to the minister who directed the drive.

One final item is that Williams said that he had only received $100 petty cash from SCLC toward his project.

Field Report (~~SOUTH CAROLINA~~ - 3/20-21/64)
From: Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.
To: VEP Staff

I attended the joint meeting of the South Carolina-Georgia Council on Human Relations at the Town House Motor Hotel, March 20-21, in Augusta, Georgia.

While there I contacted, at the request of BW and WB, Rev. Stokes who is the director of the VEP sponsored voter registration drive in Augusta in cooperation with Augusta branch NAACP. Rev. Stokes attended the Council meeting also, accompanied by Mrs. Stokes. I saw him on Friday evening and suggested that we get together early the next morning. He agreed.

I called Rev. Stokes about 8:00 a.m. on Saturday and suggested that we have breakfast together. He indicated that he planned to attend the morning session of the CHR Meeting and suggested that we talk there. I was scheduled as a consultant and therefore suggested that he save me a seat next to him at the luncheon. The crowd however was such that he could not do so. We finally got together following the luncheon and had to talk hurriedly because his wife was waiting and the Georgia Council Board was pressuring me to hurry into its meeting so people could leave Augusta before dark.

In a rushed conversation, I gathered the following facts from Rev. Stokes. The present voter registration program has been in process two weeks or so and in that period, approximately 200 persons have been registered. Rev. Stokes operates out of offices located in the Tabernacle Baptist Church. Tabernacle is pastored by Rev. C. S. Hamilton, local NAACP President, and is the center of civil rights activity in Augusta. The office is opened from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday thru Friday and a half day on Saturday.

There has beenno formal beginning of the campaign such as a kickoff mass meeting, publicity stunt or the like. Contrary to the last VEP-NAACP campaign in Augusta, there is not a sign at Tabernacle Church advertising that the voter registration headquarters is there.

Rev. Stokes has about 30 workers who are to be paid as of this week. The going rate for each worker is 50¢ per registrant. The big problem facing Stokes is that he cannot get workers without paying them. Paid workers has been the traditional modus operandi in voter registration in the Augusta community. I suggested to Stokes that young people could be used, if properly motivated, without pay and better results. He agreed and said he would initiate efforts in this direction. I suggested the NAACP Youth Council which has been extremely active in Augusta when properly programmed.

In addition to the problem of paid workers, Rev. Stokes says that he has very little community support. Much of this he attributes to the age-old split between the two Negro Voter's Leagues. WB is familiar with this problem having gone to Augusta when the two factions were at war during the last VEP sponsored campaign.

Trip Reports
Vernon Jordan

Rev. Stokes reported that the attitude of the registrars is good and that persons seeking to register have encountered no difficulty. He pointed out that community registration was in process at community or branch banks, except the bank located in the heart of the Negro community. No complaints have been filed regarding the exclusion of the bank in the Negro community, but Atty. John Watkins, president of one of the Voter Leagues is investigating the matter.

There is a request for mobile registration pending before the registrars who claim that the City Council has the final say-so.

Because of the time limit on our conversation, Rev. Stokes said that he would write up additional information and get it to us this week.

Re: Jackson, Tennessee

I visited Jackson, Tennessee, May 1 and 2 to speak to a student assembly at Lane College at the invitation of Kay Jones, director of the Tennessee Council. While there, I took the opportunity to consult with Mrs. Mattie Darnell, director of the VEP-NAACP voter registration in Jackson and Madison County, Dr. W. M. Bell, president of the local NAACP branch, Mr. Joe Merry, president of the Jackson-Madison County Voters League; Mr. Albert Porter of Lane College, and Mrs. Mattie Merry, secretary of the local NAACP.

Upon arrival, I went directly to Merry's Grocery, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Merry. The market is located in the heart of the Negro community, and a part of a small business area, consisting of the branch office of Universal Life Insurance Company, Dr. W. M. Bell's dental office, a barber shop, and one other business. Signs advertising voter registration were quite conspicious at the front of the market, and throughout the store. Pasted at the top of Mr. Merry's well-stocked meat counter were two bright signs reading, "Be a First Class Citizen - Register to Vote."

These signs all over Merry's market, in addition to Merry's constant conversation about voter registration to his customers, has proven a real incentive to the program in Jackson. Mr. Merry is chairman of the branch political action committee, and has been president of the voters league for the past ten years. His contact with the Negro community is more personal and extensive than any in the community because of his market where he has tremendous Negro patronage. This patronage is accounted for by Mr. Merry's popularity (the Negro high school is named for his father), his well-stocked medium-priced market, and most importantly, his unusual credit account for customers. This man's influence, because of his location and work, has a very positive effect on the voter registration campaigns of Jackson.

After talking with Mr. Merry, I visited Dr. Bell, president of the NAACP. Dr. Bell expressed some disappointment in the current drive which is in its fifth week. He compared it with the fall campaign, pointing out that 1,142 were registered in the latter, while only 452 persons had been registered in the current campaign. He expressed hope for a big push in the final week of the drive. Dr. Bell invited me to attend a call meeting of the Executive Committee of the NAACP that evening. I accepted.

I went from Dr. Bell's office to the voter registration headquarters. The structure is huge, antiquated, and badly in need of paint. This two-story building is the Masonic Hall. The voter registration headquarters occupies one room on the left as you enter. The room is clean, furnished with a desk, three chairs, and a telephone. The walls are decorated with voter registration honor rolls carrying the names, addresses, and precinct of newly registered voters. The waste basket is a large brown envelope. Mrs. Darnell, the director, refuses to spend funds for an office waste basket. She says she can put the money to better use.

Mrs. Darnell generally closes the office at 4 p. m., but waited at the office until the "VEP man from Atlanta" got there. A warm and kindly lady, Mrs. Darnell welcomed me to the office, told me to make myself at home. "What do you want to know about the voter drive?", she asked. "Ask me, and I'll tell you the story," she said, smiling.

Mrs. Darnell reported 452 persons registered up to that time, but she was waiting to hear from her man working out in the county for additional figures. She is paid a weekly salary by Mr. Patton, and has 33 unpaid field workers. Mrs. Darnell directed the fall campaign also. The following methods were employed in the Jackson campaign:

1. Door-to-door canvassing.
2. Poster, signs, bumper stickers.
3. Check list of lists of non-registered voters from fall campaign.
4. Stationed workers in the courthouse during tag purchasing time who encouraged people to register before leaving the courthouse. (The most effective.)
5. Parades in the late afternoon through "Fite's Bottom", the "Buttermilk Bottom of Jackson, which was heretofore never touched by registration workers. When people gathered on the street to see the band and hear the music, workers would inquire as to whether they were registered to vote. If not, the names, addresses, phone numbers and availability to be taken to the registration office would be written up by the worker and followed through.
6. Mass meetings, church publicity.

Mrs. Darnell related that she personally took a family of three white persons to register when they inquired of her as to where and how to register. The names of these people are listed on the honor rolls displayed in the voter registration office.

At Dr. Bell's invitation, I attended the Executive Committee meeting of the NAACP. The only item of business was in response to a letter from Roy Wilkins requesting all Tennessee branches to send representatives to Washington to confer with the Tennessee senators or the civil rights bill. The committee acted swiftly and decisively. Dr. Bell and Mr. Merry were elected t go. The committee felt that there would be real political meaning f the senators met two community leaders from the Jackson-Madison County area. The consensus was that two representatives to this meeting was more important that delegates to the national convention. Hence, the leadership in Jackson, Tennessee, has led not only in adding Negroes to the voting rolls, but is acutely aware that these voters must be spoken for and the power of their vote communicated to those who may at some time seek same.

PS My notes reveal also that Mrs. Darnell said they had absolutely no problem with the registrars. "Our problem is Negroes," she said.

Re: FIELD TRIP TO CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA

I visited Charlotte, North Carolina, July 6 and 7 on SRC business, but took the opportunity to talk with persons interested in the VEP project in Charlotte at WAB's request.

I talked first with Mr. Fred Alexander, an SRC board member, and a prominent figure in Charlotte civic affairs. Mr. Alexander is the brother of Mr. Kelly Alexander, President of the North Carolina State Conference of NAACP branches.

We talked for two hours. Mr. Alexander responded to my initial inquiry as to his thoughts about the Charlotte VEP program by stating in unequivocal words that the VEP program got off to a wrong start there.

Prior to any VEP grant in that community, the NAACP and the Charlotte Council on Human Relations had made plans for a large scale registration program depending on VEP support, according to Mr. Alexander. "We had counted on VEP funds," he said. But when the grant was made to Dr. Hawkins' group for registration, the above mentioned groups did not follow through with their plans.

Mr. Alexander expressed some disappointment that WAB came to Charlotte and made a grant without consulting with persons like himself. He never made it clear to me whether he felt WAB should have done this because he was on the SRC board, or for some other reason. He admitted however, that his group had not put a formal proposal to VEP for funds. If I may interpret here a bit, I think Mr. Alexander's reaction was that of the traditional established Negro leader who thinks he must be consulted about any project in his community. No consultation and non-cooperation with his group equals failure and negative programming.

Moving to other matter, Mr. Alexander indicated that at no time had the Election Board been difficult to deal with in regard to Negro registration. The implication here being that whatever troubles Dr. Hawkins encountered resulted from Hawkins' own efforts rather than

Board policy or procedures.

Motivation was described as the big problem with Negro registration. Mr. Alexander related that traditionally, Charlotte has had no strong race problem. Such is the case today, in his opinion. Nothing has happened or been made to happen to show the relationship of and need for strong political action. Not a job in town is controlled by politics. People in Charlotte, black and white, are politically naive, opinioned Mr. Alexander.

Special emphasis was put on the necessity for a cause for action to garner registered voters. Voter education is vital to our community. I did not press Mr. Alexander as to what would constitute a cause of action to get new voters registered.

We then got around to Dr. Hawkins. "Hawkins didn't do much," concluded Mr. Alexander. He questioned Dr. Hawkins' motives and indicated that if Dr. Hawkins had not been in the forefront in voter registration, it would be someone else. I indicated that I would hope so.

Other charges leveled at Dr. Hawkins were: 1) There is no evidence that the money was spent for what it was purported to be spent for; 2) Not more than 3,000 persons were added to the books during the entire Hawkins effort, despite claims of a much larger number; 3) Used initial grant to buy himself into the local Democratic party; 4) Has only a paper organization; 5) Uses teenagers to do his work.

Mr. Alexander made it quite clear that he was not interested in exposing Dr. Hawkins on the theory that it would be detrimental to the Negro. "The white folks want division among Negro leaders," he said. Therefore, there is no need to expose him, he continued.

Mr. Alexander offered the candidacy of a Negro for the Board of Education as evidence that Dr. Hawkins has registered very few people. The candidate, according to Alexander, received a total of 6,000 votes, Negro and white included. The contention is that had Hawkins' program been more successful, it would have reflected in this particular race.

Finally, Mr. Alexander was quick to say that he readily comes to Dr. Hawkins' defense when the latter is attacked by the white community. He indciated, however, that there was nothing he could do about the Hawkins difficulty with the Election Board. He commended Hawkins highly for his actions in hospital desegregation.

I then visited Dr. Hawkins in his office, where I was cordially received. Dr. Hawkins said that from Sept. 16 to Nov. 18, 1963, his group registered 5,236 persons, and from March 16 to May 8, 1964, 6,000 persons. These registration programs were VEP sponsored.

Dr. Hawkins said that he plans to request another VEP grant for September. Also, that Negroes outvoted whites percentage-wise in the North Carolina primary.

He answered questions concerning his group's organizational structure in vague terms. I couldn't pin him down as to who did what exactly. He did say that a Mrs. Garvin had been put in the Democratic office and that she was paid by him with VEP funds. Her job was to go through the records and make records for registration purposes. Dr. Hawkins pruchased the list of registered Democrats from the local party for use in checking on unregistered voters.

During the night registration period, Dr. Hawkins contended that they registered on some nights as many as 1,000 people.

The doctor considered the charges of the Election Board against him as an effort to intimidate him personally, and to discourage registration programs in the Negro community. He expressed the hope that he would be indited and convicted. He indicated that he had counsel.

Dr. Hawkins accused Mr. Kelly Alexander of refusing to cooperate with his program. He also accused Fred Alexander and a Mr. Bishop of being paid to frame him. Somehow in this part of the monologue, Hawkins said that he thought Pat Watters would be fired because he told the truth on Charlotte.

The mayor, according to Hawkins, is really no good, but he has found that it is popular to be liberal.

Finally, Dr. Hawkins, contrary to the Alexander opinion, said that the Election Board had given him a hard time in that they stopped night registration and Saturday registration, among other things.

MEMORANDUM

From: Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.

Re: Memphis, Tennessee

I was in Memphis, Tennessee, on the day of the Democratic primary, August 6, and the day after for a couple of hours each day. I spent that time in and around the Shelby County Democratic Club headquarters, and talked with Mrs. Maxine Smith, executive secretary of NAACP; Russell Sugarman, Esq.; Earl Davis, COPE; A. W. Willis, Esq; Mr. W. C. Patton's secretary, and several poll watchers and youth campaign workers.

In preparation for the election, there were numerous meetings with candidates. Earl Davis said that for three days, prior to the election, they had 19 telephones operating with persons calling registered voters in order to get out a big vote. The calls were made from lists of registered voters on a precinct basis. Davis had been working there for a week or so primarily, I think, in the interest of Ross Bass, senatorial candidate opposing Governor Clement. Davis' efforts, however, were beneficial to the entire Negro community in terms of getting out a big Negro vote, and electing candidates favorable to the Negro.

When I arrived at the headquarters at 6 p. m., an hour before the polls closed, several people were on the phones calling voters urging them to get out and vote. There was some concern on election day that the vote was light or not as heavy as desired by the leaders. On the basis of reports from poll watchers, the leaders predicted about a 49% turn out. They thought at the time that said turn out would not be sufficient to elect the Negro candidates. The Negro candidates were:

Jesse Turner, NAACP prexy - Constitutional convention
A. W. Willis, Atty. - State representative
Russell Sugarman, Atty. - State Senator
Charles E. Ware, Businessman - Constable, District 2

When I returned to Memphis the next day, the leaders were delirously happy and hoarse as a result of the election returns. The returns were not complete, but the winners were clearly determined except in the Sugarman race. Turner was leading in his race with a total vote of approximately 22,000. Willis led with about 24,000. Sugarman polled nearly 30,000 votes, but was trailing by a very slim marjin with three precincts to be counted. Ware's victory was assured, but I have no figures on the votes cast for him.

The jubilation at the Shelby County headquarters stemmed from more than the apparent success of the Negro candidates. More important to the Negro community statewide was the sound defeat of Gov. Clement by Rep. Ross Bass in the U. S. Senate race. This victory was especially important to the Memphis people because of their strength in the Tennessee voters Council which had endorsed Bass, despite some opposition among other Negro leaders. In addition to the Bass victory, there was great eleation over the defeat of Cliff Davis, Congressman for 25 years or so, by George W. Grider, who had the backing of the Negro community. Davis was quoted in the Press-Scimitar as he watched the votes come in, saying, "The Negroes are clobbering me." W. N. Morris, candidate for sheriff, was successful and had the endorsement and backing of the Negro community. Practically all of the candidates endorsed by the Shelby County Democratic Club were victorious.

The success of the Memphis election may be attributed to the tremendous organization, hard work, and interest of the NAACP branch. For the most part, the same persons active with the NAACP voter registration and the desegregation process in Memphis were hard at work during this campaign.

As an example, 50 or more of the youth council's group worked from sun-up till sun down on election day in an intensive get-out-the-vote campaign. Their enthusiasm was high, and their motives sincere, for they worked without pay. The headquarters was so organized that at certain hours of the day, there was a report as to how many people in a given precinct had voted. Poll watchers were on full time duty, automobiles, driven by doctors, lawyers, and other Indian chiefs, were available to get the people to the polls. There was organization and interest such that I've never witnessed anywhere in the Negro community.

Attached is a sample ballot distributed by the Shelby County Democratic Club with their candidate preferences.

RE: Jackson, Tennessee, Election Results

Attached is one writer's analysis of the Bass Clement election in Tennessee with particular emphasis on Madison County at Jackson, Tennessee.

VEP has sponsored two registration programs in this area through the NAACP. Note particularly the results of Joe S. Merry's race, even though he lost. Merry is chairman of the NAACP Political Action Committee, and president of the Madison County Voters League, and a hard worker in our campaigns there.

Undoubtedly, VEP programs in that area have had a very positive effect.

Thank you for the news article by John Parrish which analyzes the election returns for Jackson and Madison counties. The article will be very valuable to us here in our research on voter registration. If at all possible, we would like to have the name of the paper in which the article appeared, and the date of same.

Please commend Joe on his very fine showing in his race.

County Judge's 'Valuable Gift' Shows Surprise At State Political Showdown

By JOHN PARISH

County Judge Leroy Pope received an anonymous but appropriate gift following Thursday's election upsets.

Pope, an enthusiastic supporter of Gov. Frank Clement, found on his desk Saturday a bottle of 1,000 aspirins marked "with compliments of a friend of Ross Bass."

"It's a valuable gift . . . and I may need them," Pope remarked with a somewhat hollow laugh.

Locally and statewide, the election was filled with surprises, shocks and interesting political consequences. The results will be carefully studied by Democrats and Republicans alike as they prepare for the November showdown.

When two undefeated candidates clash headon something has to give. But many political observers logically argued that Rep. Ross Bass was untested as a statewide campaigner.

Clement backers, in post-election analysis, explain the governor's first campaign loss was due to a combination of factors. The Bass camp compares their candidate's support to the strong silent vote always handed the late Sen. Estes Kefauver.

The loss of endorsement by labor and Negro groups was doubly felt by Clement when this vote went to Bass. The 1962 general election showing by independent William Anderson indicated a strong anti-Clement bloc.

Clement's tax program apparently was a bigger issue than Civil Rights in the election. Bass hammered away effectively on the governor's legislative program which broadened the sales tax coverage and brought about a $30 million surplus in the state treasury.

Both Clement and Newport

County Judge's - -

farmer-businessman M. M. Bullard attacked Bass for his support of the Civil Rights Act. There was little evidence that this had much effect on the election.

Bass' success with Negro voters is illustrated by four city precincts in Jackson where Negro registration ranges from 40 to 70 per cent.

Bass received 44.4 per cent of the vote in the Senate race in Madison County, but was given 83 per cent at the Third Ward's fourth precinct (Whitehall School) where 70 per cent of the voters are Negroes.

The First Ward, with 62 per cent Negro vote, counted 69 per cent of the ballots for Bass. The Second Ward precincts, with 40 per cent Negro vote, gave Bass 64 per cent of the total.

With endorsement of a Negro state political group Clement made a strong showing at these precincts in the 1962 governor's race. He received 80 per cent of the vote in the First Ward, 64 per cent in the Second Ward and 82 per cent at the Whitehall box.

On the other side of the ledger, Sen. Albert Gore, who voted against the Civil Rights Act, had a 4-1 margin over his three opponents.

Rep. Tom Murray had 73 per cent of the Madison County vote in his race, but his opponent (W. K. Brooks) ran well in the Negro dominated precincts.

State Rep. Gene Stewart finished 1,220 vote ahead of State Sen. Billy J. Goodrich to win Democratic nomination for the 25th Senatorial District. He carried Crockett and Henderson counties by small margins and had a 1,084 vote edge in Madison, home of both candidates.

Final unofficial returns in this race:

Stewart — Madison County 6,938, Henderson 1,131, Crockett 886; total 8,955.

Goodrich — Madison 5,854, Henderson 1,027, Crockett 854; total 7,735.

House Speaker W. L. (Dick) Barry was well in front of Jackson attorney Joe Morris in each of three counties in 27th Floterial District to win nomination to a sixth term. Morris made his strongest bid in Jackson precincts where he trailed by less than 200 votes.

Unofficial and incomplete returns:

Barry — Madison County 7,294, Henderson 2,226, Decatur (one small precinct missing) 1,440; total 10,960.

Morris — Madison 4,957, Henderson 1,189, Decatur 669; total 6,815.

Earle Midyett led a field of four candidates to win nomination for a third term as direct representative from Madison County. The second General Assembly seat went to Magistrate J. Carl Davis.

Midyett led Davis by more than 1,300 votes and was top man in 25 of the county's 45 precincts. Retired businessman F. Smiley Keaton missed the runnerup spot by less than 400 votes.

Negro businessman Joe S. Merry, the first of his race to seek election to the legislature in this century, got 3,743 votes—1,851 behind Keaton—and led the field in nine precincts.

Merry's showing in some Fourth Ward boxes was a surprise to many. He received 61 votes in the fifth and sixth precincts where only two Negroes are registered. His 33 votes in the fourth precinct is three times the potential Negro vote there.

Final unofficial results in the Direct Representative race:

Midyett—county 3,236, city 4,058; total 7,294.

Davis—county 2,801, city 3,187; total 5,988.

Keaton—county 2,274, city 3,320; total 5,594.

Merry—county 1,020, city 2,723; total 3,743.

Though the vote was the lightest in any state election since 1956, counting was not completed in Madison County late Friday.

The last report—from the Fifth District—listed these results in the primary:

U. S. Senate (short term)—Bass 268, Bullard 215, Clement 284.

U. S. Senate (long term)—Galloway 88, Gore 487, McKinney 46, Vick 22.

Public Service Commission (Middle Division)—Atkins 179, Brown 38, Evans 121, Griffin 156.

Public Service Commission (Western Division)—Jordan 162, Pentecost 456.

Congress—Brooks 214, Murray 484.

State Senate—Goodrich 307, Stewart 428.

Direct Representative—Davis 434, Keaton 394, Merry 39, Midyett 431.

Floterial Representative—Barry 399, Morris 294.

Almost half of the county's eligible voters stayed away from the polls, but one Jacksonian demonstrated a keen sense of civic duty.

Brents Jones, 23 Laurel Lane, was confined to bed due to a recent operation. He went to Highland Park School in an ambulance and cast his vote.

Recommendations will [illegible] to the Mayor-President, wh[illegible] turn will present them to the City Parish Counci, which appointed the committee.

Mr Winfree, a bluff Texan, who has lived here for more than a quarter of a century, said his group did not hope to settle the race problem in a day or a year. But he promised consideration of all matters brought before the group.

Meanwhile, there were report that a halt had been called for 30 days in attempts to hold racial demonstrations here. The Rev. Arthur C. Jelks, president of the Baton Rouge branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who has failed over the past several weeks to develop demonstrations, threatened in a registered letter to Mr. Winfree, to resume them if his demands were not met.

Mr. Jelks has boycotted the biracial commission because Mayro-President Jack Christian, who heads the city government, ignored Mr. Jelk's demands that certain Negro citizens be appointed.

The 30-member committee is c9mposed of 15 whites and 15 Negroes. Mr. Winfree was named president at an organization meeting last week, and Leon Netterville, vice president of Southern University, the nation's largest institution of higher learning for Negroes, was made vice president.

BATON ROUGE, June 4—The first biracial committee settling the touchy race probever organized in Louisiana tackled today methods of settling the touchy race problem in Louisiana's capital city.

The committee met in executive session this afternoon, and the chairman, Jim Winfree, a Baton Rouge oil executive, said work would begin immediately on some aspects of the problem.

MEMORANDUM FROM J. MINNIS
Field Trip May 28 through June 1, 1963

On the evening of May 28 I talked with Acie Belton at the office of the Second Ward Voter's League in Scotlandville, Louisiana. Belton says that one office employee of the SWVL - a woman - has been receiving $40 a week and that for this she has done office work as well as canvassing and taking applicants to the registrar's office. For her $40 a week the woman is required to register two persons per day. She receives $2 per person for any over two successful registrations per day. Belton explained that this rather high bonus per person was necessary because the woman uses her own car and pays the expenses of the car in canvassing and taking applicants to the court house.

Belton appears very much interested in getting started as quickly as possible on an expanded registration program with which he says he is confident 5000 persons can be registered in East Baton Rouge parish, before the gubernatorial primary on December 7 (registration will end November 7). He says that for the expanded program he would like to have four employees in the field, three in Baton Rouge and one in Scotlandville. These persons would be assigned areas to canvass and would be paid $35 each per week. He would have one coordinator manning the office at $35 per week and one individual with a car to be used in transporting applicants. He was not prepared to estimate the cost of the person with the car. Thus, the personnel overhead for this program would come to a little over $3500 for the period Belton has in mind.

He proposes to handle the city of Baton Rouge as well as the Second Ward. He says he plans to integrate all existing organizations into a representative campaign committee to run the campaign. Since he does not mention the use of a campaign director hired by this committee I would expect the committee, and therefore the campaign, to be dominated by Belton's influence.

According to Belton's plans the field workers would submit daily a list of individuals canvassed indicating those that are and are not registered and including addresses and telephone numbers. The field workers would themselves, where possible, arrange for prospects to receive instructions and set a date for application. Any commitments made by the field workers as to transportation would be arecorded with the office coordinator whose responsibility it would be to keep the person providing transportation informed of these commitments. Belton says that in the past they have hot had much difficulty keeping a record of the number of persons registered. The office receives its information on registration from field workers (in the anticipated program it would be the responsibility of the person providing transportation to report back to the coordinator on the results from each application.

Belton says it is possible to get the cooperation of registration officials in sampling the registration claims made by the field workers in order to prevent exaggerated claims.

Belton says that the general atmosphere in the registrar's office is negative rather than overtly hostile. He said he does not believe that the registration personnel are deliberately disqualifying Negroes. The registrar has ruled that those who fail the test cannot re-take it before waiting ten days.

Belton says that Ronnie Moore closed the CORE office in southwest Baton Rouge nearly a year ago and that off an on Moore has been working out of the office of the SWVL, with the latter's secretary. He said that they were, for a while, working together until he suggested to them that they could get more production if they worked separately.

Belton took me to Moore's house but Moore was not there and his wife could not get a hold of him.

When we went back to Belton's office he and I talked at some length about his appointment to a bi-racial committee to negotiate racial affairs. He says the mayor has stated on several occasions that the committee was appointed as a direct result of the fear that Baton Rouge might become another Birmingham. Belton says that the Esso Refinery, where he has worked for the past 24 years, is worse about racial discrimination than any employer he knows of in the area. He says he understands that the mayor tried to get Voorhies, Esso Refinery President, to serve on the committee but Voorhies refused.

Belton has great hopes for the committee and I asked him to let us know about the progressthat the committee makes. In specifying some of the discrimination with which he has met at the Esso Refinery Belton stated that there is an unwritten rule which prohibits whites riding in the cabs of trucks with Negroes and he says that he has not advanced materially during his 24 years service with Esso although he trained many of the white men who now exercise supervision over him.

Belton thinks that Morrison is almost certain to be the next governor and he told me that Senator Long had endorsed Morrison, It is my understanding from other sources that this is untrue. When he mentioned Morrison, Belton spoke of him as "Ambassador."

Early on the morning of May 29 I met with Ronnie Moore in his home at 752 Flicker Street. He gave me the attached schedule of CORE's anticipated summer project and said they expected to involve some 30 people, 18 Negro and 12 white, in the project. He said that a chap named Spiver Gordon, who lives in Placquemine, Louisiana, has been working with him in Iberville parish. He said that an office has been established in Turner Chapel AME church in Greensburg, St. Helena parish. Moore said that the Plymouth Rock Baptist church in Placquemine would be used for training the summer task force. The training will take place between July 14 and 28 and then registration work will get under way in Iberville, the Felicianas, Pointe Coupee, East Baton Rouge, Tangipahoa and St. Helena parishes.

He said that Ellis Howard and Clarence Knighten who live in Greensburg ~~XXXXXXXXXX~~ are both registered voters and have been leaders with whom he has worked in St. Helena parish. He says that J.K. Haynes who is with the Louisiana Education Association, Temple Building, Baton Rouge - gave him lists of people whom he might contact in the rural parishes.

Moore says that the Iberville sheriff and the district attorney for that district have been elected three times with Negroes casting the decisive margin of votes. Since they will be running for re-election in the December elections they are interested in getting Negroes registered in Iberville and he feels that significant quantitative results can be anticipated in that parish provided sufficient resources are committed there. He suggested the possibility of a separate $1500 grant for Iberville parish.

Moore seems to think that there is considerable division among the Negro leadership in East Baton Rouge parish. He was resentful that Belton and the SWVL had asked him to pay part of the office rent when he worked out of their office. He says that two CORE task force workers are working with Belton's office during late July and all of August. He said Belton was opposed to inter-racial team and that he thought that the whites should be local. Moore had the idea that Belton was not particularly enthusiastic about the prospect of the CORE workers but he said Belton's secretary, Mrs. Williams, liked the idea very much. He said that in mid-May Belton promised to let Moore address the executive committee of the SWVL but that he, Moore, had heard no more about it since.

In January or February, Moore says he complained to the Pointe Coupee registrar about illiterates being purged when the parish changed to permanent registration. Moore told the registrar he was going to notify the Justice Department that Negro illiterates had been purged while white illiterates were simply transferred to the permanent rolls. The registrar then put 70 Negro illiterates on the rolls but he included in his monthly report to the State Board of Elections only a few of these 70 each month, because he did not want the State Board to suspect what he had done.

It is my impression that there is considerable hostility between Moore and Belton. I should say that this hostility is representative of what one might expect to find between a young militant and an older, established member of the community. Moore said that he was morally certain that Belton profited by running on the same ticket with a white candidate for the school board last year, the white candidate using this tech-nique to secure Negro votes. Moore commented disparagingly about the bi-racial committee on which Belton is serving and he mentioned that the Rev. Jelks, NAACP official, agreed with him in opposition to the committee. I am not sure it was Moore who said this to me but I think it was - the whole bi-racial negotiating committee idea was attacked on the ground that what it amounted to was arbitrary leadership rather than genuine representation of the Negro community because no one had done any sounding of the Negro community for a majority opinion about who should represent Negroes. Moore felt that these negotiations should be conducted through the established political institutions by persons who had been elected for the purpose of establishing public policy. In short, he felt that the committee idea was a means of minimizing the political mobilization of Negroes. (I know that someone expressed this opinion to me during this field trip and I am all but certain that it was Moore.) It should be noted here that when I asked Belton why the Rev. Jelks was raising such a fuss about the bi-racial committee he said that he didn't know but that he supposed it was because of some kind of personal ambition.

I did not talk to Jelks but I got the impression that personal ambition was by no means a factor in Moore's position.

I arrived at Tougaloo University at about 1:00 p.m. on May 29. I went to Galloway Hall where registration for the SNCC conference was under way and I leanred from Pete Stoner, a white Tougaloo student, that a bus carrying some 30 people from Greenwood to the conference had been stopped and impounded by the Mississippi State Police just outside of Greenwood. The question immediately arose how would the 30 people get to the conference? I went looking for Bob Moses and he drove up as I was walking across the campus. He had been in Jackson all morning testifying in federal court on the Justice Department's action seeking to enjoin prosecution of Turnbow on the Mileston arson charge and his own prosecution on the charge of interfering with investigation. I suggested that Bob call Frank Smith to see if he could get details about the bus being stopped and he did so. Frank told him that the Highway Patrol had stopped the bus alleging that the license tags were improper. The state patrol said that the bus was licensed to haul persons to work and alleged that hauling conferees to Tougaloo was a commercial operation in violation of the Mississippi licensing regulations. Smith said that the highway patrol took the bus, with all the people aboard, to a weighing station and then charged that it was 5000 lbs. overweight. The driver was, at that time, in jail on a charge of driving with improper tags and overweight and bond had been set at $100 on each charge. Both Moses and Smith felt sure that the police had stopped the bus because they thought it was hauling demonstratros to Jackson.

One of the SNCC Valiants had arrived on the campus and Bob was driving the red Chevrolet. We decided that the only thing we could do would be to go to Greenwood and carry the people down to Tougaloo by car. We had three cars, including my Volkswagon. While we were standing on the campus talking, a white man came up and introduced himself as Carlton Mabee, a professor of American History at Delta College in Bay City, Michigan. He said that he was spending the summer doing research on the nonviolent movement, that he had come from Birmingham, and he asked if it would be all right if he observed the conference. Bob said that it would be all right and asked him if he had a car. He said that he did and Bob asked him if he would be interested in helping us haul the folks down from Greenwood. He said he would be happy to and it turned out that he, too, had a Volkswagen. We set off immediately for Greenwood with the red Chevy, the green Valiant and the 2 VW's.

When we arrive d in Milestonn, the Ehevy was making a peculiar noise and Bob stopped to put some oil into it. We agreed that we would stop up the road from Mileston to look at the Turnbow's house which had been damaged in the arson attempt a couple of weeks ago. When we arrived at the Turbow house the red Chevy was making even more peculiar noises and Bob decided it would be advisable to leave it there lest some permanent damage be done. We proceeded on to Greenwood with the Valiant and the two VW's for transportation equipment. A group of about 40 perople were waiting at the SNCC office in Greenwood and there was some comment about the XXXXXfsize and type of equipment that we had available. We loaded as many people as we could into the three cars and Bob said he would remain behind and see if he couldn't round up enough cars to get the rest of the people down to Tougaloo. By the time we got to Tougaloo it was about 7:00 p.m. We registered the people whom we had brought and got rooms assigned to them and then went into the mass meeting in Jackson. ; When we got back to the campus at about 10:30 Bob still had not arrived but Guyot had and he and I made some tentative plans for getting the conference started the first thing the next morning.

We were up early the morning of May 30 and Bob said that he arrived about 1:30 with the rest of the people from Greenwood. Guyot and I discussed the plans we had made the previous evening with Bob and they appeared to be about what he had had in mind for the conference. We scheduled the first session of the conference at 9:00 a.m., to run until 12:00 p.m. and to consist of an intial lecture of an jour and a half on why Negroes should vote and then to break down into discussion groups lead by myself, Guyot, John O'Niel and Moses, to chew over the subject matter of the lecture until noon. Then in the afternoon we decided we would begin by asking a series of questions of the group and having them reply in writing. The idea of this was to structure the questions on the same basis as the lecture and the discussions in order to see if they had gotten anything out of the lecture and the discussions. We would then follow this with a discussion of the need for organizations and some general comments about organizational techniques.

Then on Friday morning we would go further into the specifics of organization a committee, setting up canvassing schedules, initiating record-keeping and reporting systems, the necessity for maintaining communications and a discussion by Guyot on the registration test and means of overcoming it in Mississippi.

I delivered the first lecture on why Negroes should vote and in a very general way talked about the intimate association between politics and the economic and social aspirations of Negroes. I pointed out the necessity for convincing prospects that it would actually do them some good to register and vote and the consequent necessity for registration workers to have some understanding of the political system and its effect upon the every-day affairs of all citizens. Guyot had mimeographed sheets of a dozen or so items for discussion, most of which I had touched upon in the lecture and the discussion groups were provided with these sheets and they were used as a bisis for the discussions. During the afternoon session, Bob administered the questions. He began by asking each individual to write down the name of a person who was a close friend or relative, over 21 years of age, and not registered to vote. Then he asked them to write down the persons occupation, sex, marital status, age and place of residence. Next he asked them to write down why they thought the person was not a registered voter and to write down what they had learned as a result of the morning session that they thought they might be able to use in convincing the person that he should register. After all the writing was complete Bob asked for a volunteer to come forward and read what he had written. A young man from Leflore County read his answers and the gist of his remarks wa was that the person he had selected was a cotton farmer, that he wasn't registered because he was afraid to do so would arouse the hostility of whites from whom he bought used farm equipment, and at an advantageous price. The young man said that he would try to convince the farmer that he could make more money out of his farm if he would register and vote. There was then considerable discussion about what connection there might be between making more money out of a cotton farm and registering and voting. The discussion revealed that the discussants knew very little themselves about the details of the relationship between the federal government, the state government, and the county government, and cotton farming.

That evening I read over the papers that had been turned in and it was perfectly clear from them that the lecture I had given them was pitched at entirely too abstract a level. I found very little indication in the papers that they had absorbed anything I had said. Moses, Guyot and I discussed this phenomenon at some length that evening and concluded that a educational effort was called for and that general statements about the relations between politics and economics would not do the job. We concluded that it would be necessary to use specific factual examples of specific situations in order to educate such a group of workers. Moses was convinced that such a procedure would be effective in preparing the youngsters for their registration assignments and he said that workshops for cotton farmers and for registration workers would be held in Greenwood during June. The lecture and discussions on organization and specific registration techniques appear to get across much better to the group. I left the conference with confidence that there would very shortly be functioning organizations in the several counties represented at the conference.

On May 31 the discussions on organization and registration were conducted as had been planned. During the morning session. The conference had been scheduled to end at noon on the 31st however, because of the delay in getting started we decided to extend it into the afternoon. During the afternoon, Russell Lazli and two other officers of the United Packing House Workers addressed the group and offered encouragement and promise of financial assistance.

There were some 75 persons attending the conference and I was impressed with their enthusiasm and obvious sense of commitment. Few of the conferess were Tougaloo students but by far the greater number of them were very clearly the sons and daughters of rural Delta families. This was the first the conference which SNCC has held and considering the hurried nature of its planning I felt that it was well worth the effort. I am sure that the conferees left Tougaloo with an increased understanding of the need for organized effort in the Delta and a considerably better understanding of how to go about providing such organization. Moses, Guyot and I agreed that the conference had been beneficial, too, in indidating to us what is going to be required for a successful educational effort in future such conferences, both in Mississippi in the other southern states.

MEMORANDUM

RE: Birmingham Field Trip (June 17, 1963)

From: Jack Minnis

I arrived at the Jefferson County Courthouse at about 10 o'clock. Fourteen Negroes were seated around tables along the wall of the registrar's office, filling out application forms. Four Negroes were waiting in line at the door of the registrar's office. Four whites were sitting at a counter in the registrar's office filling out forms. There were accommodations for six or seven more persons. at the counter, but those accommodations were not being used. There is apparently segregation in the office of the registrar, although this segregation does not appear to be materially slowing down the registration process for Negroes. I watched applicants filling out the application forms and then taking them into an office in the rear of the registration office where they are examined by a member of the Board of Registrars.

This examination appeared to take not more than five minutes, and frequently considerably less. I stood and watched for about 30 minutes. During that time, a dozen or so Negroes had come out, having completed the registration process, the tables were still full, and there were three Negroes remaining in line. Thus, it appears that the registration office, if it was operating at a normal speed at during the time I watched it, should be able to handle somewhere around 25 or 30 Negro applicants per hour, with great ease.

The only marking on the door of the registration office is on the frosted window. While I was there, the door was open, and the legend on the frosted glass could not be read. Thus the doorway to the registration office appeared merely as an unmarked opening. I saw several Negroes who appeared to be prospective applicants come to the area way outside the registration office and look around in some confusion, and then leave. There was no one from the registration program there to show them where to go, and I suspect that this may have operated to limit slightly the number of applicants. This matter was brought up and discussed in a meeting of the program leaders which I attended the afternoon of June 17th, and arrangements were made to avoid this difficulty in the future.

I went from the county courthouse to the offices of ASCARV and talked with Mrs. Bernice Johnson. Mrs. Johnson did not appear to know much about the current registration drive in Birmingham. Since the first of June, she has been working out in the counties in preparation for the rural drive that is to take place the first week in July. She said that her office had agreed to supply clinic facilities for the present registration drive, and it was her impression from things she had heard that many of the applicants currently going down to register were doing so with inadequate preparation. Andy Young later told me that the clinics which Mrs. Johnson office had agreed to provide had not materialized. I was unable to determine for sure what the difficulty was that prevented this coordination between SCLC's student registration program and Mrs. Johnson's clinics. However, I suspect that Mrs. Johnson's absence from the city during the time that the student program has been underway is largely responsible.

Mrs. Johnson said that she will be the coordinator of the project. Her office expects to begin on July 1st, and that Miss Nelson will be field director. Mrs. Johnson expressed considerable disatisfaction with the services of Mrs. Louphenia Thomas who was the director of the project we supported during the early part of this year for Mrs. Johnson's organization. She felt that Mrs. Thomas had done inadequate field work, and that therefore, there was insufficient contact between the field organization and the directorship of the project. She proposes to solve this problem by exercising general supervision of the project herself, and by assigning field direction duties to Miss Nelson.

Mrs. Johnson said that her upcoming four month project will concentrate on the outlying communities in Jefferson County. She specifically mentioned Ensley. She apparently had in mind the very communities in which the SCLC student program is presently working.

Mrs. Johnson was on the point of leaving her office to get back out to the rural counties when I arrived, so I did not detain her with a discussion of the rural project. She said she was preparing a full narrative report on it. (Report in Narrative 2nd yr reports. JS)

I went by Orzell Billingsley's office, but his secretary said he would be tied up in court until late in the afternoon.

I called Arthur Shores and arranged to see him in his office. Mr. Shores said that he had been tied up in court on the demonstration arrest cases almost continuously for weeks. He did not appear to know much about the SCLC student program, and he said that he did not see any reason why there should be conflicts between Mrs. Johnson's organization and the SCLC student program, which would prevent effective coordination of the two. Mr. Shores was rather uncommunicative, and my interview with him was not very productive. I do not know whether he was simply reluctant to talk to a white stranger, or whether he was wholly preoccupied with the legal work he has been doing in connection with the demonstration arrests.

The office of the SCLC Student Registration Program is in the Smith building at the corner of 17th Street and 5th Avenue. Andy Young tells me that this was the office that was used during the demonstrations. He tells me that now the rent, utilities and telephone are being paid for by the local SCLC affiliate, the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights. The office telephone number is 324-5944. Andy gives this account of the way the student registration program got started:

He says that in recruiting students for demonstration purposes early in April, he, James Bevel and Dorothy Cotton met with a number of Miles College students who were interested in participating. These Miles College students spread the word among various high schools in the city that the movement had need for high school students. As a result, high school students began coming to the movement offices in the afternoon after school hours and on the weekends. These high school students were used for passing out leaflets calling student mass meetings at the various high schools in the afternoons after school. At the student mass meetings, the movement was explained and demonstrators were recruited. During April and early May when nightly mass meetings for adults were being held, Cotton, Bevel and Young usually tried to secure a location in the neighborhood of the church where the adult mass meetings were being held, so that a meeting for the students could be held simultaneously.

Young says that while a great deal of pulpit-pounding went on in the adult mass meetings, the student mass meetings, or at least some of them, were structured around instructions in voter registration, the use of the application forms, canvassing, and a showing of training films. Young says that by the weekend of May 10th, when the demonstrations ended, he, Bevel, and Cotton had recruited a nucleus of 25 or so young people who were well trained and highly motivated to conduct a registration program.

The registration office in Birmingham is open the first three days of three weeks out of each month. The first three days of the fourth week of the month, the registrars are in the Bessimer registration office. It happened that during the week starting May 20th, the registrar's were scheduled to be in the Bessimer registration office. The week beginning May 13th was used to hold instruction classes and workshops, and to recruit workers among the high school students of the Brighton community which is close to Bessimer. The nucleus of 25 or so student leaders, which Young, Bevel and Cotton had recruited, were taken to the Brighton community each day and this week served as a period of field training for this nucleus of student leadership. Then, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of the week of May 20th, a registration drive was conducted in the Brighton community which resulted in 177 persons making application for registration at the Bessimer registration office. Then, the balance of that week was used in securing the following churches in the respective communities: Ensley-First Baptist Church, 1534 19th St., telephone 788-4166 (Tommy Holt), Eureka Mount Pilgrim Baptist Church, telephone ST 6-6249 (Miss Thomas), Shiloh Baptish Church, Nassau Avenue, S. W., the Rev. Knight, Smithfield Thirgood Methodist Church, 1027 7th Avenue, North, telephone AL 2-6236 (Mary E. Streeter), North Birmingham, the Hopewell Baptist Church, telephone AL 1-5483, (Marion) or telephone FA 4-5210 (Ida), 2624th Street, North (Evelyn Carter), Powderly St. John Baptist Church (Jane Orange), Homeward Friendship Baptist Church, 2642 Central Ave. (Anthony Bassett and Eddie Harris), Goosella Heights St. James AME Church, Georgia Ave. (Robert Jones), Titusville St. Paul Lutheran Church, 128 6th Ave. South, telephone, 324-2063, (Joe Poe and Sherill Marcus), Pratt City McComb's Chapel (Harold Middlebrook), Woodlawn Mt. Olive Baptist Church, 6300 Third Ave., North (Wavelyn Holmes), Cottageville Bethel Baptist Church, 3191 29th Ave, North, telephone 322-5360, (Julia Carter), and Brighton Friendship Baptist Church and Mt. Zion Baptist Church (George Scott).

This organization program continued through the following week, and then on the first three days of the week beginning June 3rd, this student organization conducted registration drives in the various communities, and accounted for 335 applicants. Wednesday afternoon, of that week, some 75 students who had been doing this work in Birmingham were taken to Dorchester by Bevel, Young, and Cotton. They remained in Dorchester until late Saturday night. They arrived in Birmingham on Sunday morning.

Young says that while these students were in Dorchester, they worked with the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters young people under the leadership of Ben Clark. He says that the students from Birmingham, particularly on Saturday night of that week, helped in recruiting and training Savannah students for demonstrations. Before leaving Birmingham for Dorchester, they had arranged for a city-wide student mass meeting to be held Sunday, June 9th.

At this meeting, a number of the persons who had been in Dorchester spoke, and all who attended were urged to "get with" the registration programs in their respective communities. The registration program was conducted the first three days of the week beginning with that Sunday, and 556 applicants were scored during those three days. On the Monday that I was there, the registration drives were being conducted in the various communities, and at the meeting on Monday afternoon I attended, representatives of the communities reported a total of 139 applicants for that day.

Here is how the registration programs work in the various communities. The student leaders in each community have secured the use of church facilities for office space. They arrive at the church early in the morning and have arranged for community student help to assist in canvassing. The canvassers begin about 8:30 or 9 o'clock in the morning, and the leadership has arranged for adults in the community to provide transportation to the courthouse. Some of the communities have been short on transportation and others have not. In one community, a funeral parlor has made its transportation facilities available to the students.

Persons whom the canvassers recruit are taken by the church office if they feel that they need instruction, and if they do not, they are taken directly from their homes to the county courthouse. Each canvasser is responsible for reporting back to the community office to secure transportation for all applicants recruited by that canvasser. Each canvasser undertakes to convince his applicants that when they receive a mailed notification from the registrar's office, either of rejection or acceptance, that they bring the letter to the community office.

In the meeting on Monday afternoon, one student reported that they had received at her community office, 50 of these notifications of acceptance. She said that she expected a very high percentage of applicants from that community eventually to receive acceptance notifications.

SCLC is paying the major cost of this program out of funds that were left over from the Field Foundation grant for the citizenship schools, according to Andy Young. SCLC is paying the salaries of two office secretaries, Elizabeth Hayes and Yvonne Barum - $10 per week each, In addition to these two office secretaries, one person in each of the communities listed above is paid $10 per week by SCLC and two persons in each of the areas are paid $5 per week. Young says that the total cost to SCLC of the program runs about $250 a week. Andy says that SCLC is prepared to continue this expenditure at least through August. He says that the Alabama Christian Movement for Human Rights is supplying the paper that is needed for mimeographing, etc. Attached are four of the mimeographed flyers which the students passed out in attempting to stimulate interest in voter registration in their communities.

In the Ensley community, a girl of 15 named Shirley Lee has drawn by hand for posters depicting the use of police dogs and clubs during the demonstrations which will now be lettered with appropriate legends and posted in conspicuous placed throughout the community. At the meeting on Monday afternoon which I attended, these posters were shown to the group, and it was decided that Miss Lee should be taken off canvass duty and assigned to making such posters full time for other communities.

Each student leader (the $10 a week man) in his community is authorized to schedule community mass meetings at his discretion. But he must submit a program outline of the mass meeting which he proposes to hold to the office and Miss Yvonne Barum has the responsibility for recruiting speakers and other necessary personnel from among the program leaders. It is also Miss Barum's responsibility to OK the program and the students themselves have established the rule that no leader can hold a mass meeting without first receiving Miss Barum's OK on the program.

Andy Young stresses two points. First, that he and Bevel and Cotton have, from the beginning, served in an advisory capacity only, and have very largely permitted the students to find their own way in matters of organization, disclipine, etc. He says that the students need considerable herd-riding in order to curb their tendencies to move away from voter registration into direct action, particularly in Gadsden. I judge from the one meeting that I saw that this program of student responsibility is functioning rather well. The young people appeared to be serious and responsible and primarily interested in getting the job done.

The second point Andy stresses is that most of these youngsters are by no means from privileged backgrounds. He says that a great many of the young men are school drop-outs, and that several of the young women are mothers of illegitimate children. He cites these facts as evidence that this particular registration program is deeply rooted in the Negro community itself. It is by no means representative of leadership imposed from on top. The short time that I was able to observe the activities bore out Young's analysis. Young says that he tries to spend the first three days of each week in Birmingham. During the day he occupies himself driving from church to church, helping to straighten out any problems which arise. I rode with him from about 1 o'clock until about 3 on the day that I was there, and we called upon some six churches. At each of these six churches, the activities were as they had been described to me by Young, and as the leaders described them in the meeting which I attended late Monday afternoon.

Young tells me that they are giving to Atty. Orzell Billingsley accounts of all persons who appeared to have been rejected at the registration office for unjustifiable reasons.

Young feels that it will be possible for the ASCARV registration project, which is scheduled to begin July 1st, to work with this student program only if the student leadership is handled in the way he has been handling them in the past. In other words, he thinks that it would destroy this student movement if an attempt were made to impose direction and authority upon it from the top. He feels and my observations bear this out - that the rapport which he, Bevel, and Cotton developed with these young people during the period of the demonstrations will have to be duplicated by whoever attempts to coordinate the ASCARV program.with the student program. He thinks that Mrs. Johnson very probably could, and would handle this, and it is his judgment and mine that this student organization could enhance considerably the ASCARV program, particularly since Mrs. Johnson says that she intends to concentrate on the very communities which the students are working. I suspect that it is going to take a bit of negotiating to bring about the coordination of the student program and the ASCARV program, and I would suggest that W.B. would be in a position better than anyone else to visit Birmingham shortly after July 5th and discuss this whole matter with Mrs. Johnson. There will doubtless be personality as well as various other problems in connection with such a coordination, considering the backgrounds from which the young people come, and their quite natural interest in feeling that they are running their own show. However, if the spirit which I observed in the student program can be preserved, and coordination with the ASCARV program can be affected, I think we can expect a highly successful registration program in Birmingham this summer.

(It should be mentioned here because I don't think I inserted it above)that each day when the registrar's office is open, the programs are conducted in the various communities, and then a meeting of the community leaders is held in the office in the Smith building at 4 o'clock at which reports are made, problems are discussed, and difficulties which have been encountered during the day are resolved).

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

RE: New York Field Trip

From: Jack Minnis

I called on John Morsell Friday, June 21, 1963 at his office, 20 East 40th Street, New York City. When I phoned at about 9:30 a. m., Morsell told me I had picked a very bad time to come calling. He indicated that he was swamped with work, but he said he would be glad to have me come by for a brief visit so he could meet me.

I arrived at his office at about 10:30. I explained to Morsell that my responsibility with VEP is to gather the data that will be necessary for the book on VEP which SRC proposes to publish at the end of the project. I told him that I was able to deal with the head office of SCLC and SNCC in Atlanta, and that I had come to his office to get an idea of what kinds and amounts of information NAA was accumulating on its VEP supported programs, so we would know in the future what we could expect to find at NAA that we don't have.

He said that apart from the mimeo sheets that he sends us, NAA does not gather any information on Voter Education Project programs. He said that in January, 1963, he had written half-a-dozen or so letters to chapter people involved in VEP projects, asking them to write him about their activities. I told him I'd like very much to see the replies to these. Before he left to get the replies, he suggested I could probably find some useful data in the Memphis office of Patton, and the Richmond office of Brooks.

He also explained that he is terribly busy just now because of a great increase in the mail that comes from members all over the country. He said that during all of last year, his office had received 35,000 such letters, but that already this year, 25,000 had come in.- 3,000 within the past ten days.

I did not mention this to him, but these letters would be a very valuable data source for us. If we could, at some future time, get access to the letters coming from the southern states, we would be able to judge what has been the effect of NAACP activities in registration; we would have a fine guage of what the NAA membership is concerned enough about to write letters.

Morsell left the office, and returned shortly with an armful of letters and reports. The only thing he didn't have in this stuff was a letter from Mrs. Tyler in Biloxi from which I drew the following quote:

Ruby Tyler to John Morsell from Biloxi, Miss., 2-2-63.

"...3 out of every 5 people contacted usually has no intention of registering, and merely says so to get rid of the worker. Especially when a worker abolishes all their excuses. We have had as many as 15 people which say they would go, and when the drives comes, they're sick, or have to go to work, and maybe 5 will go. Our only combat has been to get the block worker to go with the driver and when the person sees the worker, they're usually ashamed not to go. This has worked fairly well for us. We still have a large percentage of people who feel there is no need to register. My only suggestion is, instead of an annual drive, try and keep the program before the public..."

The following memo from Patton to Morsell:

May 5, 1962 (1963) - CORE is attempting to get a foothold and organize in Memphis. They have had one of their field secretaries in there for the past 3 or 4 weeks.

I have an idea they will try a registration campaign first so I am planning to stage a six-weeks campaign beginning June 1st. So, from the VEP funds I want $1,500 for this campaign. The budget is attached. Our goal will be an additional 10,000.(registered voters).

...and a May 1st report from Patton to Morsell on Patton's activities during April.

I asked him to send us copies of these items. It will be interesting to see whether or not he will send a copy of the memo quoted above.

I suspect he will simply hand the stack of papers to his secretary for photo copying, and forwarding, in which case, we shall have an actual copy of the memo for our files.

I regard the memo as a clear indication (if any more were needed) of the hazards of expecting cooperation between NAACP and other agencies in registration drives in Patton's territory.

June 21, 1963, at about 2 p. m., I called on Jim McCain, Field Director for CORE at his office, 38 Park Row, New York City.

I told McCain that I wanted to find out what kind of records CORE was keeping of the VEP activities. He showed me first, the VEP-2 form which he keeps in a special notebook on his desk. He had totaled up the number registered since April 1st (he said he did this after receiving my call this morning), and it came to 954 in S. C., Miami, and Louisiana. I told him I was hoping I would find that he required some kind of narrative report of his field people. He said he instituted such a requirement at the time CORE first began participating in VEP, and that he has files of these reports and other correspondence from each of the areas in which CORE has operated from the inception of VEP to the present. He showed me these files, and while I only looked over them hurriedly, I am sure they contain much data that will be invaluable for purposes of the final VEP report. McCain said he would be glad to bundle the whole thing up and send it along whenever we requested it. I asked him if he would send us copies of future such reports and correspondence, and he said he would be glad to do so. I feel, therefore, that in the future, we can expect from CORE, reporting that will be much more useful from both the operations and the research viewpoints.

McCain said that he had attended a COPE convention in S. C. during May, and that one of the COPE people he met there said he had connections with Gov. Russell of S. C., and that he would speak to him about the situation in Kingstree. He said that so far as he knew, this contact had not been made, and that certainly, if made, it had not operated to ease the resistance of the registrars in Kingstree.

He said he had talked to Frank Robinson in Sumter yesterday, and that Frank had told him that the FBI has been in Kingstree investigating this matter.

He also said that the U. S. attorney in Columbia had been quoted by a newspaper as having said of the Kingstree situation that if it was not eased, he would take action. What action, apparently, was not specified.

It is important to note here that there is a wide difference between the internal operations of the four of the "Big Five" agencies on which we have such information.

CORE and SNCC, we know, have an internal reporting system which theoretically keeps the organization leadership informed of the specific details of field activities. From my experience, I would judge that the system is much more effective in the case of CORE than it is in the case of SNCC. In my conversation with McCain, I gained the distinct impression that he reads these field reports, and is well informed about the program activities of his field staff. In my contact with SNCC leadership, I have not gotten a similar impression. I suspect that the reason for the difference lies in the fact that SNCC lacks the administrative sophistication of CORE. I have not seen in SNCC a position which corresponds in function to that occupied by McCain in CORE. Jim Forman is, apparently, trying to do the job of CORE's Farmer and McCain. I am sure the reasons for this difference in administrative structure are intricately involved with such complex factors as differing ideological orientations, differing periods of organizational experience, etc.

On the other hand, the apparent complete lack of an internal intelligence system in NAACP and SCLC which keeps an administrator informed of the specific details of field activities raises, I think, serious questions for VEP. It is rather clear that these two agencies, from their central offices, exercise a general supervision of disbursement of VEP funds. However, in the absence of a corresponding supervision of the details of field activity, it is difficult to see how it is possible for these two agencies either to coordinate their VEP activities effectively, or to supervise the expenditure of the VEP funds disbursed from the central office.

Summing up, then, I think it will be necessary for the VEP staff, in the future, to observe much more closely and in considerably greater detail, the VEP programs conducted by NAACP and SCLC. Furthermore, I think the internal administrative shortcomings of SNCC (which are involved with the ineffective use of internal intelligence rather than a lack of it altogether) place SNCC in the same category as NAACP and SCLC, with respect to increased VEP staff observation.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Jack Minnis

Subject: Field Trip to Savannah, Georgia

My principal objective in going to Savannah at this time was to attempt to get some insight into the cleavage which divides the Negro leadership there. However, immediately upon my arrival in Savannah, I became caught up in a series of events which conspired to frustrate that purpose. There were a number of points at which it would have been possible for me to disengage myself from the drama which was being enacted in Savannah, but, since we do not have in our files at this time an eye-witness account of what transpires as such a series of events unfolds, I elected to alter the purpose of my visit to Savannah in order to provide such an account.

I arrived in Savannah at about 7:15 p. m., July 10th, and drove immediately to the Crusade for Voters headquarters on West Park Avenue. While driving in from the airport, I heard on the radio a local businessman being interviewed about Savannah's proposed industrial park. The interviewer asked the businessman at one point whether or not racial demonstrations had hurt Savannah's effort to attract industry. The businessman said that, of course, it hurt, but that he didn't think that Savannah had been hurt any more than a number of other southern cities.

When I arrived at the Crusade for Voter's headquarters, I met Ben Clark, Hosea Williams' understudy, and Carolyn Roberts, the office secretary for the Crusade. We talked for a bit about the relation between the current demonstrations and voter registration. Ben said that the series of demonstrations had been deliberately planned, from the outset, as a means of involving the Negro community in political affairs to such an extent that they could more easily be induced to attempt registration.

I am inclined to think that some of this is post hoc rationalizing; however, I feel there is some validity to it because Ben and Carolyn referred several times to the registration's success in Birmingham following the demonstrations there, and I know that Andy Young, who largely planned and executed the Birmingham registration drive, has worked very closely with the Savannah movement in recent months (he was still in Savannah not a month ago in connection with the demonstrations there).

Ben and Carolyn stated, in answer to my question that no VEP money had been spent since the demonstrations began, and that none would be spent until the present phase of the movement passes, and a concerted registration drive is embarked upon. (See also the note attached which Hosea Williams passed to me in the courtroom the following day).

They also said that a committee of persons is presently working to get people to the registrar's office. They said they did not have the figures on how many had been registered since the demonstration began - that they were being kept by the committee. They said that on the following morning, they would arrange for the committee to come by the office so we could talk with them.

There was to be a mass meeting that evening at the Club Flamingo, a night club, the premises of which have been turned over by the proprietor to the movement for this purpose. Ben said that none of the ministers would permit use of their churches for the purpose, and he seemed to feel that the ministers had been influenced in this regard by W. W. Law, local NAACP leader. He felt that this reflected, not so much a lack of militancy on Law's part, as a personal conflict between Law and Williams. I had been aware of the conflict from numerous sources, including Williams.

Ben and Carolyn said they were in need of some assistance in running the movement, and they hoped that Martin Luther King, Jr., and/or some of his assistants would show up shortly. Ben had just received a telegram from MLK, Jr., saying he was sending Andy Young and C. T. Vivian, and that he would be there himself, "...within the next few days".

Ben said that he had no one to offer as a speaker for the mass meeting that night, and asked if I would speak to the meeting. I agreed to do so.

The Club Flamingo is a large, low-ceilinged enclosure, leaning more in the nature of a dance hall than a night club. When Ben, Carolyn and I arrived, there were what appeared to be about two thousand persons at the meeting. Hundreds of cars were parked in the field adjacent to the club, and in a vacant field across the road (the club was on the outskirts of Savannah).

Bruce Gordon, SNCC, was speaking when we arrived. The substance of his message was an urgent plea for demonstrators and the assertion that while MLK, Jr., was a good man, he could not get the Negroes' freedom for them - that this was something only they could do for themselves. At one point in his address, Gordon asserted that the first thing that Martin Luther King, Jr., would ask when he arrived was, how many persons are willing to go to jail?

Then, Atty. B. Clarence Mayfield spoke, informing the meeting that the bond for Williams had been raised to $20,000, and that persons in the community had come forward offering that amount of money. He said that at one point, $10,000 bond had actually been put up for Williams, that he had been released, and then re-arrested immediately on another "Good Behavior" warrant, and that other warrants were then filed against Williams, bringing the total bond to $20,000.

He said that the warrants charged that Hosea had been responsible for everything from "the killing of Cock Robin to the shooting of Garfield". He said that he and his colleagues were going to make the prosecution prove such allegations at the trial on the morrow, and he urged the audience to pack the courtroom for the trial.

After Mayfield spoke, Carolyn led singing for 15 or 20 minutes. I was very much surprised at the verve, vigor, and ability with which she did so. In my previous acquaintance with her, she had seemed quiet and reserved and efficient as a secretary of the Crusade office.

By this time, the audience had grown, I should judge, to three thousand or more. A call was made for donations to keep the movement going, and it was later announced that $94 had been collected.

At the time Ben asked me to speak at the meeting, I was very much aware of the possible conflict between my connection with VEP and any expressed or implied participation or endorsement of the direct-action demonstrations which were taking place in Savannah. On the other hand, I was aware of VEP's responsibility to provide advice and counsel on effective registration programs for participating agencies. Since one of the problems which the Savannah program, as well as many others have encountered, is the overcoming of the obstacle of lack of confidence in the utility of political participation - I had for some time felt that there was a need to demonstrate the relationship between mass political action, which seems to find ready support in many Negro communities, and the more prosaic type of political action involved in registering and voting. It seemed to me that here was an opportune time to lay a foundation in Savannah for the registration program which the Southeastern Georgia Crusade for Voters intended to conduct immediately following the termination of the mass-action program. Furthermore, I felt that it would be possible to demonstrate such a relationship to the audience that night without in any way expressing or implying particpation in or endorsement of the mass demonstrations by VEP. With these considerations in mind, I had agreed to speak.

I opened my remarks by pointing out that my personal and organizational concern lay wholly in the field of voter registration. I stated that I was not in a position either to endorse or to condemn mass-action demonstrations. I said, however, that any qualified observer of public affairs in the United States during the past 90 days must conclude that mass political action in the form of demonstrations had been responsible for getting civil rights legislation before the U. S. Congress, and that very likely had it not been for the mass demonstrations, the civil rights legislation would not now be before the Congress. I pointed out the simple fact that, therefore, mass demonstrations had proven to be an effective form of political action during the recent past. Then I suggested that however effective mass political action may be in getting a political system working as it were, it is difficult to envisage a society which is able to resolve all of the great complexity of its problems through the medium of street demonstrations. I suggested that however effective mass demonstrations may be in the attaining of short-term and immediate objectives, such a form of political action could not be expected, over the long run, to build the kind of society in which I felt sure everyone there wanted to live. I further suggested that whatever gains might be made through the medium of street demonstrations, could only be consolidated and insured for the future if the demonstrators were willing to continue to be involved in and to participate in political affairs after the demonstrations terminated. I pointed out that such future involvement and participation could be effected through registering and voting, and that little in the way of permanent advance could be expected unless those who were now demonstrating were also willing in the future to take the time and trouble to register and vote.

When I finished speaking, Ben Clark again took the floor, made some announcements, and then Carolyn again led singing for 15 or 20 minutes. When the singing was finished, Bruce Gordon, who earlier had urged everyone to participate in a march on the county jail where Williams was a prisoner, instructed those who wanted to march to move outside and form up in a column of twos. He suggested that all who did not care to march should participate in some way by driving slowly along the line of marchers and thus creating a traffic slow-down, or by offering shelter to demonstrators who might be chased by police, et cetera.

Mrs. Williams told me that Hosea had expressed some concern for the safety of her and the children, and had instructed her to stay with the Mayfields until he was released from jail.

After the meeting, Ben and I drove along the line of march. The marchers must have numbered about 2,000. The line was about four blocks long, three abreast, and was composed of both old and young people, with the latter in preponderance. The age range appeared to be, literally, from about 9 to 90.

We drove to a point in advance of the march and stopped to watch it pass. While Ben and I were standing watching the line of marchers, two youngsters about 19 or 20 dropped out of the line, asked Ben when they could register and where, and upon receiving the information, rejoined the line of marchers.

When the line had passed, Ben and I drove down to the Chatham County jail, the focal point for the demonstration.

Twenty-five or so uniformed police were gathered in a large, asphalt-surfaced open space between the buildings housing the city and the county jails.

As the marchers began to arrive, and those who had driven rather than march swelled the crowd - the street filled up. Ben and I were standing on the curb of the street, and the small group of young people gathered around us. As it turned out, these were Ben's couriers.

As the main body of marchers arrived on the street, just one block to our right, a large crowd developed there. We could see two paddy wagons there with their red lights operating. Ben asked a young lady to go see what was happening. She returned in a minute or so to report that some of the marchers had lay down in the street to block traffic. The police had picked them up and put them in the paddy wagons, and then other marchers had thrown themselves under the wheels of the wagons, preventing the wagons from moving.

Ben instructed a young man to find, up at the corner, a certain march captain and tell him to lead the main body of marchers down into the street where we were. Within three or four minutes, the marchers began to move toward us. Very shortly, the entire street, from the building line behind us, to the center line of the street, was a mass of packed bodies for the entire length of the block. The police across the street did not appear to be doing anything but watching the proceedings. By this time, a riot squad of about a dozen officers formed ranks in the center of the open space. They were armed with what appeared to be automatic rifles and each had several tear gas bombs at his belt.

Bruce Gordon, several of the march captains (whose job it was to supervise the march and keep it orderly) and others were out in front of the crowd. They were instructing all those who wanted to be arrested to sit down in the street, and others to move back as far as possible. Most of the crowd who were actually in the street promptly seated themselves. Still, there was no move on the part of the police. Then, Gordon and the captains instructed all those who wanted to be arrested to form up in a line of twos so they could march into the jail in an orderly fashion. Those who had been sitting promptly rose and did so. There must have been a thousand or more of them. At this point, a couple of plain clothes persons, who were apparently associated with the police, and a couple of uniformed officers, came out into the street and spoke for a few minutes to Gordon. Ben asked a courier to go out and see what was being said, but the young man was unable to get through the crowd.

Another young man ran up to inform Ben that a warrant had been issued for his arrest. Ben decided it would be best if he found a less prominent place and told me he would meet me at the car.

I moved across the street to the unoccupied side, the better to see what was going on. Whatever the police had said to Gordon and the captains, it produced a change in plans. Those who wanted to be arrested were asked to form a rank headed the other way. Then, they began a march toward the street corner where the two paddy wagons had immobilized by the prostrate bodies of the marchers.

I moved up the block as they did.

An hour or so before, when we had first arrived, the street which intercepted Habersham Street (where the demonstration had thus far been centered) had been clear. Now it was filled with police cars and the fire-bumper truck. Several firemen were gathered on the esplanade (the intersecting street is a boulevard), along with a considerable number of police, both white and Negro. The four corners of the intersecting streets were filled with prostrate marchers, so that the intersection was completely blocked traffic.

The two immobolized paddy wagons were in the intersection at the south side, heading in opposite directions, with their fronts to each other.

While I was enroute to the intersection, I heard a tear gas bomb explode, and passed people going in the opposite direction with handkerchiefs held to their faces. The gas did not appear to be heavy, so I proceeded on. I could smell it, but it was not heavy enough to cause discomfort. Just as I arrived at the corner, I saw the paddy wagon that was facing west lurch forward, and I saw marchers throwing themselves in front of it. It stopped almost immediately. Apparently, a tear gas bomb had momentarily dispersed the prostrate marchers who had been immobilizing it. After this, neither wagon made any attempt to move.

Those who had volunteered to be arrested dispersed in the general area of the intersection, some prostrating themselves with those who were already packed around the paddy wagons, others doing the same thing at the four parts of the intersection which were not otherwise blocked, and still others joining the already large milling throng.

The persons who had been taken into custody earlier were still in the paddy wagons, and from time to time, they stamped their feet and beat upon the floor and sides of the wagon in time with the songs that were periodically being sung by elements of the throng.

There seemed to be considerable indecision both on the part of the demonstrators and of the police about just what should come next. For an hour or more, the throng continued to mill, and the police did no more than stand around watching. The police made no serious attempt to remove the prostrate persons blocking the paddy wagons. Now and then a couple of officers would drag a prostrate person away from one of the wagons, but immediately his place would be taken by two or three others.

The police were clearly frustrated at the defiance of the demonstrators, but they didn't do anything about it. Several times, I thought police were going to start using the billies, with which they were armed, but each time they stopped short of actually hitting anyone. As time passed, and the situation remained amorphous, the tension of both police and demonstrators grew considerably. The slightest suggestion of a positive move by either party produced a reaction from the other party.

It seemed certain that eventually a policeman would lose his control and use his club. If this had happened, I have no doubt, he and his fellows would have been mobbed. As it happened, the tension finally produced its own relief.

A group of fireman had brought the nozzle to their hose and all police were directed to get out of the line of fire. When the demonstrators saw what was up, they began daring the firemen to turn on the water. The hose was, at this point, aimed in the general direction of the wagons. On orders from the police captain, the fireman altered the aim of the hose away from the wagon. This appeared to be an attempt to draw the defiant demonstrators away from the wagons. A large number of them did move over and place themselves in front of the hose, but those blocking movement of the wagons held their places.

At this point, the prisoners in one of the wagons set up a particularly insistent stamping on the rear door of the wagon. This attracted the attention of a number of the demonstrators, and they moved over to surround the wagon and began rocking it. The persistent kicking on the rear door had broken the padlock on the door, and it was hanging loose in hasp. The demonstrators promptly opened the door to release the prisoners. A group of police rushed in and drove the demonstrators back by pushing and manhandling them. I did not see, at this time, nor, indeed, at any time during the course of the evening, any use of force by the police which I regarded as excessive under the circumstances. I saw no clubbing, no kicking, no slugging on the part of the police. This is not to say that such did not occur - but only to say that I did not see it occur. In these circumstances, I think it would have been distinctly imprudent for the police to have used this kind of force. I had the impression that some of the demonstrators would have insisted on quid pro quo.

After the paddy wagon door had been resecured, the police withdrew from the immediate area, and began to lob tear gas bombs into the crowd. I saw three separate instances in which the shells skidded into a mass of prostrate bodies before exploding. I do not know how much concussion was involved in these explosions, but the persons affected did not appear to have been harmed, beyond the effect of the gas itself.

At this point, the tear gas bombs skidded, from I know not where, stopped between my two feet and enveloped me in a cloud of gas. Blinded, I managed to make my way out of the center of the disturbance, and when I could see again, to the car parked a block or so away. Ben was nowhere around, and I waited for 30 minutes or so, and then, supposing he had taken cover against arrest, I drove about the area looking things over. I saw groups of the dispersed Negroes throughout the general area of the demonstration, but, other than shouting defiance at the police, I saw no untoward act on their part.

I went to my room and slept. It was 2 a. m. I arrived at the Crusade for Voters office on West Park Avenue at about 11:30 on July 11th.

Two white SNCC people were there, along with Judson Carter, a Negro.

The two whites acted as though I were an enemy until Carter told them who I was. Right away, then, they took me into another room, closed the door, and began to analize the whole situation for me. I had seen both of them at the meeting the previous night and intermittently during the demonstration.

They both seemed to me to be somewhat immature to be involved in anything more than functional duties. They seemed very much impressed by the drama of the events which were occuring, and by their role in those events. Their attitude toward the rank and file Negroes was abrupt, amost imperious. The two whites were concerned with the demands which they would express to city officials whom they expected to call anytime. They did not appear to be very well grounded in what the original demands had been at the outset of the demonstrations, and I got the impression that their ideas of what the demands should be were coming right off the top of their heads with really very little consideration either of the desirability or practicability of the demands they were outlining.

Before long, Carolyn Roberts showed up, and we went into the main office of the Crusade for Voters, the windows of which face on West Park Avenue. Carolyn was just setting about to get in touch with the voter registration committee when we heard some singing of freedom songs on the street outside. We looked out the window and saw a group of about 15 or 20 youngsters marching two abreast down West Park Avenue singing, "We Shall Overcome". Almost immediately, the street filled with at least a half-a-dozen police cars, and a paddy wagon, and the marchers were stopped by police. We could not hear what the police officer said to the marchers, but we saw them in conversation with a police officer, and very shortly, they seated themselves, and the police proceeded to carry and drag them into the patrol wagon and haul them away. Members of the riot squad, decked out with tear gas bombs and automatic rifles stationed themselves on the four corners of the intersection of West Park Avenue, and West Broad Street - and other members of the riot squad, similarly equipped, began strolling through the Negro residential areas around the office. We could see all of this from the windows of the office building.

Carolyn and the two whites had previously told me that Ben Clark was still in hiding, I understood, at Atty. Mayfield's residence. Clark understood that the police had a warrant out for his arrest, and he wanted, at all costs, to avoid arrest until someone arrived who could take over leadership of the movement.

Carolyn and the two whites and Judson Carter began to express considerable anxiety about the possibility of the police raiding the offices and arresting them, and taking the records they had of persons willing to put up bond, and impounding the $94 which had been collected at the meeting the previous night. They decided it would be expedient for them to attempt to make their escape through a rear door of the building, which gave on to West Broad Street, about half-a-block from the intersection with West Park Avenue. Carolyn put the money and the list of names into her purse and asked me to take it to Atty. Mayfield's office. Then, they left by the rear door. I went out the front door of the building and got into the car and drove away. The police made no attempt to stop me. At this point, so far as I know, the Crusade for Voters office was emptied of people. I took Carolyn's purse by the attorney's office and left it there with Carolyn, who had arrived in the anteroom.

I left Mayfield's office and went downtown to the Chatham County Courthouse, as the time for the Williams' hearing on the "Good Behavior" warrants was approaching. I had time to watch for 30 minutes or so, the registrar's office. At one point, I stepped up to the registration window and asked Mrs. Winn how many registered voters there are in Chatham County, and she told me that the last time they had totaled the registration was April 23rd, and at that time, there were 55,488 registered voters. During the time that I stood and watched, some 30 minutes or so, five Negroes came up and registered. I did not see anything to complain of in the way the Negroes were served while they were registering.

At 3:30, Judge Melling entered the courtroom and ordered all visual and audio equipment removed and said, "There's not going to be any demonstration here. I want that understood".

This was a hearing to determine whether Hosea Williams should be placed under a "Good Behavior" bond, according to the provisions of Section 76101 of the Georgia code. The hearing involved five "Good Behavior" warrants which had been issued by Judge Melling on the complaint of these five persons: William Canterbury, David Frawley; Ernest S. Hurst; Inell Lubeck; and Homer Williamson. Prosecution and defense agreed to try all five of the cases together. Atty. Mayfield filed a general demurrer to the prosecution, a copy of which is attached to this report. The first witness called by the state, who was not one of the complainants, testified that he recognized Hosea Williams to be the leader of the demonstrations. When questioned as to the basis of his recognition of Hosea as leader, the witness stated that he concluded that Hosea was the leader after having seen Hosea's telecast on July 3rd. Atty.

Mayfield objected to the introduction of such evidence on the ground that the best evidence of the July 3rd telecast content was the telecast itself, and urging that the witness' testimony as to that content was hearsay. Judge Melling over-ruled this objection. At this point, one of the court functionaries came in and whispered to the judge,and the judge announced that a phone call had just been received stating that a bomb had been planted in the courthouse, and announcing that anyone who cared to leave could do so. No one left. The state's case, in addition to the testimony of the first witness was based upon the testimony of the five complainants. Three of these complainants testified that they had heard the July 3rd telecast, and that it was on the basis of this telecast that they had decided to file infamations against Hosea Williams as leader of the demonstrations. One of the other defendants said that he had read in the newspaper that Hosea Williams was the leader of the demonstrations, and the fifth witness testified that he had heard the demonstrators chanting, "Hosea is our leader", and had thereby identified Hosea as the person responsible for the demonstrations. None of the witnesses under cross-examination were able to say that they had ever seen Hosea leading a demonstration, though a couple of them testified that they had seen and heard him addressing mass rallys in public places around Savannah during the period in which demonstrations were occuring. At one point, Mayfield attempted, in his cross-examination, to explore the circumstances leading up to the filing of the "Good Behavior" warrants, but the prosecution objected to such a line of questioning on the argument that it was irrelevant and Judge Melling sustained the prosecution's objection. The state rested its case after the five complainants had been heard from, and then Mayfield put Williams on the stand. Williams made a statement assisted by Mayfield. He was briefly cross-examined by the prosecution, and then both sides provided brief summations. The judge ruled almost immediately that there was sufficient ground to hold Hosea on the five "Good Behavior" warrants in the amount of $2500 each until the matter could be heard by Superior Court. At this point, Mayfield cited a case in which the Georgia Supreme Court had ruled that under Section 76101 of the Georgia Code, a municipal court did not have authority to commit a defendent to jail. Judge Melling dismissed this argument with a wave of his hand as he was leaving the bench with the statement, "I have ruled".

I went from the courtroom to the airport in order to catch a plane back to Atlanta. Just before I left, Andy Young of SCLC arrived, and we had a brief conversation at the airport. Andy said that he had come to undertake to assist in leading the movement there in Savannah. He said that he would make some attempt to heal the breach which has developed in the community leadership in Savannah, and he would attempt to get some of the ministers involved in the movement.

The thing that impressed me most about the dynamics of the demonstration I witnessed on the night of July 10th, was the fact that after Ben Clark had retired from directing the demonstration early in the evening, there appeared to be no one actually to take charge, and to give the demonstration focus and purpose. At the same time, there appeared to be considerable confusion and indecision on the part of the police as to just what should be done in the face of this huge mass of demonstrators. Up to the point where the tear gas was used, I felt that the Savannah police had conducted themselves creditably. They had patroled the entire line of march from the Club Flamingo to the Chatham County jail - had directed traffic for street crossings in the line of march, and had done nothing which I observed, to hinder or harass in any way the marchers, or the demonstration. After Ben went in hiding, confusion seemed to develop among the demonstrators and their subordinate leaders, and as time passed, tension mounted. I had the feeling that had the police refrained from all such provocative actions as putting the demonstrators into the paddy wagons and in general, making such threatening gestures as brining up the fire hose, that the demonstrators probably would have dispersed peaceably. One of the most striking aspects of the entire evening was the fact that the police appeared really not to know what to do, but, on the other hand, to be convinced that they must do something. It struck me that this attitude on the part of the police dictated that they provide some kind of barrier against the demonstrations, and this, of course, in turn, insured that the demonstrators would be provoked. At several points during the evening, I was reminded of nothing so much as two small boys, each with a chip on his shoulder, and each waiting for the other to do something which would suggest a fight. In such a situation, it was inevitable that one of the parties would initiate action.

School Integration Suits Here Planned by NAACP

Legal Work Now Being Prepared In New Orleans

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is now in the process of preparing suits for school desegregation in Lake Charles and Calcasieu parish schools.

This announcement was made by Lawrence Conley, president of the local NAACP chapter.

Conley said the desegregation suit is being prepared by NAACP attorneys in New Orleans and will be filed as soon as they are completed.

Conley said his organization had hoped that desegregation could have been effected by September, but indicated that this may now be delayed pending completion of preparation of briefs.

In announcing the preparation of the desegregation suits, Conley denied he earlier told a local television newscaster that Negroes resented "outsiders" coming into Lake Charles and conducting a voter registration conference.

Conley said he admitted to the newscaster that most of the people involved in conducting the conference were people from the North Louisiana area, but admitted that he (Conley) did not personally attend the conference.

The local NAACP leader said he could not attend the Saturday sessions of the conference due to conflicting work schedules. He said that he tried to attend the program Sunday afternoon following church services, but that the conference was then closed.

Conley is employed as a postman with the local U. S. post office. The voter registration conference, sponsored locally by the Independent Democratic Association, was held Saturday and Sunday at the Immaculate Heart of Mary Catholic church under the direction of Major Jones, an officer of the North Louisiana Crusade for Voters.

Others taking part in the conference included officers from the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and the Congress on Racial Equality.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Jack Minnis

Subj: A Conference Held by the United Crusade for Voters in Lake Charles, Louisiana, on August 10 and 11.

This meeting, to which VEP had been invited to send a representative by Major Johns, was sponsored by the United Crusade for Voters. The UCV is a newly formed affiliate of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Major Johns is a SCLC staff man, and two of the other Shreveport people who attended the meeting with John - Lavert Taylor and Daniel Harrell, are also on the SCLC staff payroll.

The meeting was held in facilities provided by the Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic Church. Shortly after discussions began on August 10, it developed that there is a serious cleavage within the Lake Charles Negro community. It struck me that selection of the Catholic facilities might have been considered provocative by the Protestant leaders of the Negro community. I asked Major Johns how he came to select these facilities, and he said that Protestant leaders with whom he had been in contact in setting up the conference had at first agreed to cooperate with him, but then had changed their minds on the theory that no outsiders were needed in Lake Charles, and had effectively blocked t he use of Protestant or neutral facilities for the conference.

Though the conference had been billed by the United Crusade for Voters as a state-wide affair, representation was by no means state-wide. There were five persons from Shreveport, including Major Johns and his two subordinates, W. W. Harlow, and a Mr. Johnson from Parkermon, Louisiana; I. S. Daniels from New Orleans, and an assortment of persons from Lake Charles, which appeared to include some secondary NAACP leadership, but no representatives to either of the Protestant segment of the community, or of the community youth.

One factor which seems to have contributed to the diminished representation at this conference was a simultaneous conference held by the Louisiana Advancement Society in Baton Rouge. The latter appears to have been considerably better financed than was the UCV conference in Lake Charles. The Baton Rouge conference will be discussed in the Baton Rouge section of this report.

There were, in all, about thirty persons in attendance at the first session of the conference on the morning of August 10. Although a rather elaborate agenda had been worked out for the conference by Major Johns (see program attached), the rather restricted nature of the attendance at the conference made implementation of the agenda impracticable. Thus, the conference developed into four discussion sessions on Saturday morning, Saturday afternoon, Saturday evening and Sunday morning.

The first discussion session was chaired rather skillfully by Major Johns. It revolved around the problems encountered by those present in attempting to get Negroes registered in their various areas of Louisiana. The problems discussed were the familiar ones of lack of understanding on the part of Negroes of the role voter registration can play in the finding of solutions to the problems they face, the fear of economic and physical reprisals from whites, self-destructive conflicts and divisions among the community leadership, excessive cooperation, either through venality or lack of understanding, between Negro "leaders" and politically and economically prominent whites, and the lack of the skills of literacy and political manipulation on the part of a large proportion of the Negro community. One aspect of this problem is the efficiency with which large numbers of Negroes are disenfranchised by the testing and literacy requirements of Louisiana registration. It is important to remember there are two logical approaches to this problem - preparing persons to meet the state's requirements, and/or altering the state's requirements to meet the needs of the people for political participation. It is easy to overlook the fact that literacy skills by no means guarantee the ability to understand politics and to act with political intelligence in one's own best interest as one sees that interest. Indeed, a persuasive argument can be made that an orthodox education inhibits both the ability and desire to understand and act effectively in public affairs.)

Underlying all of these, of course, was the reluctance of whites to see Negro registration increased, and, apparently, the reluctance of some Negro "leaders" to see Negro political participation grow beyond their ability to evidence some control of it for the preservation of their advantageious relationship with the white community.

I shall not attempt here to enumerate all the specifics of the discussion. This discussion session was more important for the questions it raised than for the answers it provided. One of the most interesting aspects of the discussion was the continual insistance by Mr. Lowell Guillory, who apparently occupies a position of some prominence in the Catholic segment of the community, and by a Mr. Robinson, who is an NAACP official, and who is apparently employed at one of the refineries in Lake Charles, that there was no problem in Lake Charles with respect to white reluctance to see Negroes register. Both Guillory and Robinson several times expressed the feeling that so long as too many Negroes did not attempt to register at one time, thereby arousing the wrath of the segregationist element in the white community, the registrar would offer no serious obstructive measures to prevent or slow down Negro registration. Major Johns, Andy Young, and Mr. Harleaux, all pointed out at various times that this attitude on the part of the registrar constituted in itself a slow-down, which in effect permits the registrar and whomever may be allied with her, to keep Negro registration at about the level it has maintained for the past 5 to 10 years. This argument did not appear to carry great weight with the Lake Charles people.

Andy Young suggested that the problems of literacy and lack of political sophistication might partially be overcome by sending persons to the school at Dorchester for training and then bringing them back to the community so that they could do work there. Mr. Robinsons expressed considerable interest in this proposal, and vowed that he expected to bring a Lake Charles contingent to Dorchester for the sessions commencing in mid-September.

At one point, Major Johns stated that during his preliminary contacts in setting up the conference, he had talked to several of the leaders of the NAACP Youth Council, whom he found very discouraged by the propensity of the adult leadership for taking over and, he said, diluting the militancy and effectiveness of anything which the youth were attempting to accomplish in Lake Charles.

Mrs. Beulah Williams of 312 N. Orrins Street in Lake Charles said that they had no trouble getting plenty of Negroes registered when they were repelecting Sheriff Henry A. Reid. But, Mrs. Williams said, once the election was over, the new registrants appeared to lose all interest in politics. Having, as I do, considerable knowledge of the Reid regime in Calcasieu parish, I can well understand why, without some really militant leadership, the Negrbes would have lost interest in politics.

One lady from Lake Charles whose name I did not catch, said that a coordinating council had been formed in Lake Charles to conduct a registration drive. She was a bit uncertain about when the coordinating council had begun to function in this registration drive, but she seemed to be very certain that it had never really gotten off the ground. She seemed to think that the lack of cooperation on the part of the ministers was probably a major factor in this failure. The lady did say that the canvassing job was being done by young people, but, considering Major Johns report of the attitudes of the youngsters, there seems considerable doubt that whatever registration efforts are by the coordinating council will evenuate in much.

This same lady mentioned one technique that she used to arouse the interest of the adult Negroes in registration. She said that in her neighborhood, she had noticed the children playing on a playground that did not have available a drinking fountain on the playground. She said that on several occasions, she went to the playground and asked the children if they would not like to have available there a drinking fountain. They said that they would. Then she said that he told them that they should go home and tell their parents to register and vote so they could demand of the politicians better recreation facilities in general, and a drinking fountain for that playground in particular.

One Lake Charles gentleman, during a discussion of the problem of illiteracy, said that while he himself is illiterate and therefore cannot register, he had succeeded during the past few months, in getting three married couples to go down and register.

Andy Young remarked that leaders are determined not by their positions of prominence in the community, but by the number of people who will follow them. He said that he frequently found that the most influential persons in the community were seldom recognized as leaders, even hough their influence was quite pervasive on members of the community. He mentioned aprticularly elderly ladies who are looked upon by members of the community as general problem-solvers. He said he had frequently found that this type of person is much more effective in convincing persons that they should register and vote than are the generally recognized and publicized leaders in the community.

The attendance at the Saturday afternoon session was considerably diminished from the small attendance of the morning session. Ten persons were there besides the leadership of the conference. The session was devoted to a discussion of how to organize a registration drive. Mr. Robinson of Lake Charles pointed out that good leaders who have time and interest in the success of the drive are needed, and that programs from time to time with dynamic speakers are a must. A Lake Charles lady said that the Independent Democratic Association (a Negro polotical organization in Lake Charles) and the Youth Council of the NAACP had organized and mapped out and zoned the cith and selected captains for each zone. The lady was unable to say whether or not these organizational plans had ever gotten off paper. Robinson said that the plan had not worked well because volunteers had not fulfilled their pledges of activity. Robinson felt that the registration worker must be a salesman, that getting folk to register is a selling job. At one point, one of the Lake Charles gentlemen announced his conviction that if Negroes would only have faith in God, their problems would be solved.

The afternoon session was far from fruitful. I had the feeling that the persons who needed to be there in order to benefit by a discussion of the techniques of organizing a registration drive were absent.

In the evening session and in the final Sunday morning session, the discussion centered around plans for some kind of a state-wide or multi-parish registration drive for Louisiana. Attached to this report will be found Major Johns original plan - the scope of which was obviously inappropriate for the present state of civil rights financing. The program which was finally workd out constituted a crash registration drive for 16 parishes in Louisiana in accordance with the attached schedule. Ronnie Moore for CORE and Andy Young for SCLC suggested that this be a joint SCLC-CORE drive, and I suggested to them that a budget be worked out for the drive, and that a proposal be submitted to VEP in the even t that we might want to participate in the financing of the drive. The general idea upon which Moore and Young were working was that each organization would supply 10 workers who would be directed by Major Johns. Johns and Moore appeared to work very well together, and I have no doubt that they could effectively coordinate the kind of program that they have in mind. I talked to Ronnie Moore in Baton Rouge on Tuesday, August 13, and urged him to get the proposed program to us as rapidly as possible. I subsequently talked to Andy Young, and he told me that he had received a commitment from SCLC for the provision of 10 workers. I understood him to say that SCLC would underwrite the salaries of these 10 workers. I suggested to Ronnie on Tuesday that in his proposals, he suggest that a Louisiana Voter Project be set up and a grant be made to it rather than to CORE and SCLC for transmission to this project. He was at that time contemplating an organizational structure having Mr. W. W. Harleaux at its head, and he and Major Johns with the principal field and administrative responsibilities. If the project as Ronnie and Major Johns and I discussed it is submitted to VEP, I would recommend VEP participation to whatever extent is commensurate with our resources.

While the Lake Charles conference did not constitute a meeting of statewide Negro registration leadership by any means, I felt that it was worthwhile for the insights it provided into the registration problems of the Negro community in Lake Charles and Calcasieu parish as well as elsewhere in the state. The enumeration of the specific problems referred to above gave structure to my own perception of the complexities of the problems faced by Negro communities in Louisiana and elsewhere. It will probably come as no surprise that I found the problems of divided leadership and Uncle Tomism in New Orleans and Baton Rouge similar to those encountered in Lake Charles.

The attitudes expressed by the Lake Charles representatives at the conference were compatible with substantial reports I had had from informants in Lake Charles of pay-offs by white politicians to Negro leaders in order to confine Negro political participation within quite narrow boundaries. The reports I have had of this kind of pay-off involved upper level leadership in the Lake Charles chapter of the NAACP. Attached is a newspaper clipping from the Lake Charles American Press which appeared subsequent to the conference, and which may be the reaction of this Lake Charles leadership to the threat of "outside" interference. I think that this corruption of Negro leadership by whites only incidently involves NAACP leadership, as I found quite the opposite to be the case in Baton Rouge. I would hypotesize at this point that the recruitment of local NAACP leadership selects in favor of persons who have already attained a degree of prominence in the community. Thus, if such leadership is found to be corrupt, relative to the presumed goals of advancemtn of the Negro community, or if the leadership appears to be more or less unconsciously obstructing such goals of advancement, identification with the local chapter of the NAACP is only an incidental aspect. In situations such as that described in Lake Charles, one suspects that the white community has probably had as much to do with the selection of that leadership as has the Negro community. In such cases, the Negro leadership appears to function as a lid on any effective militant action on the part of the Negro community, rather than as a group of individuals who can in any meaninful sense be said to express the desires or aspirations of the Negro community. A closer examination of the Negro leadership in such communities probably would disclose a number of diminsions to this disaffiliation between Negro leadership and the Negro community. In some cases, it probably would be found that individuals are seeking status with no concern for any real substance in their leadership positions; in others, it probably would be found that leaders are genuinely convinced that they are acting in the best interest of those whom they would lead; in still other cases, it probably would be found that the pecuniary advantages of complacent leadership functions are a major determining factor in leadership behavior.

Whatever may be the dynamics of the disaffiliation between Negro leaders and the Negro community, it seems clear that in many cases, the disaffiliation precludes a militant approach to registration problems involving a sophisticated approach by whites to the maintenance of low levels of Negro registration. If VEP is to perform effectively either its function of maximising Negro registration or its function of perfecting techniques for securing increased political participation, I think the disaffiliation of Negro leadership will be one of the principal problems with which we shall have to wrestle during the coming 12 months or so. The situation in New Orleans may well provide a laboratory for experimenting with some techniques for dealing with such a situation.

MEMORANDUM August 23, 1963
To: Wiley A. Branton
From: Jack Minnis
SUBj. New Orleans

An adequate appraisal of the difficulties of our voter registration project in New Orleans must begin, I think, with some remarks about the organizations through which Negro leadership in New Orleans functions.

The Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, which apparently is dominated by the influence of the Rev. A. L. Davis, Jr., appeared to be the most significant organization of what might be called the "old line" Negro leadership in New Orleans. Rev. Davis is also president of the Orleans Parish Progressive Voters League, and was intimately associated with Mayor Morrison during the latter's 12 year term of office. Since Morrison was replaced by Victor Schiro, Davis appears to have continued his alliance with city hall. Thus, Davis, through his influence on a large proportion of the Negro clergy in New Orleans, is regarded by city hall and other whites as having a dominant influence over the Negro community, as being able to speak for it. Eighteen months ago, Davis was instrumental in the forming of a community relations committee of Negroes, which would supposedly unite all civil rights and protest organizations into one negotiating body with which the whites could deal. Themembership of this committee cuts across most of the Negro organizations, and the committee is heavily freighted with members of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council. However, it appears that most of the leading Coordinating Council people on the Community Relations Committee prefer to function through the latter, or through their own organizations, rather than through the Coordinating Council. This leaves a dissident group within the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council, composed of persons who have no other primary organizational connection, and who, therefore, think of the Coordinating Council as itself as an organizational basis for community.

The Community Relations Committee is comprised of the following individuals: Atty. Revius Ortigue, who has been involved in New Orleans politics, and who appears to work closely with Rev. Davis; he is also on the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council; the Rev. Al L. Davis, president of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, and also president of the Orleans Parish Progressive Voters League, as well as member of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council; Atty. Lolis Elie, chairman of the Community Relations Committee, CORE lawyer; the Rev. Avery Alexander, president of the Consumer's League and member of the Executive Committee of the CCNO; the Rev. John B. Morris; Orethea Castle, CORE president and member of the CCNO Executive Committee; the Rev. Milton Upton, who apparently works closely with the Rev. Davis, and he is a member of the CCNO Executive Commitee; Dr. Leonard Burnes, a dentist, and member of the CCNO Executive Commitee; Atty. Ernest Morrial, who is associated with the United Clubs and the NAACP, and who serves on the CCNO Executive Committee, and also as chairman of the CCNO Registration Committee; Gerald Thomas, who is connected with the United Clubs, and is a retired postal clerk; Arthur Shapital, Sr., a retired postal clerk, and NAACP officer who is on the CCNO Executive Committee.

D. C. Dejoie, publisher of the Louisiana weekly and member of CCNO Executive Committee; J. Harvey Kerns, also chairman of the Coordinating Council Executive Committee, and head of the National Urban League in New Orleans; Malcolm McDonald, a dental technician is also treasurer of the Coordinating Council. Thus, 12 members of the 21-member Community Relations Committee are also members of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council. Other members of the Community Relations Committee are Henry Cabaric, head of the Catholic Council for Human Relations, and a member of the Coordinating Council; the Rev. William Greene, also a member of the Coordinating Council, the Rev. Louis Landrum; the Rev. A. H. Tucker; Henry Mitchell, of the Consumer's League; a Catholic priest named McManus, who is also a member of the Coordinating Council; and Mr. I. S. Daniel, who is director of the voter registration project of the Coordinating Council. (Daniel was asked to sit on the committee on August 9 - he had not been a member of the committee up until that time. The invitation was extended by the Rev. A. L. Davis. Daniel regarded this invitation as an attempt on the part of Davis to ply him with the bon bons of prestige in order to mitigate his commitment to militant voter registration activity.)

Those members of the Community Relations Committee who are also members of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council can apparently be regarded as within the A. L. Davis sphere of influence with the following exceptions: Malcolm MCdonald, who is something of a leader of the dissident wing of the Coordinating Council Executive Committee; Ernest Morial, who remains a kind of unknown quantity to me; he was out of town during my visit and during the events which preceded it. (Daniel does put him in the Davis camp as did some of the others to whom I talked, but I was unable to either confirm or deny this on the basis of my own observations); J. Harvey Kerns, who occupies a position of influence with probably would not be dominated by Davis, but who, nevertheless, could probably be expected to cooperate with Davis in ways that would be detrimental to the voter registration project through a lack of understanding of the cleavages which divide the Negro community.

The foregoing is, of course, by no means a complete analysis of the organizational structure through which Negro leadership functions in New Orleans; however, I think it will be adequate for the purpose of evaluating the immediate factors which appear to be inhibiting voter registration work in New Orleans.

The Community Relations Committee described above has been negotiating with Canal Street merchants for the past 18 months or so in an attempt to gain jobs on Canal Street for Negroes above the menial level. It is my understanding that not all of the members of the committee have been active during the 18 months, but that Rev. Davis has consistently led and guided the deliberations and negotiations of the committee. Some time ago, the committee arranged for the cessation of picketing of Canal Street stores in return for a promise from the merchants that some 75 jobs above the menial level would be made available to Negroes as an immediatedcomncession. Within the past month, the Youth Council of the NAACP made a survey of such jobs on Canal Street, and could find only 21. Upon this finding, the Youth Council began picketing on Canal Street. The Community Relations Committee announced publicly that the Youth Council had been in error in its survey, and that actually more than 75 of the jobs above menial level were being filled by Negroes as a result of the Committee's negotiation.

Coincident with the difficulties about jobs on Canal Street, had been the negotiations between the Committee and the city government with reference to city jobs for Negroes with reference to discriminatory signs in city hall. The Rev. Davis and his followers on the Community Relations Committee, and on the Interdominational Ministerial Alliance, began about three weeks ago to threaten massive demonstrations at the city hall if their demands were not met. Their demands comprised a six point program, the details of which I do not have, but which, I understand, constituted a rather complete removal of all discrimination in all phases of community life in New Orleans. During the week beginning August 5, Rev. Davis had at least one meeting with Mayor Schiro at which demands were made and as a result of which Mayor Schiro said that he would give the demands his consideration. It is not clear just who accompanied the Rev. Davis in these meetings with the Mayor, but it seems certain that Davis was the dominating factor on the Negro side of the negotiations.

Mayor Schiro planned to leave New Orleans for a trip to Mexico over the weekend of August 10 and 11. On Wednesday, August 7, the Rev. Davis met with Schiro and threatened Schiro with demonstrations to take place on Tuesday, August 13 if some satisfactory conclusion with reference to the six point demands was not reached. This meeting apparently terminated inconclusively.

Then, on Thursday, August 8, Mrs. Maise Kahn informed Jack Nelson that a group of white citizens had gone to Schiro and told Schiro that if he went to Mexico and demonstrations took place during his absence, he need not come back. According to Jack Nelson, the white citizens involved were the following: Darwin S. Fenner, vice president of Merrill, Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith, Inc., 915 Common Street, New Orleans, 12; president of the Board of Administrators of Tulane University.

Fenner's home address is 1705 Calhoun Street, New Orleans, 18. Arthur L. Jung, Jr., secretary of the Crescent Bed Company, 600 S. Broad Street, New Orleans, 19; secretary of the Jung Realty Company; secretary of Jung, Inc.; director of the National Bank of Commerce of New Orleans; director of New Orleans Public Service, Inc. Yung's residence is at 416 Betz Place, New Orleans, 20; Stephen B. Lemann, member of the law firm,Monroe and Lemann, 1424 Whitney Bldg., New Orleans. The firm is counsel for Whitney Natinnal Bank, General Electric Company, Continental Can Compan, New Orleans Stock Exchange, New Orleans Cotton Exchange, among others. Arthur C..Waters, F. Winthrop Trapolin, James Gilley, Jr., Executive Vice President, Whitney National Bank of New Orleans. It should be instructive to digress for a moment in order to examine the kind of institutional power structure represented by the white citizens who went to Schiro. Whitney National Bank, the largest bank in New Orleans, was represented by its Executive Vice President, and by a member of the law firm it retains as counsel. The largest stockholder in Whitney National Bank is Marie Snyder, the feemer Marie Whitney, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. She owns 9% of the outstanding stock of Whitney National Bank. Mrs. Snyder is married to William P. Snyder, Jr., who is a former chairman, and is presently director of the Crucible Steel Company of America, and is also presently director of the Mellon National Bank and Trust Company. The second largest stockholder in Whitney National is William G. Helis, Jr., with 6% of the outstanding stock. Hellis is a very prominent oil man in Louisiana, and was chairman of the state mineral board under the administration of Earl Kl Long.

The third largest stockholder of Whitney National is Thomas and Company, nominee of First National City Bank of New York, with $5 of the outstanding stock. This same Thomas and Company, as nominee of First National City Bank of New York, owns an influential,.if not dominant stockholding in some 25 of the largest banks in the country outside of New York City, including a 4% holding in the Citizens and Southern National Bank of Savannah, and 3% holding in the First National Bank of Atlanta.

The sixth largest stockholder in Whitney National is Cudd and Company, nominee of the Chase Manhattan Bank of New York with 2% of the outstanding Whitney stock. Cudd and Company, as nominee of Chase Manhattan, is also the holder of wide banking intererst - including a 1% intesest in the First National Bank of Atlanta.

National Bank of Commerce of New Orleans, second largest bank in the city, was represented by a director, Arthur Jung. The largest stockholder in the National Bank of Commerce, with 4½% of the outstanding stock is A. Q. Petersen. Petersen is the retired chairman of the board of the Wesson Oil and Snowdrift Company, Inc., and is a director of the Texas and Pacific Railway Company of Dallas; of the A. E. Staley Manufacturing Company of Decatur, Illinois; of Southdown, Inc., of New Orleans; and of Lykes Brothers Steamship Company.

The second largest stockholder of the National Bank of Commerce is Flora S. Owens. The third largest stockholder in the National Bank of Commerce is Financial Securities, Inc., 610 NBC Building, New Orleans, Louisiana, with 2% of the outstanding stock.

The Hibernia National Bank of New Orleans is the third largest bank in New Orleans. It was represented by a member of the law firm which serves it as counsel. Largest stockholder in Hibernia National is William H. Malty, #4 Blanc Place, New Orleans, with $5 of the outstanding stock. The second largest stockholder is William H. Saunders, Jr., P. O. Box 390, New Orleans, with 2½% of the outstanding stock, and the third largest stockholder is Republic Insurance Company, P. O. Box 3000, Dallas, Texas, with 2.4% of the outstanding stock. It is interesting to note that three members of the Tatum family of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, are also substantial stockholders in Hibernian National. I had occasion just yesterday, in connection with an inquiry from John O'Neal in Hattiesburg, to suggest to him that the Tatums in Hattiesburg were probably a significant part of the economic power structure of that community by reason of the Tatum connection with the Citizens National Bank of Hattiesburg.

The bank connections of the citizens who gave instructions to Schiro with regard to the consessions which Schiro could make to the Negro community are not listed here with the intention of inferring that the persons who met with Schiro were acting under the instructions of responsible officials or stockholders of the banks involved. However, in a society such as ours, the power which persons weild is institutional more often thannit is personal, and consequently, an accurate evaluation of the interests represented by any individual must take account of his institutional connection. It is plain to see that the white citizens who met with Schiro on August 8 represented a significant proportion of the economic power of New Orleans. Having thus digressed, I hope not irrelevantly, let us get back to the main stream of the story.

According to Jack Nelson, the white citizens who met with Schiro told him that he could make the following concessions to Al L. Davis, who was threatening demonstrations: Accept job applications in the sanitation and fire departments of New Orleans, and remove discriminatory signs in the city hall. Shortly after midnight on August 9, Jack Nelson phoned I. S. Daniel, and told him of the information he had just received from Mrs. Maise Kahn. On the morning of August 9 at about 8:30, Daniel accompanied by Israel Augustine, met with A. L. Davis and informed him of the consessions which Schiro had been instructed to make and suggested to him that those concessions did not represent sufficient quid pro quo for calling off demonstrations.

According to Daniel and Augustine, Davis expressed indignation that Schiro would expect him to call off demonstrations in return for such minuscule concessions, and vowed that he would not do so. Furthermore, according to Daniel, Davis agreed to make demands for the cessation of abuses at the registrar's office (these abuses will be described elsewhere in this report).

Daniel was not certain just who attended the meeting with Schiro along with Al L. Davis, but he thought at least two of those present were Orethea Castle and Lolis Eli. The meeting took place in the office of Atty. Harry McCall in the Whitney National Building. Both Daniel and Malcolm McDonald said that when demands were made by the Negroes for the cessation of abuses in the registrar's office, Darwin Fenner spoke up and said that this was a state matter, and that Governor Davis did not care anything about the people down in New Orleans.

Daniel learned either sometime Saturday, or early Monday morning that Davis and his group had called off the demonstrations in return for precisely the concessions which he had told Davis Schiro would offer before the meeting with Schiro. Daniel told me shortly after I arrived on Monday morning, August 12, that a mass meeting was to be held that night by the Davis group, at which time they would explain the concessions and the calling off of the demonstrations to the community. (See attached circular).

Now we must go back and briefly detail another line of developments in New Orleans whereby the Coordinating Council had intended to participate in demonstrations relative to voter registration periods.

I. S. Daniel assumed the directorship of the voter registration program of the Coordinating Council on April 15, 1963. Prior to that date for about a month, Virginia Collins and Don Hubbard had been canvassing door-to-door. This had been the sum and substance of the CCNO registration project prior to Daniel's encumbency. For about the first two weeks of his directorship, Daniel himself did door-to-door canvassing, seeking registration applicants. Then, Virginia Collins and Daniel decided to involve as many youngsters as possible in the canvassing activities. Collins and Daniel went to the principals of several of the Negro high schools and asked for lists of names of students who appeared to be interested in political science, sociology, et cetera. Letters inviting these students whose names were submitted by principals to a meeting on June 15, 1963. The meeting was attended by 350 to 400 high school and college students. From that meeting, some 150 students were recruited for canvassing and other voluntary work in the registration program. The results which have been obtained thus far are largely confined to the production which the students have obtained.

Here briefly is the way the project has operated since the students were recruited:

Attention has been concentrated in the Negro housing project in New Orleans. Crews of student canvassers work in the projects each day in the Calliope project. Charles Plummer, a high school teacher, supervises the student canvassers.

Virginia Collins, supervises the students at the Magnolia project.

Edwin Leevy (a white Tulane student) supervises the students in the St. Bernard project.

Eula Cannon, in the Desire Street project, does not actually supervise canvassing, but she permits the use of her apartment as a project headquarters.

In the Pontchartrain park area, Dr. Tollison permits the use of his residence as a headquarters for the canvassers. He exercises no supervision. He is a political science professor at Southern University in New Orleans.

Those students working in the lower 9th ward area, and in the Lafitte project, work out of the office at 1505 St. Bernard Avenue.

In the Louisa project, no headquarters has been established. The canvassers work out of the headquarters in the Desire Street project.

The project managers have offered varying degrees of cooperation with the registration project. The most cooperative of the managers has been the one in the St. Bernard project. For nearly a month after the work began in the projects, the St. Bernard manager called sanitation meetings for residents of the project twice each day. He arrangeranged with Daniel to have canvassers and instructors at these meetings and after a brief instruction period on the project sanitation measures, he turned these meetings over to the registration project people. He is the only project manager who has cooperated to this extent thus far.

The students canvassing in all areas conduct both persuasion and instruction in the field. Persons wanting further instruction are advised that it may be obtained at any one of nine neighborhood clinics. These clinics are set up for the most part in private residences in the various areas. Transportation, both to clinics and to the registrar's office is provided by donated buses and private cars.

Relatively little work has been done in the uptown area, but those individuals seeking instruction from the uptown area are advised to go to the ILA registration clinic on Rampart Street, just a couple of blocks from the registration office in city hall. Thus far, this has been the extent of Think Henry's participation in the registration project.

Between April 15 and July 30, 552 persons applied to the registrar's office; 206 were registered; 346 were rejected; 100 persons applied more than once during this period. The greater part of this number of applicants and new registrants has occured since the student canvassing got underway some time around the first of July.

According to Daniel, there has been no organizational participation in the registration project other than that described above. The Rev. A. L. Davis spoke at the June 15 student meeting. Other ministers have been talked to and urged to participate; all have been invited to project meetings, and all have been asked to recruit workers and to build sermons around registration. So far as Daniel and Mrs. Minor know, the ministers have failed completely to follow through on any pledges of cooperation they have made.

It should have been noted above that a major part of the activity of the registration office during June and part of July involved an attempt to prevent the purging of large numbers of registered Negroes in Orleans parish. When the names of purgees were published in the newspaper, an attempt was made to make a personal call, either by telephone or by canvasser on each listed person. Hand bills were distributed in each of the Negro areas in New Orleans to remind persons of the necessity for returning the forms that were mailed out from the registration office (see attached leaflet).

The problems with which the project has been faced thus far include the following:

1) A high proportion of illiterates and those with minimum educational background.
2) A high proportion of persons lacking an understanding of, and a confidence in, political participation as a means of solving problems.
3) Fear, sometimes the generalized cultural habituation of the southern Negro, and sometimes the specific fear of job loss or other economic reprisal.
4) Lack of interest due to the preoccupation with such mundane matters as earning enough money to feed the family and pay the rent. (All these have been accenturated because of the concentrated attention given to the low-income residential areas).
5) Daniel and Mrs. Minor feel that the failure of ministers to cooperate in disseminating the registration message among their congregations has been a major factor in preventing a more complete community involvement in the registration project. This lack of cooperation on the part of the ministers has not only diminished the number of prospective registrants, but has, in addition, hampered the recruitment of voluntary workers.
6) Canvassers have reported an increasing reluctance on the part of prospects to attempt registration as the details of treatment of Negroes by the registrar's office become disseminated throughout the housing projects in which canvassing attention has been concentrated.
&) Daniel and Mrs. Minor detail a long list of abuses by the registrar's office. No attempt will be made here to provide an exhaustive list, but the following is representative:

> There is no certainty what kind of identification will be required at the registrar's office - this means that some persons are accepted on their Social Security cards, others with driver's license, et cetera - still others are rejected when providing these same items of identification and there have been those who have made as many as six trips to the registrar's office, bringing different kinds of identification. One lady finally became so exasperated that she filled a pillowcase with papers and letters and receipts and so forth, took it to the registrar's office and dumped it out on the counter and said, "Take your choice!"

The clerks in the registrar's office are consistently discourteous to Negroes to such an extent that every Negro can anticipate some kind of a direct insult as a result of a visit to the registrar's office. Meticulous accuracy is required in the filling out of the application for registration, and such irrelevant and immaterial errors as failing to dot an "i", minor misspellings, failing to cross out unused alternatives, et cetera, are used by the clerks as grounds for rejection. Clerks and city police at the registrar's office have harassed, intimidated, and threatened with arrest, both registration workers and prospective registrants. The registrar's office customarily refused to permit more than two Negroes at a time to enter the registrar's office, despite the fact that there are adequate facilities for handling 100 or more at the same time. This means that frequently, prospective registrants are required to stand in line in the hall, and be subjected to various kinds of insults and abuse from white workers in the city hall. No seating arrangements are permitted for those who are waiting to enter the registrar's office, and in the case of many prospective registrants standing in line hour after hour constitutes a genuine hardship.

On July 23, a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council was called at the home of Malcolm McDonald, 4603 Chestnut Street in New Orleans. The purpose of the meeting was to discuss how the registration project could be conducted more effectively in the face of the problems that had developed as outlined above. Those attending the meeting were Victor Labat of Xavier University; Avery Alexander; Una Porsay, school principal; J. Harvey Kerns; Ellis Hull, president of the United Voters League; Andrew Merritt, also of the United Voters League; Marguerite Nimtz, school principal; Marcus Neustadter, public relations director of the Coordinating Council; Malcolm McDonald, treasurer of the Coordinating Council. Although the entire membership of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council had been informed of this meeting by letter, these were the only members who showed up.

As a result of this meeting, the Coordinating Council decided,-over the objections of Mr. Kerns, to participate in demonstrations at city hall which were being planned by the Rev. Davis of the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance, and Aretha Castle of CORE. The Davis-Castle demonstration was to focus on the list of six general demands mentioned earlier in this report. The demonstration was scheduled for Tuesday, August 13, and it was the intent of the Coordinating Council to become a part of the general demonstration according to a plan drawn up by Daniel and attached hereto.

This was the planned demonstration which was used as a basis for bargaining, presumably, by the Rev. Davis when he met with Mayor Schiro and the white citizens on August 9, and which was deferred as a result of the commitments made by Schiro under instructions by the white citizens, as a result of the August 9 meeting.

During the latter part of the week of August 9, Malcolm McDonald, Daniel, Israel Augustine, and Andy Young, got together to discuss the proposed participation of the CCNO in the anticipated demonstration. Apparently, McDonald was seeking the legal advice of Augustine, and the tactical advice of Young. As I understand it, Augustine advised that participation by the registration project in a general demonstration might be unwise, considering the terms existing civil rights legislation, and Young concurred. The general conclusion reached from this discussion was that CCNO would not participate in the demonstrations, both because of the legal angle, and because the registration issue would be likely to get lost in the kind of massive general demonstration which Davis and his group were planning. Daniel, it appears with some reluctance, concurred in this decision. Apparently the lack of organizational cooperation combined with the frustration of the slow-down at the registrar's office had rather seriously demoralized both the volunteers and the staff of the registration project. I suspect that the anticipated demonstration was acting both as a relief of the frustrations engendered by these factors, and as a hope for producing change at the registrar's office as well as a greater community involvement in the registration project. Although the agreement reached between Rev. Davis and S on August 9 was not directly involved with the registrationpproject, it appears to have added the finishing touch to the diminishing moral of the registration personnel.

Daniel had called a meeting of the student canvassers during the week of August 9, and had asked for volunteers to participate in the anticipated demonstration. Some 30 or so young people responded. He set up a meeting with them at 10:30 on August 12, which was to have been the final preparation for the demonstration scheduled on August 13.

It was at this point that I arrived in the CCNO office on Monday morning, August 12 at about 9:30. Daniel was in something of a quandary because of the importance he knew the students placed on the coming demonstrations and he feared that the announcement that the demonstration had been called off would considerably discourage the students. He finally decided to lay the entire thing before them, and to tell them that under the present circumstances, he could not recommend demonstrations of any kind at city hall. This he did at the 10:30 meeting.

Part of what Daniel told them was that he felt 30 demonstrators by themselves would not be likely to accomplish much because of the ease with which they could simply be arrested. Some of the students wanted to know how many would be necessary for the kind of demonstration that would be likely to make it expedient for the registrar to loosen his policy with regard to Negro registration. Daniel told the students that probably something in excess of 1,000 persons peaceably assembling and partitioning the registrar for redress of grievances would be necessary to make any meaningful impression upon the registrar. The students said that they would attempt to arouse the interest of fellow students as well as individuals with whom they had been working who had been rejected, and insulted and abused at the registrar's office. A meeting was set for the following Saturday, August 17 at which the further development of the program would be discussed, and to which the students would try to get as many persons as possible.

After the meeting with the students, Daniel and I went to the office of Israel Augusting to discuss with him the recent developments. It was Augustine's opinion that the registrar's office is effectively maintaining a maximum quota of Negro registration through its slow-down tactics, and that the only thing likely to change the attitude of the registrar would be the kind of pressure that would be brought about through a peaceable protest demonstration. He expressed considerable chagrin over the minimal concessions the Davis group had accepted in return for a commitment not to demonstrate.

I tried to make an appointment to see Ernest Morrell, but was informed that he was out of town on his vacation. I then tried to make an appointment with Lois Eli, CORE attorney, but learned that he was not available.

Daniel and I went to the Rev. Davis' church to discuss the registration situation with him. We found the Rev. Davis unwilling to say anything but vague generalizations about registration in general, or the CCNO registration project in particular. I asked him if he knew of any reason why the registration project had not involved more completely the Negro community, and what, if anything, the ministers had done to assist the project. He said that he felt that it was particularly difficult to arouse people's interest in registration without the inducement of an impending election. He said he felt that the December primary would soon be close enough to provide the emphasis needed for community involvement in the registration project. He seemed unwilling to discuss in any specific detail the registration situation in New Orleans.

Prior to going to the Rev. Davis' church, Daniel and I had gone by the home of Malcolm McDonald, and had discussed the problems of the registration project at some length with Mr. McDonald. Mr. McDonald felt that some kind of mass action was going to be necessary in order to change the attitudes in the registrar's office, and that such a change was essential if there was to be any significant increase in Negro registration in Orleans parish.

That evening, I attended the mass meeting which the Davis group had called to explain the situation to the Negro community. Attached is the circular which was distributed announcing the mass meeting.

Daniel told me previously that the Rev. Davis and the Rev. Upton had assured him that the Davis group would throw its weight into the registration project now that the other issues had been settled by negotiation. Daniel had been asked to attend a meeting the previous Saturday morning, the purpose of which was to draw up a series of resolutions to be presented to the Negro community at the mass meeting. He had been unable to attend this meeting because of the previous commitment mentioned above. When Daniel and I visited Rev. Davis on the afternoon of August 12, the Rev. Davis said that all of the resolutions had been joined into one, and that the principal emphasis of the resolution was on voter registration. The Rev. Davis had asked Daniel to appear on the platform at the mass meeting, and to read the registration resolution.

When we arrived at the meeting, the principal membership of the Ministerial Alliance was on the platform. Also on the platform were several members of the Community Relations Committee. Daniel mentioned to me at the time that he did not want to appear on the platform until he got an idea of just what was going to be presented to the people from the platform, and what kind of interpretation was going to be placed from the platform on the events which had taken place during the preceding week.

Shortly after we arrived, the Rev. Upton called the meeting to order, and introduced Leonard Burnes as the first speaker. Burnes spoke very briefly, and, in substance, he merely said that a program of action was on the agenda.

Then, Upton introduced Lolis Eli. Eli talked for a bit about the history of the Community Relations Committee, and he said that at some time ago, the whites in the community had indicated that if all of the civil rights groups get together, then the demands of the Negro community could be negiotiated without the necessity of demonstrations. He cited as one accomplishment of the negotiations, the desegregation of the downtown lunch counters, and chain stores.

He said that the committee had demanded jobs above the menial level on Canal Street, and that they had been prepared to demonstrate on this issue one week before Easter. He said that the committee received a call the night before the demonstration was scheduled, and was told by the merchants that the merchants would come up with 75 jobs as a start. The committee agreed to accept this as a first step toward fair employment, said Eli. Eli said that no one is now certain if they have 75 jobs, and if the committee should find that they don't have 75 jobs, the committee would institute demonstrations. He said the committee had made contact with city officials in order to negotiate for public jobs and other demands relevant to the city administration, and that the committee had agreed with the Coordinating Council that the committee would place its major emphasis in the future on voter registration if the Coordinating Council would agree not to demonstrate on August 13.

Then, the Rev. Upton introduced Avery Alexander, who said that in July, the committee had concluded that progress not fadt enough, and that on July 17, the committee had presented the six-point program of demands to the Mayor, who said he would consider them. He said the demands were the elimination of discrimination from all areas of Negro life; jobs on every governmental level; and the desegregation of playgrounds and parks. He said that the committee repeated its demands on July 31, and the Mayor made promises and showed good faith. He said the committee met again on August 8 with the Mayor and told him that the committee's patience was at an end, and that when he saw them again, they would be picketing. He said that then on August 9, the committee was called, and told that the Mayor and a group of the white power structure wanted to talk. He said that at this August meeting, the committee and the group of whites agreed that if demonstrations were called off, all signs would be removed from city hall as of the morning of August 12, and that Negro applications would be accepted for the jobs in the sanitation department and the fire department, starting the morning of August 12, and that Negroes would be hired in these departments within 30 days. He said that the New Orleans merchants say that 200 Negroes have been hired above the menial level on Canal Street. He said a furthur part of the agreement was that the city of New Orleans would no longer contest the segregation cases (he seemed to mean here that the Mayor had agreed not to appeal the preliminary injunctions in the auditorium and playgrounds cases). Alexander said that a further commitment coming out of the meeting was that the power structure would arrange conferences with the civil service commission and other employers in order that jobs above the menial level could be negotiated with them. And, finally, he said, the city had agreed that it would not harass anyone who wanted to integrate any public accommodation.

Then the Rev. Upton introduced Atty. A. T. Turenaud who said first off that the decisions which the Mayor would not appeal were preliminary injunctions were not appealable anyhow; he said that shortly before the meeting, received a message that nine Negroes had been arrested at a playground and charged with disturbing the peace, and that lights were being put out on the playground, apparently in order to disrupt Negro use of them after sundown. He seemed to take these incidents lightly, and suggested that they were to have been expected, and that he did not consider them a violation of the city's commitment in any respect. Tureaud said that Negroes now have access to all parks and all playgrounds, and that there is very little left for lawyers to do. He said that the hotels are going along with the decision of the court, and hemmentioned the Sheraton-Charles, the Royal-Orleans, and the Hilton Inn as having gotten an injunktion restraining city officers from enforcement of any law requiring segregation of the races.

The Rev. Upton then introduced the Rev. Davis, whose rather brief speech, in substance, was a call for unity among the Negro community, and the following of accepted leadership, and a criticism of the Youth Council for picketing the stores on Canal Street. The Rev. Davis did not once mention voter registration.

The only time during the mass meeting that voter registration was mentioned was when Atty. Eli spoke of the agreement of the citizen's committee to support voter registration, if the Coordinating Council would call of its August 13 demonstration.

The agreement between thesCommunity Relations Committee and the Mayor, which came out of the August 29meeting, had been committedto writing. Both Daniel and McDonald had seen it and read it, and they maintained that the agreement did not involve any commitment to hire Negroes in the sanitation and fire departments. They said that all the Mayor had committed himself to do was to open the civil service examinations to Negroes. Daniel and McDonald had worked with the Youth Council during the time they were making a survey of the number of jobs on Canal Street, and were convinced that the number did not exceed 25. During his speech at the mass meeting, Rev. Davis stated, without qualification, that there were 200 jobs presently occupied above the menial level on Canal Street.

Daniel expressed extreme disgust at the conduct of the meeting, and refused to associate himself in any way with the meeting, even to the extent of refusing to read the resolutions.frmmthehplatform.

During the time that the money was being collected subsequent to the Rev. Davis' speech, mimeographed copies of the resolution were passed out among the crowd. Daniel and I secured a copy of the resolution and left the meeting.

I am not at all sure just what purpose the resolution was designed to serve. It appears to me to be a compilation of vague generalities which could hardly be expected to induce anyone to upset any apple carts. I don't see how, by any stretch of the imagination, it can be interpreted as emphasizing voter registration. (A copy of the resolution is attached.)

It is my impression that the tenor of the remarks made from the platform during the mass meeting constituted a gross misrepresentation of the existing situation in New Orleans. For example, with respect to the number of jobs above the menial level on Canal Street, Eli said that there was supposed to be 75, but he failed to make any mention of the Youth Council survey which turned up only 21; Alexander said that the merchants claimed there were 200 such jobs presently occupied by Negroes on Canal Street; then, Davis stated unequivocally that there were 200 jobs. Again, the manner in which the commitment about jobs in the sanitation and fire departments was stated definitely left the impression that the Mayor had committed himself to hiring Negroes in both departments within 30 days. This was at odds with the understanding of the commitment of everyone with whom I talked who had read the statement. Furthermore, in a later telephone conversation I had with Jack Nelson, he said that the written agreement had been read to him over the telephone, and that it was his impression that no commitment about actual hiring had been a part of the agreement.

In general, I would question whether a few garbage and fire jobs, and the removal of the signs in the city hall represent any significant advance considering the situation in New Orleans. While these matters may not be of direct concern to us inasmuch as they do not touch directly on voter registration, I think we are inevitably involved because if voter registration is to succeed in New Orleans, then the pressure which is potential in the Negro community must be brought to bear upon persons who can alleviate the registration abuses there. It appears that both Mayor Schiro and the white citizens who are behind him want to disavow any connection with voter registration (they argued it is a state function over which they have no control). I think it is a serious mistake to accept such a disavowal considering that the vast economic power represented by the white citizens far transcends the boundaries of Orleans parish, or of the state of Louisiana. To state that such persons have no influence over the policies implemented by the governor of Louisiana is, in my view, sheer nonsense. Furthermore, with a gubernatorial primary only three months away, with the crucial goal that the New Orleans vote will play in that primary, and with the crucial role that the New Orleans city hall will play in the way the New Orleans vote goes, it seems only a matter of common sense that the mayor of New Orleans could exercise considerable influence on the governor of Louisiana, if he found it expedient to do so.

I would be extremely reluctant to conclude that any of the Negro leaders in New Orleans are consciously and willfully misleading the Negro community there. It is compatible with all of the facts to suppose that the Negro leadership has failed adequately to assess the strength of its bargaining position. The fact that persons of the political and economicinfluence and stature as those of the white citizens committee have come forward and directed negotiations manifest, I think, their very deep concern lest disatisfaction in the Negro community become a matter of public demonstration. Given this awareness on the part of the white power structure of the involvement of their own direct interests in the threatened demonstrations, I believe it would be possible to enlist their aid in making changes at the registrar's office, if it were made clear to them that the alternatives to such changes would rather severely conflict with things which they cherish rather dearly. When I talked with Jack Nelson, he expressed considerable chagrin that such minor concessions had been wrung by the Negroes by the whites, and he said that the attitude of the whites was, "Well, the Negro leaders were satisfied, and if they wanted more, they should have asked for more." Thus, I should judge that a serious and determined effort to convince this white power structure that it would be serving its own interest to effect changed in the registrar's office would produce some very desirable results.

I returned to New Orleans on the eveing of Thursday, August 15 to attend a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Coordinating Council at which the future of the registration project was to be discussed.

Those in attendance at the meeting were the following:k Daniel, Upton, Augustine, Bridgewater, Nimtz, Hull, Smith, McDonald, Alexander, Dejoie, Cecil Carter, Labat, Keys, Kerns, and Castle. After about 30 minutes of discussion, the Executive Committee resolved unanimously that voter registration demonstrations were necessary and Chairman Kerns appointed a committee to plan and implement the demonstrations. The committee is chaired by Daniel, and the other members are Hull, Nimtz, McDonald, Keys, Henry (local ILA leader), Alexander, Upton, Carter, and Castle. The committee was to meet at 2 o'clock p. m. Saturday, August 18 to begin its operations.

Subj: Report on Visit to Baton Rouge

On August 13, I met with the Rev. Arthur Jelks, president of the local NAACP and a minister in the AME church at his home at 2265 Spain Street in Baton Rouge.

Our discussion involved both white problems and Negro problems, faced by the NAACP voter registration drive in Baton Rouge. We discussed the white problems first.

According to Rev. Jelks, the Louisiana registration test and literacy requirements are being very effectively used to minimize Negro registration in Baton Rouge. The test and the literacy requirement appear to be major factors in hindering Negro registration there. Another major factor is the fear of many Negroes that an attempt to register will bring economic reprisal. And, some apparently feel that a well-publicized and emotionalized registration drive might well lead to violence from whites. There appears to be a very real basis for the fear of economic reprisal.

Jelks tells the story of one lady who said that the white woman for whom she works asked if she was part of the registration drive. The white woman said if she was, then she didn't need to work for her, because voting was white folk's business. Information apparently is widespread in the Negro community that several persons have actually lost their jobs after registering. One teacher said that her principal has pressure on him to discourage teachers from registering. Rev.Jelks says that last year the discrimination at the registrar's office was obvious. A complaint was filed with the Justice Department, and the registrar's personnel have now become more sophisticated with their discrimination. One example he used was that when whites go in to register, the rules against helping the registrant with any part of the process are much more loosely applied than they are when Negroes are attempting to register. Jelks said that he had tried to talk to the registrar, but had never succeeded in establishing sufficient rapport with him that an intelligent discussion could take place. He mentioned one white lady who called after the announcement of the drive, and said that she was going to get her maid to register, and said that she was all in favor of Negroes registering to vote. Later the maid got in touch with a registration worker and Jelks happened to be in the office when the maid said that the person for whom she worked had told her to go and register. He inquired and learned that this was the same white woman who had called him. He suspects that there is probably a significant number of whites who feel this way in the community, but he doubts that any of them would make their feelings public.

The registration drive had just hit off the Sunday before I arrived there. Charles Evers had been the principal speaker at the mass meeting which commenced the drive. According to both Jelks and Atty. Jones, some four or 500 persons had attended the mass meeting. They were apparently rather surprised that the turnout had been so good.

Since the drive was so new, I did not make any attempt to find out what, if any, results had been obtained thus far. Jelks did say that in the preliminary scrimaging which preceded the kicking off of the drive, six persons had registered the previous week. Thus, the white problems which appeared to be facing the drive from the outset are principally the difficulty of meeting the stringent state requirements and the fear of economic and physical reprisals.

The Negro problems facing the drive are considerably more complex, and, for that matter, are not untinged with a degree of whiteness.

Jelks says that last year, Dr. Felton Clark, president of Southern University, said he did not think that that was the time for registration. He cited this as an example of the lack of militancy in matters of Negro registration on the part of some of the more prominent Negro leaders in the community.

Jelks told the following story, not as matter of mere gossip, but to illustrate the Negro problems in the community:

Jelks had scheduled a mass meeting for April 5 of this year, to kick off an NAACP membership drive, and, he says, a fund drive to build up a pool of money which could be used to mitigate the problems of those who were subject to economic harassment because of registration activities in the registration drive he was anticipating at that time. He had arranged in early March for James Merideth to be the principal speaker at the mass meeting on April 5, and had, in early March, begun widely publicizing the meeting. He says that after he had received a commitment from Meredith to speak, and had begun publicizing this fact, a person whom he refused to identify by name, but whom he called "one of the big Baptist preachers" got in touch with "a big Mason" who, in turn, contacted "a big NAACP lawyer"in New Orleans". The purpose of all this maneuvering was to get the lawyer to use the influence he had with Meredith (this influence being based upon the fact that the lawyer had met Meredith through Mrs. Motley) to persuade Meredith not to appear at the April 5 mass meeting. The lawyer succeeded in convincing Meredith that he should not appear in Baton Rouge, and Meredith asked Medger Evers to replace him. Apparently, Jelks knew about this replacement considerably in advance of the meeting, but as I understand it, he did not change his publicity advertising the meeting. (Although he refused to identify either the preacher or the Mason by name, later, when we were in the registration office, he asked one of the workers there whom she would think of if he said he was talking about "a big Baptist preacher", and the worker responded immediately, "Rev. T. J. Jemison." Then, Jelks asked the worker whom she would think of if he said he was talking about a "big Mason", and she responded immediately, "John G. Lewis." Lewis is Grand Master Louisiana. Jelks told this story to illustrate the extent to which certain Negro leaders in the Baton Rouge community are opposed to any kind of militant action movement there, including a registration program of any considerable proportion. I asked him why such leaders were opposed to any form of militancy, and he said that some of them have a vested interest in things remaining as they are, because of business and professional reasons; he said that in some cases, there have been indiscretions on the part of Negro leaders which whites then hold over their heads. In at least one other instance that Jelks cited, an individual committed an income tax discretion which is now being held over his head.

Jelks seemed genuinely convinced that the maneuvering to prevent Meredith's speaking at the April 5 mass meeting originated with white instructions to Negro leaders.

The other story which Jelks told was also involved with the April 5 mass meeting. He said that during the latter part of March, the police began following him wherever he went. He thinks it was on March 18 that a policeman stopped him, claiming that he had passed a car in an intersection. Jelks says that the point where the incident occurred was not an intersection at all. The policeman gave him a ticket. He was arraigned on March 28 and pled not guilty. No date was set for trial at the time of the arraignment. Jelks was told by the Clerk of Court that he would be notified when the trial was to be held. Jelks heard no more on this matter until at 6 p. m. on the night of April 5. A policeman came to his house and arrested him on a bench warrant charging Contempt of Court, in that he had not appeared for trial at the date set. This was just two hours before the mass meeting was to begin. Jelks was taken to jail and when he said that he wanted to put up bail, he was told that the judge had left town, and there was no one in town who could set bail. He insisted that he had not been informed that trial was to be held, but the police said that he had been mailed a notice that trial was to be held at 5:30. Jelks considered it significant that he was supposed to have been in court at 5:30, and that at 6 o'clock, the police were at his house with a warrant for his arrest for not appearing at 5:30. He suspected that in the ordinary course of things, a bench warrant could not have been issued and served in such a brief length of time.

As noted above, Medgar Evers had agreed to substitute for James Meredith at the April 5 mass meeting. Evers called Jelks on the morning of the 5th, and they arranged to meet at a certain corner in Baton Rouge. Evers was driving over from Jackson. The time of meeting was later than 6 o'clock, so Jelks was unable to meet Evers because he had been arrested at 6. However, the police were waiting for Evers when he arrived at the meeting place, and they arrested him. Jelks could not remember what charge was made against Evers. Jelks said that he had not had occasion to tell anyone that Evers was meeting him at that corner, and he felt the only reasonable conclusion was that his telephone line had been tapped, and the information relayed to the police for the arrest of Evers. Evers was held in jail until 7:30, and then released. By the time he got to the church for the meeting, most of the people had left.

Then, on the morning of April 6, the judge? returned to town, set bail, and Jelks was released. Evers was at his house when he arrived home, and as they were eating breakfast, the postman arrived with the daily mail. Included in the mail was the summons for failing to answer which Jelks had been arrested on the previous evening. The envelope containing the summons was postmarked April 1. Jelks called the postmaster, and arranged for the mailman to come back to his house. When the mailman arrived, Jelks asked him if he remembered what mail had been delivered that morning, and the mailman did recall each piece, including the summons. Jelks then got the postman to sign a statement that he had delivered the summons on the morning of August 6. When Jelks appeared in court, the following Tuesday, he took the summons with its postmarked envelope and the statement of the mailman to the court with him. When he faced the judge with these items of evidence, the judge said, "I hope you don't think that this court conspired against you." And, Jelks said, "Your Honor, that's exactly what I think."

Jelks felt that this sequence of events warranted no conclusion but that someone in the post office had cooperated in insuring that the summons would not be delivered to him until after the date on which trial had been set, thus, making it possible for him to be arrested on the bench warrant and disrupting the meeting which had been scheduled on April 5. And, it does appear, either that someone with access to the postmarking equipment at the post office, or someone at the post office in a position to hold up delivery of the mail after it was postmarked must have been in on the deal.

Jelks cited this tale as an example of the length to which the whites would go to suppress militant Negro leadership in the Baton Rouge community.

There is a bi-racial committee in Baton Rouge, the members of which were appointed by the mayor. This committee had just been appointed at the time of my last visit to Baton Rouge, and my report on that visit contains a record of my discussion of the bi-racial committee with a member, A. C. Belton. When the appointment of the committee was announced, Jelks issued a public statement severely criticizing the membership of the committee, alledging that it did not represent any real Negro leadership, and asserting that the appointment of the committee would have no apparent effect on demonstrations which he was planning. The members of the committee are: Dr. Dupuy Anderson, a dentist and member of the Executive Board of the local NAACP chapter; Dr. Dyer, a dentist; John G. Lewis, Grand Master; Raymond Scott, a tailor; A. C. Belton, who works at the Esso refinery; Mr. Nettlebille, vice president of Southern University, and a close associate of Dr. Felton CLark; the Rev. T. J. Jemison, Baptist; the Rev. E. D. Dillups, Baptist; the Rev. W. T. Handy, Methodist; Rev. L. L. Haymes, Methodist; Mr. Washington, who, Jelks thinks is a laborer; Mr. Jimmy Cook, whom Jelks describes as an S.O. public relations man and a hauling contractor who depends upon politicians for his jobs. According to Jelks, Dr. Anderson is the only member of the bi-racial committee who is in any way prominent in the NAACP chapter. Some of the rest are members, but none are active leaders in the chapter.

Jelks figures that the mayor probably selected the committee members on the recommendations of Nettlebille, Clark, Lewis, and Jemison.

Jelks describes FOCUS as another version of the bi-racial committee. Jelks was unable to supply the names of any whites. However, Jelks says he is thinking of having at least two mass meetings during the eight-weeks registration drive. He said that Patton had not told him how much money NAACP was making available for the registration drive.

At the time I was in the registration office with Jelks on the afternoon of August 13, the director, Miss Hawkins was absent. She had gone to Jackson, Mississippi, to attend the trial of some of the demonstrators there. Jelks expressed some concern with her absence during this initial stage of the drive, but seemed to feel that he could not tell her not to go since she was a volunteer. He also said that he was uncertain whether the Youth Council was going to be able to recruit enough volunteer canvassers to make the drive as effective as it might be. He said he had received no cooperation from any of the other ministers in attempting to recruit workers from the pulpit.

Jelks and I left the registration office and went to the office of Atty. Johnny Jones. Jones is chairman of the registration drive. We were in his office for about three hours, and during that time, Jones, as chairman of the drive, got several calls from persons who had not been able to locate Miss Hawkins, and who had problems in connection with the registration program. Jones also expressed some concern about Miss Hawkins' absence, and he said he felt that if it were possible to hire a director, this kind of problem would not arise.

Jones and Jelks said that they had attended the meeting of the Louisiana Advancement Association which had been held in Baton Rouge on August 10, simultaneous with the meeting in Lake Charles. Both said it had been an informative meeting, and that persons from all over the state had attended. They said that the meeting had primarily been devoted to a discussion of obstacles to Negro registration in Louisiana. Jones gave me a copy of the announcement of the meeting which is attached. A principle of the Louisiana Advancement Association seems to be the Rev. David Dennis in New Orleans. I understand that Avery Alexander is also an official of the organization. I had supposed when I heard about the meeting it had been organized by one of the political factions in Louisiana in anticipation of the upcoming Democratic primary. I had further supposed that Morrison was probably the most likely person to have organized such a meeting. However, Jelks told me that there was considerable criticism of Morrison at the meeting, and Jones said he suspected that probably Gillis Long was the man behind the meeting. The meetings were held at the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church. Jones said that he figures that the Louisiana Advancement Society is going to be expressing concern about voter registration for Negroes during the coming weeks, and that it will serve as a vehicle by which Negro leadership throughout the state can be contacted by the Gillis Long campaign organization. He supposes that the real purpose of the organization is to compile a list of Negro politicians throughout the state which can then be used in such things as calling of campaign meetings and getting out the vote on election day. He appeared to be not at all hopeful that any meaningful registration difficulties would be resolved by the Louisiana Advancement society, and felt that its life would probably terminate with the election.

During the time we were discussing the registration drive in Jones' office, he mentioned the slow-but-sure techniques which have been used by the FOCUS organization in the past, and he seemed to be implying that this was an effective means of adding Negroes to the rolls. He described the operation as involving one employed person, who was required to get a minimum number of new registrants per week, and who got a flat fee for each registrant over that number. His description of the operation corresponded with the description A. C. Belton had given me on my last visit to Baton Rouge. At the time we were discussing the FOCUS operation, Jones expressed no disatisfaction with it. I knew that the Rev. Jelks felt that it was too slow an operation ever to overcome purgers, migrations and deaths in the Negro registration. Jelks did not express himself to this effect when we were in Jones' office. Jones expressed much the same opinion of the bi-racial committee which Jelks had expressed.

I mentioned some of my experiences with the Community Relations Committee in New Orleans, and suggested that one of the difficulties of that committee was that its membership apparently had no adequate conception of the bargaining power of the position it presently occupies. I cited some of the specifics I had picked up in New Orleans and Jones appeared to be very interested. He suggested that I meet with Dr. Anderson and Raymond Scott, two members of the committee, that evening. I agreed to do so.

Dr. Anderson was described both by Jelks and by Jones as the only member of the Baton Rouge bi-racial committee who was at all dependable.

Jelks, Jones, Anderson, Scott, and myself had dinner that evening. Scott appears to occupy some position of leadership in the FOCUS organization. He took the initiative in the discussion by describing the accomplishments and gains which he attributed to FOCUS in the field of registration in the past. Jelks required that he admit that the accumulation of registration by FOCUS had been very slow, and that registration in East Baton Rouge parish had hovered at about the same level for the past five years or so. The only argument that Scott could present was that the official figures that the registrar published were not accurate. He said that FOCUS had definite information that the registrar was deliberately concealing four to 500 Negro registrants in order not to arouse animosity of the white Citizen's Council. As he became involved in justifications of the FOCUS methods, Scott became somewhat confused, and several times, he contradicted himself as to various facts and figures. Jelks was quite dubious about everything that Scott was saying, and at several points, he nudged me under the table, and looked at me in an "didn't I tell you" way. Jones appeared to be embarrassed by Scott's performance. He took the Jelks position and began arguing with Scott that a much more militant and massive approach to voter registration appeared to be needed. Scott's reaction was that the registrar would become tougher and tougher under the pressure from the Citizen's Council if there was much noise made about voter registration among the Negroes. I suggested that this was a problem which eventually was going to have to be faced. I told them it seemed to me that this kind of attitude on the part of the registrar appeared to be a sophisticated way of dampening Negro registration efforts, and that certainly it served the same purpose without creating the difficulties so long as the Negro leadership was willing to comply. At several points, Scott reiterated that he could have nothing to do with a really militant registration drive. In a curious kind of self-contradiction, Scott offered to provide Jones with a list of unregistered Negroes, which had been compiled a year or so ago at the time Jones ran for District Attorney. The contradiction came in when he said that it was just as good now as it was when it was compiled.

As a result of this discussion of the registration program between Anderson, Scott, Jelks, and Jones - it appeared to be the consensus of all but Scott that there was a need for a militant and rather massive approach to voter registration. They agreed that they should begin holding mass meetings, and making every attempt to get the entire community aroused to a point of enthusiasm about voter registration.

We did not have much time to discuss the bi-racial committee matter because Jelks and Anderson had to leave to attend an NAACP meeting. However, before they left, we did get into the discussion a bit, and I told Anderson of the importance I thought should be attached to identifying the whites in the community who have expressed some awareness of their interest being affected by Negro demands. He seemed thoroughly to agree with this point of view, and expressed considerable disgust that Voorhies, head of the Esso refinery in Baton Rouge, had refused to participate in the bi-racial negotiations. He had the feeling that the persons with whom had been dealing (he did not choose to identify them) were very definitely on secondary and tertiary levels of power in the community. At one point, he described the Esso refinery as the most segregated place in the world. And, at another point, he stated that he felt that the bi-racial committee was being thoroughly and completely hoodwinked. He thoroughly discounted all of Scott's assertions that the committee had been responsible for some progress since its initiation.

My overall impression of the Baton Rouge project is that it can be a success if Jelks is even able to get a minimum of cooperation from the more complacent elements in the community. I am not sure just where Jones stands because he appeared at one time to be an advocate of the FOCUS approach, and at another time, to be an advocate of the more militant Jelks approadh. I had a private conversation with Jones after the dinner meeting with the others during which he expressed considerable disgust with Scott, and with the FOCUS approach. I am convinced that in Baton Rouge, as in New Orleans, the sophisticated type of slow-down at the registrar's office is going to have to be dealt with effectively before any significant gains in Negro registration are going to be accomplished because of the lukewarmness and legalizm of the Justice Department's attitude about these matters, coupled with the cleverness and sophistication of the whites involved, along with their apparent determination to maintain maximum quotas on Negro registration. I doubt that Federal legal action offers much hope, considering the apparent complacency of much of the Negro leadership. It is probably going to be difficult to mobilize the Negro community insuch a way as to make it a matter of expediency before registration policy is to be changed. Difficult, but not impossible.

Jelks appears to have some such strategy in mind, although I am by no means certain that he will confine his activities to voter registration. He is very deeply involved in such matters as desegregation of lunch counters, public accommodations, et cetera.

While Jones is technically chairman of the registration drive, his law practice apparently prevents his devoting much time or attention to the drive. This being the case, I suspect that Jelks will be the machine which drives the program regardless of titles and organizational structure. I think this is good. Jelks strikes me as a capable, effective and committed leader who is well equipped by both intellect and experience to combat the white opposition. Unless Jelks is completely immobilized by the "old guard", and I do not see how this can be accomplished, without the use of measures which would be inexpedient, I expect to see significant gains made in Baton Rouge registration during the program we are supporting. I think we can learn much by watching as closely as possible, the developments in Baton Rouge as the program developes. Jelks will be reporting to us through Patton on the customary and NAACP forms.

Dear Citizen and Civic Worker:

In the course of our discussions with you and citizens all over Louisiana, we have found that Negroes face many problems that prevent them from exercising their constitutional right to register and vote.

Therefore, in order to remedy as much as possible, these inequities, our organization is convening a meeting of community leaders, in the city of Baton Rouge on Saturday, August 10, at 9:45am, in the Auditoreum of the Mount Pleasant Baptist Church, 1743 Convention Street, the Rev. Carey N. Morris, Pastor. The following problems and their solutions will be discussed:

1. The widespread practice of voter registrars turning Negroes down whole-sale in many parishes.

2. The unconcern and apathy of Negroes in parishes where they can register without too much difficulty.

3. The stimulation of Negroes in those parishes where they constitute a large percentage of their registry to run for office so that Negroes will represent Negroes.

4. Finally, we will also attempt to unify the activities of Negro civic groups throughout the state on registration and the many other questions that affect us as a group.

May I also submit this additional information: we are inviting an assistant Attorney General to answer some of your questions on registration. We are also inviting all of the announced Candidates for Governor of Louisiana to express their views on this question.

Please come prepared to participate in all of these discussions and bring any additional information available in your parish. Try to bring some women leaders or workers from your parish to help us organize a Women's Auxillary.

The organization will sponsor a luncheon at noon, free to the participants. It will also help those organizations desiring it on their expense up to the amount of ten dollars ($10.00) for those traveling long distances. If there is any further information desired, please don't hesitate to write or call 943-3393 or Tw 1-0779.

Please do not destroy this letter, as it is your credential for admittance to the metting.

Very truly yours,

Rev. Avery Alexander, Co-ordinator

Subj: A Visit to Clinton, Louisiana

While I was in Plaquemine on August 14, I learned that there was to be a hearing on preliminary motions in the case of James Lesser in Clinton on August 15. Lesser had been arrested a week or so previously and charged with disturbing the peace while he was accompanying two Negroes to the registrar's office in the East Feliciana parish courthouse in Clinton, Louisiana.

Rudy Lombard had told me that every Negro whom he knew of who had attempted to register during the CORE summer project in East Feliciana or who had in any way had anything to do with the project, had been subpeonaed for the hearing and that in addition, the defense attorneys and two FBI men had been subpeonaed. No one with whom I had talked had been able to get any explanation of why this enormous number of persons had been subpeonaed for what everyone thought was a quite routine hearing. Since I had to be in New Orleans on the evening of August 15, for a meeting of the executive committee of the Coordinating Council, I decided to stay over in Baton Rouge the night of August 14 and attend the hearing in Clinton on the 15th.

The hearing was scheduled for 1 o'clock in the East Feliciana courthouse at Clinton. I arrived at about 12:30, parked on the square, and entered the courthouse. At the time I entered the courtroom, there were some 25 or 30 whites seated on the front rows in the spectator section. I took a seat that was somewhat isolated from those who were already there. I was the only person in the room with a white shirt and tie on, and it must have been apparent to the natives that I was an outsider. I had been there some 10 or 15 minutes when one of those who appeared to be acquainted with everyone in the room, and to be in some position of leadership, approached me and told me that they were going to have what he called a meeting of interested citizens with regard to some legislation. He said that this meeting was to take place before the hearing, and asked if I would mind stepping outside during the meeting. There was little that I could but accede to this request. I left the courtroom and stood about in the hall surrounded by the deputy sheriff. I stood as close as I could to the door of the courtroom, being very curious about the nature of this "meeting". During the time I was standing by the courtroom door, every other white person, except a Justice Department lawyer and apparently three FBI men, who approached the courtroom, was admitted. The sheriff was standing at the courtroom door. As the native whites would approach, he would say, with some ostentation, it seemed to me, "Are you goin' to the meeting'?", and then he would open the door to admit the natives. Four young men of apparent high school age approached at one point, and I gathered from the comments of some of the deputies that these were probably stars of the high school football team. They were admitted to the meeting along with all the rest. Thus, the courtroom door was opened any number of times while I was standing by it, and I was able to look into the courtroom and see that nothing like a meeting in formal sense was taking place inside.

Shortly after I left the courtroom, a white man dressed in coat and tie approached and seemed to isolate himself from the natives and the deputies. I asked him if he was the defense attorney, and he said that he was not. He identified himself as Cauder, a Justice Department lawyer. I asked him if the Justice Department was in any way intervening in the legal proceedings. He said that the Justice Department was not; he said that his presence was due to the fact that some FBI men had been subpeonaed. It struck me as typical of the Justice Department's attitude in such cases that Cauder did not appear to be in the least concerned that the scheduled hearings involved a registration worker who had been arrested on obviously specious charges while he was helpin g Negroes to register. When I told Cauder who I was, he appeared to be somewhat alarmed that the natives and the deputies might have seen him talking to me, and thereafter while we waited for the "meeting" to end, he demonstrated to any interested observer that he had no connection whatever with me.

At one point during the period of waiting, some Negroes started to come up the stairs to the courtroom. The sheriff and a couple of deputies shouted down to them instructing them that a meeting was going on, and that they were not to come upstairs until they were notified that the meeting was over.

Shortly after the arrival of the Justice Department lawyer, three white men came up the stairs carrying briefcases, one of them a cripple. These three appeared to be FBI men. They exchanged jocular comment with the deputies and the natives who were gathered around, and then one of them went into a kind of huddle with the Justice Department lawyer.

When the defense attorneys, including Miss Axelrod, arrived, the sheriff observed that he thought the meeting was over, and he opened the courtroom door. The defense attorneys entered, and the Negroes who had been lined up downstairs began to ascend the stairs and file into the courtroom. The Justice Department attorney and the three FBI men were among the first to enter the room. I moved into the line of Negroes and entered the courtroom after some 25 or 30 Negroes had entered. The first four rows of the spectator's seats were filled with whites. Only two vacant seats were remaining on the far side of the courtroom from the entrance door in this white filled section. I noticed that the Justice Department attorney had seated himself in one of these seats. The FBI men had taken a standing position against the wall next to the door inside the courtroom. At no time did I see them make a move for a seat among the Negro spectators.

All of the seats filled up and there must have been 50 to 75 Negroes standing in the aisle, and along the back of the seating section. The judge stuck his head out the door of his chamber and motioned to the bailiff. The bailiff came over and talked to the judge, and then he went back to the front of the courtroom and announced that all persons who did not have a seat must leave the courtroom. Spectators who were standing filed out of the courtroom. Then, the judge came out of his chambers and went to the front of the courtroom, and announced that all subpeonaed witnesses must leave the courtroom. About three-fourths of the Negroes who were seated got up and filed out. I saw no whites leave. Then, the deputy on the door began letting the Negroes who had been standing back into the courtroom until all of the spectator seats were once again filled.

I saw the judge motion the Justice Department attorney and the crippled FBI man to come to the front of the courtroom. He took them out on the balcony of the courthouse, and apparently pointed out something to them in the street surrounding the square.

There was a considerable wait, and then the prosecuting attorney arrived and went into the judge's chambers, along with the judge and the defendant's attorneys. The Justice Department attorney went out of the courtroom into the hallway. I do not know whether or not he went into the judge's chambers through the outside door.

After some 15 or 20 minutes, the principles in the hearing came out of the judge's chambers and the proceedings got underway. The prosecutor read the statements from August 9 and August 15 issues of a newspaper which quoted Gordon Carey's allegations that the arrest of Lesser was harassment of registration workers. The prosecutor said that the hearing was unusual during vacation time, and that it was being held only to give CORE justice. The prosecutor said that he did not believe he could adequately represent the state when he was being publicly accused of harassment and irregularities. He said that he did not believe that the court should hold this hearing under such circumstances. He cited the fact that the courtroom was filled with spectators, a thing he said he could never remember having happen before. He said he did not believe that the court could render a fair and impartial verdict under the extremely tense conditions existing in Clinton. He alleged that the public statements of Gordon Carey and the presence of large numbers of Negroes in the courtroom and lining the streets outside constituted pressure on the court. He said that the state was entitled to justice in the same way that CORE was entitled to justice, and he asked that the hearing be continued until the court could proceed without public accusations from CORE, and without intimidations from East Feliciana parish Negroes.

The defense argued that the newspaper quotations were hearsay, and therefore inadmissable. He argued that the defendant's rights would be seriously affected by a continuance. He pointed out that the defendant had already been incarcerated for two weeks, and would have to serve time in addition to that two weeks in the event of his conviction. He pointed out that the prosecutor had asked for an indefinite continuance, and that this could mean indefinite incarceration for the defendant. He also suggested that delay would not mitigate public interest in the issues represented in the hearing. He asked that the hearing of preliminary motions continue right then. Then, the prosecutor argued that the defendant had made no attempt to make bail, and that apparently he wanted to stay in jail. He said he thought an organization like CORE could make bail. He said there had been no move to reduce bail, which had been set at $2,000 on this disturbing the peace charge. He said that if CORE's heart was bleeding for the defendant's liberty, then CORE should make bail, and that CORE is calculating to put the prosecutor and the court on the spot.

The judge overruled the defense attorney's objection that the newspaper articles were inadmissable, and agreed with the prosecutor that a full courtroom was unique in his experience. He mentioned the considerable interest which the Negroes of the community were displaying in this trial, and construed this interest and its manifestation as pressure on the court which precluded the possibility of a fair and impartial hearing for the state. He ruled that he would continue the hearing without date, but that he would be amenable to a conference between the two sides sometime during the October turn of court. And so this chapter of Louisiana justice ended.

It appears that the inordinate number of subpeonas which had been issued for this hearing must have been designed to insure that notice of the hearing would be widespread in the Negro community, and that a great deal of interest and curiosity would be aroused with regard to it. Thus the prosecution was provided with a large number of Negroes both inside the courtroom and out, and could argue that tension in the community precluded a fair and impartial hearing. The so-called "meeting" of citizens in the courtroom prior to the hearing appears to have been a dodge by which the courtroom could be packed with white spectators, thus insuring a lack of seating for the Negro spectators who were expected as a result of the subpeonas, and thus adding to the confusion and the appearance of large crowds.

I regard this incident as a prime of example of the manner in which the machinery of "justice" can be used to defeat its own purported objective.

Field Trip Report

From: Jack Minnis

Subj: A Visit to Plaquemine, Louisiana, on August 14, 1963

Ronnie Moore was in the hospital with stomach trouble the morning I arrived in Plaquemine, and I did not get to see him until that afternoon after his release from the hospital. I visited the CORE office in Plaquemine, and talked some of the personnel there, as well as with Rudy Lombard, of New Orleans and Syracuse University, who is one of the leaders of the CORE summer task force.

The CORE office operation is impressive in its efficiency. The walls are lined with county maps of each of the counties in which the summer task force is operating. The office serves as an information and communication center for the eight parish voter registration operation, as well as a headquarters for the more intensive picketing and general action activities which CORE is conducting in Plaquemine.

There was a constant flow in and out of the office as pickets were picked up at their homes, brought by the office to sign in, and then taken downtown to relieve other pickets who were on duty in front of several stores, and in front of the courthouse. In an anteroom of the office, about half-a-dozen young people were listening to a tape recording of a speech that had been made a mass meeting a few nights previously. They were commenting upon the content of the speech, as well as upon the technique of the speaker. This appeared to be a more or less impromptu study session or workshop in the art of public speaking. The comments, criticisms, and discussion were wholly constructive, and the persons who were in engaging in the workshop appeared to be genuinely concerned about learning what they could from the technique of the speaker.

Rudy Lombard explained to me in some detail the way the voter registration operation is conducted. He said that two persons had been sent out at the beginning of the project into the county seat of each of the counties included in the program. The first step these two persons took in each community was an attempt to involve local leadership in the project. Their success varied considerably from county to county. Rudy said that their best success outside of Plaquemine had been achieved in St. Helena parish, and he suggested that I visit St. Helena that afternoon. He told me that after establishing some kind of communication with local leaders, the next step was to set up at least one workshop, and preferably several in churches in various parts of the county. Then, the CORE teams recruited help in order to canvass each community, and stimulate persons to come to the clinics and prepare themselves to make a registration attempt. Then the CORE workers, in whatever way they could, arranged for transporting the prospective registrants both from the home to the clinic, and from the clinic to the registrar's office. CORE had, I believe, four automobiles which worked out of the Plaquemine office, and were sometimes available for this transport duty in the outlying parishes.

I shall not go into the problems encountered and the results obtained because these facts are well laid out in Ronnie Moore's recent report on the project.

I met Ronnie and Major Johns at the CORE office at about 1:30 or 2 o'clock and Ronnie suggested that I go with Major Johns and visit the work going on in St. Helena parish. St. Helena is about 45 minutes drive from Plaquemine.

When we arrived at the country church where a clinic in St. Helena was taking place, we met Mr. Clarence Knighton, who is the president of the St. Helena chapter of the NAACP. He and one other gentleman and a lady were at the clinic. In addition, there was one CORE worker there making up his report to be turned in that night, and before we left, his teammate returned from a foray into the community looking for prospects for the morrow. The relationship between the CORE workers and Mr. Knighton and his colleagues appeared to be very cordial. If this relationship is any example of the success of CORE in overcoming the charge of "outsider" in its summer project, then CORE has been successful indeed.

I asked Mr. Knighton what were the principal problems with which Negroes in St. Helena who wanted to register had to contend. He began by pointing out first of all that the education level among Negroes is very low in that rural area, and that the registration test and the literacy requirements were a considerable hindrance. He went on then to talk at some length about the fear of economic reprisal, and the fear of actual physical violence which many Negroes express when they are approached by registration workers. He appeared at this point to be rather well satisfied with the progress of the registration drive thus far. He mentioned that only that morning he had had a very cordial conversation with the registrar of voters in the St. Helena courthouse. He said that the registrar had very carefully and patiently explained that it was necessary for him to be very meticulous in applying the state registration requirements lest the white Citizen's Council begin to put pressure on him to really be hard on Negroes. Mr. Knighton had previously explained that many Negroes are turned down for reading and writing errors which are not really relevant to the presumed purpose of the registration requirements. Mr. Knighton had at no time up to this point expressed indignation or disatisfaction with the attitude of the registrar, nor with the attitude of the sheriff, who also appeared to have treated him in the past with some cordiality and respect.

Major Johns brought up the point that it sounded to him as though the registrar and the sheriff were nearly slick segregationists, rather than real friends of the Negro people. He suggested that whatever reasons the registrar might give for his meticulous application of the registration requirements, the net effect was that the increase in Negro registration would very likely not off-set the effect of purges, migration, and death. When Major Johns brought up these points, Mr. Knighton readily agreed. It was as though he had been talking about registration and Negro-white relationships on one level which really had no connection with the level that Major Johns was bringing up. He seemed to feel it was a matter of fact that the state of Louisiana, through the state board of registration, is implementing a program of maximum quotas on Negro registration throughout Louisiana. Furthermore, he seemed to have accepted this as one of the given obstacles, the presence of which one simply acknowledged and then ignored. I got the impression that he had never really given much thought to what could be done about such a maximum quota program. My acquaintance and conversation with Mr.Knighton and his colleagues was by no means sufficient in depth or duration to provide a basis for firm conclusions. Nevertheless, it was my impression that Mr.Knighton and his group are probably not the tools, either wittingly or unwittingly, of the whites. (One or both of which appears to be the case in the other places I visited in Louisiana). From the things Mr. Knighton said, in his account of his relations with the white politicians, I gathered that a certain amount of civility, even cordiality, on the part of the whites, probably tends to disarm Mr. Knighton, at least momentarily. His attitude of understanding and agreement when Major Johns raised this issue was in stark contrast to the attitude of Mr. Scott in Baton Rouge when I raised the same issue. As I believe I noted in my Baton Rouge report, Mr. Scott, at such a juncture, immediately embarked upon a defense of the whites.

We returned from St. Helena to Plaquemine in time to sit in on a meeting which was preparing for a demonstration in Plaquemine that night. Please let it be noted here that the demonstration had been decided upon considerably in advance of my visit to Plaquemine, and that I had nothing to do with that decision. In the planning session, as nearly as I can remember, were Ronnie Moore, Gordon Carey, Beverly Axelrod (CORE attorney), the Rev. Davis (a Plaquemine minister in whose church the meeting was held that night), Dr. Tyson (a doctor of Plaquemine who who happens to be a Negro), W. W. Harleaux, a Plaquemine man by the name of "Cap" Harris, and several other Plaquemine people whose names I did not get. Also present were two members of an unidentified TV crew who recorded the proceedings.

The meeting had been called to plan the tactics of the demonstration which was scheduled for that night. Several of the registration workers who had been arrested on the ferry the previous Sunday were in the Iberville parish jail in Plaquemine, and the jail was to be the target of the demonstration. There was considerable discussion about the precise aim and focus of the demonstration. It was generally agreed upon that when asked why they were demonstrating, the leaders of the demonstration would have a list of grievances including the general segregation abuses, in education, employment, public accommodations, et cetera. (By this time, the TV crew had gone into the church to record the singing). Mr. Harleaux, whom I had met the previous weekend in Lake Charles, asked me if I had any suggestions. I told them of some of the discussions we had had in the VEP office at the time of the Greenwood demonstrations last March, and that I understood it to be our experience that in those situations where it is appropriate, demonstrations should be exclusively confined to registration abuses. I further suggested that since the focus of the demonstrations was to be the cite in which some 20 registration workers were incarcerated that it would be most appropriate to demand their release on the ground that their continued detention was seriously hampering the registration program. All agreed that this was the case, and that it would be well to confine demands and statements of grievance to this one point. Then the discussion went into the tactics and the appointment of leaders and so forth. When these matters had been decided upon, the meeting broke up and adjourned to the church for a brief singing and instruction session, and then some 200 demonstrators led by Gordon Carey and the Rev. Davis walked in double file to the county courthouse.

I want no suggestion re demonstration

By the time the head of the file had come to a stop and was confronted by the sheriff and a number of riot-equipped policemen at the entrance to the courthouse yard, the street opposite the courthouse was lined with fully as many Negro spectators as there were Negro demonstrators. There was a discussion between the sheriff and the demonstration leaders during which the sheriff tried to persuade the Rev. Davis to call off the demonstration because of the lateness of the hour (by this time it was about 9:30 or 10 o'clock). The sheriff suggested that the demonstration take place before sundown the following day. He suggested at 6 or 6:30. The Rev. Davis and Gordon Carey and a couple of the other demonstration leaders then conferred a little distance from the sheriff. They came to a decision and went back and informed the sheriff that they would gather in front of the courthouse right then, would sing one song, and have one prayer, and then would disperse. They further told the the sheriff that they would be back the following evening, probably around 7 o'clock. The sheriff, apparently with considerable relief, then stated that since the demonstration was to take place on the city street, it was the province of the police chief and not of him. The police chief offered no comment, and made no attempt in any way to harass or deter the demonstrators. They lined up in an orderly rank in front of the courthouse, sang several verses of "We Shall Overcome", were led in prayer by the Rev. Davis, and then turned and walked back to the church.

Both during the walk from the church to the courthouse and from the courthouse to the church, the city police directed traffic and otherwise observed the proceedings. Though the very presence of the police probably had some intimidating effect on the demonstrators, this was not readily apparent from observing the demonstrators. At no time did I see any instance of overt harassment or intimidation on the part of the police, or on the part of any other whites.

The leaders had another strategy meeting after returning to the church. They all expressed determination to demonstrate the following evening, and began a discussion of demands to make in the event that they were contacted by the city officials as a result of the demonstration just concluded. None of the leaders appeared really to have considered any specific demands to make or grievances of which to complain. There was again considerable discussion of this point, and then I was again asked if I had any suggestions. I told them that my very cursory observations of the day had led me to conclude that there probably were some very specific demands they could make with regard to voter registration. The first, of course, would be the release of the registration workers. I asked if they thought it would help registration any to have a Negro clerk working in the registrar's office. There was unanimous agreement that this probably help registration considerably by easing the tension and fears of Negroes who were going up to register. There had apparently also been some difficulty with changing criteria of identification by the registrar. They agreed that they should demand some specific identification requirements which the registrar would agree to adhere to. Before the meeting closed, it appeared to be the general concensus that if they were contacted by the whites as a result of the demonstration that evening, they would confine their demands to voter registration. There also appeared to be some sentiment for confining any future demonstrations to this one aspect of the civil rights grievances of the community. Subsequent events showed, of course, that this agreement either never was really reached, or that it simply was not implemented. During all of the discussions of that evening, I heard no mention of the gerrymandering abuses about which I have since read in the paper.

I learned the following day that the 20-odd registration workers had been released. I have not had the opportunity to talk to anyone who would know whether there was any causal relationship between the demonstration of August 14 and the release of these persons.

I left Plaquemine with the impression that here was a Louisiana community in which a singular degree of unity existed between leaders and followers, and in which it was not likely that the white would be able successfully to sow the seeds of disunity.

Re: Field Report on Nashville, Tennessee (VEP 4-3)

During my recent field trip to Nashville, Tennessee, I became very impressed with the results obtained during a recent voter registration drive. Through various interviews, I learned that production was commensurate with the effort placed into the over-all drive.

I shall try to categorize each area of activity involved in the registration drive and give my personal comments from an observational standpoint.

ORGANIZATION OF DRIVE

Each person I spoke with, particularly Miss A. Theresa Whittaker, the director of the voter registration project in Nashville, appeared to feel that given more time to contact all segments of the community, the drive would have been better organized.

In the opinion of Miss Whittaker and Mr. Avon Williams, Jr., chairman of the Davidson County Independent Political Council, they "....were pushed for organizing time...." because they were desirious of using the motor tag purchasing period as a means of contacting more people who were in and around the courthouse. Most of the people registered were registered as a result of their using the aforementioned period to their advantage.

Mrs. C. E. McGruder, president of the Nashville branch of the NAACP, felt that because of the "short time for planning," the PTA, high school student councils, and other community organizations could not be contacted.

I asked each person if they would need an organizing period before beginning another drive upon receiving another monetary grant from VEP. Most of them felt this would be needed, but that at the same time, felt their two workers at the courthouse who solicit registration of Negroes, should remain there. This ostensibly seems to be practical since the courthouse workers have been doing an effective job.

VEP 4-3
Weldon Rougeau

PUBLICITY

According to Miss Whitaker, there was sufficient radio and newspaper publicity but no television spot announcements were sought for fear of a counter reaction from the white community. I expressed the feeling that television publicity should have been sought because it would still be beneficial for Negro registration and that perhaps it could serve as a catalyst for arousal of the masses if there were counter registration drives by reactionary whites.

Most of the printed matter I saw was very well composed, appealing, and easily readable. A Mr. Donneley from Fisk University, has been responsible for most of the publicity, and has done a commendable job.

My feeling is that not enough emphasis was placed on fully informing the lower class Negro by failing to create publicity that would appeal to him. In this light, I suggested the use of "gimmicks" such as trading stamps (if the people of Nashville do a significant amount of trading this way), the raffling of groceries and other items, and other conceivable ideas for spurring the flow of human traffic to the courthouse.

CANVASSING

With the absence of the students from Fisk and Tennessee A & I Universities, and from the high schools of Nashville, I feel an effective canvassing program suffered immeasurably.

Although I was shown canvassing sheets taken from the recent campaign, I still feel that constant confrontation with the prospective registrant wa s not maintained.

In this area of activity, I feel if more participation is obtained from the youth of Nashville, gradual amelioration of the drive as a functioning machine will be discernible.

COOPERATION OF COMMUNITY ORGANIZATIONS

The Frontiers International, Nashville Christian Leadership Conference (NCLC), and the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority were mentioned as organizations that failed to cooperate with the voter registration effort after being asked to do so. These notables were joined in a feast of complacency by most of the "Elmer Gantry" ministers of Nashville who did almost nothing to involve their congregations in the drive.

In my opinion, most of the organizations in the community would probably not help because of their lack of previous involvement. This can be coupled with the fact that most work of this nature is usually done by a devoted minority alerted to the needs for a more effective Negro vote. Most of the others are ammiaceous as carrots: waiting to be uprooted from the soil of nonchalance.

NEIGHBORHOOD REGISTRATION

The Davidson Cointy Independent Political Council has repeatedly sought to have neighborhood registration in the city of Nashville, but to no avail.

However, the County Election Commission has made neighborhood registration available to the fringe areas of the county where most of people living there are whites.

In refusing to institute neighborhood registration in the city limits of Nashville, the commission has stated it does not have the authority to do so. Persons interviewed invariably stated this is said because the brunt of the Negro population is concentrated within the city limits. Negroes registering en masse could cause considerable political disruption at the local, county, and state levels.

Dr. Edwin Mitchell of Meharry Medical School believes ".....that the registration books will only be procured when it becomes politically expedient to do so or if the state Negro organizations support the re-election of someone like Frank Clement, the governor." Needless to say, the latter would be like leaping into Dante's Inferno.

I suggested that the Negro and white organizations join together in presenting a neighborhood registration drive, if this were feasible. Organizations which could be contacted are: The League of Women Voters, Council of Churches, County Democratic Committee, and other community organizations.

All of the members of the project feel that their drives will never be as productive as possible under the present circumstances. I concur in that feeling, and further believe that all legal devices should be employed to insure neighborhood registration for the Negro citizenry of Nashville.

THE FUTURE

The original goal of 15,000 set at the inception of the drive was termed "too optimistic" at this time, and under the present circumstances. A new goal of approximately 5,000 was believed more realistic if present conditions prevail. This should be realized by October when the books close for the November elections.

CONCLUSION

It is my belief that the project in Nashville should be continued because it is one capable of growing and producing if properly nurtured. If the participants are given a chance to revamp their over-all program, I feel that subsequent registration drives will be ones deserving of praise and continued monetary support.

I further believe that the present director, (Miss A. Theresa Whittaker) of the project is a very capable and talented individual. Her political acumen andkeen knowledge of the capabilities of the members of the project are manifest in her constructive criticisms and her concern for FREEDOM NOW!

MEMORANDUM CONFIDENTIAL

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Weldon J. Rougeau

Re: ATLANTA VOTER REGISTRATION DRIVE

Perhaps the most tragic thing about Washington Irving's Rip Van Winkle is that Rip slept so long, he slept through an entire revolution. When he arose from his cradle of somnolence , he found himself a stranger among his own people. Incredulously Rip was almost like a mendicant friar begging for someone to recognize him.

In my opinion, Atlanta has quite a few "Rip Van Winkles" among the Negro leadership, and I sincerely hope someone will awaken them to the facts of life in the midst of our revolution while there is still time.

Only men who are asleep would allow Jesse Hill, the titular head of the All Citizens Registration Committee (whatever that is) to take the reins of a wild horse when he has never seen a horse before.

Only men who are asleep would allow a man like the Reverend "General" Fred C. Bennette (he wears a star in his lapel), to supervise a group of hard working young people who want to contribute something worthwhile to the movement. If his supervision were CARE packages, many families would die of starvation. In my opinion, his behavior during the drive is a discredit to the nonviolent movement and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, by whom he is employed.

From all indications, little or no effort was put into planning for the Atlanta registration drive. The movement of people in a drive, their interest, and application to their duties, are usually indications that care has been taken in organizing and interesting people for a campaign of this nature.

In my opinion, too much authority was placed in the hands of Mr. Jesse Hill, and this was detrimental to the drive because it eventually caused widespread dissension among the workers. Naturally, someone has to be a leader, but that person should use diplomacy and common sense by giving people in the drive some kind of opportunity to be creative.

I feel that Mr. Hill erred in this respect. He was obviously too busy to devote the time a coordinator should give to such an endeavor.

Perhaps Mr. Hill will say that he had someone in charge, but it is my sincere belief that that person or people were not capable of keeping the group functioning as a cohesive body interested in registering more than an "average" number of people. Instead, there were many people around registration places with nothing to do except stand in the way of prospective registrants.

Many of the people who had been given supervision of certain "areas" were not allowed to function creatively because there was a day-to-day changing of tactics in an attempt to increase productivity.

It is my belief that when conducting a drive for registration, there should be pre-planning of daily activities for each work area with only minor changes being made, if necessary. There should also be a committee of individuals who have been given specific leadership roles and these people should be the ones who meet and make joint decisions, on the basis of the knowldege of all people concerned with a given area.

Part of the blame must also rest on the shoulders of the Rev. Andrew Young because he failed to provide firm leadership, even while he was noticing what was happening to many of his staff members. Strong men do not succumb to problems involved in confronting situations which could leave a party agrieved - they find constructive solutions to keep a project and its participants on an even keel. The morale of Rev. Young's staff members was ruined by his failure to do anything about correcting it, for fear he would arouse Mr. Hill's wrath. This is sheer "tommyrot" and in my best judgment, Mr. Hill's absence from the drive would not have stymied the movement of prospective registrants at any location in the county.

A large part of the leaflet publicity was redundant, grammatically incorrect, and faulty in editing. Several thousand leaflets were never distributed in the community simply because there were too many of them, or not enough people to distribute them.

There were also several instances where students from high schools and colleges were allowed to stand around waiting for something to do with leaflets, and no one was around to show them what should be done and where it should be done. I feel that the radio spot announcements were responsible for most of the people registering. This became evident from questioning persons who came to register.

More could have been done with newspaper and television publicity, but then again, when Mr. Hill would say, "No!", his words had to be listened to, and many aspects of the project were being neglected. I am of the opinion that when conducting a drive, all parts of one's machine have to function together.

The sound trucks were not utilized as extensively as they should have been. For the most part, they arrived at the scene of registration too late in the evening and did not spend enough time out in the community. My feeling is that one should use a sound truck out in the streets giving registration information, and should be followed by cars for transporting anyone desirous of registering. There was not a single time during my stay that I learned of a person responsible for organizing and directing sound trucks in and around a place designated for registration. There was also an insufficient number of sound trucks available for use.

The canvassing program was ostensibly disorganized. No one seemed to know anything about mapping an area out for canvassing, or whether there would be canvassing on the night of registration. Many high school and college students who had been solicited to canvass were idle and left saying, "Oh, I could've stayed home."

It is very important that canvassing before, during, and after a drive be well organized, for this is the only opportunity one has of selling registration to an unregistered person in the latter's home. Here again, I feel this was an obvious lack of coordination on the part of the "leaders" of the drive.

It is not the intent of my report to involve personality clashes with the drive, but the clashes which did take place unquestionably prevented the drive from being a better drive. It is not enough for one to satisfy oneself with mediocrity. One must reach for the apex of productivity in an endeavor of this nature.

As for the production goes, I think it would be unfair and foolhardy to say that the drive was not productive. It was. The point to emphasize in criticizing the drive is that more damage resulted from it than good, because it almost completely eliminates the possibility of those involved ever working together again as a body of well-organized people.

Most of the participants will not forget the wild and foolish antics of the asinine but truculent Rev. Bennette. Nor will they forget the dictatorial tactics of Jesse Hill. If another drive of this nature is conducted with the latter at the helm of the operation,

I feel it would suffer ineffably.

Mr. Weldon Rougeau
4519 N. W. 15th Avenue
Miami 42, Florida

Dear Weldon:

I am enclosing a memorandum from Barbara Whitaker which she prepared at my request following my telephone conversation with you this morning. I am also enclosing copies of news articles in order that you will have some background concerning the current situation in Charlotte.

Kelly Alexander, a Charlotte funeral director, is president of the North Carolina Conference of Branches, NAACP, and is also chairman of the National Voter Registration Committee on the National Board of NAACP. He is a staunch Republican and he has been very bitter toward Dr. Hawkins' program because the latter is a staunch Democrat. It would be good if you can talk with both Dr. Hawkins and Mr. Alexander without them knowing in the beginning that you are connected with VEP; but I see no reason why you should not subsequently tell them of your connection.

AFL-CIO (COPE) has been giving Dr. Hawkins' group some money. The VEP financial commitment has expired, and it is my understanding that all funds have been spent, and we are not likely to send any additional funds until this controversy is settled.

I would suggest that you check with me by phone before you leave Charlotte so that we can compare notes, and I would like for you to check the situation at Durham and observe our new programs at Enfield and Warrenton. The Enfield program caused me a lot of concern because of the problem of John Salter of SCEF, and we would prefer that we have no dealings with SCEF personnel.

If time permits, you might also check the effectiveness of a SCLC program in eleven eastern North Carolina counties which Golden Frinks supervises, but I do not mean that you should go into each county.

I am enclosing a check for travel advance in the amount of $100, and also an Eastern flight check which you may have need of. You can either fly or take a bus from Charlotte to Durham, and you might want to rent a car in Durham. I assume that you have some kind of credit card which can serve as security for the auto rental. As soon as you get established, you should call and give us some place to contact you.

Very truly yours,

Re: CHARLOTTE, NORTH CAROLINA FIELD TRIP

A cloud of self-restraint seems to be hovering over the city of Charlotte, North Carolina, and Mecklenburg County due to the present controversy over whether Dr. R. A. Hawkins, the militant chairman of the Mecklenburg Organization on Political Affairs, interfered with "the normal process of registration" of Negroes on April 8, 1964.

Hardly anyone who knows anything about "what really happened" wants to discuss it except Dr. Hawkins himself. He claims this is "just election-time pressure from the white power structure due to our productive voter registration drive."

Dr. Hawkins also believes the power structure is doing this to "fool many Negroes" into believing that he should not be associated with in politics because of the present controversy, and thereby weakening Richardson Preyer's (a liberal candidate for governor) campaign. This is partly due to Preyer's being a "Terry Sanford boy." With SBI (State Bureau of Investigation) investigating the matter, what will happen, if anything does, is still an open question, and I personally don't think anyone in Mecklenburg County knows.

It is very apparent that the wrong move in this controversy could be disastrous to the power structure. If Dr. Hawkins is formally charged and im dicted, a storm of counter-action at the ballot boxes by Negroes could certainly turn a havocky trick on the segregationists in Charlotte and other parts of the state.

One is quick to observe that, 1) Dr. Hawkins is no fool or pawn for the white man, 2) He is worshipped by the majority of Negroes I spoke with while I was in Charlotte (cab drivers, people in the streets, waitresses, and many other people), and 3) If he were placed in the "back seat" of the local leadership for awhile, there would be no one presently involved capable of providing militant and constructive leadership.

Note File
W. R.
Field Trips

One of my reasons for going to Charlotte was to find out what I could about the present situation, and Dr. Hawkins' involvement in the campaign.

How does Dr. Hawkins answer a question about his alleged interference with registration? He discusses this with ostensible candor and alacrity. He says, "I did not register anyone as such. I merely held the Bible out while Mrs. Houston [the Negro Deputy Registrar at the place where the alleged "improper" activities took place] administered the oath swearing in twenty-five or thirty persons." He stops there and gives me a thorough examination with his eyes and continues, "I told Mrs. Houston, 'Even if I did do this, there was nothing wrong with it, and your name is on the cards of the people they [Board of Elections] say I registered; that little money they're giving you to get me smeared is not going to change your life as a Negro,' but she hung up her telephone and now refuses to talk to anyone."

I think it is obvious that Dr. Hawkins did something he shouldn't have done according to the Mecklenburg County Board of Elections' laws, which is not unusual where there is neighborhood registration. Many persons who have assisted in conducting neighborhood registration have violated some of the "standing rules" on registration procedure.

Some have been registered individuals from house-to-house without being deputized and in doing so, have waived many requirements such as residence, age, and conviction of a felony. Needless to say, the Boards of Elections, where some of these illegal activities have taken place, are unaware of what has happened, and what continues happening.

Therefore, I would concur with Dr. Hawkins in saying that "everyone should be able to render some kind os service to his local, state, or national governments, even if they [the governments] don't know anything about it." There are times when one must find ways of expediting the registration process to make up for past injustices in voter registration - which we can label as preferential treatment. We need it!

Another reason for my being in Charlotte was to determine whether MOPA is being partisan in the registration of Negroes, as Democrats only. It should be noted that Dr. Hawkins is a staunch Democrat who believes there is "no such thing as a Negro Republican" in Mecklenburg County. The 500 or more Negroes registered as Republicans are "absolutely insignificant" to him.

He did tell me that oftentimes, people are confused about which party they wish to be affiliated with, and their workers will say, "Be a Democrat - that's President Kennedy's party." Many individuals greet this as being partisan while many prospective Negro registrants consider this as being helpful information, due to the lack of political knlwledge they have. However, to a Republican, this would be partisan if a Democrat did this. Then, if he (the Republican) does it, it is no longer partisan because he's helping his party. In my estimation, this is not an outright partisan effort to register only Democrats or Republicans. It depends on who is conducting the drive, and his party affiliation.

Mrs. Samuel Hair, chairman of the county Board of Elections, indicated that many times, workers from MOPA would tell prospective registrants to be Democrats after they had indicated they wanted to be Republicans. If this happened under the above mentioned circumstances, then I feel it was not partisan.

However, if MOPA has been recruiting Negroes to register as Democrats only, then,,of course, this is partisan. I found no apparent indication of anything like that occurring in the Charlotte drganization.

Mrs. Hair refused to comment on the voter registration controversy involving Dr. Hawkins, but she very willingly gave me the registration figures of Negro and white registration since January 1, 1964, which are far more different from MOPA's figures sent to VEP. The figures are as follows:

	WHITE	COLORED
January	228	28
February	145	12
March	285	375
April	660	404
Night Registration (April 6-24):	100	835
Mobile Units (April 18-25):	785	30
Malls and Bank (April 17, 18, 24, and 25):	980	24

Total white during period from Jan-Apr 28, 1964..... 3,183

Total colored during period from Jan-Apr 28, 1964..... 1,708

Total all activities 4,891

Mrs. Hair estimates that there are 15,241 Negroes registered in the county at this time. She also gave me the following figures on Negro registration for the months of September, October, November, and December:

September:	1,060
October:	1,370
November:	1,192
December:	1,000 (Estimate)
TOTAL - - -	4,622

Note: Mrs. Hair had just finished telling me that before January, they did not keep any registration figures by race.

Dr. Hawkins contends that there are 26,000 Negroes registered to vote in Mecklenburg County, and says he has the voter list to prove it. I didn't bother to count the names on the list.

As far as the mechanics of the drive are concerned, Dr. Hawkins does not believe in canvassing because "it doesn't work as well as many people have said." He believes in congronting people in the streets and carrying them to the registration office. This is accomplished by assigning workers to areas at night to knock on doors and encourage people to register and give them transportation. If he has registered as many people as he says, then I suppose he should stick to his present techniques and methods.

I was unable to contact anyone else from the leadership of the Charlotte community. Although I spent about five hours in Mr. Kelly Alexander's office, he never did show up as his secretary said he would. I left Charlotte with the words of one cab driver in my ears: "They're [the whites] trying to mess over our leader, but if they do, we'll fix 'em on May 30."

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Weldon Rougeau

Re: WARRENTON, NORTH CAROLINA FIELD TRIP

On Sunday, May 2, 1964, I spoke with Attorney and Mrs. T. T. Clayton of Warrenton, North Carolina, at their home concerning their newly initiated voter registration project in Warren County.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton indicated that there are approximately 1,400 Negroes registered in Warren County out of a potential of 5,000 or 6,000. White registration is approximately 2,700 out of a potential 3,500.

Negroes in Warren County constitute about 67% of the total population and could very easily have a decisive edge over reactionary whites at the ballot box if the potential Negro vote were fully exercised..With this in mind, they have set a goal of an additional 2,500 by May 16th when the books will close for the May 30 primary.

On the day before (part of the Voter Crusade weekend), I arrived in Warrenton, (May 2), approximately 250 Negroes registered to vote in the county. This total could have been much higher if "....if it had not been for the delaying tactics of the registrars and the stringency maintained in the administration of the literacy test," according to Mrs. Clayton, the director of the project in Warren County.

Registration is held only on Saturdays when the registrats gather at their respective polling places in the county and administer literacy tests on the North Carolina constitution as slowly as possible. This delaying tactic will definitely prove to have anhazardous effect on registration unless details of it can be brought to the attention of the Justice Department, the State Board of Elections, and the news media. I suggested that Mrs. Clayton file complaints with the above mentioned and also notify VEP about anyfiilegal activities of the registrars, police departments, etc. She agreed to do so.

Preparation for Drive:

Mrs. Clayton informed me of their preparations for the drive, and indicated they had started canvassing to determine areas of concentration. Around Arpil 2, 1964, approximately 50 students assisted in this activity and have also been helping mobilize persons to the registration places.

Workshops were held in homes and churches to instruct people how to fill the registration form and practice reading and writing parts of the North Carolina state constitution. This appeared to be planned and conducted very well with many adults assisting in this endeavor.

Mrs. Clayton says that "of eighteen churches asking for workshops, fifteen materialized and were very successful, both in attendance and participation. Ministers at many of the churches cooperated with the workshops and some even helped with the instruction.

A workshop is usually preceded "by an extensive canvassing period a few hours before the workshop is scheduled to begin to arouse people and ask them to come and learn about the registration process with other members of the community."

According to Atty. Clayton, who is a candidate for the state House of Representatives, the business community of Warrenton has been working with the registration drive very enthusiastically. This is very heartening since many small town Negro businessmen eschew identification with registration drives and other forms of social action projects for fear of reprisals against them.

Publicity:

Publicity for the Warren County drive has come from radio stations, newspapers, sound trucks, leaflets, posters, placards, and bumper stickers. Apparently, every form of publicity at their disposal has been utilized to help increase the number of persons attempting to register to vote and it is my opinion that each aspect of this particular activity was well planned.

Conclusion:

Although I was unable to observe the machine of this drive in operation, I feel reasonably certain it is being conducted well and barring any undue frustration on theppart of the people, it should prove to be a productive drive which could in turn have considerable political leverage for Negroes in the county.

However, I feel there should be vigorous action on the part ov VEP to keep police brutality, intimidation, harassment, and delaying tactics from marring the whole drive.

The Justice Department, the governor of North Carolina, the State Board of Elections, and other agencies of the government should be kept informed and persuaded to take vigorous action against the unlawful deeds of the registrars of Warren County. This is an election year, and many people can be embarrassed if the public is made aware of the Mississippi-like tactics of North Carolina.

From: Weldon Rougeau

Re: FIELD TRIP TO ENFIELD, NORTH CAROLINA

Registration in Halifax County began on Saturday, May 2, the day before I visited that area; and according to all accounts was marked by the police and fire departments' harassment, slowdown tactics by registrars, and inevitable discontent and frustration of prospective registrants.

I talked with Messrs. A. Reed Johnson, director of the Halifax Voters Movement, Doug Harris, SNCC field worker, and John Salter, of SCEF, and here is what they told me about registration in Halifax County:

I.

On Saturday, May 2, approximately 500 Negro persons registered to vote in Halifax County. There were only 37 registered in Enfield although approximately 200 were lined up waiting to be registered. In nearly all areas of the county, Negroes turned out in large numbers braving the cold and sporadic rain, only to be subjected to waiting in line and constant harassment from the police department.

At Enfield, police shoved prospective registrants around while they were standing in line, threatened several workers, hurled epithets at them,,and exploded a "stink" bomb in the crowd of people near the courthouse. As a result, many people left and will not easily return to register.

Telegrams were sent to the Justice Department, the governor, the chairman of the State Board of Elections, and the chairman of the Halifax County Board of Elections, protesting the slowdown tactics "....initiated by registrars in the registration of prospective Negro voters...." A copy of the draft sheet for that telegram is attached to this report. (Exhibit #1-D)

I mentioned the need for making information like this known as soon as possible to VEP, in order that pressure can be exerted from this office against these Gestapo-type tactics of the state of North Carolina.

VEP 4-14

The above-mentioned telegram was also sent to UPI for press coverage but was squashed and did not get into the Sunday papers.

II.

In slowing down registration on Saturday, registrars were allowing persons who could not read or write time to try, although it was quite obvious many of them could not do so after attempting to read a few lines. According to Mr. Johnson, ".....one lady was drawing letters trying to pass the literacy test." Upwards of at least 30 minutes were being spent on administering the test to each person.

At Weldon, one unidentified minister reported seeing a registrar filling in a form for a white illiterate lady. Mr. Johnson indicated that people in Weldon were trying to secure the man's name and an affidavit.

Another slow-down tactic in Enfield was put into effect during "lunch time" for the registrar. He left the polling place at 11 a. m., and did not return until 2:30 in the afternoon. Obviously, he went to Greensboro for "lunch."

The workers in the Halifax Voters Movement believe most of the tactics mentioned here will continue until the public is made aware of the many injustices being rendered Negroes in their attempts to register to vote.

III.

The Halifax Voters Movement seemed to be well organized while I was talking with workers and perusing various organizational paraphernalia. I was told it is composed of local organizations "interested in the movement" and trying to help the Negro in Halifax County assert himself politically.

Although this group is composed of local bodies from within the county, John Salter of SCEF and Doug Harris of SNCC seem to have quite a bit of influence in the Halifax Voters Movement. They (John and Doug) didn't tell me there were no national groups involved in this campaign.

However, Mr. Johnson did not want to begin the conversation with me about the organization until Salter and Harris had arrived. When they did arrive, they dominated the discussion. Although I see nothing wrong with this, I am reporting this to you because you did express concern about John Salter's involvement in Enfield. I feel they probably did not want to fully discuss their involvement for fear it would hurt the Enfield program. Furthermore, I do not know if SNCC and SCLC are spending funds in Halifax County, but there must be someone else spending money for the literature on the Negro candidates for public office in Halifax County and state politics. (Note: Exhibit #2).

IV.

I was told that the people in the county are organized on a block-by-block basis, and over 35,000 pieces of literature have been distributed throughout the county. (Note: Exhibits #1-A, #1-B, and #1-C).

There has been organization of "schools" on voting procedure and other kinds of voter education at mass meetings, high schools, and other places in the community. Atleast three "schools" are held each night throughout the county.

A canvassing program coincides with the "schools" on voter education informing people of the need for registration and urging them to form small study groups with their friends and neighbors.

Sound trucks are also being used to publicize "schools," registration on Saturdays, and other news of interest to the people.

Judging from the way these "schools" were explained to me and my previous knowledge and organization of them, I think they are well-organized and proving capable of attracting people to the registration places in Halifax County. It is still unknown if they will continue drawing people closer to registration if the present tactics of the registrars continue discoureging people from registering at certain precincts in the county.

V.

There is presently an attempt being made to obtain the registration books on weekdays by members of the Halifax Voters Movement through a Mr.John Winters, councilman from Raleigh. Mr. Winters is supposedly contacting members of the state Board of Elections through Governor Terry Sanford to persuade the county Board of Elections to make night registration available to everyone in the county.

VI.

From all indications, this is a good project, and I feel certain it can be successful if proper steps are taken to publicize the harassment and other obstacles being rendered the people of Halifax County.

I cannot comment on the participation of John Salter, because I feel this is an administrative problem which I am not familiar with. Therefore, it should be handled by those concerned and involved in policy-making.

However, I will say that I do not think John Salter or Doug Harris is hurting the project from my observations. But, there is always a possibility of some damaging blow being dealt the project if the desired exclusion of SCEF personnel is not handled tactfully. Personally, I think the people in the Halifax Voters Movement confide in Salter and Harris.

From a standpoint of helping the drive for new voters there, it is, in my opinion, very important that VEP use whatever influence at its disposal to inform the proper governmental and news agencies of the actions of the registrars, police, and fire departments of Halifax County as soon as possible.

Dear Wiley:

I presume you have read my reports on the North Carolina field trip by now if you have been in the office. The trip was very interesting and I hope I was reasonably fair in meting out praise as well as criticism in each area I visited.

In my opinion, the situation in Enfield thretens to worsen if something is not done to correct it as soon as possible. Perhaps I am being presumptuous, but I feel it has great catastrophic potential.

Jim McCain informs me that no VEP funds were given for the Miami area in the latest grant CORE received. Is someone else going to be working here? If so, I would be very glad to give whatever information and names of good working contacts I have to the person(s) assigned to the area.

My very best wishes to you and your family.

From: Weldon Rougeau

Re: DURHAM, NORTH CAROLINA FIELD TRIP

My first contact in Durham, North Carolina, was Dr. C. Elwood Boulware, Executive Secretary of the Durham Committee on Negro Affairs, who was very pleasant and congenial with me through our entire conversation.

Dr. Boulware informed me of Mr. John Edwards, NAACP field man for the state of North Carolina, who has been working jointly with DCNA for two months. He spoke very highly of Mr. Edwards who has acted as coordinator of activities during the drive for new voters in Durham County. I did not see Mr. Edwards while in Durham because he was out of town on a field assignment.

Dr. Boulware stated that 1,000 Negroes were registered last year by DCNA and that since 1962, 10,000 have been placed on the books. He called the report of the Project Director of VEP "erroneous" in saying that only 3,500 persons had been registered by DCNA. Mr. John Wheeler, the chairman of DCNA also made a similar comment and based the 10,000 registration figure on the fact that "in 1962, the registration rolls were purged and everyone had to re-register. DCNA was the main body responsible for getting those people back on the rolls." There are approximately 12,000 Negroes now registered in Durham County.

Organizational Preparation:

The DCNA obtained the voter list of the county at the inception of their campaign to increase Negro registration. They then went to the city directory and compared each list to find the names and addresses of unregistered persons in the city and county.

Students were in the field making personal contact with people and urging them to register after the registration list had been compiled by an IBM machine with cards for each block. Each person was given cards for his area and was responsible for contacting the people in his block, precinct, etc. According to Dr. Boulware and Mr. Wheeler, this was very effective and is a good way of keeping up-to-date records of voter movement in the county.

This year, more emphasis is being placed on the registration of people who live in the county because most of the people in the city are registered - according to Dr. Boulware.

Dr. Wurfel of the Political Science department at North Carolina College at Durham has engaged her students in a special project on voter registration. It is believed that the work done by the students there will increase productively and possibly raise the number of registered Negroes to 14,000 by May 16, 1964.

Publicity:

3,000 letters accompanied by a leaflet which is attached to this report, were sent to people in the county urging everyone to register on May 2, 9, and 16. I do not like the leaflet due to its lack of information, such as addresses of precinct locations for registration. I further believe it is not specific enough in telling people to "strike a telling blow for Freedom." Dr. Boulware admitted it could be improved.

There has been very little radio and no television publicity. The newspapers have carried full-page ads on registration, and it is believed to be very effective.

A great deal of emphasis has been placed on getting organizations in Durham County interested and active in the registration drive. According to Dr. Boulware, this is being done by sending members of a Speaker's Bureau (about 30 men and women) to speak at labor, civic, PTA, and other meetings, to convey the particulars of the registration drive to the public.

After speaking before a group, that body is asked to participate in the drive, and get its membership to involve itself. From that point on, whether a group previously contacted engages its members in the drive, is left up to the group itself.

I was confused at this point because I was told DCNA was a group composed of community organizations and I can't understand why a matter as important as prticipation has to be left up to a particular group when the group is a part of DCNA.

However, I was told this was an effective way of reaching the people.

I asked Dr. Boulware if these tactics were reaching the lower class Negro, who for the most part, is not a member of these bourgeois groups. He could not answer me satisfactorily. He said members of organizations were doing their job in contacting people in the community. I am very skeptical about the effectiveness of such a "jelly-like" organization.

Neighborhood Registration:

I am of the impression that Dr. Boulware does not wish to antagnonize the whites in the county Board of Elections by asking for neighborhood registration. I base this primarily on the way he answered my queries on the possibility of night registration. He stated that for the last ten years, the county has shunned neighborhood registration for "unknown reasons." (They don't want Negroes to vote en masse - that's one of the unknown reasons.)

I honestly don't believe an earnest attempt has been made to procure night neighborhood registration for the Negroes of the county. If there has been an attempt made, it was not discernible through Dr. Boulware's conversation.

Perhaps I should clear up one thing at this point. That is that theoretically speaking, there is neighborhood registration in Durham County. Registration is conducted at polling places in the county, but only on Saturdays during the day. The inconvenience in registering could virtually be eradicated by holding night registration.

Summation:

There are many perturbing aspects enshrouding the Durham drive, and I feel impelled to criticize it from an observational standpoint.

Although there has supposedly been much progress made, I still feel the drive has faltered in publicity, organizational mechanics, and in the lack of an attempt to procure night registration.

It is my belief that in being laconic in the summation of this report, the areas which can and should be improved are sufficiently discussed for one to make proper recommendations to the group(s) alluded to in this report.

Dear Weldon:

I have read your North Carolina field reports and I must continue to commend you for the very excellent manner in which you have been performing these special assignments. Preliminary reports revealed that Negro registration has taken a big leap since January 1 of this year and has now reached the two-million mark in the South.

It appears that Mrs. Clayton followed your suggestions in Warren County and has filed a complaint. I released a statement this morning to the "New York Times" concerning the intimidation in Warren and Halifax Counties and perhaps the glare of ~~unfair~~ unfavorable publicity will be of some help.

I am enclosing a recent article from the "Atlanta Journal and Constitution" which I am sure you will find of interest. Would you please check with Elmer A. Ward who is reported to be vice president of the Florida Voters League and see what information you can get regarding any program of the league in voter registration, together with names and addresses of the principle officers. I talked with Marvin Rich on the phone and told him that VEP would not hesitate to make CORE a grant for Miami if you were going to be there, but we did not feel that they had anyone else to do the kind of work which you have done. I would appreciate your letting me know your true feelings regarding future registration programs in Miami and I assure you that it can be kept confidential if you would prefer. I would also like to know if you will have anymore time that you can devote to special VEP assignments.

Very truly yours,

File: Joe [illegible] Field Trip [illegible]

TO: WAB
FROM: JT & JD
RE: Field Trip to South Carolina, August 10-12, 1964

(JT) INTRODUCTION

WAB first decided to send me along on this field trip, then later decided to send JD also. In a conference prior to the trip with us, WAB stated specific questions and situations he wanted us to seek answers to. He stated his thoughts and suggestions that we, if possible, make to the various county chairmen concerning the operation of VEP programs under their guidance. WAB's main or most important suggestion, with emphasis, was for each county chairman to keep at least $50.00 petty cash on hand so as to expedite small expenditures quickly.

We were asked to seek specific answers to the following questions in:

First Congressional District:

WAB asked us to visit in Charleston, S. C., with Mr. Esau Jenkins, a county leader in this district. Here, we wanted to know whether the program was working; how many people were registered; number of volunteer workers; take a look at his records; and make this a routine visit.

Second Congressional District:

1. Visit with the students at the Summer Project sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee; see what they are doing; and inquire as to the results of their program and how effective is it.
2. In Columbia, S. C., talk with Dr. I. DeQuincy Newman, district chairman. Nothing special, how are voter registration programs doing; what are their results; and ask for questions, complaints, etc.

Third Congressional District:

1. Talk with Rev. S. R. McCain, North Augusta, S. C., about the general VEP program in his district.
2. Ask Rev. Rich did he ever work out a budget.
3. Check Rev. McCain's records, nothing special, just a routine check.
4. Use your (JT & JD) own judgment in talking with Rev. McCain about the VEP project in the third district.

Fourth Congressional District:

1. Have there been any changes in the programs?
2. Are all counties working effectively under VEP?
3. Pass on to the fourth district chairman that the VEP office will send them $1,300 sometime this week.
4. Check with Rev. Brockman in Greenville.
5. Call Mr. Haile and get names of county leaders.

Fifth Congressional District:

1. Check and see what voter registration activity is going on in the various counties.
2. Check with county leaders; how is the VEP program working or moving?
3. Point out to them (the county chairmen) that they are due some money. If they are working in their respective counties, we will send them more financial assistance.
4. See what's going on in voter registration at Rock Hill, S. C.
5. Find out just how are the counties working with the other counties in the Fifth Congressional District.
6. Get a list of county leaders and their addresses.

WAB asked that we bring back to him a general picture of voter registration programs in South Carolina so that he may determine whether additional financial assistance is needed. The registration books will be open again in September for the state of South Carolina.

(JD)

Athens, Georgia - Monday Afternoon

Joe Tucker and I arrived in Athens, Georgia approximately 5 P.M. Whereas our purpose was at first to determine who was sending us the reports, and during our last few moments in the office, we found that the person who was sending the reports was Mr. E. C. Gardner, we decided that to only pay a courtesy call to Mr. Gardner and then continue on to S. C. in order to meet with Rev. Joseph Rich, the Anderson County director.

Mr. E. C. Gardner's address is 1495 E. Broad St., Athens, and his phone number is 67001. When we arrived, we introduced ourselves and were cordially welcomed. He offered that the registration effort in Athens is an NAACP operation by its political action committee. Expenses and income for voter registration are not kept in a separate account. Their manner of operation is to pay Negro taxis for taking people to be registered. A taxi driver will present a list of the persons who they have taken, including information such as the person's place of residence, and they charge a reasonable price. Mr. Gardner said that the taxis do not charge as much as the regular rate because they, too, say that they are part of the movement. Nevertheless, I concluded that since there is no standard rate, such as $.25 a head, this way of making a profit stimulates the Negro taxis to cooperate in the registration campaign, working with the Negro barbershops and beauty parlors.

Mr. Gardner has no "title," and he says that he just works in registration, but agreeing that he is a coordinator, if not so designated. He informed us that the president of the NAACP is Rev. W. Hudson.

Anderson, S. C. - Monday Night:

We arrived in Anderson around 7:30 P.M. Monday. We tried to reach Rev. Rich from Athens, but he was not available. Joe and I remained in Athens to eat dinner, hoping to catch him later, but by 9 P.M., he never appeared. Nevertheless, we met an acknowledgeable young man who knew the names of the local leaders. Before we left Anderson, we contacted the president of the local chapter of the NAACP and gave him the information about our concern in relation to Rev. Rich drawing up a budget for which we could support. The president indicated that Rev. Rich had been out of town and he did not know when he would return.

JT and I then left Anderson and arrived at the Ghana Motel, a Negro motel in Greenville. Because of the inferior accommodations there and because the newly integrated motels either "have no accommodations" or "desire not to desegregate," JT and I strongly advise one who is a Negro working in the field to phone ahead and make reservations.

Fourth Congressional District - Greenville, Spartanburg, and Laurens
Tuesday A.M. & P.M.

After remaining in the office of the Greenville Voter Registration and Education Committee until about 11 A.M., Rev. Brockman, having a carload of people to be registered, came to the office. We gave him WAB's message concerning the second allotment. Because we were mainly interested in the other two counties, Laurens and Spartanburg, we did not remain in Greenville long. Rev. Brockman indicated that he never had been able to get in contact with Rev. Johnson, the president of the Spartanburg registration committee. Rev. Brockman then said that in almost despair, he finally told his troubles to Atty. Thompson in Spartanburg. Atty. Thompson expressed great surprise and had no knowledge of any role Spartanburg could play in voter registration. He set up a meeting with himself, Brockman attending, along with Mr. Williams of North Carolina Mutual, (see previous report) and Dr. Bulldale, a Negro. This meeting was held during the first of August.

Rev. Brockman said that Mr. Williams surprisingly expressed reluctance that Spartanburg be involved in the program, fearing that VEP and Non-Spartanburg people would control the community. Rev. Brockman insisted that he or no one else would control their community and that it was they who are to organize and direct the program. Mr. Williams then was persuaded and the Spartanburg people became enthusiastic about the program. Mrs. Hattie G. Barksdale, a middle aged housewife, was hired as county director who hired Mrs. Moke as a secretary. The Spartanburg office was set up on 267 N. Converse, in the Silver Hill Methodist Church, phone number: 585-2039. Mrs. Barksdale's residential phone number is 833-1836.

Rev. Brockman said that Laurens County is performing quite nicely and is directed by Prof. J. T. W. Mims, 232 S. Livingston St., Clinton, S. C. Therefore, JT and I decided to visit Clinton and Spartanburg before going through the Fifth District and then stopping in Columbia for the night. From the Greenville office, I called Prof. Mims and Mrs. Barksdale and made appointments to see them that afternoon. I also tried to contact Frank Robinson, W. Brown, and Mr. Haile, the latter being the Fifth District President, but was told that he was attending an undertaker's meeting in Kingstree and may be back in Camden late that night.

Approximately 12:30 P.M., we arrived at the home office of Laurens County. Rev. Mims had not as of yet arrived from the post office, but there to meet us was Mrs. Emma Hunter, the Laurens County secretary. The office was equipped with a telephone, mimeograph machine, and other necessary incidents. We looked at their records and forms. A typical example of their finances includes $25 a week for Rev. Aureton, a daily supervisor, whose job it is to be at the registration office and assist and observe; $25 a week for Prof. Mims, an education director; $35 a week for Mrs. Emma Hunter as secretary; $.08 per mile for the transportation pool; and $.10 per family that is contacted.

We learned from Prof. Mims that he is a retired school principal and is president of the Negro Teachers Association, the party which sued for equal pay several years ago which influenced him to resign.

He indicated that the registrar told him that more than 500 persons have registered and that 90% were Negro, since August 3. We indicated to him that we planned to visit Spartanburg and then take a quick trip through the Fifth Congressional District and stopping briefly in Gaffney, Rockhill, Chester, Lancaster, and Camden before going to Columbia. Prof. Mims, because of being a principal in Rockhill several years, was able to give the names of local leaders there, which include Rev. R. G. Totely, Rev. W. B. Knox, president of the NAACP, Dr. Dewey Duckett, who is on the board of the South Carolina Human Relations Council, and Rev. LLloyd Morris. For Chester, he told me to see the Farm Demonstration Agent.

Prof. Mims then invited me to speak at a meeting to be held in Laurens County sometime in early September, which is to be both a worship of voter education series and a celebration for their efforts in voter registration. After an enjoyable discussion, we took our leave and then drove on to Spartanburg and made our appointment with Mrs. Barksdale for 3 P.M.

Mrs. Barksdale and her secretary were waiting for us. It was soon apparent that she had no prior experience in voter registration nor was being directly assisted by anyone who had prior experience. However, she was working and sincerely trying. She has a quite sufficient office in the Silver Hill Methodist Church and has the right to use any of the utilities of the church. She told me the manner in which she was appointed. She attended the meeting which Rev. Brockman had set up, which I mentioned earlier in this report. After the meeting, she said out loud that she was going to work and register anybody she sees, and Dr. Bulldale overheard her, and through him, she was appointed. Her records were very scant. She said that everything was in her head, but then asked me whether it would be allright for everyone to not report until after the books close.

I told her that as far as reporting, etc., Rev. Brockman is responsible to VEP. Therefore, she should try to report the way he wanted her to report. However, there should be some manner of daily reporting to her so that she could determine who is working and who is not working so that she can know of anybody who is actually being registered, (which she did not know), so that she can make some changes if necessary. We then left Spartanburg around 4 P.M. on our way to Chester, S. C. Because it was so late at this time, we decided to skip going through Gaffney. When we arrived in Chester, it was nearly 6 P.M.

Fifth Congressional District - Chester, S. C.--Tuesday Afternoon

After arriving in Chester, we found the name of the Farm Demonstration Agent and went to his home, but he was not there. His name is M. M. Sitton, 40 Jetter Street, home phone number: 385-3804, and 385-5592 is his office number which is located at 121½ Gadsden Street. We then drove arount to a Negro business district and found that the president of the NAACP in Chester is Rev. H. B. Brewer, who was active in taking people to be registered. We called his number, but there was no answer. His address is 130 Bailey and his phone number is 385-3698. We then left Chester, going to Rockhill, S. C.

Rockhill (5th District) - Tuesday Night

When we arrived in Rockhill, we noticed that this was a fair-sized town with a well-defined Negro business street of several blocks. We found the addresses and phone numbers of Rev. Totely, 927 Crawford Road, phone number, 327-4222; and Rev. W. B. Knox, 307 W. Moore, phone number, 327-7339. We went to both homes. We were only able to talk to the 18 year old son of Rev. Knox. He said he knew of no voter registration activity.

JT and I were about to conclude that there was novvoter registration activity going on in Rockhill and had almost decided to drive on to Camden before it would be too late. But still not remaining assured that voter registration activity was not going on, we felt that we had to support this finding from the Negro on the streets on the Negro block.

We stopped at a Negro barbershop and asked a young barber whether there was being conducted a voter registration drive. He said that some man with a college age youth had been going around all week asking people whether or not they were registered and taking them downtown. This sounded like Frank Robinson or William Brown of CORE. He was able to find out that Brown was in town and find where he was.

It was now after 7 P.M. when Joe and I passed a parked car that fitted the description we were given. We met Rev. Lloyd Morris, with whom Brown was having dinner. Rev. Morris is a young minister who is the local person in charge of the voter registration drive in Rockhill. His address is 442 Ray Street, phone number, 327-3916. The youth who are involved in voter registration and canvassing were associated with those who, several years ago, were involved in sit-ins and demonstrations under Rev. Morris' predecessor. The work in Rockhill is of a low-gear quality, the workers being only about ten youth and being handicapped by a shortage of cars. It seems that Brown got to Rockhill too late to organize for the 10-day registration with the results similar to his and Robinson's results in Spartanburg.

I told him that we were trying to visit the counties in the Fifth Congressional District and found the names of the county leaders and directors in this district. Brown happened to have a list with them which Mr. Haile gave him which I indicate below:

G

Gaffney

There was no organization, but the contacts there were:

Rev. A. W. Goforthly
S. Johnson St.
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: I.V. 9-5669

Rev. M. L. Roberts
619 Borad Street
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: I.V. 9-8953

Rev. J. W. Saunders
330 W. Meadow St.
Gaffney, S. C.
Phone: 9-2180

Chester

Brown stated that he knew of no Sitton or Brewer, but that the inspired person who is working hard in that area and had just registered 300 people without VEM.Support (He had just returned from there.) is Mrs. Jean D. Hynson, 146 Loomis Street.

Lancaster

This is an area which Brown is going to visit this week, (August 3-7), and which is of interest to him because of the leader there who ran for council. His name is Reddick L. Martin, office phone: AL 3-4018, residence phone: AL 3-1439. Other contacts are Mrs. F. Funderburke, Funderburke Funeral Home, and Rev. C. M. Smith.

Chesterfield

Brown says that this area is where there is an active group in existence, but it is not receiving funds from VEP. The contact there is Mr. Joe Morris, 284 Second Street, Cherow, S. C. Brown did not know the name of the person who is a contact in York County except that the person there is a minister; and in Union County, the contact person there is Dr. Long (See VEP files for address).

Brown said that there are only three counties which receive direct assistance from VEP funds, which are Kershaw, Winnsboro and Camden.

Dr. C. H. Thomas, State Director

It now being late, we cancelled out the trip to Camden and other counties, driving to Columbia for the night and then arriving in Orangeburg on Wednesday. We had a chat with Dr. Thomas. He was concerned about the continuance of the statewide registration program after it went out of existence, and that it would all be a wasted effort if they had no support for having a continuing existence. He showed us the plans for assessing each county on a Negro population basis which would result in $.15 for each Negro for a $15,000 budget. They have been promised $4,000 from the Presbyterian Church, but this would be insufficient because of their needing an office and a staff. He therefore hoped that VEP would assist in supporting their effort. I asked him about how they were going to get as a field secretary and how. He said that they are establishing qualifications, but that they are still bothered about the questions--whether to get a Negro, and about the sex of the person. (One of the persons from the Friends group has offered his services.)

American Friends Group - Wednesday Afternoon

Dr. Thomas then directed us to the "Freedom House" where the American Friends student group was located. The house was located in a Negro neighborhood, but there remained in this same neighborhood homes occupied by white families, which is typical in many areas in the South. The house itself was a non-new prewar two-story house which was clean and neat. It was rented for the period of the AFS work in Orangeburg County for their use. They use it both as a place of residence and as an office.

As an office, they have space in the corner of the dining room which is used for the card file records, other file records and a table for holding their publicity matter. What I thought was quite unique is that use of their personnel office use is very low priority. They do not have a phone although they have the right to use their close-by neighbor's phone. Therefore, a phone plays an insignificant part in their operation, and this frees their people to work in the field rather than to answer a phone. This suggests that a phone may not be absolutely or even practically necessary for a voter education project.

The AFS group consists of nine youth and young adults integrated sexually and racially (one Negro girl), a dietician and a chaperon. Their director is a white young adult in his middle or latertwenties by the name of Pickens Moore. Assisting from the community are 15 college age youth from South Carolina State Teachers College, a Negro institution. This total of 24 persons is broken down into four teams, each team assigned to one of four areas into which the county is broken. For their use, they have five cars, four of which were donated to the community for their use and one belonging to Mr. Pickens Moore.

I interviewed six workers from various teams and Mr. Moore. A team's typical day during the August registration period is to fan out to their particular area at 8 A.M. and organize the Negroes for immediate transportation to the registration office. When the registration day terminates, they then begin a period of canvassing around 8 or 9 P.M. After it finishes canvassing for the day, the team then conducts a voter education workshop-mass meeting or attends a revival meeting in the area, the latter taking priority in order to avoid conflict. After the meeting, the teams return to the Freedom House tired (sometimes after midnight).

Their procedure of canvassing is unique. Each worker has a set of 5 x 8 cards which he takes with him which he or she identifies by ward and precinct, etc. Again, this puts more workers in the field rather than in the office. I have observed other ggroups who have forms for their canvass workers which they fill out and then return to the office. Office personnel is then needed to transcribe the information on the cards. AFS workers eliminate this necessity for office overhead.

Before a team hits a part of their area, they are in contact and communication with the local precinct chairman who gives them the "key" to the particular area by introducing the team to other local leaders and contacts, and who briefs them upon their expected behavior and about the reaction of the local white power structure. Accessibility in the area is a success because of Orangeburg being highly organized voter education wise due to prior VEP support, Mr. Thomas, State VEP Director, and Mr. McPherson, director for Orangeburg. After the initial contact, they have an interview with the local enforcement officials whereby they introduce themselves and indicate their purpose and frankly ask for protection. The response has varied from the promise of protection to the moderately negative response, "I don't like you people being here, but I can't stop you from being here." Assistance, as I gather from their talk, from the local area leaders varies from vocal support and assistance at workshops to actual accompaniment on canvassing missions. They have had no transportation problems or needs in getting community support in this manner.

On their door-to-door canvassing ventures, they work on a sexually integrated basis but not on a racial basis (such as Black boy-White girl patrols). When a resident answers their knock, they introduce themselves as volunteer workers assisting the Mr. _____or Mrs._____, (the local resident voter registration leader). Their purpose is to identify with the local community as much as possible to establish rapport. They will not voluntarily offer to the local resident the American Friends organization, yet they willnot avoid discussion if the resident or other persons request discussion. They relate exactly why they are in their area--"We are here to register Negroes." They briefly explain South Carolina Laws about voter registration--"You can register in August only between now and August 15, this coming Saturday at noon." But time is not spent so much on education as it on establishing a desire or curiosity on the part of the resident. So the team or patrol will explain why the local resident must register--from a bacon-and-grits basis to relating them to Goldwater and Johnson, (or local political contests.).

Because little steps are easier to take than giant steps (going down to the Courthouse to register), the team will request the local resident to attend a local mass meeting. The mass meeting is a workshop to educate the local residents about the techniques of registration and voting, and the issues and the personalities. If the resident is in a true rural area distant from other residents and not able to attend the mass meeting, a personal workshop is given to the resident right there, but the resident is encouraged to attend the mass meeting for obvious reasons.

At a typical mass meeting, (A team holds several in a week in an area, and if there is a revival meeting being held, a meeting may be held right at the end of the revival meeting or be incorporated as a part of the revival meeting.) the service is opened by the presiding or local minister by prayer and followed by hymns. Then they have an inspiring speaker from the Orangeburg area who is an expert in the use of emotion. Sample registration forms are then passed out and everyone is instructed on the use of the forms. Then the candidates from the various parties give their speeches, i.e., President Johnson, Senator Barry Goldwater, and the local candidates, etc. (Team workers are trained in the personalities and the issues and have studied all the pertinent speeches of the candidates.) The team worker will either give one of the already published speeches or give an improvised speech based on the philosophies and speech technique of the candidate. The people are then educated about the techniques of marking a ballot. Sample ballots are distributed. An election is then held, using all the products of a regular election such as poll watchers, etc. The count is totaled and results are given, and the meeting is terminated by prayer.

The mass meetings have varied from 6 to 120. The AFS unique use of the mass meeting technique for a workshop cannot help but stimulate the participants to register and then vote and provide the little step which makes the step to true voter participation by the Negro easier.

The results of the program seem to average about 150 per day. A total of 169 persons were registered the previous day.

Charleston, S. C. - Wednesday Afternoon

After we left the Friends group, we then went to Charleston. We decided that there was need for us to split up after it was determined that I would not be able to see McCain in the Third Congressional District until late in the evening.

In Charleston, we found the office of the Citizens Committee and Registration Committee and waited for Mr. Esau Jenkins, who was busy transporting people to be registered in his bus (VW). He indicated that he had received $600 from VEP which is the account held for him by Mr. Fleming, and has received a direct grant from SCLC and assistance from the Highlander Folk School, the latter being used in his Adult Education in Citizenship series which was held last month on the island. He indicated that three teachers are responsible to him who receive $3.00 per hour. His coordinator receives $25 per week, as does himself.

We left Charleston and arrived to meet with Rev. McCain around 11 P.M. Wednesday.

JT's Personal Conclusion to S. C. Field Trip

The trip proved to be very interesting and informative. It was an awakening experience to meet and see in action other people interested in voter registration. They all seemed sincere and interested in their work and moved about their duties with a great amount of dedication and tenacity.

The VEP car was used as our mode of travel. It performed exceedingly well. The mileage meter showed that we covered a total of 958 miles. When we returned, the condition of the car mechanically wise was good. After making the field trip, I am even more so impressed with the Voter Education Project, its goals, its operation, and its leaders.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Joe L. Tucker

Re: Field Trip to Virginia August 17-20, 1964
(Tidewater Section: Norfolk, Newport News, Portsmouth, & Suffolk.)

INTRODUCTION

After a local phone conversation Sunday, it was decided by WAB that I should make a field trip to Virginia. Monday about noon, after receiving instructions from WAB via long distance, the trip was underway.

Upon reaching Norfolk, WAB suggested I contact Arthur Freeman, director of the Tidewater Voter Registration Project, so that he may furnish me transportation, if possible, in the Tidewater area.

WAB asked that I find out what the TVRP was doing; what now is going on in voter registration in the area, and other routine questions necessary to get a complete picture of the workings of this project in and around Norfolk.

WAB asked me to contact J. Hugo Madison, talk with him privately and see if the committee is agreeable to have Arthur T. Freeman continue as director.

While in Norfolk, WAB asked me to take along and give to Staige Blackford, a reporter for the Virginia Pilot, a copy of the Second Annual Report.

To see Mr. Young, editor of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, and ask him if, in his opinion, could Norfolk make use of additional money; ask why WAB hasn't heard from the board; ask Mr. Young about a rumor WAB heard that there was some dissatisfaction with Freeman as director of the Tidewater Voter Registration Project.

Newport News, Virginia:

WAB asked me to contact Mrs. Norleavte Downing, executive secretary of the Peninsula Coordinating Committee, and talk with her about the program, and look at her records and methods of promoting voter registration in Newport News and other areas coverd by the PCC.

Portsmouth:

WAB asked me to contact David Muckle of the Central City Forum. Ask him to get Dr. Holly to send WAB the information so a grant can be made. Ask Mr. Muckle what are his thoughts about Moses Riddick - maybe extending his activing into this area, then an additional grant being made to him.

Suffolk:

Contact Moses Riddick, check his program, see what he is doing, find out how many people he is getting registered at this time. Make him aware tactfully, that VEP isn't supposed to send him any more funds. Ask Mr. Riddick does he know what's been going on throughout the Fourth Congressional District in voter registration.

Petersburg, Virginia:

These instructions came to me via long distance from WAB through Janet Shortt:

WAB asked that I contact David Gunter in Petersburg and inquire into the activities of the Fourth Congressional District voter registration committee. Contact S. W. Tucker for further explanations on voter registration in the Fourth District. Talk with Herbert Coulton, SCLC director in ~~Richmond~~ Petersburg, check his program, methods used to register people, and some idea of voter registration activity in the Fourth District.

Richmond, Virginia: WAB asked me to contact John Brooks, NAACP director in Richmond, and talk to him about ~~the special~~ any project he is doing in connection ~~with VEP.~~ VOTER REGISTRATION IN VA.

NORFOLK, VIRGINIA: VEP 3-8

Freeman was able to furnish me with transportation in and around Norfolk.

Dr. Coppage is a TVRP board member, who wants to keep the voter drive going when VEP closes. They will have a meeting to discuss this matter Sat., August 22. Freeman plans to continue voter registration on a part-time basis. Freeman said the registrar's office wasn't open on Saturday, and it slowed up registration. The use of blank registration registration sheets is a factor, too. The TVRP seems to be moving with no immediate problems, except a need for more funds. I told Freeman to submit a budget. He said he doesn't get a salary as county director, due to his own choice. The big thing in Norfolk at this time seems to be activity in winding up the loose ends of the student YWCA project. Freeman has duplicates of all the records and its his job, he says, to compile the material. A partial report is in to the VEP office, with the final report to follow. Freeman can't seem to get enough adult volunteer workers. He has plenty of young people, but lacks adult help. He admits that this is a problem. Freeman feels that the "beat Goldwater" emphasis* has helped his voter registration program immensely. Everybody wants to register, then vote against Goldwater.

I helped Freeman and Miss Gardner, director of the YWCA project, set up their press conference for Tuesday evening (see attached clip from the Virginia Pilot done by Staige Blackford) which gave a summary of the YWCA project and its accomplishments during its existence.

Mrs. Arthur Freeman, who is secretary of the TVRP, talked with me befor Mr. Freeman arrived. She said the National Student YWCA sponsored a voter registration drive in Norfolk for five weeks. (June 19-August 14, 1964). In a two-week period, this group interspersed with Freeman's TVRP volunteers registered 2,564 people. The figure will probably be larger when all the statistics are compiled, and totaled. Other organizations in Norfolk are active in voter registration. Earlier this summer, the Jaycees sponsored a voter drive. The TVRP has about 20 volunteer workers a week. A lot of people register and don't let the TVRP know about it. It was suggested that the office place a worker in the courthouse to record names and addresses of the people who have registered each day. The YWCA project was directed by Miss Rosetta Gardner of the National YWCA whose offices are in Atlanta at 41 Exchange Place.

Addresses;

Dr. Coopage (Dentist) - 704 Church Street, Norfolk, Virginia; Office - MA7-7821

Arthur Freeman, Director - Tidewater Voter Registration Project, 812 Wood Street, MA7-0655, office.

J. Hugo Madison: Mr. Madison feels fervently that the committee doesn't want Freeman as director any more. Madison said Freeman became engaged in partisan politics, and the people didn't like this at all. Madison gave me contact names: Dr. Brown in Nofrolk and Atty. Overton in Portsmouth.

*This emphasis was placed by other organizations running voter registration programs, Mr. Freeman indicated.

Dr. Brown is in accord with Madison, and further stated that, "The best thing to do is close the project, and start over again, because Atlanta VEP is just throwing away money." Madison thinks a directive should be made to suspend expenditures of funds. Everything another organization does to register people, Freeman tries to claim the credit, while he's not doing anything himself. The adult leadership in the community has refused to follow Freeman's leadership. Brown and Madison feel the program could be much more effective if it had another director. Madison gave me another contact name: Robert Hagens, treasurer of TVRP.

Hagans feels there is a lot of work to be done here in Norfolk, but the organization needs to be reorganized. He expressed the same dissatisfaction with Freeman, as did others I've talked to - namely Brown and Madison. (Note: the people I've talked to in Norfolk feel that Billy Robinson, a political science instructor at a small local college could get the job done. I understand he was co-chairman of TVRP, but never got a chance to run the project.) Hagens again interjected his opinion that the TVRP board had lost interest because of Freeman's activity in partisan politics.

Mr. Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, said he hasn't heard anything about Freeman. A friend, Winston Douglas, chairman of the board for TVRP has heard a few remarks. The board hasn't met in 3 or 4 months. Young can't really say until he knows more facts, whether more money is needed or not. He doesn't know how the present money was spent. The only dissatisfaction he's heard with Freeman was due to his influencial participating in a city council election campaign for a certain candidate. Young feels Freeman lacks the necessary ability to corral and lead adults. He is fine with young people. Young will write WAB after he talks with a few people, and let him know what's happening from a more enlightened point of view. Young said Billy Robinson has taken more or less a back seat, and left the project alone.

Staige Blackford: As per WAB's instructions, a copy of the Second Annual Report was personally given to Staige, and he seemed very happy to receive it. Staige has plans to do a story on VEP, and tie-in the TVRP. He said he may be calling on us for help.

NEWPORT NEWS, VIRGINIA: VEP 3-9

Mrs. Norvleate Downing seems to have a productive program in process. She feels she is handicapped in voter registration in her area because: the registrar's office isn't open on Saturday nor at night, and the fact that regardless how many people they register before Oct.3 for federal elections, these same people will have to register again and pay poll tax to be eligible to vote in state and county elections.

Mrs. Downing is somewhat depressed because of these situations, but has girded herself to the task and is willing to give her best. The PCC recently conducted a "new money" contest. They sold chances at 10¢ each toward winning a new $100 bill. The PCC raised over $300 for their efforts. The PCC works in other areas besides voter registration. They are active in housing, employment, and other weaknesses that exist in the community, and need organized groups' attention for their correction. VEP funds are kept strictly for voter registration and nothing else. Although it is not to be made known to the general public at this time, but Mrs. Downing told me of a vacancy that will occur for registrar in Newport News sometime in January, and she tentatively plans to run for that position. She said she had the backing of some other civic groups in Newport News.

PORTSMOUTH, VIRGINIA -CENTRAL CITY FORUM (Grant not completed as yet. js)

David Muckle was out of town and could not be reached. J. Hugo Madison suggested I contact Atty. James Overton, who said the CCF wasn't doing much of anything right now because they are just getting reorganized under new leadership with Dr. James Holly as president. The CCF is the clearing house of the seven civic leagues in Portsmouth. The civic league directors make up the executive board of the CCF. Dr. Holly will send the information WAB requested , namely the financial information, so the grant procedure can be complete. WAB's question about Riddick was put to Dr. Holly who requested a direct grant since the CCF is organizing and pointing ahead in the right direction. Dr. Holly said they would need more money, and I told him to submit a budget. I attended the final organizational meeting of the CCF. They are organized seemingly with good leadership, and can possibly promote voter registration. Dr. Holly predicts they will have at least 5,000 registrants on the books by October 3, 1964. Dr. Holly asked me to send him a copy of the Second Annual Report. Holly feels the potential is there among the people of Portsmouth to turn out in large numbers to register and vote. Holly didn't know too much about the background of VEP. I gave him a copy of the First Annual Report, and he is to receive the second one when I get to the office. (Note: It has been mailed out.)

While in attendance at the CCF meeting, I was introduced to the people present, and made a few remarks about voter registration, along with suggestions here and there. A reporter from the Journal and Guide took a publicity shot (me included) to give the CCF a little publicity in the Norfolk Journal and Guide.

SUFFOLK, VIRGINIA - VEP VEP 4-19

I attended a meeting of the Saratoga Civic League, reviewed two films, "Right Now!" and "Politics is My Business." I was introduced to the people present, and gave a few words of inspiration to them about voter registration. Riddick said our film was quite helpful in teaching voter education. Riddick said there was some voter registration going on in Isle of Wight, and Southampton counties, respectively. Riddick seems to have a good program underway. He registered about 168 persons last week, and plans to take 200 persons to the registrar's office this Saturday, August 22, in a "March to Vote" demonstration. I spent five hours talking with Riddick about voter registration. [redacted]

While with Riddick, I met a Mrs. Lassiter, [redacted] lady Justice of the Peace, [redacted] in Virginia. She won over a white man her first time running in an election. She won mainly because Nansemond county is 95% Negro, and their votes helped.

VEP can expect a full report shortly with newspaper clippings, the total registered, and other pertinant facts, about the fine work I think these people are doing.

PETERSBURG, VIRGINIA FOURTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT VEP 4-33

David Gunter: Gunter said there was a possible break in the Byrd machine. When asked why, he said, "The dissension in the Byrd machine is due to the dissatisfaction among the people, both Negro and white." This is so, I'm told, because of the Byrd machine, which consists of a few powerful people and many weak puppets who refuse to let bills out of the committee which are hurting both Negro and white people who aren't for the Byrd machine. The time is ripe for them to break the Byrd political machine if they can get enough anti-Byrd people (mostly Negro) to register and vote. The members of the Fourth Congressional District voter registration committee wants to capitalize on this situation by having an intensified voter registration program. "We will need money, " he emphasized. I told him to submit a budget and await a decision as to what VEP could do to help. The Fourth plans to actively pursue voter registration until October 3, 1964, then push these voters to vote for S. W. Tucker for congress from the Fourth District. The Fourth Congressional District covers 18 rural counties and 3 cities. The cities are Hopewell, Petersburg, and Suffolk. See attached map for the counties.

Gunter said the Fourth district is now conducting a citizenship school, had 40 enrolled. Herbert Coulton was the instructor. The graduates were turned over to precinct leaders to help others, in the various areas prepare themselves to pass the registration test. (See example of certificates given successful graduates.

Gunter and the financial committee estimated they need $35,000 (not all from VEP) to put this project over. I suggested they make a separate budget and submit it to VEP concerning the VEP interest, but definitely, this grant if made, could not be used in a partisan way. I think the project has good, sound leadership, organization and direction. The Fourth district is in the heart of the Virginia black belt, and I think the potential is there to register a large number of Negro registrants, regardless of seemingly restricted office hours in the registrar's office. Coulton works along with Gunter, and other organizations in Petersburg. They have one goal, to register people to vote. The people in the Fourth feel the battle for the Negro's rights should now be through the ballot, the day of demonstrations is over.

Herbert Coulton - SCLC, Petersburg, Virginia: Coulton wasn't in, so I talked to his secretary, and later the same day, I talked to Coulton himself.

(Interview)

Secretary/- Miss Allen: There seems to be an increase in voter registration since a Negro, J. H. Owens, was elected to the city council inJune, 1964. SCLC has a test case at the registrar's office of a new type voter registration blank. They have filed suit through Tucker and Marsh, and are awaiting a ruling by the courts. Last week, they registered an estimated 15 people. The previous week, they registered more than 15. SCLC has some citizenship school going. Mrs. Olivia Marshall's school is the largest, with 15, five now being ready to register. SCLC has a transportation pool of volunteer drivers to take people to the polls. SCLC plans to show a five minute movie between features at the local theater about voter registration. They plan to buy radio time about the last week in September before the books close, telling people to get out and register, then vote. They have signs in business establishments where all employees are registered to vote. If there isn't 100% registration, the establishment gets no sign. They have 15 volunteer workers working on voter registration. They have two problems which somewhat hamper voter registration: Three hours a day to register (12-3), Monday through Friday; The blank ballot literacy test voter registration blank.

Herbert Coulton Interview: Coulton reiterated what his secretary had said. Right now, he is organizing ways to get people to register and vote. He teaches citizenship schools and is one of the organizers of the Fourth Congressional District registration committee. He is quite concerned about the short length of time the registrar's office remains open. It is a handicap because most people are working and can't get off. It is even more difficult with the blank registration sheets.

Richmond, Virginia: S. W. Tucker was out of town, so I talked with his law partner, H. L. Marsh. Marsh feels that if they could get away from school suits long enough, they think they could get some unregistered people on the books, and then possibly put S. W. Tucker in the congressman's seat from the Fourth District. They are trying to get workers throughout the Fourth District, but need funds to attract capable, responsible people to do the job. Marsh stated the same desire and feeling as did Coulton and Gunter. Marsh stated to me that the law states that a Registrar must accept people at other times besides those times set aside by the state for a fee of 35¢. Marsh is sending me a breakdown by county in the Fourth Congressional District showing the number of registerred and unregistered Negroes in each county.

Since Tucker nor Marsh cannot pull away completely from their law practice, they have plans to continue their organization of the Fourth District, and use county directors (of which funds are needed for small salaries) and volunteer workers who must be reimbursed for their expenses. The situation is now to the point in the Fourth Congressional District where further organization or a greater production of registered voters cannot be effectively made until there are funds in the treasury or commitments of financial made to the Fourth District.

(VEP 4-37)

John Brooks:/ Brooks gave me an oral outline of what his organization was doing. They have door to door canvassers in their district, which is the Third. They work hand in hand with the Crusade for Voters. Most of the work done by the CFV is done in Brooks' office. He said he sits on top of both sets of funds so he didn't mind which organization, his or the CFV, received funds from VEP. A budget was recently submitted for consideration by VEP. He wants to know as soon as possible what action has been taken on it. I promised to let him know as soon as possible. Brooks feels there is a lot of work to be done in the Fourth District. He feels that financial assistance would be very helpful in registering more voters.

Brooks said the major difference between his organization and the CFV is that the CFV can actively campaign for a certain candidate, and his organization must remain completely non-partisan. Brooks stated further that one of the goals of his organization is to get people to register and vote, whereas the goal of the CFV is not only to get people registered, encourage them to vote, but also while voting, to vote for a particular candidate.

Seemingly, the leaders in voter registration all over Virginia are either in leadership capacities, on various boards, or work in the various voter registration drives all over the state. They all seem to be working toward one common goal, that is, to put more Negroes on the books as registered voters. They feel that if they can get financial assistance, they can then secure the otherhelp needed to get people registered in the Fourth district mainly, and then throughout the other 9 congressional districts in Virginia. Brooks and his volunteer workers are very active in the Third District. The reason stated to me why a program is so badly needed in the Fourth Cong. District is due to the greatest concentration of Negroes in Virginia are situated in the Fourth District. It is called the "Virginia Black Belt." If a sizable number of Negroes can be registered, positive gains can thus be assured.

Norfolk Poll Story

The Virginia-Pilot 8/19/64
By Staff Blackford

Many Sign Up, Few Pay Tax

NORFOLK—A voter registration drive jointly sponsored by the National Student YWCA and the Tidewater Voter Registration Project has ended with 2,564 new voters signed up.

But of the 2,564 registered, only about 200 to 300 paid the poll tax required to vote in state and local elections. No poll tax payment is required to vote in federal elections.

Results of the drive were announced Tuesday by Miss Rosetta E. Gardner, director of the Student YWCA campaign, and TVRP director Arthur Freeman.

Both said the drive "more than satisfied" their expectations, but agreed that there was "a great deal to be done" in the field of voter registration.

A large number of the YWCA-TVRP total were registered during the July 20-31 campaign sponsored by the Norfolk Junior Chamber of Commerce. The Jaycee drive resulted in 5,325 new voters.

Miss Gardner said there would be no registration problem in Norfolk "with more places to register."

Electoral Board Secretary Joseph T. Fitzpatrick recently introduced a plan for neighborhood night registration between now and Oct. 3, but the plan was rejected by the other two board members, Republican James M. Wolcott and Democrat James Baylor.

"Most people have to take a day off to register under the present plan," Miss Gardiner said. "This is very discouraging to people."

Miss Gardiner also said that during the July 2-31 night registration drive of the Norfolk Junior Chamber of Commerce one busload of 68 people was turned way from City Hall Annex at 7:30 p.m. because there were so many people already waiting in line.

The YWCA project brought to Norfolk 11 students from 10 colleges and universtieis.

The students were given a week's orientation in the city's educational, political and civic life before beginning 12 days of house-to-house canvassing in six public housing projects and one private development.

The projects were Diggs Park, Oakleaf Park, Roberts Park, Morton Park, Young Park and Bowling Park. The private development was Marshall Manor.

Miss Gardiner said the YWCA students were "greatly enriched" by their stay in Norfolk. "We had a wonderful project," she said.

While praising the job done by the YWCA students, Freeman pointed out that "there are still many thousands of Norfolk citizens who have not registered to vote."

The deadline for the 1964 presidential election is Oct. 3.

TVRP is the local affiliate of the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council in Atlanta.

The project, which seeks to increase Negro voter registration throughout the South, has been in operation since early 1962.

August 17, 1964

Dear Rev.

The Peninsula Coordinating Committee is endeavoring to register a minimum of 1,000 voters before the deadline for registration which is October 3, 1964, in order to have as many of our colored citizens qualified to vote in the November presidential election as we possibly can.

On Saturday, August 15, we launched a Voter Registration Drive which will continue until the deadline. Our goal can easily be reached with the full cooperation of our Ministers and Churches. Therefore, we are appealing to you for support in this effort which is to benefit us all regardless of affiliations, denominations and individual credit. This is the one time in our lives that we must work together for a common cause.

Below are listed a few suggestions by which you can help in this effort:

Appoint a strong pillar of your Church, chairman of your Voter Registration Committee which should include the Chairman of all the Church departments. This Chairman would then work with the PCC Voter Registration Committee.

I. CHURCH DEPARTMENTS: The Committee's first function will be to urge, teach and lead all members of the various Church departments to become qualified voters. When all members of a department become qualified voters, they will be given special honor and recognition by the Church and the PCC. We will award Citizenship awards to each department reaching 100% voter registration.

II. CHURCH MEMBERSHIP: The Committee's second function will be to carry on a voter registration drive to qualify the general membership. Due to high examples set by the Minister and Church departments, the general membership will be more inspired and interested in becoming qualified voters.

We are merely giving suggestions to use or discord. We realize that the minister is the most qualified person to formulate a registration program for his Church. But we do offer some aids for such a drive:

1. Post an honor roll of all qualified voters in the Church.
2. Conduct a voter registration contest between the various Church departments.
3. Have a qualified voter in your Church lead a non-voter to the registrar's office. Let the name of each be a matter of record so the Committee can check on progress being made,
4. Information on how, why, where and when to go to the registrar's office will be furnished your Committee by the PCC.

We believe you can conduct a successful drive under your inspiring leadership as minister. May we hear from you soon?

Sincerely,

(Mrs.) Norvleate Downing Executive Secretary, PCC

FOURTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT
VOTER REGISTRATION COMMITTEE
106 SOUTH AVENUE
PETERSBURG, VIRGINIA

August 3, 1964

Dear "Worker-for-Voter":

The Co-chairmen of the Fourth Congressional Voter Registration Committee met at separate instances to discuss methods and map plans whereby the necessary funds can be raised to insure and secure a much larger electorale in the Fourth Congressional District. With certain modifications, the following steps were approved:

1. That the Finance Committee accepts $35,000 as its quota and pledges to reach this goal.

2. That the present committee be expanded to include a representative from each of the 21 sub-divisions in the Fourth District.

3. That the county or city wide leader set up a functioning finance committee immediately--notifying this committee at once the person to represent your area on the District Finance Committee.

4. That Mrs. S. W. Tucker, of the District Finance Committee will head the Special Gifts Committee.

5. That your area Finance Committee be sufficiently large to cover every segment and section of your county or city.

6. That you let this committee know at once what portion of this $35,000 your area is accepting as its quota.

7. That accurate records be made and kept of all monies received and all monies turned in to the treasurer, Mr. James Duvall, Petersburg.

8. That, for a fast and sure method of raising funds, we recommend that every adult person in your county be contacted and asked to give not less than one dollar. This method will serve a dual purpose: to get the individual's dollar and at the same time attempt to secure his registration to vote.

9. That your area need not necessarily be confined to this method, but is free and at liberty to employ whatever method you deem advisable to secure your quota.

10. That August 10 be considered the deadline date for your response to this committee in order that any modification of area quotas, if necessary, might be considered.

Dear Concerned Citizen:

"Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before." The two Big Events in the lives of the Negro Americans in 1964 are: (1) The 1964 Civil Rights Act and (2) The Federal Election on November 3.

Yes, our concerned friend, "Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before" and the awesome shadows the Two Big Events of 1964 are casting even in mid-summer, will lengthen into a decade of darkness for the American Negro, other minority groups and perhaps for democracy itself, if the Negro does not transform his concern and fear into ACTION. COMING EVENTS CAST THEIR SHADOWS BEFORE

THE TWO BIG EVENTS IN 1964 ARE

I. The 1964 Civil Rights Act
II. The Federal Election on November 3

The 1964 Civil Rights Act, the most far reaching law ever enacted by the U. S. Congress to ensure, protect and extend the Negro citizen's constitutional and human rights, must be strictly enforced in every Precinct, Ward, Magisterial District, County, City and Town in Virginia just as it must be enforced elsewhere in our Nation. But we know the fight our Senators, our Congressmen, our Governor and the members of the General Assembly put up to prevent the Bill from becoming law.

We are painfully aware and deeply concerned that Senator Goldwater not only voted against shutting off debate in the Senate (cloture) but also voted against the Bill itself.

As we look toward the November election, our well founded concern increases to almost outright fear. This deep concern and yes, outright fear, was increased as we witnessed the methods used by the Goldwater forces to beat down the liberal wing of the Republican Party, thus preventing the convention from adopting a strong civil rights plank in the Party's platform.

The Republican National Convention nominated Senator Goldwater who, may we remind you again, VOTED AGAINST THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL; virtually read the Negro out of the GOP in an Atlanta speech; and who proclaimed in his nomination acceptance speech "extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice." The extremist groups of which Virginia has its share, are already placing an interpretation on Goldwater's words similar to those placed on the words of the late Bilbo of Mississippi who declared: "the best way to keep the niggers from the polls is to visit them the night before the election."

We do not have a Bilbo in Virginia; therefore, Negro leadership must shoulder the blame for the following:

VIRGINIA NEXT TO MISSISSIPPI

There is now one qualified Negro voter for every six white voters in the South.... Southern white registration is 13,600,000. Negroes account for one-fourth the voting age population in the South.... Texas showed the greatest growth in the Negro registration and Mississippi the least. The figures showed that Virginia had 27.7 per cent of its eligible Negroes registered, placing just above Mississippi and Alabama in the list of 11 Southern states.

Voter Registration work by Virginia Negroes must be waged on a 24 hour basis; seven days a week, every week, every month until November 3.

MEMORANDUM

From: Joe L. Tucker

Re: Field Trips to Little Rock, Arkansas, Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Nashville, Tennessee

INTRODUCTION

Friday, August 28, WAB called me in conference concerning four or five days of organizational work with Ozell Sutton in Little Rock, Arkansas, helping him to get some "crash" voter registration programs going. It was decided that I would leave Atlanta by plane early Monday morning stopping in Chattanooga to see Marvin Cousin, talk to him about the voter registration project there, get a clear picture of its organizational methods, and registration drive techniques.

- Leave Chattanooga, stop in Nashville, see Attorney Avon Williams and Mrs. Ella Boyd - see how their project is doing, and offer my services if needed in a problem-solving way.

- Leave Nashville and go into Little Rock, Arkansas, to help Ozell Sutton of the Arkansas Voter Project do organizational work in setting up voter registration programs in the southern area of Arkansas and points north of Little Rock.

CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE - TENNESSEE VOTER COUNCIL: Marvin L. Cousin, insurance agent, family man. Two full time office workers. Hard to get volunteer workers, most people in this town, said Cousin, expect to be paid, nobody but a few people work as volunteers. The TVC plans to get radio time on the Negro station during the last week in September to urge people to register. The TVC isn't going from door-to-door. This has been done in the past with little results. Hand bills, bumper stickers, etc., have been more effective. A lot of canvassing is done by phone using information and phone numbers gathered from past door-to-door registration campaigns. These numbers are called by the canvassers and these people are urged to get out and vote on election day.

The office is a walk-in, on the corner. The area is on the fringe of the Negro business district. Cousin expresses a wish that the office could be closer down town.

They have a motor pool of three cars on stand-by that are used when necessary to transport persons wishing to register to the courthouse.

I visited the courthouse and witnessed the registration of two Negroes and a change of address of a third. The present registrar has been in office about a month. The whereabouts of the other registrar was unknown by Cousin. While in the office, Cousin talked to the registrar and was received courteously. The assistant registrars, or clerks, were very nice, and courteous in handling applicants for registration. The voting requirements are quite simple: Age 21, be able to write your name, answer whether you have been convicted of a felony, have lived in Tennessee one (1) year, and 90 days in this particular county (Hamilton). Also, if a person becomes 21 years of age before an election, he may register to vote before the books close.

Cousin said they had about 50 people a week coming into the registration office a week seeking information on how to register. Cousin said W. C. Patton had money for possibly one more month's rent, and maybe the telephone bill.

The law states that the registrar take the books out into the county ten times a year. Cousin and his workers have circulated petitions to get the registration books in some thickly populated Negro housing areas. They are awaiting a decision which will be made around the 15th of September.

Cousin sometimes solicits the help of his fellow insurance agents in putting out auto bumper stickers and encouraging unregistered persons on their debits to register and vote.

I sat in on plans for an "Intra-Church" campaign with Cousin and Robinson. The plans states for the minister to poll his church and urge the congregation to register and vote. Each voter will get his name on a voter registration honor roll that will be placed in the lobby of each church.

Cousin said they registered about 1,350 people during the June-July drive. They have workers at the courthouse to meet and record the names of people who come in on their own to register.

I met Mr. C. B. Robinson, President of TVC, who is employed as a school principal. He voiced the same feeling as did Cousin about the TVC. Funds are at a minumum, but the TVC received about $700 from COPE. Mr. Robinson has been active in Labor for 20 years.

The whole staff of TVC put out a great registration effort for the primary election August 6, 1964. Right now, they are gathering strength and momentum for a final run of non-registered people to the courthouse by October

3 for the federal election. Mrs. Cato is chairman of the Publicity Committee for TVC. She can be reached at the TVC headquarters. Robinson said the people in Chattanooga were very complacent about voting and participating in voter registration unless they are paid. Robinson said this was mainly due to politicians buying votes and paying people to work in their individual campaigns. The people feel that the TVC should do the same thing, if not, some won't even work or participate in the program.

NASHVILLE, TENNESSEE: (Avon Williams, contact) - Avon Williams was busy, but gave me an audience for enough time to discuss the voter registration project. The other contact, Mrs. Ella Boyd, was out of town.

They have two paid workers, a secretary , and a worker at the courthouse who both receive $37.50 per week. The worker at the courthouse is stationed outside the registrar's office that is so situated in the courthouse where many people both, Negro and white, pass its doors daily. This worker stops as many Negroes as possible and takes them a few steps into the office to be registered. Williams states that this has brought very good results. He feels that better results have come from this effort rather than the door-to-door canvass type registration drive. This idea was put into practice due to a lack of sufficient funds and volunteer personnel to promote registration in the area.

Williams showed me a compilation of voting data and figures of which he will send VEP copies. Williams said they were just about to the end of their budget and he is thinking about submitting a request for supplemental funds.

He asked me to send him some VEP forms - progress, and financial voucher forms. (Done by phone from Little Rock 9/2/64. - Note: forms sent same day of request. js)

Williams feels that there is prevalent among the people, a condition of antipathy that prevents them from becoming registered and casting a vote. I ended my discussion with Williams by suggesting ways of getting more people registered and increasing his volunteer work force.

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS - ARKANSAS VOTER PROJECT (Ozell Sutton, Director):

Tuesday: Arrived in Little Rock, was met by Ozell Sutton, and he introduced me to his staff of one paid worker - his secretary, and a volunteer worker. He took me to the ~~Tennessee~~ Ark. Council on Human Relations, and I renewd my acquaintance with Nat Griswold. Sutton gave me an introductory talk as to what the AVP is doing, what it has done, and what it plans to do by October 3, 1964. I reviewed some of the literature put out by AVP, then plunged into the voter registration work that was to be done. The main function of AVP is to furnish impetus for people to pay their poll tax which is all there is necessary to vote in Arkansas. This impetus is furnished under the direction of Ozell Sutton by putting poll tax blanks in anyone's hand who will go out and solicit people to pay their poll tax. Booths are set up at some of the larger grocery stores with a large Negro customer ratio, barber shops, beauty shops, to solicit people to pay poll tax. Mr. Sutton has to do a lot of running around to collect this money from people who sold the poll taxes, and to get others organized. In between these errands, Sutton is constantly asking or reminding people to pay their poll tax. I went on the afternoon run to check the booths, collect money, put out more circulars and billboards (see attached examples), and replenish poll tax blanks to the various people working. Ozell Sutton is busy in other area organizing and setting up meetings to increase voter registration.

Wednesday: I met a Mr. M. J. Caruth, Box 2372, of Little Rock, who stated that WAB promised to send him a copy of the film, "Right Now!" I did some office work making up packets of placards and handbills to be distributed by a volunteer to different business establishments. I accompanied a volunteer on a voter registration distribution run to delivber said packets. We delivered poll tax blanks, posters, and handbills to various business establishments in Little Rock. I helped Ozell Sutton complete plans for the organization of projects in Hope and Texarkana, Arkansas. We left Little Rock early in the morning to make the trip into the previously stated towns. I went to deliver some volunteers at two shopping centers where they will be soliciting poll taxes this afternoon. We visited areas which had the most thickly populated Negro areas in this part of Arkansas. The AVP's programs consist of four divisions 1) churches, 2) PTA, 3) booths, 4) Poll tax marches. Another technique is drop-stations. That is, they leave a poll tax book in any extablishment that will promote the "Pay Your Poll Tax-Vote" program.

Thursday: We left Little Rock early and went to Hope, Arkansas. We met with seven leaders of the community in Hope, Arkansas, and got the program organized and explained to the leaders what was expected of them, what financial help the AVP could give them, and discussed ways in which to stimulate the purchasing of poll taxes in this general area. The seven people at the meeting represented churches, schools, the Negro political leadership in the community, and a county farm agent who gave to the group many valuable contact names.

We went on to Texarkana, ~~Texas~~ Arkansas, to contact Negro leaders there to see if we could organize a voter registration program there. We contacted the leaders in the community and luckily, they had planned for the evening a meeting to discuss a voter registration drive. We stayed over in Texarkana to attend this meeting. Both Ozell Sutton and I spoke on the program. The people enjoyed hearing what we had to say, and chose a chairman to head their "Voter Registration-Pay Your Poll Tax" drive. In Hope and Texarkana, there was unorganized, sporatic attempts to urge people to pay their poll tax and vote. The AVP is all over the state organizing these attempts, and an increase of registered voters is beginning to show up on the registrar's books. (Note: The AVP is well aware of the fact that a payment of poll tax is not necessary for state and local elections. In order to avoid confusion and misunderstanding, the AVP is urging people to pay the poll tax so they can vote in all elections. They even have to pay a poll tax in order to vote it out of existence.)

The AVP plans to organize voter registration drives all over the state and they are very close to realizing that goal.

Friday: I did some work with publicity registration material in the office, met Mrs. Daisy Bates, discussed voter registration with her, and helped some volunteers get their material ready for distribution in their assigned areas.

The AVP seemingly is a well-organized project. The most glaring weakness I found to exist is the need of someone of a responsible nature and know-how, to assist the project director. My short period of assistance to him seemingly was very helpful. I feel assured we may expect very good results from the AVP, especially under the qualified, dedicated leadership of Ozell Sutton.

As a result of our efforts during the week, an estimated 1,000 persons paid their poll tax and are now eligible to vote.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Joe Louis Tucker

Re: Field Trip to Northern Alabama: Gadsden, Decatur, Tri-county Area, and Rome, Georgia.

In a conference on Friday, 9/18/64, it was decided that I should make a field trip into northern Alabama. I rented a car (Budget Rent-A-Car) and made a successful trip. Courtesy calls were made to Mr. Melvin Sykes in Decatur, Alabama, and Dr. John Cashin in Huntsville, Alabama.

Explanations to the following questions, plus other information, was received from the contacts indicated.

Gadsden, Alabama - Mr. Q. D. Adams, Citizens Improvement League:
1. What days are open for registration at the courthouse?
2. What plans do you have for the remaining periods while the books are open?
3. Who makes the decisions for the organization?

Decatur, Alabama - Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sykes:
1. Courtesy call.
2. What's going on in voter registration in Decatur and vicinity?

Tri-county area: Mrs. Bernice Owens and Mr. Charlie Burgess:
1. What's going on in Lauderdale County?
2. What days do you have to register in October?
3. Has Mr. Burgess shown the film VEP sent? If so, what were the comments?

Huntsville, Alabama - Mr. R. C. Adams - Madison County Coordinating Committee:
1. Hasn't sent a financial report since 7/30 - why? Mr. Adams owes VEP an accounting for $200.85. See why it hasn't come into the VEP office.
2. Courtesy call to Dr. Cashin. - Talk to Dr. John Cashin, a Negro dentist who ran for mayor. Ask how his campaign went along. Ask what's going on in voter registration in Huntsville. Ask for some voting statistics concerning Huntsville.

Rome, Georgia - Donald Jackson: Project is closed, but check results and discuss evaluation of the project with Mr. Jackson.

Gadsden, Alabama - CITIZENS IMPROVEMENT LEAGUE VEP 3-30:

Q. D. Adams out of town for two days. Talked to a Dr. Stewart, who works with Adams. He couldn't give me any pertinent information about the organization. Mr. Adams can be reached at: 546-2443, residence, and 547-9154, business. Dr. Stewart can be reached at: 547-5784, office, 219 North Sixth Street.

They have raised some money, along with VEP's grant and a grant from SCLC, but Dr. Stewart said they really could use some more funds. He said the people just didn't seem to care about voting. A worker from one of SCLC's citizenship schools has been helping with voter registration in Gadsden, but could not be reached.

Stopped by Q. D. Adams' on return trip. Here is what he had to say: There are 19.6% of 58,000 people in Gadsden who are Negroes. Mr. Adams dry cleaning establishment was shotgunned last week, and $60 worth of clothes were ruined by double O slugs.

The reason Alabama changes its voting test every 30 days is because civil rights leaders were familarizing people with the voting test, so to cross everybody up, they change it every 30 days.

He has about 14 volunteer workers who do door-to-door canvassing, and help train people in the fundamentals of the voting test. Mr. Adams stated that it is difficult to know when the registration board will be open. They never tell you until the last minute. They will have eight days to register in October, and the CIL plans a massive all-out registration drive to put more people on the books. Mr. Adams stated that the CIL has been in existence for 30 years. They have worked for the betterment of the Gadsden, Alabama, Negro community, and feel that some progress has been made despite bombings, police brutality, and economic reprisals.

Mr. Adams has an organized project in existence that is governed by a group of elected officials. (See attached sheet from the League). They are working and the community respects their effort, and gives them support.

In closing our conversation, Mr. Adams made known a plan he thinks might work with the registration board. As a notary public, he is going to sign every affidavit brought to him acknowledging a person's age and years of schooling, then leave it up to the registration board to prove the affidavit invalid. He doubts if the necessary records can be found, so he figures to aid many people in their registration effort in this way.

* * * * * * * * *

DECATUR, ALABAMA: File VEP 4-5 (white copy)

Mr. Melvin Sykes - 1004 Banks Street, Decatur, Alabama - Mr. Sykes stated that there wasn't anything going on in voter registration. People are very apathetic; will not go themselves, or be asked to go. Sykes states that the Negroes want freedom brought to them on a platter. He feels that a lot of work could be done in Decatur, but due to the lack of interest and participation of the Negro population in Decatur, it all seems futile. Mr. Sykes is disgusted about the way the Negroes refrain from participating in voting. He stated that many of them fear economic reprisals.

Mr. Sykes also said there was one segregation law on the books in Decatur, Alabama, and that is: A cab shall not be occupied by Negroes and whites at the same time. Other than this one law, Decatur is "wide" open for voter registration, public accommodations, etc., but the Negroes are content not to test them for their validity as acknowledged by the city government of that city.

Mr. Sykes has received correspondence to attend a voter's meeting October 18 in Birmingham at the Masonic Temple given by W. C. Patton of ASCARV. Mr. Sykes plans to attend and give a report that nothing is being done in Decatur because of a disinterested population.

* * * * * * *

TRI-COUNTY VOTERS LEAGUE (COLBERT COUNTY VOTERS LEAGUE) VEP 3-19:

Mrs. Bernice Owes, Sec.
25 actual volunteer workers; they have registered about 250 people, overall; there are no paid workers. Volunteers make phone contacts and do door-to-door canvassing. They also use the voter lists that are printed in the newspaper; meet once a month; reception is good in the community.

No trouble with registrar (see attached sample registration form) here in Colbert County. After the volunteer workers make their contacts, they report the results to Mrs. Owes, the secretary, or Mr. Burgess, the president. Have voter registration training classes about every three months. The meetings take place in the Labor Union Building.

Registrar's office is now open 9/21-22 and 9/28 in ~~October~~ September. The office will be open the 1st and 3rd Monday in October. Mrs. Owes gave me a contact name in Lauderdale County: Rev. David Tolbert, 818 West Irvine, Florence, Alabama - Phone, 766-1368.

Mr. Burgess: They change the application form every month. It's done by Gov. Wallace. Usually get about 25 people a day when the books are open. One thing that makes the number low is due to cotton picking season. There are 2,500 registered Negroes in Colbert County, 15,000 white registered voters. Mr. Burgess said that 80% whites are registered and 60% Negro. The people in the registrar's office are polite and courteous. Haven't shown the film as yet, but will do so at the Tri-County voters annual meeting October 11., at 3 p. m. in Tuscumbia, Mt. Carmel church.

Lauderdale Voters League is run by ministers. Mr. Burgess helped to organize the league. Registration is slow, but they are moving.

Tri-County makes radio announcements concerning voter registration over programs that appeal to most of the people. Tri-County is pushing toward a goal of 500 voters for the November election. Mr. Burgess stated that one reason the Negroes in the Tri-county don't go to the polls is because they haven't been "emotionally disturbed." That is, if one Negro goes to the polls and is turned down for no good reason, Mr. Burgess said the Negroes would turn out by the hundreds. As Mr. Burgess stated, they would then be "emotionally disturbed." Announcements are made in church as to when the registrar's office will be open. In every district in the county, Tri-city voters league has a committee of four people who are responsible for voter registration in that area.

LAUDERDALE COUNTY - Rev. David Tolbert 818 W. Irvine, Florence, Alabama, 766-1368.

Rev. Tolbert is chairman of the Lauderdale County Voters League.

He has been out of the city for three months. While he was away, the vice-chairman did not call any meetings, or push voter registration. Now that he has returned to the city, he is planning to begin a drive toward registering some people. Rev. Tolbert said the registration procedure wasn't hard at all, the problem is getting the Negro people out to register and vote. One main problem of Rev. Tolbert's is that he is getting refusals from people who tell that since President Johnson's name won't be on the ballot due to the electors situation in Alabama, the people say they have nothing to vote for, and plan to stay at home on election day. He also stated he was faced with a lot of Negroes who tell white politicians everything that goes on in the neighborhood. Rev. Tolbert said he would make all attempts to get the voter drive going.

Rev. Tolbert said the 9-12 grades of school are integrated, but only one Negro student attends. Others offer the excuse of not wanting to go to a white high school, and others offer no excuse at all. Rev. Tolbert said this may be encouraged by some of the teachers who fear a loss of employment by integration in the school system coming to Florence, Alabama, in large degrees.

I asked Rev. Tolbert to send me the number of registered white and Negro people in the county. He graciously consented to forward this information to me.

MADISON COUNTY COORDINATING COMMITTEE VEP 4-21

Mr. R. C. Adams, Huntsville, Alabama: There are 2,700 registered Negroes in Huntsville. Mr. Adams doesn't have any volunteer workers. There are about 4,000 registered Negroes in the county as a whole. There is one paid worker, a secretary who works part-time. Mr. Adams stated that, "....to get any help out of anybody, you have to pay them. We pay them when we have the money."

If you fail the voter test, you have to wait six months before you can take the test again. The registration board determines the length of time you have to wait. The main problem is the voter test, which the state of Alabama makes as difficult as possible. (See attached sample.) There are eight days to register in October. First Monday and Tuesdays of each week.

There are 23,000 white registered voters in Madison County, and 4,000 Negroes registered. There are 21,000 Negroes in the county, and 100,000 whites.

There are five districts in Madison County. Mr. Adams has four district committees that work on voter registration in the county.

Mr. Adams has prepared the financial statement (I saw it) that will show accounting for $200.85. He said he was holding it until it was time to mail it into the office. He said the books were closed in August, and that is why VEP got no financial statement from him then. The Madison County Coordinating Committee has a balance in their account of $.85. Adams stated that if he had more funds to pay some experienced voter registration workers, he could do a better job, and increase voter registration. He said he was proud to get 25 people registered in a day because its so hard to get the Negroes out to meetings and down to the registrars office.

Mr. Adams also stated that there were trained voter registration workers who live in Huntsville and could help in the voter drive, but he would need some funds to pay their expenses if he sought their assistance. He said these young people were trained at Dorchester County Training School in Georgia.

Mr. Adams is in hopes that VEP will continue its support of the voter program in Huntsville because it has been a very helpful boost in the registration drive.

Dr. Cashin: (File white copy: VEP 4-21)

Dr. Cashin came in 6 out of 7 in the mayor's race with 527 votes. He's glad he didn't get more votes because this can prove some of his beliefs, such as: 1) The lack of Negro leadership in Huntsville; 2) The people who do lead take "grafts" from white politicians for the Negro vote; 3) There is no needed possible Negro block vote in Huntsville. Dr. Cashin plans to make an expose' of the so-called Negro leadership in Huntsville. Included in this expose' will be R. C. Adams, who Cashin said takes "pocket" money from some of the politicians.

Cashin said nothing is going on in voter registration. He stated that Adams was trying, but needed someone to outline what to do, and then he certainly would do it. Dr. Cashin stated that when Randolph Blackwell was here, he told Adams what to do, and things went smoothly, but not with Blackwell gone, Adams has no one to tell him what to do and he somewhat "flounders around" - but he does try, seemingly with not too much progress being made.

Mr. J. Edwin Stanfield, 2333 Galatin, Huntsville, Alabama, 539-4648:

While in Huntsville, I talked briefly with Ed Stanfield, and he sent greetings to the staff of VEP and SRC. He asked that I send him the names and addresses of VEP project directors in Alabama for contact purposes. This will be done on approval from WAB.

Mr. Donald Jackson, 512 Branham Ave., Rome, Georgia VEP 4-29 (NAACP-Georgia Cities): (File white copy in VEP 4-29)

The project in Rome is closed, but WAB wanted me to stop and somewhat evaluate the project in a discussion with Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Jackson couldn't be reached, but I left my card, and in the mail on 9/24/64, received a note and some newspaper clippings (see attachments) which might merit upon approval from WAB, a field trip to Rome to discuss first-hand the situation of registration and voting in that city.

MEMORANDUM

To: Wiley A. Branton

From: Joe L. Tucker

Re: Field Trip to South Carolina and Virginia September 29 to October 2, 1964

INTRODUCTION

After a discussion with our project director, Wiley Branton, I left Atlanta on a field trip that originiated from the VEP office to Anderson, South Carolina, Greenville, South Carolina, Roanoke, Virginia, Lynchburg, Virginia, Farmville, Virginia, Halifax, Virginia, South Boston, Virginia, and Danville, Virginia.

Contacts and information sought was as follows:

Anderson, South Carolina: Rev. Joseph Rich, First Baptist Church, 324 West Reed Street.

We wanted to know how the re-registration was going on. This re-registration came about due to the annexation of North Anderson. It caused much confusion on the voter lists, so, to solve this confusion, all registered voters were stricken from the books, and asked to register again.

Greenville, South Carolina: Rev. Brockman, 125½ Falls Street.

This project has received its final grant from VEP. We were interested in how this money was being spent, what were the methods of utilizing the workers, both paid and volunteer; what plans, if any, did Rev. Brockman and his associates have for voter registration when the books close October 3, 1964, and VEP terminates its financial assistance.

Roanoke, Virginia: A. Byron Smith, P. O. Box 312; DI 3-5219, office, DI 3-3893, residence.

This project functions under a NAACP grant from Richmond, Virginia. We wanted to know what, if any, other organizations in Roanoke were active in voter registration. What progress is being made. What other financial assistance, if any, they are getting from other sources. We also wanted to know their methods of operation.

Lynchburg, Virginia: M. W. Thornhill, Jr., President, Lynchburg Voters League; 909 5th Street, Community Funeral Home, VI 7-7775; home address, 525 Smyth Street.

The LVL is an independent project that received a grant from VEP direct. We wanted to know what progress was being made in voter registration, what other financial assistance, if any, they are getting, and their methods of operating the project and its workers.

Farmville, Halifax, South Boston, and Danville, Virginia:

Farmville: (Area 10 NAACP), Rev. L. Francis Griffin, Box 464;

Halifax and South Boston (Area 16 NAACP), J. B. Coleman, RFD, Halifax;

Danville: (Area 17 NAACP), Mrs. Doyle Thomas, 352 Ross Street;

Pittsylvania County, (Area 18 NAACP), Irvin Barton, Rte. 360, Danville.

All of these projects are VEP financed ~~and governed by~~ through the NAACP office in Richmond, Virginia. We wanted to know their progress, what other organizations were active in voter registration, and their methods of operation.

Rev. Rich, Anderson, South Carolina (VEP 3-20):

Estimated 800 Negroes registered since North Anderson was annexed; most eating places open to Negroes; all hotels and motels are open except one - John H. Calhoun; no Negro policemen, but Anderson will take applications to be considered; no Negro firemen; a few promotions in the food stores and 10¢ stores for Negroes.

Rev. Rich stated that at the present, there is no organized effort in Anderson to register people. The only activity is people who have to re-register going in sparse numbers to do so. There were 8,000 registered voters who had to re-register. 25% of that 8,000 total are Negroes. Many of the Negroes have not bothered to re-register. There are a few persons who registered for the first time, but not many. Rev. Rich feels that night registration periods were very helpful in Anderson, and brought about an increase in registered Negroes. Rev. Rich expressed the feeling that it was a difficult task to get the unregistered Negroes to participate in voter registration.

I asked Rev. Rich to send me the total figures of white and Negro registered voters after the books close. He promised to do this, and told me the only way he could get that information was to have someone copy it from the registration books because it isn't printed any where else.

This was all the information Rev. Rich could give me on voter registration. With the usual courtesies, I left for Greenville, South Carolina.

Greenville, South Carolina: (VEP 4-25)

Rev. Brockman's project has stopped paying people to make contacts. The registration is picking up, but still slow. The office secretary is stationed at the courthouse to help people fill out the registration blanks. She can aid the prospective voter in every way except write for them. In Spartanburg, a person can take the registration form away from the courthouse, fill it out, return it, and sign names before the board - and that's it - they are registered to vote. About eight ministers have been canvassing to get registered voters in their respective areas in Greenville.

Rev. Brockman plans to remain in operation after October 3. They will have no funds. (Not for publication). Brockman's project was given $200 by the Greenville County Democratic party to help their financial situation. The money will be spent in Greenville County per se. The GCDP plans to give Brockman's organization some more funds when they get their share from the national office.

Rev. Brockman said he would send a financial report to VEP Special Delivery 9/30/64, which will bring his financial reporting up-to-date.

Roanoke, Virginia: (VEP 4-46) - A. Byron Smith, P. O. Box 312, DI 3-5219, office, and DI 3-3893, residence.

Smith is a real estate man and oil man. The name of the project he directs is the Citizens Coordinating Committee. This organization received $500 from COPE, $280 of which was spent for five workers COPE sent in to help the drive. Smith's group had to pay all expenses of these five workers while they were in town. They stayed three days officially, and one day due to inclement weather. These workers were primarily organizational helpers rather than workers.

The NAACP sent $100 initially, and planned to send $35 thereafter each week. This started September 1, 1964. So far, all Smith has received is $100. The next day after leaving Roanoke, Smith received $300.00 from the NAACP office. Two days later he received $200.00 more dollars. He informed me of this over the phone

This is how Smith's project works. They have one paid worker, a secretary. Her salary is $25 per week. Smith's telephone bill is due, expense bills are due. The rent at the building is due. Smith said he has about 50 volunteer workers. The volunteers keep up with the registration lists, make telephone canvass calls, canvass in the neighborhoods on foot. They call the canvassers members of "Operation Ting-a-Ling." Others are used in the small transportation pool. There are also semi-volunteers who work alone in their various communities. Smith has other volunteers who explain the registration form to prospective registrants. Smith's goal is to get at least 2,000 persons on the books by October 3. Some civic groups - Y Teens, Jack and Jills, National Council of Negro Women, have aided Smith in the program. Smith's project has registered, since August 8, 1964, an estimated 1,900 Negroes.

Smith is in the position where he is responsible for the bills that are outstanding. His project uses office space and telephones in three locations: The First Baptist Church, the COPE office, and Smith's private office. The Jaycees had a voter drive in Roanoke for two weeks, and they catered only to white non-voters. Smith estimated he has spent in credits, $375 for voter registration since August 8, 1964.

The registrar's office is open from 8 a. m. to 9 p. m., Tuesday Wednesday, and Thursday for September. There are no problems encountered in registering by non-voters. The registrars are polite.

The people in Roanoke are enthusiastic about voter registration. So are the people working. I visited the registrar's office, and saw a line of 42 people waiting to register - 20 were Negroes. All the volunteers bear their own expenses.

There were five people, plus Smith, who conceived the idea of the voter project for Roanoke. When it came time to organize, they saw their own money possibly being spent, and they backed out. I was impressed by the voter activity I saw while there, and I suspect we can expect good results from Smith and his volunteers, due to their efforts in their voter drive.

Lynchburg, Va. - (VEP 4-43), M. W. Thornhill, JR., 909 5th St., (Community Funeral Home, Inc.), VI 7-7775

Lynchburg has 10,960 Negroes, with 2,240 registered prior to the voter registration drive. Thornhill hopes to get 1,000 new voters by October 3. He has about 150 volunteer workers who make door-to-door contacts in every block; there are workers who check each church membership for non-voters. Thornhill feels that between the block workers and church membership workers, he has the area under 100% contact and exposure to voter registration.

There are two paid workers, both secretaries, who receive $1.50 per hour. There are plans to have two paid workers go to the courthouse next week to get the names and addresses of all registered Negroes. Thornhill plans to establish a card system and follow-up the voters for the election.

The registrar's office is open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. Monday through Friday, and 8:30 a. m. to 12 noon on Saturday. The registrar is very cooperative. Finance is in keeping with the proposed budget.

Reprints of the registration lists were put in public places and the public checked for their names and the names of neighbors. When a neighbor's name wasn't found on the lists, he is pressured by his peers until he registers.

The project has a small motor pool of funeral cars and private cars that transport people to and from the polls.

Announcements are made in all churches every Sunday about voter registration and after October 3, announcements will be made to go to the polls on November 3. The Lynchburg Voters League is the only Negro group in Lynchburg working on voter registration. From their efforts, it is estimated that a white group, the Lynchburg Women's Voters League, is working in the white community. They are working in Lynchburg, and the community is interested and cooperative. Results can be expected. (See attachments.)

I saw in the Lynchburg proposed budget where they had allotted money for block parties. I asked Mr. Thornhill the extent of the block parties' success. He stated that the reception was good, and it served to motivate some of the non-voters.

Farmville, Halifax, and South Boston, Va.: (VEP 4-14)

While in these three areas, the contacts or other persons working in voter registration could not be reached. I could not find evidence of a voter registration drive going on.

Danville, Va. (NAACP project):

Mrs. Doyle Thomas, a minister's wife, is area director. She is the only person working in voter registration in Danville. She has some limited volunteer help from high school senior students, but no adult help. The Negro community seems to be divided into cliques working against each other. The Negro community, for some undisclosed reason, dislikes Mrs. Thomas, and her effectiveness with the community, to a large degree, is lost. She is working seemingly against unsurmountable odds. What can be expected of this project remains, in my opinion, to be seen.

Rev. and Mrs. Thomas have been the victims of cross burnings and other types of intimidation. The reason of this lack of cooperation from the Negro community may be due to a fear of similar treatment by these unknown persons.

Whatever progress or results Mrs. Thomas has in her voter registration efforts, she consented to forward to the VEP office.

RE: Voter Registration in the South

Now that voter registration has terminated in all of the Southern states except Alabama and North Carolina for the November 3, 1964 general elections, a problem arises in my mind that I would like to share with you.

In reading newspaper accounts, witnessing firsthand, and talking with people in various parts of the South, I gather there were many people waiting in line to register when closing time came for the registrar's office. These people were turned away and told to come back when the office opened the next day. I will not take the time to be statistically correct, but from my superficial research, there were an estimated 750 persons in the South who wanted to register but were not accommodated by the various registration boards when the closing time came on the last day to be eligible for voting in the November elections.

The registrars vary in their interpretation of whether to cut the line of prospective registrants at the front or at the back. Most of them cut it at the front. I think this is very discouraging to the persons in line and to the voter registration workers who have worked in their respective communities to encourage and sometimes take these persons to courthouses and other places of official voter registration to be registered.

All sorts of excuses have come from the registrars--"We don't have enough office help;" "There are just too many;" "Where are all of these people coming from?"

I realize the registrars are human beings doing a salaried job and can become tired, nervous, and short on patience having to deal with so many people all day, but this is no real valid excuse to turn away people who are in line to register when closing time comes.

I feel this should be brought out in the final summation of the VEP report. I would like to see a South-wide interpretation of the registrars' behavior which would allow them to cut the line only at the back when it is closing time for the office. Then register those persons in line if they qualify, and then and not before, call it a day and leave the office. Additional help could be put in the registrar's office just for the heavy registration periods. The registrar's office is open to serve the people, and it could serve them better if the various offices had more flexible hours suitable to the employed people in the area rather than being open when everybody is working and closed when everybody is off and available to go and register.

I think this irregularity should be brought to the attention of city and state officials for possible correction in future voter registration drives in the South.

MEMORANDUM - FIELD TRIP TO GREENSBORO, NORTH CAROLINA

To: WAB

From: JLT

INTRODUCTION

WAB felt it would be advantageous to VEP if I attended the North Carolina State NAACP convention in Greensboro, N. C., and talk to many of our voter registration contacts who would be in attendance at the convention.

WAB asked me to get some idea of the voter registration activities that are carried on by the various chapters of the NAACP in N. C.

Specifically, I was to see:

Dr. George Simkins, who ran the Greensboro project, and talk with him and investigate the possibility of a crash program in Greensboro.

Mr. Kelly Alexander, President of the N. C. State NAACP, and ~~Alexander~~ Ask him, who is going to be in charge of the Charlotte project.

Rev. Charles W. Ward, state chairman of NAACP voter registration. WAB asked that I take and give to Rev. Ward, a voting machine, and discuss the NAACP's role in the 22 counties where they have voter registration programs in progress.

(VEP 4-37)

Dr. Jackson, of Winston-Salem, for a discussion of voter registration in and around his city, and about the two week projects coordinated by the NAACP and CORE.

Dr. Simkins: President, local NAACP. - They are working a little in Greensboro, but are having difficulty in getting the people to register. Simkins said they were hurt by the national NAACP's inability to support their program during a two-month period. Simkins said he had to let all the voter registration workers go because he had no funds to support their program. The national NAACP has started once again to financially support the Greensboro program. They promised to give the Greensboro NAACP chapter $1,500. They gave them $500, and are presently supplementing the rest. Simkins feels the two-month delay of funds was due to the national NAACP's loss on their television show of stars.

There are 11,000 Negroes registered in Greensboro. This represents ¼ of the total registered population there.

The books close October 12, for the November 3 elections. Persons may register thereafter, but they would only be qualified for state and local elections. Simkins said they encountered no problems from the registration office. Simkins feels they have done, and are doing, just about all they can do toward voter registration, due to apathy on the part of the Greensboro Negroes.

The registration books are open every day, year-round. It is a lack of interest that has kept the number of registered Negroes so low.

Simkins had the data on Negro registration in Greensboro put through an IBM machine, and it produced results as to exactly where to work and who to work on for voter registration.

A unique thing about Greensboro - they have deputy registrar's who are able to go from door-to-door and register people in their homes. Simkins paid them for each person registered. This was stopped when the head registrar refused to allow the deputy registrar's to go into the community, getting people to register. The head registrar feels that if people want to register, they should come to the courthouse, or some designated public place, and not have the deputy registrars coming to their homes.

What results of this project remains to be seen.

Dr. Simkins' address: 500 South Benbow Road, Greensboro, N. C.

Kelly M. Alexander, 112 N. Irwin Avenue, Charlotte, N. C (VEP 4-48): I talked as best I could with Mr. Alexander; he was quite busy at the convention. He said Fred Alexander is in charge of the Charlotte project. Mr. Alexander said the project closed October 12, 1964, which was the last day to register for the November 3, 1964, general election.

Mr. Alexander said there has been in increase of 135,000 Negroes registered since the 1960 Census in North Carolina.

Rev. Charles Ward, minister, First Baptist Church, 101 So. Wilmington Street, Res., 501 S. Bloodworth Street, Raleigh, N. C. , VEP 4-48: I gave Rev. Ward the voting machine, and we talked extensively about the projects which he supervises. I think the organization is fine, and we can expect gratifying results from the efforts made. (See attachments from Rev. Ward's office.)

I attended some briefing sessions held by John Edwards, who assists John Brooks (VEP 4-37). He outlined the voter registration grants and their expenditures to some area coordinators. The way the requirements of VEP were explained to the area coordinators, left no stone unturned, and I feel they have a clear understanding of what is required of them.

John Edwards spoke to a Negro history class at North Carolina A & T College. I attended this class meeting with Edwards. He talked about voting machines, voting requirements, and the idea of getting registered so as to vote in North Carolina.

Dr. Jackson wasn't at the convention, and could not be reached for a conference.

Rev. B. B. Felder, Dunn, North Carolina (Hornett Co.) - Refused to accept his NAACP branch grant of $400.

Felder felt that this was too much "red tape" - (filling out vouchers and expense forms), to go through to receive $400. He stated that his county needs help, but he couldn't accept it under the circumstances set by VEP and the NAACP. He stated he wouldn't oppose anyone who did come in to work, but that he just didn't want the money under such stipulated conditions.

I think Felder wants to be the whole show. He stated that he was the only one working in his county. He may have some professional jealously in regard to Rev. Ward and himself. When informed of this, Rev. Ward said he would use the grant in another county. (Probably Craven County.)

Text from John Brooks speech at the NAACP Convention.

POINTS ON HOW TO GET OUT THE VOTE ON ELECTION DAY

Many elections are lost because the voters fail to go to the polls on election day and vote.

A vote not cast is a vote against you.

So you can see that it is very important to get every voter to the polls on election day.

This however, can not be done by wishful thinking. You must organize and work toward the end of getting every known and unknown voter to the polls. To accumplish this task, I would suggest:

1. Call the interested leaders of every ward and precinct together and organize a "GET OUT THE VOTE CAMPAIGN."
   (a) Elect a campaign chairman and several co-chairmen.
   (b) Elect a campaign director.

2. Organize a car pool for the people who need transportation.

3. Organize a corp of baby sitters to take care of the children while the parents go to the polls.

4. Fifteen days before the election, organize a telephone committee to call all the voters and urge them to go both to your voters meeting and to the polls on election day.

5. Arrange community meetings the night before the election to give the voters the needed information.

6. Send announcements to the churches about your meetings to urge the people to go to the polls.

7. Assign a worker to every block to be responsible for knocking on the door of every voter ten days before the election and tell them of the coming election and other needed information.

8. The block workers should call the block captain who will make a second call to the home of every voter, the day before the election to inquire if the voter needs transportation to the polls, and if they need a baby-sitter.

   The block captain should tell the voters of the arrangements to provide transportation, the baby sitters, and the voters meeting.

9. The time for beginning the organizational structure is now (thirty days before the election).

10. Make use of everybody, the retired, the invalids, the shut-ins, the unemployed, the professional workers, the factory workers and the housewives, etc.

11. A list of the names, addresses and telephone numbers should be provided the block captains, the telephone committee members and members of the car pools.

12. Members of the telephone committee should continue to call until one hour before the polls close on election day.

13. Radio spot announcements are very helpful on election day -- the announcements should not only urge the people to go to the polls, but should give the telephone number of the headquarters where transportation is available.

14. Funds to take care of the expenses involved in the campaign should be raised locally, far in advance of the time for the election.

VOTER REGISTRATION - NAACP

October 7, 1964

Dear Coordinator:

The President of the State Conference of Branches, the members of NAACP and I, as your State Chairman of Voter Registration, are all glad that you have consented to serve as Chairman of your county in our registration drive to get qualified Negroes to register.

We will pay you as coordinator $25.00 per week, plus seven cents (7¢) per mile for travel as long as this does not exceed $10.00 per week. Two stipulations are these:

(1) That the money is to be cut off if the counties do not work.

(2) If reports are not sent in.

Please get your county to work and get in the reports. Any questions you wish to ask, do not hestitate to call me.

Hope to see you in Greensboro this week at the State Conference of Branches.

Sincerely,

Charles W. Ward, State Chairman

Dear Sir:

Mr. Joe Louis Tucker of 974 Ashby Grove, S. W., Atlanta, Georgia, a field representative for the Voter Education Project, complained of alleged racial discrimination and the denial of motel facilities while in the Florence, Alabama, area on September 21, 1964. I asked him to write up a statement regarding his experience, and I enclose the same for such action as you may deem appropriate.

Very truly yours,

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Monday night, September 21, 1964, I was in Florence, Alabama, seeking accommodations for the night. Howard Johnson's motel was full - Holiday Inn was full. I asked the clerk at Holiday Inn could she recommend any other places. She recommended the Bel-Aire Motel across the river on the Muscle Shoals-Sheffield highway. The clerk at Holiday Inn got Bel-Aire Motel on the phone. I talked to a woman who replied to my question that she had a vacant single and asked when would I be in. I told her about 15 minutes. She said, "All right," and hung up.

I drove up to Bel-Aire Motel. The office door was locked. After a little pounding, a middle-aged woman came to the door. I told her who I was, and said I wished to fulfill my reservation. She said she was sorry, but she didn't have any vacancies. I told her I had just called and she said she had a vacancy. In an effort to make an explanation, she said she was across the court in the restaurant when she took the call, and didn't know the motel was full. She again said, "I'm sorry." I didn't look at the book.

I then asked her for recommendations of places. She replied, "The only place I know is Jack's Chicken Shack," which is a run-down slummy place on a very dark street. The building was virtually unfit for human occupation.

I found accommodations at Hotel Muscle Shoals in Sheffield, Alabama. (A white hotel - I was accepted, no questions asked.)

I feel that the Bel-Aire Motel wasn't filled to capacity on the above mentioned night, and that my civil rights under the Public Accommodations section of the Civil Rights Bill 7152, were violated because of my racial identity.

MEMORANDUM

To: WAB

From: JLT

RE: Field Trip to North and South Carolina

WAB felt that a VEP representative should check the operation of some of the voter registration projects in North Carolina. These projects are financed by VEP, but sanctioned by the NAACP. I went to western North Carolina, (Asheville, Shelby, Charlotte), and another staff member (JD) went to eastern North Carolina.

During the field trip, I called the Atlanta VEP office and received instructions to phone WAB, who came up to middle North Carolina to assist briefly in checking out some of the projects.

I called WAB in Warrenton, North Carolina, and he asked me to perform the following duties:

1. Visit the registrar's office in Charlotte, try to get a racial breakdown on voting strength in each precinct.
2. Talk to Dr. Reginald Hawkins who got a $5,000 grant to conduct a voter registration drive in Charlotte. Inform him that VEP was satisfied with the operation and results of the project. Inquire as to his opinion about the effectiveness of the project.
3. Talk to Kelly Alexander about his opinion of the Charlotte project.
4. Talk to Fred Alexander who coordinated the Charlotte project for results of the voter registration drive.
5. Stop in Greenville, ask Rev. Brockman to please speed up his final reports, both financial and progress.

Trip to North Carolina - October 19 through 23, 1964:

Asheville - Robert L. Harrell, attorney: No problem with the registrar and registration process. The Democrats are in control, and the Republicans are on the upsurge, so both groups are trying to get all possible people registered so as to gain a balance of power.

They have promoted door-to-door campaigns They have a motor pool that is organized and run by retired people. They got 125 persons registered last week. The ministers stress the importance of voter registration from the pulpit each Sunday. Atty. Harrell has a problem getting young adults to work. Some civic organizations have helped in the door-to-door campaign. The books close Saturday, October 24 1964. The Democratic Women of Asheville (white and Negro together) and the League of Women Voters are working in the community, and this has made the work of Atty. Harrell and his co-workers much easier. These groups have worked both in the Negro and white community. Basically, their drive is one of publicity, whereas Atty. Harrell's group publicizes and then follows through by taking the people to the registrar's office, also. Asheville has a Negro registrar in one precinct, also a Negro precinct captain. The registrar's office is open from 9 to 6 on Saturday. If a person wants to register any other time, they can go by the registrar's private home and register. This wasn't possible until they got the Negro female registrar, although the law stated this was possible, Negroes were afraid to exercise this law until a Negro was appointed registrar.

Atty/ Harrell went to the registrar's office in the beginning of his drive and got a list of registered voters. He took a city directory and compared names. This set the basis for the drive, and all names that did not show up on the registration lists were then contacted and asked to register. The registrar's office will not release a racial breakdown of registered voters. Atty. Harrell said they aren't spending too much of their allotted money. Most of the people refused to accept repayment for expenses incurred in their voter registration drive.

Shelby, North Carolina - Mr. Ray Cabiness: Mr. Cabiness said he had a problem getting the young people to help in the registration drive. When asked how many have they put on the books, Mr. Cabiness said he wasn't sure because some of the people promise to go themselves. Mr. Cabiness stated he personally has carried 35 people to the registration office. Altogether, his workers have carried about 60 persons to register. Mr. Cabiness estimated more, but he's unsure as to an exact figure.

The registrar is generally cooperative. Mr. Cabiness is faced with problems of people not being able to read and write, although they are willing to register and vote.

One reason this county will have so few voters is due to every registered ~~treed~~ person having to re-register as of last June, 1964, and some have not done so because they cannot pass the voter registration test. The re-registration took place because the officials said so many people had moved, and others were deceased, so they thought it best to re-register each individual again. This applied only to Cleveland County.

Mr. Cabiness called a meeting on Tuesday, October 20, 1964, of his county chairmen, and not one of the chairmen showed up. Mr. Cabiness explained that they must be working in their areas getting people to go and register. I stayed in Shelby to attend this meeting but it never materalized.

The registrar's office is open from 8 to 5 every Saturday. You can register at the registrar's home if you can catch the registrar there.

Mr. Cabiness said he has received only $25 for the county coordinator so far. He stated that he had submitted vouchers, but hasn't received the checks as yet.

Charlotte, North Carolina - Mr. Kelly Alexander: I talked with Mr. Alexander, and he stated that the people who worked on the Charlotte voter registration drive are quite pleased with the results. They were successful in registering 1,536 people. There was a misinterpretation of the procedure in reporting financial vouchers to Rev. Ward by Fred Alexander. This has been cleared up, and the procedure moved along smoothly during the time the books were open. Mr. Alexander and his associates plan to promote a "Get-Out-The-Vote" campaign until the election.

Charlotte, North Carolina - Mr. Fred Alexander: I talked briefly with Fred Alexander, who coordinated the project in Charlotte. He, too, voiced satisfaction over their voter registration drive. I asked him to send me a racial breakdown of the voting strength in each precinct in Charlotte. Having been to the registrar's office and finding this material not ready for release, Mr. Alexander promised to send me this information when it is completed.

Charlotte - Dr. Reginald Hawkins: Dr. Hawkins could not be reached for a discussion while I was in the city.

Greenville, South Carolina: WAB asked me to stop in Greenville, and ask Rev. Brockman to please speed up his final reports, both financial and progress, to our office. Rev. Brockman could not be reached to receive this information.

South Carolina: I went to Columbia and Orangeburg to try and get some further information on the status and operation of the South Carolina VEP. This venture didn't materalize because I could not see any of the officers or director of this organization.

In passing through a few South Carolina towns, I checked for signs of a SCVEP "Get-Out-The-Vote" campaign. The results were negative. No evidence whatsoever.

MEMORANDUM

To: WAB

From: JLT

Re: Field Trip to S. C. State NAACP Convention and Executive Committee Meeting of the S. C. Voter Education Project
Orangeburg, S. C.

The NAACP state convention was poorly attended because of inclement weather that hampered travel of delegates all over the state. Of the few official delegates present, the convention proceeded with dedication and determination to make its influence felt in the November 3 election.

The convention had three different voter registration workshops. It is not necessary to explain these workshops separately because they all followed the same format. Each workshop had either Richard Miles, SCVEP director, or Dr. C. H. Thomas, SCVEP president, explain the origin and structure of the SCVEP, a statement on a possible "Get-Out-The-Vote" campaign, then a question and answer period of a prolonged nature.

SCVEP Executive Committee Meeting - Holiday Inn - Orangeburg, S. C. :

The SCVEP executive committee meeting met and discussed ways to finance a "Get-Out-The Vote" campaign, the results of the delegations visit to Washington, D. C. Nothing new was said or discussed that the Atlanta VEP didn't already know. It appears to this observer that the committee is waiting on possible funds from some source or another to finance their "Get-Out-The Vote" campaign. Although the SCVEP executive committee members say they will have a "Get-Out-The-Vote" campaign regardless whether or not they receive funds, I doubt it.

Since no decisions were reached at this meeting, another meeting was tentatively set for the following Friday, October 23, 1964, at which time the executive committee hopes to have received financial assistance and can proceed with their "Get-Out-The-Vote" campaign.

Dear Ed:

With registration books closed in all the southern states, I can take a moment to catch up on correspondence and fulfilling requests such as the one you made of me when I visited Huntsville.

Enclosed is a succinct list of contact names from our files in Alabama. These persons cooperated with us in our VEP activities. Possibly you can get similar cooperation for the Alabama Council.

I hope you have adjusted to Huntsville, its people, and its problems. I wish you success at the helm of the Alabama Council.

If I can be of service, feel free to call upon me at any time.

Very truly yours,

Joe Louis Tucker

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL THAT'S ENACTED BY THE CONGRESS OF THE U.S. 1964

TITLE I - VOTING RIGHTS

Sec. 101. Section 2004 of the Revised Statutes (42 U.S.C.1971), as amended by section 131 of the Civil Rights Act of 1957 (71 Stat. 637), and as further amended by section 601 of the Civil Rights Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 90), is further amended as follows:

(a) Insert "1" after "(a)" in subsection (a) and add at the end of subsection (a) the following new paragraphs:

"(2)" No person acting under color of law shall-

"(A) in determining whether any individual is qualified under State law or laws to vote in any Federal election, apply any standard practice, or procedure different from the standards, practices, or procedures applied under such law or laws to other individuals within the same county, parish, or similar political subdivision who have been found by State officials to be qualified to vote;

"(B) Deny the right of any individual to vote in any Federal election because of an error or omission on any record or paper relating to any application, registration, or other act requisite to voting, if such error or omission is qualified under State law to vote in such election; or

"(C) Employ any literacy test as a qualification for voting in any Federal election unless (i) such test is administered to each individual and is conducted wholly in writing, and (ii) a certified copy of the test and of the answers given by the individual is furnished to him within twenty-five days of the submission of his request made within the period of time during which records and papers are required to be retained and preserved pursuant to Title III of the Civil Rights Act of 1960 (42 U.S.C. 1974-74e; 74 Stat.88): Provided, however, That the Attorney General may enter into agreements with appropriate State or local authorities that preparation, conduct, and maintenance of such tests in accordance with the provisions of applicable State or local law, including such special provisions as are necessary in the preparation, conduct and maintenance of such tests for persons who are blind or otherwise physically handicapped, meet the purposes of this subparagraph and constitute complaince therewith.

"(3) For purposes of this subsection-

"(A) the term "vote" shall have the same meaning as in subsection (e) of this section;

"(B) the phrase "literacy test" includes any test of the ability to read, write, understand, or interpret any matter."

(b) Insert immediately following the period at the end of the first sentence of subsection (c) the following new sentence: "If in any such proceeding literacy is a relevant fact there shall be a rebuttable presumption that any person who has not been adjudged an incompetent and who has completed the sixth grade in a public school in, or a private school accredited by, any State or territory, the District of Columbia, or the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico where instruction is carried on predominantly in the English language, possesses sufficient literacy, comprehension, and intelligence to vote in any Federal election."

(c) Add the following subsection "(f)" and designate the present subsection "(f)" as subsection "(g)":

"(f) When used in subsection (a) or (c) of this section, the words 'Federal election' shall mean any general, special, or primary election held solely or in part for the purpose of electing or selecting any candidate for the office of President, Vice President, Presidential elector, Member of the Senate, or Member of the House of Representatives."

(d) Add the following subsection "(h)":

"(h) In any proceeding instituted by the United States in any district court of the United States under this section in which the Attorney General requests a finding of a pattern or practice of discrimination pursuant to subsection (e) of this section the Attorney General, at the time he files the complaint, or any defendant in the proceeding, within twenty days after service upon him of the complaint, may file with the clerk of such court a request that a court of three judges be convened to hear and determine the entire case. A copy of the request for a three-judge court shall be immediately furnished by such clerk to the chief judge of the circuit (or in his absence, the presiding circuit judge of the circuit) in which the case is pending. Upon receipt of the copy of such request it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the circuit or the presiding circuit judge, as the case may be, to designate immediately three judges in such circuit, of whom at least one shall be a circuit judge and another of whom shall be a district judge of the court in which the proceeding was instituted, to hear and determine such case, and it shall be the duty of the judges so designated to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date, to participate in the hearing and determination thereof, and to cause the case to be in every way expedited. An appeal from the final judgment of such court will lie to the Supreme Court.

"In any proceeding brought under subsection (c) of this section to enforce subsection (b) of this section, or in the event neither the Attorney General nor any defendant files a request for a three-judge court in any proceeding authorized by this subsection, it shall be the duty of the chief judge of the district (or in his absence, the acting chief judge) in which the case is pending immediately to designate a judge in such district to hear and determine the case. In the event that no judge in the district is available to hear and determine the case, the chief judge of the district, or the acting chief judge, as the case may be, shall certify this fact to the chief judge of the circuit (or, in his absence, the acting chief judge) who shall then designate a district or circuit judge of the circuit to hear and determine the case.

"It shall be the duty of the judge designated pursuant to this section to assign the case for hearing at the earliest practicable date and to cause the case to be in every way expedited."

TENNESSEE VOTERS' COUNCIL

INSTRUCTION SHEET TO WORKERS

The worker in a political campaign is the most important single person in the campaign structure. The wards, districts and precincts are the fields of combat in the battle of votes. No organization can rise above the level of performance of the men and women who go from door-to-door talking with voters and urging their support of candidates. If this job is done well, nothing can hinder. If this job is done poorly, nothing else can help. Therefore, as a worker, yours is the most vital job of the campaign.

You will have the following materials with which to work:

1. Your worker worksheet.
2. Literature on the candidates to be passed out among the voters.

The use of the materials and hints on canvassing, the street sheet is the key stone of your program. In it should be recorded the name and address of every voter upon whom you believe you can count. Your objective is to get the name and address of thirty-two (32) voters who will not vote, but who will vote for the candidates in whose behalf we are working.

Try to be as brief as possible, but at the same time try to give the voter enough information so that he or she will understand the importance of his voting in support of the Tennessee Voters' Council's slate of candidates.

Urge everyone with whom you have talked to watch for the candidates on T.V. so that they may become more informed. Only when you are convinced that a voter is sold on the Tennessee Voters' Council's candidates, should you list him or her on your street sheet. Mere names and addresses will look good only up to _____, however, on _____, you and we all will be embarrassed if the thirty-two (32) people you have contacted have not been adequately informed or failed to support our program.

Once you have compiled your list of thirty-two (32) cooperative voters (you should try to do this as soon as possible) make it a point to keep in contact with them between now and election day. Tell them about meetings you have been to and points of interest concerning the candidates. Try to find out if they have any special problems on election day which may be eliminated by you, the precinct leader, or by the area team. Do this before hand so that adequate plans may be made to be helpful. Explain to them that it is important not only to vote for one or two candidates, but it is important if Negroes are to gain all of the objectives we seek in this election. EACH VOTER SHOULD VOTE FOR THE CANDIDATES ENDORSED BY THE TENNESSEE VOTERS' COUNCIL.

WHAT'S IN THE CIVIL RIGHTS BILL

The major provisions of the 11 Titles in the bill, whose number is H.R. 7152, are meant to assure all citizens, regardless of race, color, religion or national origin, their equal rights: In voting; in access to hotels, restaruants, theaters and other places of public accommodation and to such other public places as libraries and parks; in education; in Federally-assisted programs; and in employment. To accomplish this, the bill would give the Justice Department additional powers, establish two new agencies - an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and a 6-man Community Relations Service--and extend the life of the U. S. Civil Rights Commission another four years.

TITLE I. PROTECTING VOTING RIGHTS

A young Negro veteran in Jackson Parish, La., was rejected on his first attempt to register to vote because the registrar found an error on his application card. He himself was unable to find it after checking and rechecking and when ge got up to leave he inquired, "Ma'am, would you do one thing for me?"

"What is that?"

"Will you tell me the mistake I made?"

"Oh, sure. You underlined 'Mr.' when you should have circled it."

-Condensed from the U. S. Civil Rights Commission Report on Voting (1961-Pg. 54) on how immaterial errors are used to disqualify Negro voters.

SUMMARY OF TITLE I

To further protect voting rights in Federal elections, it would prohibit: (1) the application of different tests, standards, etc. to white and colored voters and (2) the denial of registration for immaterial errors in applications. It would require all literacy tests to be given in writing or transcribed. To expedite handling of cases filed under the 1957 and 1960 Civil Rights Acts, it would authorize the Attorney General or a defendant to ask for trial by a three-judge court, with direct appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court. In any such proceeding it establishes a presumption of literacy for those who have completed the sixth grade. A sixth grade education is the maximum requirement.

TITLE II. RELIEF AGAINST DISCRIMINATION IN PLACES OF PUBLIC ACCOMMODATION

"White people of whatever kind - prostitutes, narcotics pushers, Communists, or bank robbers --are welcome at establishments which will not admit certain of our Federal judges, ambassadors, and countless members of our Armed Forces."

-U. S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy, in testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee, July 1, 1963.

SUMMARY OF TITLE II

It would prohibit discrimination in most hotels, motels and other places of lodging; restaurants, cafeterias and other eating places; motion picture houses, theaters, sports arenas, stadia and other places of exhibition and entertainment; gas stations; and such places as specialty shops and barber shops in hotels subject to the section and stores with eating facilities covered by the bill. An aggrieved individual or the U. S. Attorney General would be able to enforce these rights through injunctions or other civil actions. There is a specific exemption for small rooming houses with no more than five rooms to rent and used by the proprietors as their own residences.

TITLE III. DESEGREGATION OF PUBLIC FACILITIES

"It is no longer open to question that a State (or city) may not constitutionally require segregation of public facilities."

-Ruling a three-judge court in New Orleans, enjoining segregation in a municipal auditorium.

SUMMARY OF TITLE III

The Attorney General would be empowered to initiate or intervene in suits aimed at desegregating public facilities other than schools-such as parks, libraries, hospitals and playgrounds--where the injured party is unable to pursue the remedy. He would also be authorized to intervene in private actions brought by persons seeking relief from a denial of equal protection of the law because of race, creed, color or national origin.

TITLE IV. DESEGREGATION OF PUBLIC EDUCATION

"(In our school decisions we) never contemplated that the concept of 'deliberate speed' would countenance indefinite delay."

-The U. S. Supreme Court in Watson V. Memphis, May 27, 1963.

SUMMARY OF TITLE IV

It authorizes the Attorney General to initiate or intervene in school desegregation cases. It provides for technical assistance, grants and training institutes to help communities prepare for school desegregation. But it exempts from its definition of desegregation, the transportation of students to end racial imbalance.

TITLE V. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

"The outstanding success of the Commission to date proves how valuable it is and indicates that the public interest will be well served by extending its life."

-Former U. S. Attorney General William P. Rogers.

SUMMARY OF TITLE V

It would extend the life of the Commission another four years and give it additional duties of investigating vote fraud cases and serving as a national clearing house on civil rights.

TITLE VI. NONDISCRIMINATION IN FEDERALLY-ASSISTED PROGRAMS

"I will say this--I repeat it, I have said it again and again: Wherever Federal funds are expended for anything, I do not see how any American can justly--legally, or logically, or morally--a discrimination in the expenditure of those funds as among our citizens. All are taxed to provide those funds. If there is any benefit to be derived from them, I think they must all share, regardless of such inconsequential factors as race and religion."

-President Dwight D. Eisenhower, press conference, March 19, 1953.

SUMMARY OF TITLE VI

It would prohibit discrimination in any program or activity receiving Federal assistance under grant, contract or loan. It directs Federal agencies to establish programs of compliance and would authorize denial of funds to those programs that discriminate. But any denial is subject to judicial review. A hearing is guaranteed before funds are cut off, and a report to Congress is also required before funds can be denied. Presidential approval is required before any general cut-off of funds is approved.

TITLE VII. EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY

"The withholding of jobs and business opportunities from some people does not make more jobs and business opportunities for others. Such a policy merely tends to drag down the whole economic level... Intolerance is a species of boycott and any business or job boycott is a cancer in the economic body of the nation. I repeat, intolerance is destructive; prejudice produces no wealth; discrimination is a fool's economy."

-Eric Johnston, former Chairman of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

SUMMARY OF TITLE VII

Employers, labor unions and employment agencies whose activities affect interstate commerce would be prohibited from discriminating. Coverage would include employers and unions with 25 or more employees or members. But coverage would apply at first to those with 100 or more employees or members and drop by stages to 25, after 4 years. An Equal Employment Opportunity Commission would be established to investigate and voluntarily settle complaints. Upon failure to settle, the Commission would be authorized to file suit to enforce nondiscrimination. Prohibited discriminations include sex, as well as race, creed, color or national origin. The House excluded from coverage those denied employment because they are atheists or communists.

TITLE VIII. REGISTRATION AND VOTING STATISTICS

"... a jealous care of the right of election by the people--a mild and safe corrective of abuses ..."

-Thomas Jefferson, First Inaugural Address, 1801.

SUMMARY OF TITLE VIII

It directs the Secretary of Commerce to conduct a voting census by race in geographic areas recommended by the U. S. Civil Rights Commission.

TITLE IX. REMOVAL PROCEEDINGS IN CIVIL RIGHTS CASES

"... this inability to appeal remand orders has effectively barred citizens from obtaining a redress to their denial of civil rights."

-Rep. William McCulloch (R.,O.) and six other Republican members of the House Judiciary Committee, in views on H. R. 7152.

SUMMARY OF TITLE IX

The orders of Federal courts sending certain civil rights cases back to state courts are not now reviewable. This would make them reviewable by appeal.

TITLE X. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMUNITY RELATIONS SERVICE

"... the objective of the Community Relations Service is to settle race problems across the conference table if humanly possible.."

-Rep. Wm. J. Randall (D.,Mo.) during House debate, Feb. 10, 1964.

SUMMARY OF TITLE X

It would establish in the Department of Commerce, a Community Relations Service with personnel limited to six persons.

TITLE XI. MISCELLANEOUS: FINANCING, SEVERABILITY, PREEMPTION

"The struggle of today, is not altogether for today--it is for a vast future also. With a reliance on Providence, all the more firm and earnest, let us proceed in the great task which events have devolved upon us."

-Abraham Lincoln, Message to Congress, 1861.

SUMMARY OF TITLE XI

It contains a number of customary provisions. One, authorizes appropriations to carry out the purpose of the bill. Another--a "severability clause"--says that if any provision of the act is held invalid, the rest of the act shall not be affected. A fairly standard "preemption" clause, added during floor debate, specifies that nothing in the Act shall be construed as indicating an intent on the part of Congress "to occupy the field in which any ... title operates to the exclusion of State laws on the same subject..."

VOTER EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE, Donald Jackson, Director

On Friday, Sept. 18, Mr. Andrew W. Moore stated in an advertisement in The Rome News-Tribune, in an attempt to mislead the people of Floyd County, as to certain candidates trying to get the "bloc vote" of Floyd County Negroes. He reproduced a piece of paper listing certain candidates in several races. He identified this as the NAACP ticket but his reproduction did not even mention the NAACP.

Why did Mr. Moore fail to show the two endorsements expensively printed and distributed in the dark of night, house to house in the Negro community, the night before election and continuing throughout election day at the polls.

The method used in distributing these lists of candidates suggests that there was an attempt to keep the white voters from knowing the effort being made to get Negro votes for these candidates.

As a matter of fact all of the local candidates were invited and did appear in person before Negro groups in our churches speaking in their own behalf. We believe that even the defeated candidates will admit that they were well received and treated with utmost courtesy. We know of no wrongdoing on the part of any candidate to solicit votes, but if there was any, we feel that Mr. Moore should have called such wrongdoing to law enforcement officers at the proper time instead of waiting until after the count of the vote showed that he was defeated.

We wish to make it clear that the Negro citizens of our county only wish to vote for the best qualified candidates for all offices, for men who will work together in the interest of the whole community.

This Is a paid political advestisement by a group of members of the Floyd County Negro Community concerned with good government.

It's a shame and disgrace that in World War I, II,, and the Korean Conflict we lost approximately one million men fighting to preserve Democracy and free elections, and yet this kind of block voting goes on in OUR OWN COUNTY to thwart the will of the people, by the power-structure of vested interests.

NOW IS THE TIME TO STOP IT. Show your resentment by voting against those listed above and checked who are in the run-off Sept. 23.

Warrants Issued

Warrants have been issued against three Negroes, two from Rome and one from Cedartown, on a misdemeanor charge, alleging that the three distributed facsimile ballots at the Rome box in support of certain candidates in the Sept. 9 Democratic primary.

Named in the warrants were Andrew King, agent for the Pilgrim Life Insurance Company and president of the Rome Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; the Rev. E. G. Hinton, pastor of the Metropolitan Methodist Church, Rome, and Robert L. Parks, operator of a Cedartown funeral home. The warrants were sworn to by A. W. (Andy) Moore, an unsuccessful candidate for the state Senate in last week's primary.

Meanwhile, 11 persons, who have been subpoenaed by Moore, were waiting to appear before the Grand Jury today in connection with the charges. The group includes certain election officials, two unsuccessful candidates for office and others.

The three warrants, which were issued by Justice of the Peace Albert Kirby, are identical and specify the following charges:

"Violation of Georgia Election Code Section 34-1307" and de-

INSTITUTE FOR POLITICAL EDUCATION
(Ford Foundation-Supported)

THE FOURTH YEAR, 1962-63

The fourth year (1962-63) of the Institute for Political Education at Morgan State College was devoted not to valedictory but (1) to the regular projects in political education and also (2) to the planning and negotiating of proposals for a new supporting grant from the Ford Foundation, (3) to the outside examination of the program by a two-man team appointed by the Ford Foundation and (4), because of the receipt of a new grant, to a beginning of the new four-year program--even before the schedule of 1962-63 had been concluded. Thus, for most of the year, the director's responsibility was akin to carrying two programs.

This report will deal briefly, with some of the findings of the examination which are applicable to the future, to the new grant and its application to date, and to a review of the program for the year 1962-63. It will also refer to some of the practices followed during the first four years, 1959-63, and to some of the results of the first four years.

I. APPLICATION FOR NEW GRANT

On May 31, 1962, the Director of the Institute submitted a "discussion paper" to the President of the College, setting forth the possible future of the political education program with its present special emphases--to terminate it altogether, to continue it in a very skeletal form on normal college resources, or to seek new foundation support for another four year. The decision was to seek foundation support in order to continue and expand the program.

On July 17, 1962, the Director of the Institute submitted a "discussion paper" to the Public Affairs Program of the Ford Foundation (through the offices of Miss Jane Hinchcliffe and Mr. William Pincus). This working paper set forth our thinking as to a program for 1963-67 for which we would eventually seek support from the Ford Foundation. It was a minimal program following, more or less, the guideliness which had been found mutually acceptable to the Foundation and the College for 1959-63. It was also a reasonable one, fashioned out of regard for the fact that the Foundation had already so generously given our program its start (1959-63).

Looking back, however, it was not a proposal which adequately reflected the College's awareness of new areas in which it should proceed, both as to type of program and depth of program.

The happy result of the submittal of the discussion paper was the appointment by the Ford Foundation of two political scientists as an examination team, to help the Foundation decide what position it should take in reference to the Morgan program and the College's application for new support. The examiners were Dr. Bernard C. Hennessey, director, National Center for Education in Politics, New York City, and Dr. Bernard James, director, Center for Programs in Government and Administration, University of Wisconsin--Milwaukee. They visited the Morgan State Program October 10-11, 1962.

After receiving the report of the examination team, followed by revised drafts of the Morgan prospectus, several conferences and another visit from Dr. Hennessey, the Ford Foundation, on April 19, 1963, voted a grant of $175,000 to Morgan State College, "for continued support of its program of education in public affairs," for a period beginning July 1, 1963. It was stipulated that $164,000 is intended for the four-year program, per se, and that the remainder, $11,000, is "to be held in reserve for preparation, publication and distribution of a summary evaluation and report ..." (The request document on which the Ford Foundation based its grants was dated March 20, 1963).

(In the state of Maryland a college cannot actually utilize foundation funds until the Governor has formally approved that the funds may be accepted. This approval was given on April 25, 1963).

II. EXAMINATION AND EVALUATION

Since the establishment of the Institute for Political Education in 1959, the Institute's directors and the College have been evalution-conscious; not only of major evaluation of the long-term effect of the program, but also of ad hoc and short-term informal examination and checking of the program and its parts. For example:

1. After each new project and after every field experience in practical politics, students at large have been invited to a clinical discussion of their experience; the program per se, how it was managed, whether it proved significant; how it might be improved, etc.

2. The "Political Education Scholars," who should be more knowledgeable than the student body at large, have also been probed, and have contributed, along the same lines but more in depth.

3. Members of the Faculty Advisory Committee, as individuals or small groups, have been invited to programs and projects and specifically asked to share their thinking, pro and con, on their experience.

4. Practising politicians, as individuals, have been asked from time to time, to comment on aspects of the program.

5. The Citizens Advisory Committee, made up of leading and representative citizens of the community, have been kept informed on every aspect of the project; the members, as individuals, have attended the Institute's programs, and, at least once per year, the entire Committee has convened at a dinner meeting, to hear reports from the Director, but more important to ask questions, make criticisms and offer contructive suggestions.

6. In conncection with the application for a new grant, the President created an ad hoc 7-man faculty committee, including the Dean of the College, which committee reviewed the existing program and the conversations that had gone on with the Institute and the Ford Foundation. This committee held two long night sessions. Its thinking and concensus led to the drafting of a memorandum dealing with the following:

a) Towards a Philosophy for Political Education at Morgan State College.

b) More In-Depth training of Undergraduates.

c) Adult Education and off-campus Aspects.

d) Integration Into Larger College Program.

e) Faculty Internships to Morgan.

f) Undergraduate Scholarship Grants.

7. A major evaluation has been in process for the entire life of the project (four years), to ascertain the effectiveness of the program, including what it has meant in developing the political awareness, knowledge and skills of the student body. These results will be compared with the pretest given to the outgoing senior class immediately preceding the launching of the Ford Foundation-supported project. This evaluation has been under the complete jurisdiction of Dr. Mae P. Claytor, professor of psychology, and who is now completing her report (book-length) on the first four years. One fringe benefit of the evaluation, we believe, will be the several evaluation and testing tools which have been constructed and developed by Dr. Claytor.

VISIT OF SPECIAL EXAMINERS

The visit of the examiners appointed by the Ford Foundation (Drs. Hennessey and James)--referred to earlier--was very good for Morgan State College and its political education project. It provided an outside, disinterested but competent examination. There were probing, reviewing, needling, criticism, recommendation. The directors of the Morgan project do not know the contents of the report made by the examiners to the Foundation, but it is to be presumed that it played its own important part in bringing about the extension of the Foundation grant for another four years.

One outcome of the Hennessey-James examination will be the incorporation of two formal political science courses into the work of the holders of Political Education Scholarships, regardless of the academic major of the grantee. Another will be more required writing by the Scholars, in the direction of simple political research.

The examination and its recommendations also helped to clarify for the College its freedom to involve in more political education in the larger community, as contrasted with the campus-centered policy suggested by the Foundation in 1959.

The visit of Drs. Hennessey and James and the return of Dr. Hennessey also helped to lift the sights of the College as to the new programs it was, and is, prepared to conduct in the future--programs such as the internships and the visiting undergraduate scholarships.

It should be stated that, independent of the directors, the examiners interviewed and conferred with past and present Political Education Scholars, members of the faculty, and the president and dean of the College. They also met with the Citizens Advisory Committee at an unhurried dinner meeting. They gave much attention to Dr. Claytor and the evidence of the continuous evaluation of the total program that she had been conducting since 1959.

III. THE PROGRAM AS EVOLVED FOR 1963-67

As a result of the months of conversations, examinations and revisions, the program in political education for 1963-67 includes, and/or provides for, the following (in summary):

1. Five undergraduate internships annually, to permit Morgan State students to spend 13 weeks working full-time in the office of a political leader or government official as a means of learning public affairs by way of apprenticeship.

2. An unfixed number of part-time internships to permit students to spend a maximum of 15 hours per week per student in the offices of pressure groups, city councilmen or state legislators (A maximum of $1,000 annually is allowed for this item).

3. Five Visiting Undergraduate Scholarships for students from colleges with no programs in political education to enable them to spend a year at Morgan State College participating in the political education program and taking a full year's academic course at the college.

4. Ten Visiting Faculty Awards to permit teachers from other colleges and universities to spend five days annually in a resident seminar on applied politics at Morgan State. It is expected that these visiting teachers will participate in all phases of the Institute program.

5. An annual conference for high school teachers of civics, largely those from Maryland schools. These conferences will be held with the cooperation of the Morgan Department of Education.

6. Twenty special Evening College scholarships to enable adults to enroll in an evening program in applied politics. This program will begin in September 1964.

7. Continuation annually of an average of 15 Political Education Scholarships ($500.00 each) for Morgan students who have a particular interest and flair for politics.

8. Continuation of one-day workshops for the public and alumni, cooperative programs with other departments of the college and special projects such as mock political conventions, mock legislative sessions and special assemblies presenting outstanding political figures.

MATCHING FUNDS

The new program of internships will compel the College to seek "Matching Funds" since the Foundation believes that "the more the College and the community share in the support of the program the more significant it will be." Securing matching funds from alumni, organizations, trustees and other members of the community will also give evidence that those who know the program best regard it highly enough to help support it. All matching funds will be devoted totally to student benefit. Thirteen-week internships require $195 per student in matching funds; parttime internships require a total of $400 annually.

IV. REVIEW OF PROGRAM, 1962-63

1. Congressional Internships. In order not to wait 12 to 14 months to get the new program started, the Institute accepted as part of the year's challenges the placing of Congressional interns during the summer of 1963 and the starting of the Visiting Undergraduate Scholarship program by the opening of the new school year in September, 1963.

Several well-wishers of the program felt it would be next to impossible to place Morgan State students in the Washington offices of Maryland Congressmen. It was decided by the Institute, however, that the Maryland lawmakers should be given the first opportunity. The month of May was rather late to initiate conversations for 13-week internships to start in June. Nevertheless, four law-makers warmly agreed to participate in the internship program. Indeed, Representative-at-large Carlton R. Sickles (Democrat) offered to accept an intern before Morgan's first letter reached him. Others accepting were Senator J. Glenn Beall (Republican), and Representatives Clarence D. Long (Democrat) and Charles McC. Mathias, Jr. (Republican) The students assigned were:

Miss Marlene Jeffries, Baltimore (to Beall)

Miss Charlotte Hall, Baltimore (to Long)

Frank McDougald, Baltimore (to Sickles)

Reginald Kearney, Jersey City, N. J. (to Mathias)

Both the lawmakers and the students have been enthusiastic about the experience. However, at this writing, since the internships have not been concluded, neither the lawmakers nor the students have submitted their formal reports.

The students have had a variety of experiences: clipping newspapers for important political items, typing a variety of material, reading and answering constituents' mail, doing research for speeches and bills, attending open committee meetings, and attending confidential briefings. In addition, the four interns were enrolled in a seminar for interns conducted jointly by the American Political Science Association and the National Center for Education in Politics. In these seminars the students learned politics and government-from-the inside from White House aides, Senators and Representatives, Judges, veteran chief clerks of government agencies, and representatives of the National Committees, labor and pressure groups.

The matching funds for the 1963 Congressional interns were provided (in whole or in part) by Senator Beall, Representative Long and the Classes of 1923 and 1928 of the Morgan State College Alumni Association.

Since the beginning of the internships, other Maryland Congressmen have written indicating their interest in accepting an intern for the summer of 1964.

2. Visiting Undergraduate Scholarships. Again, in order to get the new and expanded program started, a crash effort was made to inform other colleges of the Visiting scholarship program and its objectives. Announcements were sent to all the undergraduate colleges of Maryland and Delaware, to the member colleges of the United Negro College Fund, to the Negro Land Grant colleges, and to a number of organizations. For most institutions it was too late in the school year to participate in the program. Nevertheless, three colleges will send Visiting Scholars to spend 1963-64 at Morgan--Morris Brown, Atlanta, Georgia; LeMoyne, Memphis, Tennessee, and Knoxville, in the city of the same name. All three are private, church-related institutions.

The Visiting Undergraduate Scholars are obligated to return to their college of matriculation at the completion of their scholarship year at Morgan. At least they cannot remain at Morgan.

3. National Capital Area Center for Education in Politics. During 1963-64 Morgan State College became a charter member of this new affiliate of the National Center for Education in Politics (formerly the Citizenship Clearing House). The new affiliate, geographically, is open to colleges in the District of Columbia and the states of Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia. The Institute for Political Education represents Morgan and the Institute's director serves on the executive committee of the regional center.

Under center auspices Morgan students attended the annual Capital Area Conference on Politics. With center funds, the Institute was able to inaugurate a "Visiting Politician" project. This provides for a practicing politician to spend a full day and a night on the campus, speaking to, and meeting with a variety of campus groups. This

This program, a limited version of a "Politician in Residence," was allowed $100 by the NCEP affiliate. Morgan requests no other funds from the affiliate, out of deference to the large number of colleges it must provide for.

4. A Film is Produced. During the year the film, Politics is Our Business, in color, was completed. It was produced for the Institute and Morgan State College by Samuel Schulman Enterprises of Trenton, New Jersey. The script was written by the director with the assistance of Dr. Dwynal B. Pettengill, former assistant director of the Institute. It was directed by the director of the Institute. The film has been well received. The first print was bought by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., to use in voter registration campaign in the South. Since then the U. S. Information Agency has bought three prints.

This kind of learning and teaching tool does not sell in large numbers. Rather, interested organizations borrow or rent from those who own the film. Six prints have been sold to date. Requests to rent or borrow have come from as far away as New Mexico.

The first public showing of the film took place on November 28, 1962; and was attended by 200 persons, including city government officials, library and organizational representatives and the public in general. Earlier, special previews had been given for the Ford Foundation and other New York organizations, Federal government and pressure group representatives, and the the Morgan student body.

5. Weekly Workshops and Related Tasks. The two-hour weekly workshop continued to be the core of the formal work in political education. Every week the fifteen Political Education Scholars and some non-scholars heard a discussion of some topic in practical politics from the Institute's staff or from a practicing politician; they analyzed current public issues; they occasionally viewed a political film, and they planned projects.

In non-workshop time each Scholar also was allotted two hours per week of reading newspapers and selecting and/or clipping items of political importance. This was more than a menial chore as it led to discussion of issues, to comparing of editorial views, and to spotting matters for further investigation. It also introduced students to newspapers, from different sections of the country, some of which they had never heard of before.

Incidentally, the clipping of newspapers, never at first popular with students, was the first assignment given to the Congressional interns and has constituted part of their continuing duties. A former Scholar, now actively engaged in politics, on a recent visit, also reported that he partly won election to office because he had kept a good file of clippings on his opponent.

6. Field Trips to Government Centers. Following long practice at Morgan College, the Institute sponsored field trips to Congress, to the Maryland State Legislature and to the Baltimore City Council. These, like all other Institute programs, were open to all students. Thirty went to Washington and Annapolis; only the Scholars to the City Council. On each trip, by prior arrangement, members of the legislative body spoke to the attenders and answered their questions. In the case of all-day trips to the Congress, the students were divided in three small groups and met in the offices of several lawmakers for one-hour periods of discussion and questions and answers. They also attended committee hearings, and later saw either the House or the Senate in action.

On the trip to Washington this year two groups held similar talk and "buzz" sessions with representatives of the Democratic and Republican National Committees.

On their trips to the state legislature and the city council the students attended committee hearings, in addition to attending the formal meetings of the respective chambers.

Morgan College is fortunate in that its students do not attempt to make recreational trips out of these field experiences but take them seriously as learning devices. This is shown by their questions to lawmakers and by their subsequent reports, as well as their on-the-spot demeanor.

7. Campaign Activities. One of the barriers to overcome in any college is the inclination of students to regard practical politics and its practitioners as being of low repute. One device for overcoming this attitude or, at least, for separating fact from fiction, is to provide opportunity to work intimately in actual, competitive politics and to be exposed at close range to practical politicians. During 1962-63 the following took place:

a) During the gubernatorial primary, 200 students worked on the campaign teams of several aspirants for the State Legislature, and were involved in all the usual tasks for publicizing and nominating a candidate. On Primary Day they manned polling places or worked on the streets.

b) About 150 worked in the pre-election campaign, and on election day, for candidates of both parties.

c) About 200 students worked in the mayoralty primary and later election campaigns, some in city headquarters, others in the districts.

d) On two occasions, one televised, a panel of students joined other area students in questioning candidates for mayor.

e) Two political rallies were held on campus--both at all-student assemblies. At one of the rallies, candidates for the state legislature were presented, with a student panel questioning the four speakers who spoke for all the other candidates. This large meeting was followed by a coffee hour at which another group of students raised additional questions. Twenty-one candidates attended, including those for the legislature as well as the judiciary. The second rally was organized around the mayoralty campaign. The Republican and Democratic candidates were invited to present their cases.

f) In addition to working with and for candidates, on both primary and election nights twelve students helped a television station and a newspaper to tabulate election returns. They worked in groups at the TV station, the Central Police Station and a hotel converted into a TV reception center. This was a new opportunity to observe another aspect of the political process.

g) Student Government again this year fashioned student elections so as to have a nominating convention. The student candidates also invited several Scholars of the Institute to manage their campaigns. The elections were held on regular voting machines.

8. Young Republican and Democratic Clubs. These clubs, which are encouraged by the Institute as an important means of political involvement, have never drawn large-scale support at Morgan. One reason, perhaps, is the one-party tendency of Baltimore City politics; the other is that students seem to take very seriously this matter of voting for the man rather than the party. This past year, however, was better than usual, partly because Baltimore had an extremely popular Republican running for the office of Mayor and, earlier, a vigorous campaigner, a Republican, running for the office of Congressman at large. Thus, there was real contest which tended to give stimulus to the clubs. They remained in operation all year. Their members worked for candidates and they sent representatives to at least four party conferences. The clubs also furnished debaters to a high school group which was interested in the question, "Resolved, that 18-year-olds should be allowed to vote in all states."

9. The "Visiting Politician." This addition to the program, previously referred to, was adopted in order to make a practicing politician available on the campus for a longer time than is usually possible or practicable. This year's visiting politician, Augustin Doward, was a former Scholar in the Institute and a 1960 graduate of Morgan. In 1962 he was a candidate for the Senate of the U. S. Virgin Islands and won election over a veteran incumbent. His closeness to the age of the students and the recency of his experience were assets in his favor. The students felt at home probing him about all the conditions of his short political life and the special conditions of his home territory. It is hoped this project can be continued in conjunction with the Assembly Committee.

10. Politics and Iced Tea. For the fourth year the Institute sponsored a 5-week film-and-discussion program, meeting at 9 p. m. every Tuesday, for the special benefit of summer school enrollees. An average of 50 attended weekly--about 10 per cent of the entire enrollment and a much larger percentage of those residing on the campus. Many of those attending were enrolled in the institutes for teachers of high school science and for bright high school students. The Institute has felt that these science-centered persons could profit from a greater understanding of the political process. Each meeting showed a political film, heard a short discussion by a staff member or a visiting political figure, and then was opened for questions and answers.

11. Citizenship Birthday Party. Again during the past year, on Washington's Birthday, the Institute sponsored a semi-social affair, in conjunction with the Student Union, for all students who would be 21 years of age during the year. In addition to a birthday cake and music there is always a speaker in lighter vein. Down the years, however, no speaker has failed to say something central to the Institute's objective of developing citizen politicians, with an awareness of what politics really is, with interest in public affairs, and with the skill to use politics and government in the public interest.

12. Joint Programs. In addition to working with Student Government in campus elections, the Institute serves the more formally academic areas of the college. During 1962-63, the Institute, at the request of the Student Personnel Office, gave a film-discussion program for entering freshmen. It also arranged programs for five different classes, or groups of classes, from different departments.

13. Closing Ceremonies. Each year the Institute holds a closing ceremony at which time certificates are presented to those students who have completed the Institute year satisfactorily, as measured by their participation in the weekly workshop and the projects related to it. The speaker this year was Biehl Clarke, director of Civic Affairs Associates, Inc., Washington, D. C., a research and fact-gathering organization whihc supplies business with business-related political information. Mr. Clarke has also developed a number of visual aids for promoting registration and voting.

V. INSTITUTE PARTICIPANTS AND STAFF

So far, this report has covered programs. Perhaps a word about the persons who give substantial time to the program, both students and staff.

1. The Students. The fifteen students selected as "Political Education Scholars" represented seven different departments, four states, and two foreign areas. Eight of the enrollers reside in Maryland. Five of the total were women.

It is Institute policy to include some student or students from the new, developing nations, in the belief that these overseas students may benefit from the American experience in, and approach to, politics. The Director especially believes that the American spirit of "Give and Take" in politics is a quality that some others peoples might well adopt.

The Scholars are selected because of their flair for citizen politics, their interest in public affairs, and their promise for leadership--even leadership of the quiet kind.

2. The Institute's Staff. The staff and the Institute's office increasingly have become a resource used on and off the campus. Calls are received for information or clarification of some fact or issue from government offices, newspapers, civic leaders, other colleges, or foreign visitors who wish political enlightenment about the United States.

Another slant on the status of the Institute is that the director during the year was elected president of the Maryland Chapter, American Society for Public Administration, and named to the Mayor's Committee on Redistricting Baltimore. He was also guest lecturer before the class on Political Parties in the Graduate School of Johns Hopkins University. The director is often invited to confidential conversations and planning by opposing candidates, across party and factional lines, each candidate knowing he, has no exclusive claim on the director.

The assistant director during 1962-63, Dr. Gilbert Ware, resigned as of June 30, to accept an assistant professorship in the Fels Institute of Local and State Government, University of Pennsylvania. This was an amicable separation, from both Alma Mater and former teacher, Dr. Ware being a graduate of Morgan, 1955. Pennsylvania came to know of Dr. Ware through his association with the program at Morgan.

The new assistant director is Mr. Augustus A. Adair, who has just completed a Congressional Fellowship in Washington. He spent half of the year in the office of Representative Bradford Morse (Republican Mass.) and the other half with Senator Joseph Clarke (Democrat, Penna.). He was appointed Congressional Fellow by the American Political Science Association.

Mr. Adair last was on the faculty of Grambling College, Grambling, Louisiana. He is a graduate of Morehouse College; holds the master of Arts degree from Atlanta University; has studied at the University of Michigan and is a doctoral candidate at Boston University.

VI. CONCLUSION

This report, ending the first four years of the Morgan State project in political education, would have ordinarily called for a statement at this point on how the program has gone. This is not necessary, however, since the Hennessey-James report to the Foundation has partly filled this role, while Dr. Claytor's evaluation is being made ready for submittal.

What the words of the several reports cannot totally reflect is the unanticipated warm support that the program has received from students. No project has gone unsupported. Some have been supported overwhelmingly. The College dean once said that "No non-athletic or non-jazz activity has caught the students imagination as has the program of the Institute." Similarly, the support of the faculty and administration has been warm, the Citizens Advisory Committee has been a strong supporting arm, and community citizen groups have been appreciative.

The reports may not indicate, either, that the Institute program has helped to widen the interracial involvement of the College. The Institute has invited students from Maryland and Washington colleges to all its major programs. They constituted some of the state delegations at the mock convention; they served as officers and members of the mock state legislature; they have attended political rallies. The attendance at the sessions of Politics and Iced Tea has been about 33 per cent white. All this is in keeping with the fact that while Morgan State is predominantly Negro in its student body and faculty, it welcomes all students and is actually more integrated than any other college in Maryland.

As the director during the past years, the writer is grateful for this support, and especially for the understanding, helpful cooperation of the Public Affairs Program of the Ford Foundation. He is also grateful for the confidence which the Foundation has shown in the Morgan program and its eloquent expression of that confidence in recent months.

The second phase of the program takes up where the first four years have ended, with no break.

Re: Field Trip to Waycross, Georgia to 8th Congressional District Meeting

On Saturday, February 1, 1964, I attended the 8th Congressional District meeting, Georgia Voters League at the American Legion Post, Waycross, Georgia. A program is attached to this report.

The counties included in the 8th Congressional District are: Appling, Atkinson, Bacon, Berrien, Brantley, Camden, Charlton, Clinch, Coffee, Cook, Echols, Glynn, Irwin, Jeff Davis, Lanier, Lowndes, Pierce, Telfair, Ware, and Wayne. These counties are all located in the southeastern section of the state and for the most part, the economy is agrarian, with tobacco, peanuts, hogs, cattle, dairy products, corn, being the principal agricultural products. In addition, there is some forestry (slash and long needle pine, cypress, gum) and light industry (textiles, paper, lumber and wood, transportation equipment, etc.). Valdosta (Lowndes County), population 30,652, is the only city (according to 1962 Bureau of Census, County and City Data Book) within the district, while there are fifteen urban places: Alma (Bacon), Baxley (Appling), Brunswick (Glynn), Dock Junction (unincorporated, Glynn), Douglas (Coffee), Hazlehurst (Jeff Davis), Hebardville (unincorporated, Ware), Homerville (Clinch), Jesup (Wayne), McRae (Telfair), Nashville (Berrien), Ocilla (Irwin), St. Mary's (Camden), St. Simons (unincorporated, Glynn), and Waycross (Ware). VEP has supported registration activities in Telfair and Ware counties (SCLC), and Glynn (NAACP).

I was immediately impressed with the general enthusiasm of the group. The weather was inclement and probably served as a deterrent to some individuals, but there seemed to be a representative number present. There was an encouragingly large number of high school students present. They seemed to be well motivated and knowledgeable about the activities of the day. It was apparent that they had been in attendance at previous meetings and great emphasis was placed on according them recognition. It was particularly interesting to note from various reports, the number of public school principals and teachers who are becoming involved in voter registration-education activities.

It was apparent throughout the program that there are the rudimentary beginnings of organized political activity among the represented counties. There is some need for some concentrated effort on someone's part to help the group to become more solidly organized and confident in their ability to demonstrate political strength in their respective communities. J. H. Calhoun, President, Georgia Voters League, indicated in conversation that money had at one time been requested from VEP for some non-partisan organizational activity along U. S. Congressional District lines. I got no clear understanding of the reason for rejection because I did not feel that I was knowledgeable enough to discuss the matter with him. It would seem that the Georgia Voters League does lend itself to some concerted organizational efforts aimed at educating leaders in the Negro community in the value of political participation.

The report of registration activity in several counties was interesting. The reports as given by conferees are as follows:

County	Negro Registration-1963	Total Negro Registration*
Appling	10 or 15	61
Berrien	24 (15 - 1964)	N/A
Clinch	650	700
Jeff Davis	200	600 (1400 white)
Ware	300	3000

Mrs. Pearlie Steel, Homerville, Clinch County, reported concentrated efforts to get people out to register in time for the city election on the last Wednesday in February. She also spoke at length about the role of Negro voters in defeating a bond issue for construction of schools when it became apparent that there were no suggested expenditures for additional Negro schools. P. B. McCoy indicated the books in Ware County had been purged and there was a drive afoot to try to get all of the purged registrants re-registered.

I am enclosing an account of my remarks to the group:

"The Voter Education Project, a research project of the Southern Regional Council, had its inception on April 1, 1962. Its purpose is to promote voter registration and education on a non-partisan basis. It has provided funds to projects undertaken by CORE, NAACP, NUL, SCLC, and SNCC, as well as local groups working independently or in conjunction with one of the five groups mentioned earlier.

"Since its beginning, VEP has provided funds which have increased Negro voter registration in eleven southern states over 327,000. Approximately 46,000 of these are your fellow Georgians.

*Estimates only.

"We believe a voteless people is a voiceless people. If you don't vote, you don't count. With your leadership, both at the state and grass roots level, it is the responsibility of each of you to use whatever talents at your disposal to urge your families, friends, and neighbors to register. But this is just the first step! After you register, vote! Only as you exercise your God-given responsibility and right, can you bring your weight to bear on the politicians to help us achieve our goal - a democratic society in which all can realize the fullest measure of self-development."

This was my initial attendance at a meeting of this nature since joining VEP. I was imbued with the possibilities inherent in working with an organization of this type. I am prepared to discuss this in depth with you and Randolph Blackwell should you desire.

Re: ATTENDANCE AT JOINT EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE STATEWIDE REGISTRATION COMMITTEE AND GEORGIA VOTERS LEAGUE

On Saturday, February 15, 1964, I attended the above mentioned meeting at the Americana Motor Inn, Atlanta, Georgia. The Southern Christian Leadership Conference sponsored the meeting which was called to adopt a program of coordinated action for the purpose of increasing Negro registered voters to 300,000 in the state. A program and subsequent news release are attached.

In Hosea Williams' absence, J. H. Calhoun reported on activities in the first, second, and eighth congressional districts. He indicated that there were thirty (30) citizenship schools in eighteen (18) counties in the First Congressional District. He indicated that Hosea Williams was personally responsibile for many of the changes which were taking place in this district. From the Second Congressional District, a campaign, coordinated by Willie Bolden, began in January (VEP supported through SCLC). Rev. Samuel Wells, Slater King, and Thomas Chatman, all prominent in the Albany Movement, were present and spent considerable time discussing their recent trials and convictions. They appeared quite disturbed by what they assessed as a lack of interest in their situation. They indicated that they saw few "friendly faces" during the trials in Macon. As a result of a rather impassionate presentation by Slater King, in which he indicated Rev. Wells was being dismissed from his job at the Marine Supply Depot in Albany, the assembled group decided to send telegrams to President Lyndon B. Johnson and the Justice Department protesting the prosecution of these Albany leaders. A committee was formed to contact Louis Martin to determine what pressures could be brought and where, to help her. Wells retained his employment. No report was given for the Eighth District which is also coordinated by Hosea Williams.

Vernon Mitchell, coordinator for the Third Congressional District, was also absent. It was reported that a voter registration drive was being conducted in Fort Valley (VEP sponsored through NAACP) which had been responsible for 300 new registrants in one week's activity.

File 2nd
B.I.W.

Mr. Randall, co-chairman of the Georgia Voters League, indicated that Bibb county had a highly successful campaign last year and were now engaged in a continuous program of voter registration. He reported nothing of the activity in other counties in the district.

J. H. Calhoun, co-chairman, Georgia Voters League and chairman, Statewide Registration Committee, reported on activities in the Fourth, Fifth, and Seventh districts. In the Fourth District, Spalding County, a coordinated drive by the Voters League, Civic League, and NAACP yielded 350 people in February. Coordinated drives in DeKalb and Fulton counties in the Fifth were highly successful last year. In the Seventh, registration is a continuous activity. A newly organized civic league in Cedartown (Polk County) headed by Calvin Williams recently sponsored a voter registration drive which added 200 prospective voters to the rolls.

Toombs McLendon, Ninth and Tenth District coordinator, talked at length about the resistance encountered in some counties in the Ninth District, particularly Wilkes, Lincoln, and McDuffie. He indicated that John Roseberg of the Justice Department had been asked to investigate activities of the registrar in Lincoln county. Recently the number of registered voters in that county was increased from three to eight. Ray Ware, president of the Voters League in Clarke county (Athens), gave an account of the advances in employment in various industries in the Athens environs. He felt that race relations were improving in this county, and gave much credit to the Superior Court Judge, John Barrow, who escorted the first two Negroes to enter the University of Georgia to the Registrar's office; his wife, who is chairman of the local Human Relations Council; and the Regional Employment Office.

It was interesting to note the obvious pride with which each of the aforementioned individuals spoke. Their relation of these sometimes small but significant gains made in voter registration and other areas, spoke to an interest which apparently has developed over the years. The persons present supposedly represented the leadership in the various districts. It was interesting to note that almost without exception, they spoke of isolated situations with no indication that there was cohesion within the districts. Of course, the meeting came at a time when redistricting, being considered by the Legislature, was eminent. Nonetheless, it was disturbing to this observer that there was so little consideration given to activity beyond the confines of county lines. There was too little attention given to coordinated action although this was one of the express purposes of the meeting. The attached program and schedule of Citizenship Clinics were also adapted at this meeting.

State Registration Group Sets Action In Political Area

Atl. World 2-16-64

Stirred by reports of prosecution of the "Albany Five" by the U. S. Department of Justice and encouraged by reports of progress in other areas of the state, the joint session of the Executive Committees of the Statewide Registration Committee and Georgia Voters League, Saturday a program of political action. At the meeting, held in the American Motor Hotel, a goal of 300,000 registered Negro voters and co-ordinated action as a program, were unanimously adopted by some forty leaders from eight of the ten U. S. Congressional Districts of Georgia.

Re: ATTENDANCE AT SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT MEETING
GEORGIA VOTERS LEAGUE - DUBLIN, GEORGIA

On Wednesday evening, February 19, 1964, I attended the above mentioned meeting at Saint Paul A.M.E. Church, Dublin. A program is attached.

Prior to attending the meeting, I did some preliminary research on the counties comprising the Sixth District. The results are included here for informational purposes.

TOTAL		202,222	64,021	31.6	109,387	10,941	10.0

These counties are all located in the Black Belt in central Georgia. For the most part, the primary industry is agriculture, although in recent years, a number of light industrial sites have appeared. Macon (Bibb County), is the only city in the district, while there are a number of urban places. VEP has supported a registration drive in Bibb County.

There were over 200 people in attendance at this meeting. This seemed surprisingly good for a Wednesday evening affair, considering many of the attendees had to travel over 200 miles round trip. Representation came from Bibb, Jasper, Johnson, Jones, Laurens, Putnam, Twiggs, Washington, and Wilkes counties.

The highlight of the evening was a stirring address by Rev. Floyd Rose, who was a last minute substitute for the announced speaker. Rev. Rose is the youthful (about 25) pastor of the Elizabeth Avenue Church of Christ, Macon. He gave a forceful presentation of the plight of the Negro in achieving "his place in the sun" beginning with the arrival of the first slaves in the Seventeenth Century. He closed his emotion-packed remarks with an account of an act of intimidation by the Tax Collector (also Voter Registrar) in Jones County. According to Rev. Rose, a young man took his wife to register at the courthouse in Bray (county seat of Jones County). When he stated his mission, he was told that she would have to register in the adjoining county as her vote was "not wanted" in Jones County. When he reiterated his mission, indicating he was registered in Jones County, the Tax Collector shoved him and his wife toward the door. When they resisted, the husband was knocked to the floor and the wife was slapped forcibly, causing her to lose her balance also. At this point, the couple left. The recounting of this experience had a telling effect on the audience. As one watched their faces, it appeared that many of them were actually reliving this or similar experiences. This speech seemed to establish a tone for the meeting that was not lost throughout the evening.

The group then moved to a report from the represented counties on registration activities during the calendar year. Here again there was a sense of people really trying, at varying degrees of efficiency, to get a job done. One by one, the story repeated itself. There was pride in the job being done, with some expressing the feeling that their efforts were not really "paying off." I thought as I listened that it was tragic that there people had no one to really offer them any assistance. Here was a role that VEP could play, with adequate field staff. I do not maintain that staggering gains could be made quickly, because even in this group, there was an obvious need for political education. But this group had the will! If only there was some way, they could be provided with the knowledge of how to get the job done!

In closing, a local Laurens County citizen, H. H. Dudley, made a lengthy, but effective, exhortation, urging those interested and dedicated to voter registration to return to their respective communities and do more. I felt, as the meeting closed, that much of the fire of the meeting would be drowned by the variety of obstacles these workers would encounter. Again, the idea occurred to me that professional assistance from someone who had an understanding of the problems to be solved would be of untold value to this group.

MEMORANDUM

To: Weldon J. Rougeau

From: Barbara I. Whitaker

Re: PROPOSED FIELD TRIP TO NORTH CAROLINA

Charlotte, North Carolina:

Phase I of voter registration campaign (9/63-11/63), yielded 5236 new registrants. Dr. Reginal Hawkins, a local dentist, is chairman of the Non-Partisan Voter Registration Coordinating Committee. (Refer to article in VEP Newsletter.) The office is located at 1218 Beatties Ford Road, Charlotte, telephone, ED 2-7737.

There was a purge of registrants in January because individuals moved about the county without notifying the Board of Elections. Hawkins filed a complaint re this with the Justice Department. Whether as a direct result of this or not, 5,186 registrants were restored to the rolls between 2/1/64 and 3/6/64.

Phase II of the campaign got started in March. The reporting follows:

3/9-3/25	398
3/25-4/11	625
4/11-4/18	546
4/18-4/27	1468

Night registration was started on April 6 to run for three weeks. About the same time (according to a press release), provision was made for all prospective registrants to show that they can write as well as read sections from the North Carolina constitution. Dr. Hawkins, in a letter on 4/13, interpreted this as "another stratagem of administrative obstacles."

As you can see, the total number of new registrants as released by the Elections Board varies from the reports from Dr. Hawkins. Including those restored after the purge, he indicates 8,223 registrants have been added since 2/1. You might check with the registrar to determine the exact number of new registrants, by race, since January 1. Apparently, Dr. Hawkins has major responsibility for the conduct of the registration campaign. Miss Thera Garvin is the office secretary. I am enclosing the names of the members of the Steering Committee of the organization:

Dr. R. P. Perry	Mr. Walter Alexander
Mrs. Sadie Griggs	Rev. Ezra Moore
Mr. James Maxwell	Mrs. Evelyn McMullen
Atty. T. H. Wyche	Mrs. Emmanuel Ross
Mr. James Polk	Rev. P. O. Davis
Mr. Eugene Potts	Mrs. Berrell Jordan
Mr. Raymond Mason	Mr. Keely Alexander*
Mr. Charlton Marrow	Mr. John Helton
Mrs. Naomi Drennan	Mrs. Calvene Ross
Dr. R. A. Hawkins	Dr. Roy Wynn

*State President

Incidentally, Rev. James A. Wertz is a candidate for the School Board, and Rev. Paul E. Davis, for County Commissioner. There was a possibility that someone would file for the State House of Representatives prior to April 17.

Durham, North Carolina:

The Durham Committee on Negro Affairs (DCNA) received one of the first VEP grants in 1962. When their campaign ended the entire amount of the grant was not spent. Recently, we received a letter from John Edwards (NAACP person assigned to voter registration in North Carolina), that he was working cooperatively with DCNA. Enclosed is a letter from Mr. Boulware re this coordinated activity. Although I have requested regular reports, we have received nothing since this letter. The address we have for Mr. Boulware is:

405 Lawson Street
Durham, North Carolina

and for Mr. Edwards:

203½ East Chapel Street
c/o Atty. C. O. Pearson
Durham, North Carolina

Halifax Voter Project:

New grant for program already in progress and scheduled to run through May 30. Mr. A. Reed Johnson is director of the Halifax Voter Movement. The address is P. O. Box 626, Enfield, North Carolina. A. C. Cofield, an active participant in the Halifax Movement from Weldon, North Carolina, is an announced write-in candidate for the U. S. Congress from the Second Congressional District. This is traditionally NAACP territory, but Mr. Johnson in a letter to WAB on March 27, indicated the group was becoming "increasingly disillusioned with the state NAACP" and decided to develop as an independent organization. John Salter and Ella Baker of SCEF have been active in the area and are supposedly managing Mrs Cofield's campaign.

Enfield has been the scene of bitter demonstrations and police brutality.

Warren County Voter Education Project:

Mrs. Eva M. Clayton, Chairman, P. O. Box 612, Warrenton, North Carolina.

New grant for month of May. Warren County is northwest of Halifax County. Mrs. Clayton's husband, Atty. T. T. Clayton, is running for the state House of Representatives.

SCLC coordinated activity in eleven (11) eastern North Carolina counties (as nearly as we can determine, Northampton, Bates, Hertford, Bertie, Pasquotank, Perquimans, Washington, Tyrrell, Beaufort, Chowan, and Martin.) Golden Frinks, SCLC Field Secretary, 122 W. Peterson, Edenton, North Carolina.

Registration books are open for ten (10) days prior to each election. The next registration period begins on May 2 and ends May 16. These counties are all in the Black Belt east of the Warren and Halifax counties.

Re: Attendance at Citizenship Commission, American Teachers Assn., Hilton Inn, New Orleans, Louisiana - May 9, 1964

The American Teachers Association recently convened the initial meeting of its Citizenship Commission. This was the last in the establishment of various commissions, the others being Teacher Competency, Programmed Learning, and Textbook Representation. Consultants were: Edward Brice, U. S. Department of Education, Washington; Dr. Walter Murray, Director of Student Teaching, Brooklyn College, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Lawrence Davis, President, AM & N College, Pine Bluff, Arkansas; Edward Bashqin, Dean, New Orleans Division, Southern University; Daniel Byrd, Legal Defense Fund, NAACP, New Orleans; Augustus A. Adair, Assistant Director, Institute for Political Education, Morgan State College, Baltimore; Barbara Whitaker, VEP.

J. Rupert Picott, Richmond, Virginia, President of ATA, presided. He set the tone for the meeting by indicating that ATA was concerned about the role of teachers in promoting citizenship education and in being good citizens themselves. Some twenty-five representatives from Texas, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Arkansas were invited to discuss means of involving teachers in the struggle for first-class citizenship. Norman Dixon, Assistant Professor, Southern University, was appointed chairman. The conference addressed itself principally to the development of materials to be used in citizenship education. The preliminary remarks of each of the consultants were taped to be edited and distributed to teachers as they request information. Of particular interest were the remarks of Dr. Brice, who spoke of the funds available through the Department of Education for financing adult education programs. Very few requests for grants have been made, and he encouraged the ATA to structure programs requesting grants. Perhaps the highlight of the meeting was the discussion by its Assistant Director, Augustus Adair, of the Institute for Political Education at Morgan State College. This is a Ford Foundation financed project in "practical politics." Its aims are to develop among students, an awareness and knowledge of practical politics, ability to analyze public issues, and willingness to undertake citizen-leadership in public affairs. The Institute's program is described in detail in the documents attached. The course outlines attached might be worthy of our consideration for possible projects in voter education. The Institute has produced a film entitled Politics is Our Business which might be deserving of screening. (This is the film which Rev. Young mentioned on 5/22) when the SCLC film, Right Now, was reviewed).

Dan Byrd, Southern Director, Educational and Legal Defense Fund, New Orleans, was also a consultant at this meeting. He raised some questions with me about the activities of CORE field workers in Louisiana. He knew of the grant which CORE had received recently and indicated that he felt they were doing as much in the area of stimulating voter registration as they were in planning for direct action during the summer. He was critical of some of CORE's techniques, i.e., going into a community, getting people involved in direct action, and then having to call upon local people to "bail them out" of difficulty. He indicated that he felt the most desirable method was to consult with "established leadership" pryor to conducting any kind of campaign, whether voter registration or direct action.

I was assigned to the small working group on preparation of a pamphlet tentatively entitled "Guide to Full Citizenship Participation." A tentative outline of the contents was prepared, which, like all the other proposals, will be presented to the ATA membership for approval at the annual meeting here in Atlanta, July 26-28, 1964. Such topics as:

1. Difference Between Freedom and Democracy
2. Responsibilities of Citizenship - Economic, Social, and Political
3. The Teacher as a Citizen
4. Understanding the Elective Process
5. The Legislature at Work
6. Duties and Responsibilities of Public Officials
7. Meanings of Citizenship Education
8. Voter Registration
9. Positive Results of Citizen Participation were suggested, not necessarily in the order listed here.

This appeared to be an interested group of persons who were genuinely concerned about asserting themselves in an area of great need. There is a plan for a second meeting of this original group, including the consultants, to be held during the annual meeting in July.

INSTITUTE for POLITICAL EDUCATION

- What It Is
- Its Objectives
- Its Program

MORGAN STATE COLL
BALTIMORE 12, MA

AWAI

Institute for Political Education: What It Is

The Institute for Political Education is a project in political education conducted at Morgan State College since 1959. The project is extra-curricular and is dedicated to developing in the student community an awareness and a knowledge of politics as it is practiced, the ability to analyze public issues, and a willingness to undertake citizen-leadership in public affairs.

This is all pointed to the expectation that, as "citizen-politicians," Morgan State graduates will use politics and government for the public good—for the betterment of their home communities, their state and the nation. This has long been an objective of the College.

Multi-Faceted Program

The political education program is multi-faceted. Its on-campus core is a weekly, two-hour workshop-seminar devoted to pre-announced lectures and discussions, to demonstrations and films, to examination of current political issues, and to making plans for the several special projects and field activities. In addition to the weekly session, all students enrolled must take two credit courses in American government, including "Political Parties."

Outreach to Campus

Each school year fifteen "Political Education Scholars" are named by the Institute to serve as student assistants—to involve themselves in the total program and become its ambassadors to the larger student body. They are chosen for their interest in public affairs, their general scholarship, their reputation for diligence and reliability, and their promise—regardless of their majors.

The campus-wide programs have included, at appropriate periods, a Mock Presidential Nominating Convention, a Mock State Legislature, and field trips to national and state legislatures and to party headquarters. Practising politicians—those in office, those seeking office, and those who are only relentless party workers—are frequently presented, both to small discussion groups and to the student body at large.

Special Projects

Special projects are also arranged to remind students of their responsibilities as citizens when they reach their 21st birthday; to serve the needs of alumni and other non-campus groups which can profit from the program of the Institute, and to train campaign managers for student elections.

The Institute has also had produced Politics is Our Business, a film portraying citizen politics in urban America and intended to fill certain gaps in previously produced films. Politics is Our Business is non-sectional and non-partisan. It may be interesting to note that three prints of the film have been purchased by the U. S. Information Agency for circulation overseas.* Among the other educational aids of the Institute are a voting machine, political maps, tape recorders, television and radio—all used for creating political awareness, political intelligence and expertness in real political situations.

In addition to the on-campus program, the Institute is currently also able to offer certain opportunities to faculty members and students from other colleges.

Partly Supported by Foundation

The present emphasis on political education has been made possible, since 1959, by substantial grants from the Ford Foundation—$103,000 for the first four years, and $175,000 for the years 1963-67. Gifts of needed scholarships and some equipment have been made by alumni of the College and other citizens. The College contributes some $12,000 per year, largely in supplies and services.

The Ford Foundation, as is its practice, is not responsible for the operation of the program, and the College is completely free to follow its own best light. This freedom also means that the program is not the servant of any political party or candidate, but is ready to work with any party or candidate in a position to provide a useful learning experience to students.

*Politics is Our Business (16 mm, color, 26 minutes) may be ordered from Samuel L. Schulman Productions, Inc., 23 Livingston Street, Trenton, New Jersey. Price: $150 per print.

The Ford Foundation provides only partial support for the interneships (see 2 and 3 following). This means that the Institute for Political Education must raise matching funds to make these kinds of unusual experience possible. For each summer interneship, $150 must be raised outside of Foundation funds. Individuals, the Morgan State College Alumni Association, Greek-letter fraternities and sororities, corporations and service organizations are invited to become contributors of scholarships. Each such scholarship will be identified by the name of the donor.

Roster of Programs

A roster of the several current programs at Morgan State College is as follows:

1. The Weekly Seminar-workshop for Political Education Scholars, described earlier.

2. The Summer Interneships annually send five or more students to spend their summer in Washington, in the offices of Congressmen or of officials in the executive branch.

3. The Parttime Interneships permit five students, during the school year, to work in the offices of government officials and of such pressure group organizations as the League of Women Voters and the Committee on Political Education (AFL-CIO).

4. The Visiting Undergraduate Scholarships are available to five sophomores or juniors from other colleges each school year. These visitors become part of the Institute's program while continuing their regular studies at Morgan. Each visiting student is committed to return to his parent college.

5. The Politician-in-Residence brings to the college each year, for about three days, an outstanding local or national figure in politics. Such a person affords our students the benefit of his experiences through a series of formal and informal meetings and conferences, and by his just being available to answer students' questions.

6. One-Day and Six-Week Workshops are arranged for alumni, civic, labor and professional groups several times during a school year. The One-Day method is to use 3-part units of film-lecture-discussion, in an effort to answer some specific needs of a group or to approximate a much longer session. The Six-Week workshops are similarly structured but provide wider and deeper treatment. During the Morgan College summer school, a weekly film-discussion is conducted, entitled "Politics and Iced Tea."

7. The Evening College Scholarships permit twenty adults interested in politics to attend a semester course (tuition-free) in "Political Parties", with emphasis on the behavior of politicians and political organizations. This course is open to anyone who may profit from enrolling, on a non-credit basis; it may also be taken for credit.

8. The Faculty Colloquium invites ten teachers of political science, and related subjects, from other institutions, to spend an expense-free week at Morgan, together with experts—academic and practical—in the several fields of politics and government.

9. The Conference for High School Teachers of Civics provides for an annual conference of high school teachers of civics, jointly sponsored by the Morgan Department of Education and the Institute. This conference, patterned largely after the one-day workshop, is planned to attract wider personal participation by the attending teachers.

EVALUATION

A continuous evaluation was made of the first four years of the political education project, in order to ascertain the extent to which this program has made an impact on the student body—how the students have become more, or less, aware of political processes, political issues, and political personalities.

This evaluation has been conducted by Dr. Mae P. Claytor, professor of psychology. The findings of this evaluation may, in the future, very well influence the status of political education projects and citizenship education as part of a college program.

Dr. Claytor has operated independently of the director of the Institute for Political Education, for the most part, in order to allow her the fullest freedom in making her findings.

American Teachers Association To Launch Citizenship Project

Ala. Sly. 5-17-64

A group of thirty teachers and school administrators agreed that there is a great lack of understanding of the basic principles of constitutional government and of citizenship in a democracy among both adult citizens and the younger generation who will be responsible for the future of the country.

This was the finding of a one-day conference sponsored by the American Teachers Association headed by Dr. J. Rupert Picott, of Richmond, Virginia and held in the Hilton Inn at New Orleans, with Dr. Norman R. Dixon, of

American Teachers

Southern University, as chairman.

Out of the formal presentations and the group discussions came a proposal for the American Teachers Association to develop a project, possibly with a federal assistance, whose major objectives would include efforts (1) to stimulate among Americans an understanding of the processes and problems of government in a free society; (2) to inspire more active interest and participation in government; and (3) to advance the science of government and citizenship to meet more effedtively the problems confronting the United States and Western Civilization.

TO PRINT BOOK

More immediate goals set as a result of the workshop include the printing of a booklet or compendium which would deal with several aspects of the problem and which might include some such topics as "The Teacher's Role as a Citizen", 'Negroes Currently Holding Public Office", and "Citizenship in Action"; the organizing of regional workshops or conferences on citizenship; an issue of the ATA Bulletin devoted to the subject; and the development of other materials for wide-spread use by teachers and the lay public.

Participating as consultants were Dr. Augustus A. Adair, asistant director of the Institute for Political Education at Morgan State College, Baltimore; Dr. E. W. Bashful, dean of the New Orleans Branch of Southern University; Dr. Edward W. Brice, adult education specialist, U. S. Office of Education, Washington, D. C.; Daniel Byrd, southern area director; Dr. Lawrence Davis, president, Arkansas AM and N. College, Pine Bluff; Dr. J. K. Haynes, executive secretary, Louisiana Education Association; Dr. Walter Murray, professor, Brooklyn College; and Mrs. Barbara Whittaker, research director, Voter Education, Atlanta.

Others in attendance included L. S. Alexander, Jackson, Mississippi; C. O. Bradley, Victoria, Texas; Dr. J. T. Brooks, ATA Executive Secretary; Mrs. Thelma Y. Brown, Houston, Texas; Harold E. Cade, Victoria, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Catchings, Jackson, Mississippi; C. J. Duckworth, ATA president - Elect, Biloxi, Mississippi; Cleveland Farlough, Reserve, Louisiana; H. L. Dear Sir:

This letter is to give you the monthly report of the registration days during the month of May.

In the month of May, the registration office was opened only two days, May 11 and May 12. During these two days, we were able to register 29 persons. On Monday, May 11, we registered 11 persons; and on Tuesday, May 12 we registered 18 persons.

At the present time, we are preparing for the big June registration period. It is our plan to register at least 200 people during the registration periods in June. We have held meetings in which we have appointed block workers to work in certain areas. These bleck workers will be responsible for registering a certain number or as many persons as he or she can in their appointed area. We have also made sample applications for registration.

We sincerely hope that June will be a big month for the Voter Project.

Dear George:

It was very good to have a chance to visit with you at some length over some of the problems we face on federal registration in the South. I certainly feel you have a sensible grasp of a complicated situation.

I hope to have a long chat with Roy when he returns from his Eastern trip about it and I just want to alert you to the fact that this date in April looks pretty good for the Nashville meeting which would be Monday the 23rd, although, as you say, maybe we probably do need some sort of preliminary understanding and meeting in Atlanta earlier.

I trust you will keep me posted and I look forward to hearing from you.

DESCRIPTION OF PROBLEMS ENCOUNTERED BY THE VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT IN THE STATE OF MISSISSIPPI BETWEEN APRIL 1, 1962 AND NOVEMBER 1, 1963 AS PREPARED FOR THE UNITED STATES COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS

To the Chairman and Members of the United States Commission on Civil Rights

The Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council was organized April 1, 1962, as a research effort designed to develop additional programs which would be most effective in providing voters with the knowledge and will to register in the southern states. One activity of the project has been to financially support other agencies in their respective non-partisan voter registration programs. Mississippi was included in the original eleven southern state area under study by the Voter Education Project.

In May, 1962, preliminary grants were made to the Congress of Racial Equality in support of voter registration activities in the city of Jackson, Mississippi; to the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee for work in the city of Jackson, Marshall County, Hattiesburg, and the third and fourth congressional districts of Mississippi; and to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for work in Jackson, Mississippi. These programs were conducted on a 90-day crash program basis during a period when similar programs were being conducted in other southern states by the same agencies and others. The Mississippi programs were confronted with serious opposition from the very beginning, as many registration workers were subjected to arrest and intimidation by local police officers, county sheriffs, and state troopers, and suffered intimidation from local white residents who were known to be active in the White Citizens Council. The quantitative results of the work in Mississippi, as reflected by actual registration, were lower during this period than in any other state, and this condition of low results remained for as long as the Voter Education Project was conducting programs in Mississippi.

The rather large number of arrests of voter registration workers brought pleas for assistance to the Director of the Voter Education Project, who happened also to be a lawyer. The Director went to Mississippi in August, 1962, and spent several days in an effort to obtain the release of voter registration workers who were then confined in jail in several Mississippi towns, and also represented many of them in court.

Following the meeting of registration workers in Clarksdale, Mississippi, in August, 1962, a car carrying six registration workers was stopped by local police, and all of the passengers were taken to the city jail and locked up without any charges being filed, and without being permitted to make bond until the next day, when each of them was charged with loitering, even though they were in a moving automobile, and en route out of the city on their return home. Charges of "vagrancy," "loitering," and "disturbing the peace" became commonplace where registration workers were concerned. Several registration workers were arrested on a charge of "distributing without a permit," when they were found handing out leaflets advertising registration meetings.

One municipal judge in a Mississippi delta town warned a young registration worker, brought before him on a charge of "distributing literature without a permit," that if caught doing registration work again in that town, he would be sent to the county juvenile farm. This court, a week or so later, was to try companions of the youngster on the same charge. One of the defendents, director of voter registration work in the area, showed up at the appointed hour, but felt that the white mob which had gathered for the trial made it unsafe for him to appear to receive his modicum of justice. The other defendants arrived with their lawyer, but when he saw the mob which had assembled, the lawyer judged it expedient to plead his clients guilty. This occurred in Indianola.

These incidents are typical of the reaction of the dominant whites to Negro registration efforts in many areas of hard-core states. Statutes and local ordinances, innocuous on their face, are regularly and systematically used to impose what amounts to political criminality on Negroes seeking to exercise the franchise.

The technically simple process of making bail for registration workers charged with violations of local ordinances becomes a study in the delaying tactics by which constitutional guarantees can be scorned. State statutes governing voter registration, especially literacy tests, are specifically designed to make registration difficult, and are in many cases administered in flagrantly discriminatory fashion. Daily newspapers in these areas have leveled charges of "communist conspiracy" against the Voter Education Project's programs. In one industrial city, organized labor will have nothing to do with voter registration programs because of fear of the "red" tag. Negroes have lost their jobs because whites suspected that they were working in voter registration. Negro churches have been deprived of tax exemption because they were used for voter registration meetings. Rural Negro churches have burned to the ground after having been used on several occasions for registration meetings, and arsonists have unsuccessfully attacked others.

The Greenwood project was in many ways considered to be one of the most successful of the Voter Education Project supported programs. This project was conducted by the Mississippi Council of Federated Organizations, which is composed of individuals affiliated with NAACP, CORE, SNCC, SCLC, and local civic organizations.

As interest in registration began to increase, the distribution of surplus commodities was suspended by Leflore County Welfare officials. COFO workers found a connection between the registration efforts and suspension of food. They sought and secured the cooperation of various persons and groups throughout the country in raising money, food, clothing, and medicine, particularly for the people of Leflore, but for those of the other counties as well. A number of persons were deprived of their customary source of income because of registration activity, and when they found that the COFO workers were in a position to relieve the worst of their distress through distribution of food, clothing, etc., the bonds between the COFO workers and the local citizens were firmly cemented. The importance of COFO being able to supply, in part, the necessities of life to the people who had been recruited into the registration activity, can hardly be over-emphasized. The aid being given through COFO was worked into the registration framework very effectively and actually became an integral part of the whole program.

By late February, 1963, it became apparent to the Voter Education Project staff that all of our delta registration efforts should be concentrated in one county at a time, and Leflore County presented a real challenge for such an effort. This idea was presented to Bob Moses and the other COFO workers. On February 28, Voter Education Project field director Randolph Blackwell went to Mississippi on a routine field trip and visited Greenville and Greenwood while accompanied by Bob Moses and James Travis, the latter being a young SNCC worker. As the three left Greenwood late at night, they headed west on U. S. Highway No. 82 bound for Greenville with Travis at the wheel of the car. A few miles out from town, a car occupied by three pulled alongside; there was a burst of what seemed like machinegun fire from the other vehicle, and young Travis was hit in the neck and shoulder by .45 caliber bullets. The three white men were later apprehended and two were bound over to the Leflore County Grand Jury on a charge of "felonious assault"; the third man being turned over to the Juvenile Court as a "minor." The Grand Jury subsequently returned an indictment against the two men charging them with "assault and battery," obviously a much lesser crime than the facts seemed to warrant. The case had never come to trial by 1964, and the charges were then dismissed by the new prosecuting attorney, who happened to be the resident agent of the FBI at the time of the attack on the registration workers. Travis apparently made a good recovery.

The news of this attempted assassination was a matter of national concern in a matter of hours. Within the next twelve hours of the shooting, Wiley A. Branton, Director of the Voter Education Project, had consulted by phone with all of the major participating agencies and suggested a highly concentrated registration campaign in Leflore County. All of the agencies pledged their cooperation, and the Voter Education Project made a public announcement of the stepped-up campaign. Telegrams were sent to Attorney General Robert Kennedy and Governor Ross Barnett advising them of the registration effort and seeking protection for those active in such a campaign. Some twenty-odd SNCC field workers participating in the COFO project were immediately concentrated in Greenwood, NAACP sent in Amzie Moore and hired five special workers from the Greenwood NAACP Youth Chapter, CORE sent in David Dennis, and SCLC sent in James Bevel and Annell Ponder. All of the agencies awaited instructions from the Voter Education Project on when to send in additional workers or other help; however, an unexpected swell of local volunteers eliminated any necessity for outside workers to be sent in.

By mid-March, Negro applicants were forming long lines at the registrar's office trying to register. But as interest in registration increased, so also did the acts of violence and intimidation against those active in registration. The COFO office was burned by unknown parties, other fires of mysterious origin hit the Negro community, homes were fired into and voter registration workers were shot at. When a large group of concerned people, led by James Forman, Executive Director of SNCC, and Bob Moses went to City Hall to ask the mayor and police officials about protection from such violence, they were turned back with the aid of a "police dog" and the officials refused to talk with them. The leaders of the group informed police that they would proceed to the nearby courthouse to register some of the group. Two of the registration workers were taken into custody then the police arrested eight others after the gropp had returned to the church where they had been meeting. With all of the leaders of the registration movement in jail, the local Negro citizens felt that they should walk to the courthouse to register and in protest of the action of Greenwood officials. Special deputies and police from nearby towns wese called in, the local civil defense units (all white) were put on "active duty" and the town took on the air of a major disaster area. As fast as groups of more than four or five Negroes would form, regardless of their purpose, police would order them to disperse and arsested them when they failed to do so. At the same time, whites were permitted to roam the streets in large numbers at will. A decision was made to stop the walking effort and to send applicants down in cars. The registrar's office closes down for lunch around 11:30 a. m., and does not re-open until after 1 p. m. When the office closed for lunch one day, there were far more Negroes waiting to be registered than they had cars to take them all back to their church during the lunch period. The older ones were placed in the few available cars, and the remainder of the group started walking in pairs, led by the Rev. Donald L. Tucker, a young paster of an African Methodist Episcopal Church. A police carepulled up suddenly, four officers jumped out with a police dog, and without further warning, the dog was permitted to attack and bite the young minister. This act aroused all of the Negro community, and awakened the local Negro ministry to their responsibilities. Where previously it had been difficult to get a church to hold a mass meeting, most of the Negro churches opened their doors for nightly mass meetings which brought packed houses. Several prominent people went to Greenwood and made speeches, and every day saw more and more Negroes going to the courthouse to register.

Record keeping suffered greatly during those tension filled days and it is next to impossible to get information from the local registrar. However, we have actual names of 513 persons who applied for registration in Greenwood between February 26 and April 30, and the actual number would seem even higher. We have no way of determining at this date just how many of these applications were approved. Under Mississippi law, every voter applicant must have his name and address run in the local paper for two weeks before he can complete his application. Considering the known risks of economic and physical intimidation which one must encounter for attempting to register, the Voter Education Project regards the Greenwood project as a major break-through against fear.

The people of Greenwood have high admiration for most of the registration workers, the majority of whom are members of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee field staff. This project testifies more profoundly than any other to what can be accomplished when registration workers have the abilities, and take the time that is necessary to build strong personal relationships, undergirded with the development of basic political understandings.

This state presents more resistance to would-be Negro voters than any other state, and offers more intimidation and violence to Negroes than all the others combined. The Voter Education Project has only been able to add 3,871 voters to the rolls in Mississippi during the past two years, a figure lower than the results from a single small city like Brunswick or Decatur, Georgia, or Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The total Negro registration in the state is approximately 28,000, representing only 6.6% of the Negroes 21 years of age or older. But here, as in southwestern Georgia and Dallas and Wilcox counties in Alabama, the success of the Voter Education Project program cannot be measured solely in terms of new registrants.

Mississippi has a long history of intimidation and violence against Negroes who seek to register, and with the rather large number of cases of injury and death to their persons and destruction of their property, it is little wonder that Negroes developed a fear of attempting to do anything which the white people of that state were opposed to. Despite the massive jailing of citizens, shooting of registration workers, burning of property, and other acts of violence and intimidation of Negroes in Leflore County, more than 2,000 Negroes have gone to the courthouse in Greenwood to attempt to register. Many were never permitted inside, and the majority of those who made it inside were rejected by the registrar. This same story has been repeated in Hattiesburg and other cities.

The Voter Education Project suspended all operations in Mississippi in November, 1963, with the exception of a continuing NAACP project in the city of Jackson. The Voter Education Project had made an effort to allocate funds among the various states in some equitable manner, and the expenditures in Mississippi were heavily out of proportion, while the registration results were extremely low.

No meaningful registration can be expected in the state until the Justice Department is able to win an effective decree enjoining the use of present state registration laws which are designed to keep down Negro registration, and it seemed best th the Voter Education Project staff to expend our resources in other states.

The attached statistics show some interesting figures regarding Negro voter registration in the South, and Column 2 shows the increase in Negro registration between April 1, 1962, and November 1, 1964, in each of the eleven southern states. While this total increase cannot be credited entirely to the efforts of the Voter Education Project program, it is known that most of the registration activity during this period was carried on by the Voter Education Project and its cooperating agencies. Information in our files would indicate that more supplementary funds were provided by other agencies to assist voter registration in Mississippi than in any other state, and the following table, showing the increase in registration and the Voter Education Project expenditures, would not reflect the additional funds spent in each state:

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi Gov. Paul Johnson told the U. S. Civil Rights Commission today the state's critics should "get off our backs and get on our side."

He said this state needs good will and encouragement, understanding and assistance in attempting to solve its racial troubles.

Johnson appeared before the six-member commission as it opened a public hearing into Mississippi's racial situation.

The commission recieved a report from its bi - racial state advisory committee charging police brutality, economic pressures and night riders were used to force Mississippi Negroes to accept second class status.

The governor told the commission that the 1964 Civil Rights Act has been accepted by Mississippians.

"Resistance will be confined to . . . accepted legal processes," he said. "Violence will not be tolerated. Criminal acts will be punished and all law violators punished equally."

Mayor Allen Thompson of Jackson welcomed the commission to this state capital city. He told the members that Jackson has increased its public schools from 18 to 55 in 16 years.

Thompson said the schools were constructed with local and state money and that he opposes federal aid to education.

JACKSON, Miss. — Mississippi Gov. Paul Johnson told the U. S. Civil Rights Commission today the state's critics should "get off our backs and get on our side."

He said this state needs good will and encouragement, understanding and assistance in attempting to solve its racial troubles.

Johnson appeared before the six-member commission as it opened a public hearing into Mississippi's racial situation.

The commission recieved a report from its bi - racial state advisory committee charging police brutality, economic pressures and night riders were used to force Mississippi Negroes to accept second class status.

The governor told the commission that the 1964 Civil Rights Act has been accepted by Mississippians.

"Resistance will be confined to . . . accepted legal processes," he said. "Violence will not be tolerated. Criminal acts will be punished and all law violators punished equally."

Mayor Allen Thompson of Jackson welcomed the commission to this state capital city. He told the members that Jackson has increased its public schools from 18 to 55 in 16 years.

Thompson said the schools were constructed with local and state money and that he opposes federal aid to education.

Thompson told the commission the civil rights law would be enforced. But he predicted its advocates soon would seek to broaden and enlarge the law.

The mayor said the invasion by civil rights workers last summer was misunderstood nationally and did no good. He said most white and Negro Mississippians ignored the movement.

Thompson said many Mississippians worried about threatened boycotts of the state's products. But he said he feels most Americans realize such a boycott would be un-American.

He expressed fears that Jackson Negroes would be hurt by 'the threats and intimidations of a few so-called leaders of pressure groups."

The State Advisory Committee to the Civil Rights Commission released its report at the start of the hearing.

The report, presented by Dr. A. B. Britton Jr., a Jackson Negro physician and committee chairman, noted what it termed progress in recent months.

This included free registration of Negroes as voters in some counties, desegregation of many public accommodations, testimony from officials of Greenville and Gulfport before the committee and statements from various business and civic groups urging compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

Most of the 19-page report reviewed complaints and testimony received by the 10-member committee over the past year.

The group — which includes three Negroes—reported many were reluctant to testify for fear of reprisal.

In one instance, the report said, the home of a former McComb policeman was bombed hours after he testified.

The report said committee members themselves had been victims of both economic and social pressures, and, in at least one instance, a member had been forced to leave the state.

The committee reported "law enforcement officials," as well as private citizens, have actively thwarted efforts of individuals and groups to register to vote in a number of counties.

"Witnesses from several southwest Mississippi counties reported that crosses had been burned in their yards."

The committee reported witness testimony of a kidnaping and beating, a store bombing, and a shooting at a home.

"Under color of law, voter registration workers have been stopped on roads and highways and subjected to cursings, insults and physical beatings," the report said.

The report said at Canton, "witnesses reported that police continually harassed persons attending voter registration rallies" and that officers in the area had beaten and arrested some participants.

"Several witnesses reported that in some sections of Mississippi there appeared to be a pattern of collusion between local law-enforcement officers and hoodlum elements," the report said.

It mentioned associations between officers and leaders of the Ku Klux Klan and beatings shortly after civil rights workers were stopped by officers.

The committee said "the idea of the dignity and worth of every individual is . . . systematically violated and an injustice done to us all when 42.3 per cent of the citizens of this state must either accept an inferior station in life and an attitude of servility or endanger themselves and their families. Terror hangs over the Negro in Mississippi and is an expectancy for those who refuse to accept their color as a badge of inferiority."

The committee criticized the state government on grounds of not seeking actively to protect the rights of all citizens and it criticized the state press for "failing to meet its obligations to alert people."

The report mentioned few place names and people.

In addition to Dr. Britton, members of the committee include:

Dr. A. B. Beittel of Jackson, retired president of Tougaloo College in Jackson; Rabbi David Z .Ben-Ami of Hattiesburg; the Rev. Blaton Doggett of Tupelo; Martin L. Harvey, Negro, of Jackson, co-owner of a funeral home;

Also the Rev. Charles C. Hunter of Yazoo City; The Rev. Charlemagne Payne Sr., Negro, of Jackson; Mrs. H. J. Price of Magnolia, housewife; Dr. George E. Powers of Gulfport, dentist; Hazel Brannon Smith of Lexington, a newspaper publisher and Pulitzer Prize winner.

In an appearance before the commission Monday, two state officials declined to produce records subpoenaed by the commission.

The refusals came from Col. T. B. Birdsong, head of the state Highway Patrol, and Walter Dell Davis, state insurance commissioner, who said state law prohibited disclosure of records under such circumstances.

The commission took both matters under advisement and said it would contact both officials on its decision. Both were ordered to report back Friday afternoon.

The Civil Rights Commission asked Davis for records of the state fire marshal's investigation of blazes which burned Negro churches in the state last summer.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Rubel Griffin, representing Davis, asked the request be quashed because state law prohibits disclosure of such records unless the district attorney of the county involved consents or unless a court directs the record be disclosed.

Davis said, "I regret it is not possible to take you and show you our files. We will cheerfully submit to any court order for them."

He said his office investigated all church fires and there was evidence of arson in each of them. He said his office worked with the FBI and all cases were still under active investigation.

He said he did not feel it proper for his office to recommend to district attorneys they permit disclosure of such records.

Birdsong, represented by Asst. Atty. Gen. Garland Lyell, declined to produce records in the cases of Richard Joe Butler, shot April 5, 1964, at Kingston in Adams County, and Clifton Walker, whose body was found on Poor House Road in Wilkinson County Feb. 28, 1964.

Through his lawyer, Birdsong said that he felt records should be kept confidental as they included opinions, information which might damage the innocent, and similar unsubstantiated matter.

When Chairman John Hannah, president of Michigan State University, asked if Lyell would permit perusal of such records for the information of the commission on a confidential basis, Lyell replied such a request would be considered.

The commission also sought records in the beating of Bruce Payne and George Green, two civil rights workers, in late 1963 near Port Gibson. The investigations, however, were handled by the FBI.

Six other persons brought records specified in subpoenaes. They included Sheriff Jack Purvis and Circuit Clerk G. H. Hood of Humphreys County; Police Chief Dan Thompson of Canton; Sheriff Jack Cauthen of Madison County; Sheriff Odeall Anders of Adams County and Police Chief J. T. Robinson of Natchez.

Details of the records were not disclosed.

Five days of public hearings were scheduled to complete the commission's civil rights investigation of the state. The commission met two days in closed sessions last week to hear those who might be mentioned in public testimony this week. A commission member said after hearing a person who might be impugned, the commission would decide whether to bring out such testimony in a public session.

Advisory Committee Says Negro in Miss. Subject to Terror

B.P. State Times

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The state advisory committee to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said today hat police brutality, economic pressures and night riders have forced Mississippi negroes to accept an inferior station or live in terror.

The biracial committee's charges were presented in a report to the commission, which began public hearings today on the racial situation in Mississippi.

The report, presented by Dr. A. B. Britton Jr., a Jackson Negro physician and committee chairman, noted what it termed progress in recent months.

This included free registration of Negroes as voters in some counties, desegregation of many public accommodations, testimony from officials of Greenville and Gulfport before the committee and statements from various business and civic groups urging compliance with the Civil Rights Act.

Most of the 19-page report reviewed complaints and testimony received by the 10-member committee over the past year.

Reluctant to Testify

The group — which includes three Negroes and is made up of clergymen, professional men, a former college president, a housewife and a newspaper publisher — reported many were reluctant to testify for fear of reprisal.

In one instance, the report said, the home of a former McComb policeman was bombed hours after he testified.

"Under color of law voter registration workers have been stopped on roads and highways and subjected to cursings, insults and physical beatings," the report said.

"A carload of voter registration workers was stopped by a highway patrolman, verbally assaulted and arrested."

Collusion Charged

The report said at Canton "witnesses reported that police continually harassed persons attending voter registration rallies" and that officers in the area had beaten and arrested some participants.

"Several witnesses reported that in some sections of Mississippi there appeared to be a pattern of collusion between local law enforcement officers and hoodlum elements," the report said.

Henry Requests New Federal Laws On Voting

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A Mississippi Negro leader asked today that the government insure Negro voting rights in the South with new federal laws backed by federal arms.

Aaron Henry, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, listed three proposals to the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

The Clarksdale druggist said federal voter registrars should be set up in an area where Negroes are blocked from casting ballots.

In addition, he said, literacy tests are misused and should be outlawed as a prerequisite to registering, and the city, county and state should be made liable for damage suits from citizens denied registration or harrassed for seeking to vote.

During a recess, commission chairman Dr. John Hannah, president of Michigan State, said he went to the governor's office to seek assurance of protection for Negroes who testify.

Jesse James Brewer, a farmer in Tallahatchie County, said when he returned home after World War II "my freedom of speech went out."

Brewer was one of three Tallahatchie County Negroes to testify at commission public hearings on Mississippi repression of Negro efforts to vote.

The sessions drew a capacity crowd to the Veterans Administration Hospital auditorium, located some distance out of town.

Brewer said he feared for his safety after registering to vote last Aug. 5, particularly since one of his brothers had been beaten with an axe handle for failing to 'sir' a storekeeper.

Another brother, he added, went to try to rescue the one being beaten and was slugged so hard the impact of the club knocked an eye out of its socket.

William Taylor, commission chief counsel, said the Brewer cases would be taken up again later in private session.

James Henry Rayburn, 63, also a farmer, testified he registered in 1963 but was turned away from the polling place by two white men when he tried to cast a ballot.

Did he report the matter to officers? "That would have just made bad matters worse," he replied.

Edwina Hamlet a retired school teacher, said she registered in 1962 and shortly afterward found an effigy of a hanged woman dangling from her mailbox.

Inquiries about Tallahatchie and Washington counties in north Mississippi and Jefferson County in the south half of the state went on today's agenda to round out the commission probe of voter registration. The commission hoped to complete this phase and begin checking on law enforcement and civil rights during the afternoon.

The witness list included:

Aaron Henry of Clarksdale, a Negro druggist and state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Charles Evers of Jackson, state NAACP field secretary since the ambush slaying of his brother Medgar two years ago.

Burke Marshall, former head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, whose testimony was prepared for presentation by a department representative because of his illness.

Dr. James Prothro, a University of North Carolina faculty member who studied the qualifications of Negro teachers to register.

Testimony Tuesday came from Issaquena, Humphreys, Tate and Carroll Counties, all in north Mississippi. Several Negroes testified they felt conditions had changed in recent months.

Gov. Paul Johnson appeared briefly to open commission proceedings. He renewed his promise of a year ago that violence will not be tolerated and all law violators will be dealt with equally.

Humphreys County furnished most of the surprises and conflicts.

Commission member Erwin Griswold, dean of the Harvard Law School, handed Circuit Clerk G. H. Hood of Belzoni a copy of Section 182 of the state constitution—dealing with taxing powers—and asked him to interpret it.

State law requires a registrant to interpret to the satisfaction of the clerk one section of the constitution to meet requirements. The clerk picks the section and Hood said he gave them in sequence, beginning with the first.

Hood studied the section designated by Griswold and began reading it. Griswold interrupted and insisted on an interpretation. Hood studied further, then after whispering from his lawyer declined to attempt it.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, a commission member and president of Notre Dame University, commented: "I don't think the dean of a law school could pass it (the voter test)."

Hood said he treated all applicants alike and applied the same grading standards to all "to the best of my ability."

Hood contradicted testimony by two Negro witnesses, Mary Welch and Daisy Griffin, that he threatened to cut off welfare aid to them if they registered.

"No, sir, I did not," he said.

T. V. Johnson, a Belzoni Negro undertaker, testified efforts a decade ago to encourage Negro registration died out after one leader was killed and another wounded. He said Negroes feared bodily harm and economic pressure.

Mary Thomas, a Belzoni Negro grocery operator, said she was jailed on charges of selling beer without a license although she had federal, state and city licenses. She said she was never advised about a county license.

Alene Hunter, another Belzoni Negro, testified she was jailed because she could not pay $5.15 owed to a merchant.

Both women said their arrest came shortly after registration attempts.

However, Sheriff Jack Purvis testified the charge involved a bad check for $5.15 and not the debt itself. He said the Thomas woman was advised she should have a county license and she did not respond.

Adell Davis and Edgar Burton, both Negro residents of ticipation in politics. He recounted the incidents he had heard from his father and said Negroes still talked about them.

"It's softening up a little now," Eskridge said. "Several teachers have paid their poll taxes. They are protecting Negroes now since the last sheriff came."

He said he felt white people had feared letting Negroes register because Negroes outnumbered them.

He said traditionally when a Negro was killed, nothing was done about it, while a white man could hit a Negro with impunity.

Jake Cain, 78-year-old Negro farmer, said he was guided through registration tests by a county official after a federal court threw out a murder conviction of a Negro on grounds Negroes had been excluded from the trial jury.

Only registered males may serve on Mississippi juries. The Negro defendant, Robert Goldsby, was later tried in another pass the test.

Charles Humpstone, a commission staff attorney, testified a study of voter registration records in Issaquena indicated that all white applicants were passed by the circuit clerk, who handles registration, but only nine Negroes were registered.

He said whites were given stiffer sections of the state constitution to interpret since Negroes had begun registration efforts, while about half the Negroes got comparable sections and the rest harder sections.

Humpsone said whites seemed to have gotten aid in answering difficult questions, judging from the similarity of answers.

Asked if testing were fair in Issaquena County, he replied, "My opinion is that they are not."

He said whites were registered more frequently with some answers incorrect or with the signature in the wrong place, grounds used for failing some Negroes.

Tate County, said they had no trouble registering after conferring with local white leaders.

Davis said the sheriff attended a local Negro meeting, "encouraged all Negroes who wanted to vote" to seek registration, and offered protection.

The commission said a year ago there were no Negroes among the 4,300 of voting age in Tate County who had registered, while 70 per cent of the 4,500 whites of voting age could vote.

Father Hesburgh commented he did not think Negroes should have to clear their registration with white leaders. The Negroes said they had sought to avoid any trouble.

William Eskridge, a Negro farmer in Carroll County, said he registered in 1931 and voted during the next two years, but stopped when his salary as a teacher was cut from about $40 per month to $25.50.

He said racial troubles 80 years ago—involving the deaths of Negroes and whites — had made Negroes fearful of participation in politics. He recounted the incidents he had heard from his father and said Negroes still talked about them.

"It's softening up a little now," Eskridge said. "Several teachers have paid their poll taxes. They are protecting Negroes now since the last sheriff came."

Only registered males may serve on Mississippi juries. The Negro defendant, Robert Goldsby, was later tried in another county, convicted and executed.

"Things are quieting down," Cain said. "Deputies don't use clubs or kick them (Negroes). I don't think there is a white man in Carroll County who would club me."

Witnesses from Issaquena County, a sparsely populated area without an incorporated town, testified about registration attempts following a voter drive last year.

Jeremiah Blackwell, a Negro who said she had joined the staff of the Council of Federated Organizations, said Negroes in the county feared their welfare checks would be stopped or they would be put off farms if they registered. She said about 150 had made the effort.

She also said she twice failed the test but was registered on the third attempt by the circuit clerk—"I guess she was tired of looking at me."

Percy Brinson, a Negro who said he grossed $9,000 yearly from his 96-acre farm, said the sheriff had urged him to try and register, but that he did not pass the test.

Charles Humpstone, a commission staff attorney, testified a study of voter registration records in Issaquena indicated that all white applicants were passed by the circuit clerk, who handles registration, but only nine Negroes were registered.

He said whites were given stiffer sections of the state constitution to interpret since Negroes had begun registration efforts, while about half the Negroes got comparable sections and the rest harder sections.

Aged Negro Testifies For Right to Vote

2/17/65

B.R. State Times

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — "Until we can get to the polls, I don't think we can be considered citizens," a 78-year-old Negro farmer, who says he paid poll taxes for more than 40 years before being allowed to register as a voter, told the U.S. Civil Rights Commission.

Although he was permitted to register, Jake Cain of Carroll County said, he has been afraid to vote.

Cain was one of 15 Negro witnesses who appeared before the commission Tuesday. Some said "things are getting better."

The commission hopes to wind up its look into voting registration today and consider other matters.

"We were raised in an atmosphere that kept us under fear that we should not go in and vote," said Cain, who owns his own 185-acre farm.

Cain was one of those who said the situation was improving.

"The deputies don't use clubs and kick the Negroes every time they take them in like they used to do," he said.

The Negro said he was registered to vote six years ago when the Carroll County sheriff wanted to get Negroes on the voter rolls after a federal court tossed out a murder conviction because no Negroes could qualify for jury service.

A year later, Cain continued, he asked if he could vote but was told there would be opposition.

"I've paid my taxes since I was 21 and I have been a loyal citizen all these years," Cain said. "Next time, I will attempt to vote."

Percy Brinson, a Negro who owns a 96-acre farm in Issaquena County which he said had an income of more than $9,000 annually, said that for years "I didn't try to register because I knew it was not wanted. I knew of people who tried and were turned down and I wanted to keep it peaceable."

He said the sheriff asked him a year ago to register but he was turned down after taking the voter qualification test.

The Rev. Theodore Hesburgh, a commission member and president of Notre Dame University, asked Brinson:

"Do you think if you can manage the business of a farm with a $9,000 income and pay taxes you ought to have the right to vote?"

Brinson said he felt "if I could vote it would give me a little power to benefit us, not only the Negro, but the poor people."

Judge Refuses

Circuit Clerk G. H. Hood of Humphreys County was asked by commission member Erwin Griswold, dean of the Harvard Law School, to interpret a section of the Mississippi constitution which he gives as a test to voter applicants.

Hood hesitated and then began to read the section.

"I didn't ask you to read it," said Griswold. "I asked you to give a reasonable interpretation."

Hood consulted his attorney and then declined to do it.

"On grounds your answer might incriminate yourself?" Griswold asked.

"Yes, sir," was Hood's reply.

"I find his refusal to interpret it rather surprising when citizens of Mississippi are asked to do the same thing in order to register," Griswold commented.

John D. Purvis, the Humphreys County sheriff, admitted taking pictures of Negroes who had gone to his courthouse to register.

"Did you consider what effect taking their pictures might have on Negroes attempting to register?" Purvis was asked by commission member Robert S. Rankin of Duke University.

"It never occurred to me that it would," replied the sheriff, adding he couldn't understand the Negroes "being afraid of me."

Purvis, under questioning, said he believed "qualified Negro citizens are entitled to the same right to vote as white people."

U. S. Urged to Use Force, If Needed, in Mississippi

From Gazette Press Services

JACKSON, Miss. — An integration leader told the United States Civil Rights Commission Wednesday that President Johnson should make clear he will use federal force if necessary to back up Negroes' voting rights in Mississippi.

"Soft talk" on the issue is getting nowhere, Aaron Henry, a Clarksdale druggist and state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said.

Henry and Charles Evers, another NAACP official, testified after a Negro farmer told the Commission that two of his brothers were beaten with ax handles because they failed to say "sir" when talking to a white man.

The farmer, Jesse James Brewer, said the incident made him determined to become a voter. He said he tried unsuccessfully to have charges filed against his brothers' assailants.

The Commission is holding a five-day public hearing, its first such session in Mississippi, to get a first hand report on the state's racial situation.

Other racial developments:

★ Police in Moultrie, Ga., arrested 124 Negro demonstrators who gathered at the city jail to protest the arrest of 230 Negro students Tuesday. The students were protesting alleged "deplorable" conditions at the Negro school.

★ Two young Negroes standing in an ice cream parlor in a racially mixed area of Mobile, Ala., were seriously wounded by a shotgun blast fired from a car reportedly containing two white men.

In their appearance before the Civil Rights Commission Henry and Evers estimated only 24,000 of 400,000 eligible Negroes, about 6 per cent, were registered to vote in Mississippi.

"Of all the problems that exist in Mississippi, it is my feeling that all of these can be resolved once the right to vote is gained," Henry said.

"This is not a fight of white against black, but right against wrong," Evers said. "There are many decent whites who feel like we do but can't speak up."

Evers, state NAACP field secretary, testified that it took a lot of courage for Negroes to seek voting rights in "an atmosphere of fear and intimidation."

"Negroes who tried to change the pattern," he added, could look forward to possible "physical violence, economic reprisals * * * losing jobs or not getting jobs."

"For many people, an attempt to vote would result in not having any money to buy milk for the baby, food for the family and to pay the rent," he said.

Evers—who took over the field secretary job after his brother, Medgar Evers, was murdered by a sniper—said the civil rights drive had resulted in church burnings, beatings, shootings, bombings, murders, cross burnings and other forms of intimidation.

"Some law enforcement officials in Mississippi conscientiously serve the law," Evers said. "They are not numerous."

Corrective measures which the two NAACP leaders recommended included the appointment of federal registrar in counties where Negroes are not permitted to vote; outlawing the state's literacy test; adoption of a new law making the state, counties and cities liable for damages when violence or intimidation is directed against a Negro applicant.

Branton Mentions Military Governor

Wiley Branton of Atlanta, director of the Southern Regional Council's Voter Education Project, told the commission that a "climate of fear" existed in Mississippi. He said his workers had more difficulty in Mississippi than in 10 other states in collecting information for a study on voting in the South.

Branton, a former Pine Bluff, Ark., attorney, suggested President Johnson take a personal hand in the situation. "Even if it took the appointment of a military governor in Mississippi, I'd do that," he said.

Governor Paul B. Johnson Jr. was asked Wednesday to "take particular interest" in the future safety of Negroes who testify before the Civil Rights Commission.

The request was made by the Commission president, Dr. John Hannah, who made a quick trip to Johnson's office during a recess.

Dr. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, made the move after hearing testimony from three Tallahatchie County Negroes about beatings and alleged intimidation.

"I have asked the governor to take particular interest that when these witnesses return to their homes they will be fully protected," said Hannah. "I am particularly concerned about the witnesses from Tallahatchie County."

Hannah said he was heartened by Governor Johnson's statement to the Commission Tuesday that law and order will be maintained and that no racial violence will be tolerated.

At Moultrie, the 124 Negro demonstrators were arrested in front of City Hall on orders of Assistant Police Chief J. Q. Davis.

Davis warned the demonstrators they were violating the city code. He counted off three minutes on his watch and then ordered them arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

The arrests accompanied demonstrations after almost all of the 700 Negro students enrolled at William Bryant High school quit in protest of segregation and what they called deplorable conditions at the school.

Efforts by school authorities and parents to end the boycott were fruitless.

Boys arrested in the demonstrations are being held in the county work farm, while the girls were taken to the city jail—which was filled—and to the Mitchell County jail at Camilla, about 35 miles away.

Attendance at the high school has fallen below 100 since the walkout February 3.

Two Wounded Seriously In Shooting at Mobile

At Mobile, police said Negroes Billy Kinnard, 18, and James Lee Doss, 16, were in serious condition at a hospital with buckshot wounds.

Negro witnesses said Kinnard and Doss were shot while standing outside an ice cream parlor in a racially-mixed neighborhood. They said the blasts were fired from a car containing two white men who were wearing business suits.

Kinnard was struck in the stomach and Doss in the leg by the buckshot.

There had been no previous racial trouble in the area, officers said.

Dr. Felix C. Robb, president of George Peabody College in Nashville Tenn., has been selected as chairman of the newly formed Southeastern Section of the Regional Manpower Advisory Committee, Senator Ross Bass, (Dem., Tenn.), said Wednesday.—Washington (AP).

TERROR DEPICTED AT RIGHTS INQUIRY

Mississippi Negroes Testify on Attempts at Voting

By ROY REED
Special to The New York Times

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 17 — Negro farmers and housewives told the United States Civil Rights Commission today that they had been subjected to day-to-day terrorism for asserting their political rights in Mississippi.

A threat to kill, an effigy hanged from a mailbox and unlighted automobiles cruising past a house at midnight were among the methods the witnesses said had been used to try to keep them from voting in one Mississippi county in the last two years.

From another county came a report that the Ku Klux Klan had adopted a modern sales technique. A Negro woman said that, after she and her husband tried to register to vote, a Klan delegation visited their house and left a printed calling card bearing a warning.

An automobile mechanic told the commission of being jailed in McComb after a bomb was exploded in his yard one midnight last summer. He said his wife had tried to register to vote.

Teachers Fear for Jobs

A college professor reported a survey showing that Negro teachers in some parts of Mississippi were afraid of losing their jobs if they tried to vote or even talked about it.

"The walls have ears," one teacher told the interviewers.

Some witnesses testified that they had seen signs of improvement, partly because of the Mississippi Negro's newfound courage and his increased determination to assert himself.

James Henry Rayburn, a Tallahatchie farmer, said he had been frightened away with a threat of death when he attempted to vote in 1963. He declared that he was now determined to exercise his franchise and was no longer afraid.

"The time's done run out for that," he said.

Several witnesses attributed the stiffened Negro attitude to the Council of Federated Organizations and the hundreds of Negro and white youths it brought to Mississippi last summer.

The witnesses said that most Negroes in their communities had not believed they had a chance of voting until council workers persuaded them otherwise and accompanied them to the registrars' offices.

In spite of signs of progress, only 6.7 per cent of the eligible Negroes are registered to vote in Mississippi. More civil rights leaders added their voices today to a plea for more Federal help.

Aaron E. Henry president of the Mississippi branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, proposed Federal legislation similar to that presented last week in Washington by the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. Mr. Henry suggested laws establishing Federal voting registrars, outlawing literacy tests and making local and state governments liable for damages to persons trying to register.

Mr. Henry and Wiley A. Branton, director of the Voter Education Project of the Southern Regional Council, said they believed the President should send Federal troops to Mississippi if other methods failed to guarantee Negro voting rights.

Dr. John A. Hannah, chairman of the commission, telephoned the office of Gov. Paul B. Johnson Jr. today to ask the Governor to protect witnesses testifying before the commission. He said an aide to Mr. Johnson had indicated the Governor's office would cooperate.

Dr. Hannah called upon the aide to ask the sheriffs of several counties, especially the sheriff of Tallahatchie County, to protect witnesses. The witnesses from Tallahatchie County reported that Negroes were particularly fearful of white reprisals when they tried to vote there.

Today was the second of five days of open hearings by the commission into charges of racial discrimination in voting and law-enforcement in Mississippi.

'Soft Talk'

"Soft talk" on the issue is getting nowhere, said Aaron Henry, state president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Henry and Charles Evers, another NAACP official, testified shortly after a Negro farmer told the commission that two of his brothers were beaten with ax handles because they failed to say "sir" when talking to a white man.

The farmer, Jesse James Brewer, said the incident made him determined to become a voter. He said he tried unsuccessfully to have charges filed against his brothers' assailants.

The commission is holding a five-day public hearing, its first such session in Mississippi, to get a first hand report on the state's racial situation.

Developments

—Police in Moultrie, Ga., arrested 124 Negro demonstrators who gathered at the city jail to protest the arrest of 230 Negro students Tuesday. The students were protesting alleged "deplorable" conditions at the Negro school.

—Sheriff Jim Clark turned up at his office in Selma, Ala. with a splint on the third finger of his left hand. He suffered the injury Wednesday in an altercation with a Negro leader. Clark said at the time he wasn't certain whether or not he struck the Negro.

—The headquarters for an integrationist organization in Laurel, Miss., was damaged by fire. A worker claimed that some equipment had been trampled and typewriters and a tape recorder stolen.

—Two young Negroes standing in an ice cream parlor in a racially mixed area of Mobile, Ala., were seriously wounded by a shotgun blast fired from a car reportedly containing two white men.

In their appearance before the civil rights commission Henry and Evers estimated only 24,000 of 400,000 eligible Negroes, about six per cent, were registered to vote in Mississippi.

"Of all the problems that exist in Mississippi, it is my feeling that all of these can be resolved once the right to vote is gained," Henry said.

"This is not a fight of white against black, but right against wrong," said Evers. "There are many decent whites who feel like we do but can't speak up."

McComb Witnesses Testify That Tension Has Eased

Greenwood Commonwealth 2/18/65

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Witnesses agreed today that racial tension in McComb, Miss., scene of more than 15 bombings, has eased since white leaders took a stand against violence.

Jesse Lee Harris, a Negro field worker for the Student Nonviolent coordinating Committee, told the U.S. Civil Rights Commission that the change has not been great but "we used to couldn't even get a church to meet in."

Harris said civil rights workers were arrested whenver possible on the most trivial charges.

Though conceding, under questioning by Commission members, that things are better now he said statement of principle from white leaders "really don't solve problems."

Robert W. Brumfield, a white lawyer and former McComb city judge, said the change for the better was directly due to the statement of principle, backed by vigorous law enforcement.

Some 600 white businessmen in McComb signed the statement after the arrest of 11 white men, who drew suspended sentences in bombing cases.

The commission hearings, being held in the auditorium at the Veterans administration Hospital, drew a capacity crowd. The hearings wind up tomorrow.

Chairman John Hannah, president of Michigan State, asked the governor yesterday to "take particular interest" in seeing that Negro witnesses before the commission come to no harm.

"We have no indication anything will happen," Dr. Hannah told newsmen. "It could easily be that nothing will. It is an insurance move.

"It would be embarrassing to the commission and the state if anything did happen, however."

The matter of protection for witnesses arose Wednesday during the second day of the six-member commission's public hearings here into Mississippi's racial problems.

The commission concentrated its efforts today on charges by Negroes of discriminatory law enforcement. Most of the first two days were spent checking complaints of violations of voting rights.

Dr. Hannah, president of Michigan State University, telephoned the governor's office and spoke to an aide about protection for Negro witnesses.

"I was particularly concerned about the witnesses from Tallahatchie County," Dr. Hannah said.

Three Negroes from that county complained of harassments in connection with efforts to register to vote.

Dr. Hannah said he has no information of any threats against these particular witnesses. But "we have had problems in the past when witnesses have gone back home and been harassed," he said.

Johnson could not be reached for comment on the request. An aide assured Dr. Hannah, however, the state would do what it could.

Appearing before the commission Tuesday, Johnson said law and order would be upheld in Mississippi and violence would not be tolerated.

Pike County Sheriff R. R. Warren of McComb, scene of numerous bombings and church burnings in Negro neighborhoods last year, told the commission Wednesday that law enforcement agencies must have the backing of both whites and Negroes to preserve the peace.

Much of Pike County's racial troubles last summer came from whites taking the law into their own hands and Negroes refusing to cooperate in investigations, he said.

Pike County's racial tempers cooled noticeably in recent months, the sheriff added, after white business and civic leaders issued a call for law and order.

James W. Prothro, a University of North Carolina professor, told the commission he made a study of voting habits of Negro teachers in four undisclosed counties. He said many of the teachers did not vote because they feared loss of their job.

Aaron Henry, Clarksdale druggist and NAACP state president, questioned the sincerity of the governor's call for law and order.

"I'm not at all convinced the change of heart by Governor Johnson is sincere," Henry told the commission. "Wait until the civil rights commission goes back to Washington."

Marshall Not In Favor Of Protection

By JAMES SAGGUS

JACKSON, Miss. — A former chief of the Jus- forces headed by a Roman Catholic officer re- day against creation of a federal police force to protect civil rights workers in the South.

Burke Marshall's views were contained in a statement submitted to the U. S. Civil Rights Commission, which is investigating racial problems in Mississippi.

The Rev. Martin Luther King and other Southern integration leaders repeatedly have called for federal protection of civil rights workers, charging that local officers do nothing to stop violence.

"The truth of this matter is that there is no acctptable federal solution to this law enforcement problem," sad Marshall, who resigned recently as assistant attorney general.

"We have no federal police force," his statement said, "... . . and I do not believe that the situation, deplorable as it may be in many parts, warrants the departure from this historic pattern of limited federal power."

Marshall conceded court orders in cases involving 'excesses by local law enforcement officers' were slow and "not a very useful instrument.'

The six-member Civil Rights Commission expects to conclude public hearings Saturday into the Mississippi situation. The hearings, which began Tuesday, have been aimed primarily at Negro voter registration and alleged discrimination by police against Negroes and civil rights workers.

The Rev. James McCree, a Negro Methodist minister in Madison County, testified after a Justice Department lawyer read Marshall's statement to the commission.

The minister told of threats, church bombings, and beatings that he said followed attempts by Negroes to register to vote in his county. Negroes make up 70 per cent of the population in Madison County.

As a result of such harassments, he said, 'I never have seen the fear in people—even in the invasion of France—like the fear in the people of Madison County."

He said Negroes were even "afraid to go to church" and estimated at least 100 Negros have lost their jobs as part of the harassment.

In his statement Marshall said there has been progress in erasing voter discrimination in Mississippi. He said the civil rights laws passed in recent years have helped.

Marshall submitted figures to show that the percentage of Negro voters in many counties increased perceptably between 1962 and 1964.

The commission will study the testimony received at the hearings this week and make recommendations to the President and Congress on its findings.

Claude Ramsay of Pascagoula, state labor council president, told the commission yesterday that extremist elements have taken over "a number of local unions—not too many' in Mississippi.

U.S. Com

Rights Commission Told Of Mississippi Terror

at World 2/20/65

JACKSON, Miss. — (UPI) — Negroes and whites Thursday told the U. S. Civil Rights Commission grim stories of terrorism, beatings, bombings and alleged racial injustice in Mississippi law enforcement.

Two Natchez Negroes testified they were stripped and flogged by hooded whites with whips and guns. A white labor leader told how he was beaten on a lonely road after he criticized the Ku Klux Klan.

Most of the testimony centered around the Natchez and McComb areas of southwest Mississippi, hottest of all the state's racial hotspots during the violent summer of 1964.

Sheriff Odell Anders of Natchez and city Police Chief J. T. Robinson told the commission they were sure they knew the persons behind the Natchez violence, but didn't have enough evidence for arrests.

Anders said he had "stayed up night after night" trying to crack the cases and felt that "only 10 or 12 persons" were involved.

Otis Matthews, 41, a white official of a Laurel, Miss., woodworkers local, told the commission that he once criticized the Klan for trying to interfere with integration at the plan where he worked.

After that, he said, he was forced from his car at gunpoint, blindfolded and beaten with a leather strap.

After his beating, his local issued a statement that further assaults on a union member would be met with gunfire.

CR Commission Hearing May Have Big Impact On State

By JAMES SAGGUS
Associated Press Writer

2/22/65

The U.S. Civil Rights Commission hearings in Jackson this week may have a far greater impact on Mississippi than generally expected.

Although no one doubts that Congress and the President will consider seriously any recommendations for law changes the commission may make, the hearings may bring about subtle changes in attitudes that could have an equally marked effect.

Little startling information came out at the hearing. But it seemed by the cumulative effect of so much testimony to dramatize both the Negro's status and his aspirations — and point up the lag between the two.

The commission staff assembled voluminous reports on racial incidents in the counties hardest hit in the past year. The lists themselves were impressive.

And the fact that Negroes from such touchy areas would speak so strongly against their local situations impressed many.

The hearings were an experience for most people who followed them carefully. Although they resembled courtroom proceedings in some respects, there were contrasts.

Commission attorneys and members led witnesses through their stories, frequently putting words in the mouths of the witnesses.

Such questionins would have come to a quick halt in any court.

And it was equally obvious commission members were not assuming the roles of impartial judges.

Lines of questioning and comments throughout the hearings made it clear the commission approached its task with the presupposition that racial integration should be as desirable as a social or ethical goal as it was the aim of law.

Numerous efforts were made to get witnesses on record as saying they felt compliance with the Civil Rights Act of 1964 would benefit the state through economic and social avenues, and that the law might be a good thing after all.

And most observers felt the commission sought to show the summer civil rights project last year was a beneficial thing to the state.

Most commission members also seemed to show they favored universal suffrage — at least among those over 21 — rather than uniform application of voter registration tests or culling any unqualified white voters from the rolls.

The commission obviously was well prepared to make the points in its report that it chooses to make. It had background on the cases which could prove most embarrassing to state leaders and seemed to know little about the state laws that would tend to explain some of the situations which appeared inequitable.

It was apparent also that the Negro community of the state is now approaching its civil rights goal with considerably more confidence than in the past. If it were not, it is doubtful that some of those who appeared to testify would have done so in public.

The similarity of certain phases in testimony by Negro witnesses showed that politics has been discussed thoroughly at meetings of civil rights groups. The phrase "power structure in a community" — meaning the white leadership in the political and business world — came from numerous witnesses.

The hearings left a good many prime questions unanswered, however.

Witnesses, for instance, cast many doubts about the sincerity of statements by Gov. Paul Johnson and business leaders calling for maintenance of law and order, and compliance with civil rights laws.

The commission as well as many Mississippians, white and Negro, will be watching now to see if those who made statements back them up with deeds.

Aanother unanswered question was whether the Negro community feels it is prepared to assume a major share of responsibility for the state's political and economic welfare.

Although most witnesses stressed they wanted only equality, their very tendency to accept the implications of the labels "whites" and "Negroes" makes it doubtful they can think in terms of the individual rather than the group.

This was apparently the reason Chairman John Hannah, president of Michigan State University, felt constrained to point out that equality meant equality of opportunity rather than of actual standing. He made clear that it is up to the individual to take advantage of his opportunities.

By implication, he seemed to emphasize that the raising of the cultural level of an entire group is a mammoth undertaking and overnight results are not to be expected.

But despite this, Negro witnesses seemed to equate the numbers holding good jobs or voter registration certificates with equality.

Whether the Negro would recognize equality until he had actually gained a state of superiority is a question often posed by psychologists. These who ask it frequently point to the plight of many African nations which were unprepared when handed the job of self-government.

Without comparing the status of the American Negro with the African, they contend that a sudden acquisition of powers for which one is unprepared will frequently lead to using such powers to cover up feelings of inferiority or resentments.

By contrast, they say, the performance of the Negro citizen in Greenville, for example, where his standing is higher and his preparation better, indicate that it is just these factors which will mean success or failure for him as he moves upward.

The commission may be considering such practical matters, but it has not discussed them in Mississippi.

STATEMENT PREPARED FOR MAGGIE LONG FOR NEW SOUTH.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENT BY WILEY A. BRANTON
TO THE CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION

Wiley Branton, in testifying before the United States Commission on Civil Rights in Jackson, Mississippi, on February 17, 1965, was asked by one of the Commission members, (Mrs. Frankie Muse Freeman) what he thought should be done in Mississippi if Negroes continued to be denied the right to register, and if violence and harassment continued. His reply was substantially as follows:

"Mississippi has had such serious problems over so long a period of time as to require the attention of the White House immediately. Governor Paul Johnson has suggested that the government get off Mississippi's back and allow the state a change to comply with the laws of the land. As one who has lived in the South all my life, I am a great believer in accepting a man's word until he proves himself differently, no matter what his past conduct has been. I feel that President Johnson should say to the governor that the government will accept him at his word, and give the state a reasonable period of time to show positive evidence of change, but I do not feel that the state should be given a long period of time. If, at the end of that period of time, there has not been a substantial change in the denial of voting rights and the pattern of violence, then we should immediately take drastic action. Just as in the course of our American history, we have found it necessary to send Marines to Tripoli, Cuba, and Haiti to protect American lives and property, then God knows, it would be high time for us to send in some military forces to protect Mississippi lives and property, and I would do just that. If such action became necessary, then I feel that the President should appoint a military governor of Mississippi, and give that state another period of reconstruction which it seemed to have missed out on a hundred years ago."

PREPARED STATEMENT OF MR. BURKE MARSHALL SUBMITTED TO THE UNITED STATES COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS, JACKSON MISSISSIPPI, FEBRUARY 18, 1965.

INTRODUCTION

Mr. Chairman, members of the Commission. I am pleased to be here today, at your request, to discuss the experience of the Department of Justice in enforcing the federal voting statutes and dealing with certain other problems in the State of Mississippi. From February of 1961 until January of 1965, I was Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Civil Rights Division, United States Department of Justice. While I am now engaged in the private practice of law in Washington, D. C. and no longer associated with the Department of Justice, what I have to say will coincide, I think, with the present views of the Department.

I have a prepared statement to read, after which I will be happy to answer any questions.

Justice Dept.

The principal federal constitutional provision dealing with voting is the Fifteenth Amendmend. Adopted in 1870, it forbids the States or the United States to deny or abridge the right to vote in any election, state or federal, on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Additional federal power to legislate in this field is derived from the Fourteenth Amendment. Articles I, Sections 2 and 4, as supplemented by the Seventeenth Amendment, also are a source of federal power to regulate federal elections.

Shortly after the ratification of the Fifteenth Amendment, Congress adopted legislation to permit private litigants to bring suit to protect the right to vote. During the same period criminal statutes punishing denials of the right to vote were enacted, but no civil enforcement power was given to the Department of Justice at that time.

It was no secret to anyone that these statutory remedies were hopelessly inadequate and that there were no attempts made to enforce those laws which were available. Negro disfranchisement was widespread. In many states, Negroes were not permitted to register to vote and those already registered were purged from the rolls -- without significant protest from any quarter. This failure to make good on the promise of the Fifteenth Amendment cannot be laid on the doorstep of any one state or any one region. It was part of the larger historical pattern which saw our people at the end of the 19th and the beginning of the 20th century preoccupied with pursuits other than the meaningful grant of full citizenship to the former slaves. Thus, the practices which disfranchised Negroes flourished unchallenged for three generations.

A serious, sustained, and broad effort to deal with this problem began only about eight years ago. For it was not until 1957 that public acquiesence in the outrageous treatment of Negro citizens in their attempts to become participants in the electoral process was abated sufficiently to permit the enactment by the Congress of meaningful legislation to protect the rights of Negro citizens to vote.

In the Civil Rights Act of 1957, Congress empowered the Attorney General of the United States to institute suits to protect the right to vote from deprivations because of race or color. 42 U.S.C. 1971 (a), (c). At the same time, the Act also prohibited threats and intimidations for the purpose of interfering with the right to vote in federal elections and it gave the Attorney General authority to bring suits to protect against such interference. 42 U.S.C. 1971 (b), (c).

A number of lawsuits were brought between 1957 and 1960 under the authority of the new Act, none of them in Mississippi. The experience with these lawsuits quickly pointed to the need for further voting legislation. It became apparent at once that voting discrimination suits could not adequately be prepared without full access to the relevant registration papers and documents and that, even where a suit was brought to a successful conclusion, the scope of the relief had to be wider than what was being afforded by the courts at that time. In 1960, Congress set out to remedy these defects. The Civil Rights Act of that year granted to the Attorney General full powers of inspection of documents in the custody of local voting registrars. It further provided that where a pattern or practice of discrimination was found a new and more comprehensive procedure for the registration of Negroes was to be employed. This new procedure permits any Negro in the affected area whose application has been rejected by local officials to appy directly to the federal court or a federal voting referee for an order certifying him to vote. The orders of the court so obtained are binding upon state voting officials with respect to both state and federal elections.

The Department of Justice brought 40 discrimination suits between the date of enactment of the 1960 Act and the enactment of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Of these 40 lawsuits, 16 were in Mississippi. In addition, 7 voting discrimination suits have been brought in Mississippi since the passage of the 1964 Act so that up to date we have a total of 23 such lawsuits brought since July 1961.

I should like to describe these Mississippi lawsuits in some detail, but before I do it might be helpful if I related briefly what Mississippi law requires in the way of registration for voting, and what the statistics show concerning registration for voting in this State.

In Mississippi registration is a prerequisite to voting in any election, state or federal. The registration laws are administered in each county by a registrar, who is the circuit court clerk, an elected official. Since the recent adoption of the federal Poll Tax Amendment (the 24th Amendment) the payment of poll taxes is a prerequisite to voting only in elections for state offices. Payment of the tax is not a prerequisite to registration. The County Sheriff, as tax collector, is responsible for collection of the poll tax.

The basic qualifications for registration in Mississippi are citizenship, residence in the State for two years and in the election district in the county for one year. The prospective voter must also be at least 21 years of age, not insane and he must not have been convicted of any disqualifying crime.

In addition to these basic qualifications, the Mississippi Constitution and laws impose the requirements that an applicant must be able to read and write any section of the State Constitution and give a "reasonable interpretation" thereof to the satisfaction of the registrar; he must demonstrate a "reasonable understanding" of the duties and obligations of citizenship under a constitutional form of government.

These requirements becmme effective in March 1955. All persons registered prior to January 1, 1954 were exempted by law from having their qualifications to vote determined under these added requirements.

In 1960, the requirement of "good moral character" as a prerequisite to voting was added to the Mississippi Constitution.

In 1962 several new statutes, including one implementing the good moral character requirement, were adopted. These laws (1) require that all blanks on the application form be completed "properly and responsively" by the applicant without assistance; (2) prevent a registrar from advising a rejected applicant of the reason for his rejection, because that would constitute assistance; (3) provide for publication of names of applicants for registration in the local newspaper and require applicants to wait for an extended period of time after publication before the applicant can determine (usually about a month) whether he has been registered or denied registration; (4) permit any qualified elector to challenge the qualifications including moral character of any applicant whose name is published. Finally, a 1960 law permits registrars to destroy application forms.

What are the dimensions of the problem? The statistics provide some answers.

The most complete statistics for Negro registration are for January 1955 immediately prior to the adoption of the constitutional interpretation test as a prerequisite for voting. As of 1955, of 495,183 Negroes of voting age, 21,502 were registered. That represents 4.3% of the potential. The approximate figures for white registration as of that time are as follows: 710,639 white persons of voting age, at least 423,456 were registered, representing 59.6% of the potential.

As of June 1, 1962, we have accurate statistics on 34 of the 82 Mississippi counties. The statistics in these 34 counties show 295,648 persons of voting age and 231,666, or 78% registered. As of the same date, of 230,770 Negroes of voting age, 10,445, or 4.5% were registered.

As of the approximate date January 1, 1964, we have compiled accurate figures for 29 of the 82 counties. These figures show of 282,580 white persons of voting age, 227,504, or 80.5%, were registered; of 201,849 Negroes of voting age, 12,975, or 6.4% were registered.

I have appended to this statement, as Appendix 1 and 2, the statistics of each of the 34 counties in June 1962, and the statistics in 29 counties as of January 1, 1964. Let me simply add on that point that while our figures are generally accurate, in some instances they represent educated estimates based upon counts from the registration and poll books and the voting figures at a particular election.

I now turn to the Department's voting litigation in Mississippi. The first suit was filed in July of 1961. Since that time, twenty-three discrimination actions have been filed under section 1971(a). Twenty-two of these cases name as defendants individual state officials and they essentially question the improper administration of state laws by these officials. They do not directly attack the validity of the laws themselves.

In the case of United States v. Mississippi the Department has undertaken a different and more fundamental approach. The complaint, filed on August 28, 1962, named as defendants the State of Mississippi, the three members of its Board of Election Commissioners, and six county registrars. The complaint challenged as unconstitutional and in conflict with paramount federal law most of the bundle of Mississippi voting laws I have already described.

The gravamen of the complaint is that the Mississippi constitutional and statutory provisions are themselves "engines of discrimination," as the Solicitor General put it to the Supreme Court. We contended that these laws are designed to facilitate and abet racial discrimination, that this has been their effect, and that the history of their administration demonstrates conclusively that racial discrimination is the only true purpose they serve. We also challenged the various tests on "freezing" grounds, and we urged their invalidity on the further ground that the State's educational system so discriminated against Negroes that, in fairness, complicated literacy tests could not be required.

The relief sought in United States v. Mississippi is nothing less than the substantial elimination of all the varied literacy requirements and an order requiring the registration of any Negro applicant who meets the age and residence requirements, is able to read, is sane, and has not been convicted of a disqualifying crime.

By a divided vote, the three-judge district court dismissed the complaint, holding that it failed to state a claim upon which relief could be granted. This decision, incidentally,appears to be in conflict with the judgment in a similar case brought against the State of Louisiana in which another three-judge court held invalid the Louisiana interpretation test and granted freezing relief in 21 parishes against the use of a new so-called "citizenship" test. Both cases have been appealed to the Supreme Court and that Court heard arguments on the appeals in January.

Let me turn now to the individual discrimination suits.

The Department has obtained effective final decrees against registrars in two counties, Panola and Tallahatchie, and the court of appeals recently directed the entry of an effective decree in Walthall County. A satisfactory order was also entered against the Sheriff of Tallahatchie County in another 1971(a) case, restraining him from discriminatory manipulation of the poll tax requirement.

Cases from three other counties -- Holmes, George, and Clarke -- are pending on appeal, Clarke for the second time, after refusal of relief in whole or in part by the district court.

In the Forrest County case, which is proceeding simultaneously in the district court and the court of appeals, interlocutory relief has been granted by the appellate court and the district court has entered a decree, granting partial relief, to take effect after disposition of the court of appeals proceedings.

In three counties, Madison, Sunflower, and Jefferson Davis,cases have been tried and are awaiting decision, and a trial is currently under way in a second Holmes County case.

In Marshall and Benton counties offers of judgment have been made and the supervisors have ordered a complete reregistration of all persons. Negotiations are proceeding with respect to the terms and conditions of the registration, particularly as concerns the rights of Negroes residing in the counties prior to 1954 who were never registered, and the problem of unequal educational opportunities.

In eight counties -- Marion, Issaquena, Chickasaw, Jasper, Oktibbeha, Lauderdale, Copiah, and Hinds -- the Department has filed nine lawsuits (two in Chickasaw), which have not yet come to trial, but preliminary relief adding Negroes to the registration rolls has been granted in Lauderdale and Hinds. Similar relief was also granted pending the decision on the merits in Sunflower and Madison Counties. No. 1971(a) case in Mississippi has been finally decided adversely to the Government.

A mere sterile recital of the number of lawsuits brought cannot provide an accurate measure of the work and effort that went into this litigation.

At the time when most of these lawsuits were brought the Department of Justice had less than two dozen lawyers exclusively engaged in the voting litigation. Yet, in the Hinds County case, for example, Departmental attorneys with clerical assistance had to analyze some 14,000 application forms and control cards based on these forms to prove that there was in fact discrimination in the selection of test questions and in their grading. This is just one of the steps necessary to prepare a 1971(a) case. Besides this, registration books must be counted, registered voters and rejected applicants identified by race, and most difficult of all, perhaps, assistance given to white applicants but not to Negro applicants must be proved. These problems require the Department attorneys to analyze large numbers of records and interview sometimes hundreds of witnesses to establish a case.

For example, in connection with the preparation of the Forrest County case, two attorneys were in Hattiesburg for almost three weeks sifting through newspapers, graduation yearbooks, city directories, and other documents, in order to identify and locate white persons who were placed on the rolls by the incumbent registrar.

Thereafter, other attorneys, again with the help of clerical employees, analyze application forms, control cards and other records during a 16-week period. The interviewing of prospective witnesses took four attorneys well over two weeks, and as many as five attorneys at a time were engaged for a period of over one month in preparing proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law.

In short, not even counting the trial, the preparation of voting discrimination cases is a time-consuming, complex task. It is due to the dedication of the personnel in the Civil Rights Division and their willingness to work countless hours of overtime that it was possible to make significant progress.

The experience with the discrimination cases revealed both the effectiveness of the legislation and its shortcomings. The effectiveness was shown most dramatically in the Panola County case. Panola is a rural county in the northern part of the State. Prior to our lawsuit there, 1 Negro was registered to vote. After the district court entered an effective decree -- following the instructions from the court of appeals -- approximately 1,000 Negroes registered to vote, or about 15% of all those eligible. It is my expectation that, as additional lawsuits are decided, similar results may be achieved in other counties.

What about the shortcomings? The major problems were those of delay, on the one hand, and the manipulation of literacy tests, and effective relief against such manipulation, on the other. Let me explain.

Litigation takes time. There is the time provided for in the rules; there is the time required to reach the head of the calendar; there is the time required for decision; there is the time needed for the appellate process. In part, delays are inherent in the litigation system. Beyond that, however, in the first two years of our litigation in Mississippi, the time consumed in the preliminary stages prior to trial was far too long.

The Department has compiled some approximate statistics on the length of time necessary to litigate voting suits. Please bear in mind that rough judgments had to be made in some instances as to how much time could fairly be counted with respect to some of the cases.

Prior to 1964, the average elapsed time from the filing of a complaint until the filing of the defendant's answer was about 6 and 3/8 months.

The average elapsed time from filing of an answer until the beginning of trial was nine months.

The average elapsed time from the end of trial until entry of judgment was 4.10 months.

Lumping these figures, the average elapsed time from filing of a complaint until beginning of trial was 16.33 months. The actual elapsed time exceeded the average in 9 of the 15 cases included in this calculation. And the average elapsed time from filing of a complaint until entry of judgment was 17.8 months.

The average time required to complete the appeal from an unsatisfactory judgment in 1971(a) cases has been about one year.

As for the manipulation of literacy tests, it has been the favored device of those who discriminate. Under the pressures of a lawsuit, Negroes are required to furnish precise answers to complex or vague questions and they are tested by a most exacting standard. Whites, on the other hand, are either not tested at all or are given assistance as needed. The result is the great imbalance in registration figures. Litigation also may prompt the registrar to apply the strict requirements of Mississippi law to all applicants, white and Negro, or to slow down the pace of registration. Since practically all whites in the county are already registered, such methods hurt only the Negroes.

These various problems were brought to the attention of the Congress and Title I of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 was the result. That Act not only provides for the expedition of voting rights lawsuits, but it also specifically outlaws the permanent "freezing" of the results of previous discrimination, that is, the tightening of the registration standards (after a period when they were not or hardly at all applied to whites) so as to make them apply theoretically to all but as a practical matter only to the unregistered Negroes. The Act also provides for a presumption of literacy in the case of persons who have completed the sixth grade.

Partly as a result of the passage of the Act, and partly as a result of successful litigation apart from the Act, satisfying progress has been made with respect to the several problems I have outlined.

Since July 2, 1964, the Department has filed seven more 1971(a) suits. The figures for these new cases show that the average elapsed time from complaint to answer was less than one month. One case has already gone to trial and in two others offers of consent judgments were made by the defendants within three and four months, respectively, after filing of the complaint.

It is evident that the time required to litigate 1971(a) cases is being sharply reduced. As I indicated, this is the result not only of passage of the 1964 statute but also of resolution of a variety of procedural problems which must inevitably emerge in the initial phases of enforcement of a new regulatory statute. The expediting provisions of the 1964 Act promise to accelerate further the pace of litigation. Indeed,in one case, involving Holmes County, where the complaint was filed at the end of July, our discovery motion was granted within a month, the defendants answered, and a trial date was set for early November. The trial began on schedule, but was continued to this month, when it should be completed.

The Department also has been successful in securing in some of the cases an effective decree against the maniupulation of literacy tests and slow-downs in administering these tests. Such a decree is one that directs a registration speed-up if necessary; that invokes a freeze, so that Negroes of elementary literacy, who meet the basic qualification of state law (age, residence, lack of conviction of a disqualifying crime, insanity) may be registered at least for a period long enough to give all of the present adults in the county a fair opportunity to present themselves for registration; and that requires detailed monthly reporting by the registrar to the federal court and to the Department of Justice. This kind of relief has been granted in Panola, Tallahatchie and Walthall Counties. It may be expected in other cases as well, now that the court of appeals has laid down standards.

I should like to discuss now, more briefly, the problems of voting intimidation and racial violence. The Civil Rights Act of 1957 for the first time gave the Department of Justice authority to bring injunctive action against intimidation for the purpose of interfering with the right to vote in federal elections. This statute is codified in Title 42, section 1971(b). Seven suits have been filed in Mississippi under the authority of that statute, with mixed success.

The first suit was brought in Walthall County, where, on appeal, a temporary injunction was obtained against a trumped-up prosecution of a voting registration worker. The case was ultimately settled after the State agreed to dismiss the criminal charges against the voting worker.

In Leflore County settlement was obtained in another suit to enjoin intimidation of voting registration workers by arrests and prosecutions. A second 1971(b) case, also involving intimidatory arrests and prosecutions, is still pending. The Department unsuccessfully sought interlocutory relief from the court of appeals in this action.

In Clarke County the Department obtained a decree prohibiting a state court perjury prosecution of Negro witnesses who had testified in federal court in a 1971(a) case.

In Holmes County the Department sought injunctive relief against criminal prosecutions brought and judgments obtained against voter registration workers. Relief was denied in the district court, but the case was appealed to the court of appeals which recently heard oral argument.

In Greene County the district court denied the Department's request to restore to her job a school teacher discharged because, it was alleged, she testified for the Government in a voting discrimination case. Similarly, in Rankin County, injunctive relief was refused against a sheriff who, with his deputy, assaulted Negroes who were filling out application forms in the registrar's office. In both cases the legal issue was whether the acts done were for the purpose of interfering with the right to vote, and in each instance the Department was unable to overcome on appeal lower court findings of fact that the acts in question had not been done for that purpose. Hence these two judgments denying relief were affirmed.

As this summary indicates, the principal problem under the intimidation statute is that, as presently interpreted, it requires the Government to prove an intimidation or a threat which is undertaken for the purpose of interfering with the right to vote. This burden is a very difficult one to sustain. The problem might be resolved by a sufficiently broad judicial construction of the purpose requirement. Cases now pending may provide an opportunity to establish an interpretation of the law which would more effectively serve the end of guaranteeing that those who seek to vote need not fear retaliation.

Related to the problem of intimidation is that of racial violence. As I indicated earlier, the only relevant civil litigation authority of the Department of Justice lies in the field of voting. That does not mean, however, that nothing has been done. Activities aimed at neutralizing the violent efforts of the Ku Klux Klan are proceeding constantly. The staff of the FBI has been greatly augmented in Mississippi and a new field office has been opened in Jackson. Investigations have been and will continue to be conducted into reported cases of interference with federal rights.

The truth of the matter, however, is that there is no acceptable federal solution to this law enforcement problem. We have no federal police force empowered or equipped to provide protection or to maintain law and order on a generalized basis. And I do not believe that the situation, deplorable as it may be in many parts, warrants the departure from the historic pattern of limited federal power that would be implied by the creation of a federal force having as its purpose the maintenance of internal law and order.

There are inherent difficulties, too, when the problem is what to do about excesses by local law enforcement officers. An injunction is simply not a very useful instrument for the control of the discretion necessarily vested in such officers. Courts are reluctant to issue orders binding the hands of local, elected, enforcement officials, and will do so only where no other effective means dealing with the violation are available.

In sum, some strides have been made in eradicating voting discrimination in Mississippi. But Mississippi cannot ve viewed in isolation. The real, concentrated effort by federal authorities in this State was begun only relatively recently. Progress has been made and far greater progress may confidently be anticipated. In other states, where similar efforts were begun sooner, tangible results are already more visible.

The 1964 status report, which I am submitting to the Committee with my testimony, reports in detail what has been accomplished in the litigation in all of the states in which suits have been brought.

Let me make it clear that I do not represent that an effective decree is the absolute solution. There are certain problems litigation cannot cure. Among these inherent difficulties isthe inferior economic status of Mississippi Negroes and the level of literacy of many of them. The economic and social problems involved have very deep roots and will remain even after the voting problem is solved. They cannot be met by court action, and I have not attempted to deal with them. As concerns low literacy levels as they affect voting and voting rights, "freezing" decrees will provide some correction, because they will permit the registration of Negroes of a level of literacy comparable to that of registered whites. But even this is obviously not a complete answer.

In short, the purposes of the Civil Rights Acts of 1957, 1960 and 1964 were good. Some of their aims have been achieved and this progress has recently been accelerated. Yet delays and abuses of discretion continue to exist. Because time is of the essence, President Johnson and his Administration are devoting intensive attention to additional voting legislation. Participation in elections is, after all, basic to American democracy, and it is important, therefore, that the right to vote be guaranteed.

The number of registered Negroes was arrived at by count from the registration or Poll Books. All the registration figures for the remaining 21 counties were arrived at by count either from the registration books or the Poll Books.

The figures for white registration are subject to some inflation due to the fact that not all registrars have systematically purged for deaths and transfers. The figures for Negro registration are as accurate as possible from counts and cross checks of the registration and poll books.

THE VOTER EDUCATION PROJECT

The Voter Education Project is a special program of the Southern Regional Council to study the causes of low voter registration in the South, and to ascertain the most effective methods for increasing the southern electorate. Over the life of the project, observation and analysis of voter registration programs will be made and funds will be granted by the Project to make possible programs which will advance this study.

The Project works cooperatively with other responsible groups carrying on voter registration programs.

VEP ORGANIZATION CHART

DIRECTOR OF THE PROJECT

The Director has the undivided responsibility and authority for the general operation of the Project. This responsibility and authority includes but is not limited to:

1) The allocation of funds in the field.

2) The termination of funds and services in the field.

3) The general supervision of the administration of the Project office (which includes Research).

4) The termination of employment.

He may delegate responsibility and authority, but his decision must be the final one on any Administrative, Research or Field problem.

ASSISTANT PROJECT DIRECTOR

The Assistant Project Director will perform those functions delegated to him by the Director which will best assist the Director in the performance of all functions of the Project.

In the absence of the Director, the Assistant Project Director is in full charge of all phases of the Project (with the exception of the initiation of new grants) and the authority for decisions made in the Director's absence has been delegated to the Assistant Project Director.

FIELD DIRECTOR

The Field Director will consult with and advise cooperating organizations in the formulation or revision of programs. He will assist in the instruction of voter registration staffs and will advise organizations when problems arise as to how they should be met in accordance with the terms of the approved programs. He will assist in the observation and analysis of the activities, methods, and results of the various programs.

He has the responsibility to maintain close contact with all VEP supported programs by regular and frequent visits to these projects.

His responsibilities also include full reporting to the Director not only of actual performance data, but of the underlying attitudes, morale, and other like factors which might affect field workers' performance and their relationships to the Project, and which might not come to the attention of the Project in the ordinary course of progress reporting.

ADMINISTRATIVE SECRETARY

The person in this position performs three functions:

1. She serves as secretary to the Project Director.
2. She serves as Office Manager of the Project.
3. She assists the Assistant Director wherever and whenever possible

Duties:

In connection with #1 above her duties are secretarial and these include maintenance of the Project Director's files and correspondence.

VEP ADMINISTRATION (Blue)

This section includes all correspondence, reports, etc., having to do with the actual functioning of the VEP office; personnel records, and like administrative matters.

GRANTS (Yellow)

This section is divided into two drawers (Open) and (Closed) of Grant files. The Open section contains all correspondence, reports, etc., having to do with actual current projects - with the exception of progress reports and other such research data which are kept in the office of the Research Director. Also the accounting records of all grants are kept in a file maintained by the Administrative Secretary. The Closed section is that containing files of completed projects.

REGIONAL DATA (Pink)

This section contains miscellaneous information concerning the eleven states of the Project's concern and the drawer is divided into sections for each of these states. Such information as registration data, resistance to voter registration in various localities, and in some cases information on projects which are not supported by grants from VEP, is kept in this section.

AGENCIES (White)

This section contains all correspondence, bulletins, reports, news releases, etc., that do not refer to actual Open Projects. There are file folders for various inter-group agencies, as well as general folders for each of the major participating agencies.

General and Miscellaneous

This section is just what its name implies but its use should be kept to a minimum. Finding files is much easier and faster when the miscellaneous files are not misused.

The professional staff should feel free to remove any files necessary for their work (provided they do not remove them from the office) but they are requested not to return such files to the drawers. If they will stack such files on top of the cabinets they will be re-filed by the Clerk-Typist.

This schedule should be prepared whether a trip out of town is planned or not and the schedule should indicate his plans to stay in Atlanta if this is a fact.

ALL TRAVELING STAFF MEMBERS (other than the Field Director)

All other staff members should prepare travel itineraries for a week's activities which should be submitted to the Project Director by noon Friday of the week preceding the itinerary schedule. No report need by prepared unless a trip out of town is scheduled during the following week.

4. Field Reports. All staff members writing field reports should write a separate report for each locality visited and where a person visits more than one city on the same trip the report should be written in such a manner tha the chronology can be followed. Raleigh Report: "I arrived in Raleigh from Durham" (then describe the Raleigh situation).

If a field report is actually written the stenographer typing the field report shall make an entry on the original field itinerary showing the day that the field report was written.

WB Contacting

February 24, 1964

Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

The Chapel Hill Voter Registration Committee read with considerable interest the Council's news release dated February 12, concerning the progress of your Voter Enrollment Project. The Committee feels that because of the similarity of goals between our respective enrollment projects, you would be interested in the following report.

The Chapel Hill Voter Registration Committee was conceived in mid-December, 1963, out of a pressing need to make Chapel Hill's Negro citizens more active politically. With a small group of energetic, hard-working Negro and white volunteers, the Committee conducted a house-to-house survey and registration drive throughout the Negro communities in the township during the latest registration period. The results of both the canvass and the enrollment drive were, we feel, most gratifying. Of some 1,430 Negro adults contacted twenty-one and older, some 717 were found to be registered. The registration campaign added 122 more new names to the voting lists.

The frequency of such comments as "Idon't know what I'm voting for," or "What good is my vote anyway?" has prompted the Committee to organize itself into a permanent registration and education body. We have since divided the township into small units, each of which has a block captain. These block workers are now distributing regularly issued newsletters of objective abstracts of issues and platforms. We believe that these informative abstracts will induce previously inactive citizens to consider becoming a part of the electorate.

not for Voter Education

Since its inception, the Committee has grown to include over 80 people. Several faculty members from the University of North Carolina, some precinct registrars, ministers, and government and civic leaders have begun to contribute their talents in an effort to make the Committee as effective as possible in its work. Nevertheless, most of us involved in this type of work are rather inexperienced. Consequently, the Chapel Hill Voter Registration Committee would be most appreciative of any materials which the Southern Regional Council might have concerning voter registration and education.

The Committee itself is independent; its personnel and financial basis is local in nature. Accordingly, the Committee has, on occasion, found itself hard-pressed from the monetary standpoint. Although a recent and successful solicitation has temporarily brightened the financial outlook of the Committee, we should also like to inquire about the stipends mentioned in your February 12 newsstory.

The Chapel Hill Voter Registration Committee would be most grateful for any information from you.

Cordially yours,

W. E. Mason III
